Whale 2,000 Miles Inland.

Dawson, Yukon Territory, is exercised by a report that a whale was seen in the Yukon river at the mouth of Sixty Mile river, a little south of that city and 2,000 miles inland. Angus Cameron, a prospector, arrived in a small boat and vows he saw the big fellow playing beside the boat. A whale was killed in the Yukon at the mouth of the Tanana river two years ago after traveling 1,000 miles inland.

Top of the World Carnival

Banff is to have an elaborate winter carnival this year, and will be en fete from February 2nd to the fourteenth inclusive. Situated as it is in the Canadian Pacific Rockies and surrounded by the grandeur of Tunnel Mountain, Rundle Mountain, and Sulphur Mountain, Banff, the national resort, is fast becoming the centre of winter sport in Canada, as Christiania is in Norway. It is a perfect winter playground with its natural mountain slides and ideal skiing. The preparations for the carnival this year are on a larger and broader scale than previous years; the aim being to make Banff attractive in winter as it is in the summer. In one aspect the visitor will find combined summer and winter amusement in the hot sulphur springs, which give one the privilege of swimming out in the open with the thermometer above or even below zero, in not tepid but warm water.

The spirit of the carnival will again have full sway throughout the town, and those who arrive at night will find themselves in a veritable fairyland. Colored lights are to be strung across the streets, down the famous toboggan slide, and on the rinks in thousands giving a great gala effect.

The list of amusements is a long one. There are hockey and curling matches, toboggan races, snowshoe and ski races. The ski jumping this year promises to be one of the big events, for a new jump has been built costing several hundred dollars, and some of the best skiers in Canada will take part in the competitions. The Posy ski races are on the programme, and will doubtless create much excitement. Snow shoe tramps have been planned and lunch will be served at the game warden's cabin. These exhilarating tramps are conducted by men who know every inch of the country. The carnival will be just one continued round of gaiety and anyone who imagines the world in the mountains to be dead in the winter will have a pleasant surprise. Rivers, brooks, cataracts and falls are all pursuing their merry course, as in the summer except in a few occasional spots. The animals are not huddled up inside their burrows or seeking shelter away from the world, but roam around as in summer.

The carnival will be opened by the Superintendent of the National Park, and a special programme has been arranged for each day and will conclude with a farewell ball and distribution of prizes. There are three comfortable hotels which remain open throughout the winter.

The carnival and bonspiel at Banff are becoming amongst the most important and widely known events of the Canadian Winter, and will attract thousands to see "Top of the World" in the winter. Nature in all the beauty of her winter garb is at her best at this time of the year, instead of being dead Banff will be very much alive.

AN ANTI-BRITISH LIE.

Wall Street Journal Rebukes Hearst Papers.

The Wall Street Journal in an editorial published a few days ago, under the heading "Genesis of a Lie," says:

"There is the evidence of known conditions to demonstrate that the story of Hearst papers of a contemplated attempt by Great Britain to raise here a loan of $13,000,000,000 was a falsehood.

"It was made out of whole cloth and circulated for the definite purpose of stimulating anti-British feeling for political purposes. Britain does not need such a loan, or any loan, from the United States now, and will need financial help still less in the future.

"The story seems to have had its genesis in the statement of Sir George Paish that Central Europe first, and then the continental European allies afterwards, would require American help, and that Britain alone could not undertake the task.

"It is easy enough to say that its origin damned such a rumor. But it was not a rumor. It was a flat and circumstantial lie, carefully calculated for circulation amongst the ignorant element, which Mr. Hearst supposes, quite correctly, to constitute the large numbers who read his newspapers and accept their statements for fact. This contradiction, as far as the Wall Street Journal's readers are concerned, may be unnecessary, and attacking a skunk with a club is poor business anyway.

"But those numerous general newspapers which gave a wider circulation to the contents of these columns, may patriotically feel disposed to join in the somewhat thankless duty of overtaking a lie with a long start."

Silver is now just about double the price it was in 1914, and a great number of those people who did not make fortunes during the war are taking the opportunity to sell all sorts of silver ornaments, things rather more pretty than useful, to be melted down.

These consist chiefly of candlesticks, inkstands, photograph frames and the like, but there are also silver forks, spoons, sugar basins and other table plate.

If these are modern, well and good. They are not worth more than their weight in silver. But it is well to warn intending vendors not to rashly dispose of old silver. Old silver is very valuable, being worth far more than the five-and-sixpence an ounce which is the bullion price.

Only the other day a Queen Anne milk jug was sold for 125 shillings an ounce! It came from an old farmhouse, and its original owners had no idea of its real value.

Those perfectly plain silver spoons with a large flat bowl are known to experts as Puritan spoons, and are worth their weight in gold.

A dealer recently offered a man £50 for the worn old silver sugar basin the family were using. It was really a seventeenth century porringer, and was worth at least £80.

Apostle spoons are treasured by collectors. Each has a figure of one of the Apostles, with his emblem. St. Peter, for instance, holds his key. In olden days they were given as christening gifts. Single specimens, if old, have brought as much as £30, while £100 was paid for a sixteenth century Apostle spoon.

The age of silver can be accurately told by its hall mark. Any encyclopaedia will give information on this subject.—Pearson's Weekly.

Old Epitaphs.

Two quaint old epitaphs, one of the sublime and the other of the ridiculous, may be cited in the following, the first of which Dean Stanley is said to have chosen as the most beautiful of those in Westminster Abbey:

"Jane Lister. Deare Childe."

simply that. The other, to Lady O'Looney (Dorset) has the true smack of the Emerald Isle:

"Here lies the body of Lady O'Looney, great niece of Burke, commonly called the Sublime. She was bland, passionate and deeply religious. Also, she painted in water colors and sent several pictures to the exhibition. She was the first cousin of Lady Jones, and of such is the Kingdom of Heaven."

And there are two from the United States. The first, in a Nevada burial ground, runs: "Sacred to the memory of Hank Monk, the Whitest, Biggest-hearted, and Best Stage-driver of the West, who was Kind to All, Thought Ill of None. He had lived in a Strange Era, and was a Hero; and the wheels of his coach are now ringing on Golden Streets."

The second also belongs to the West: "To Lem S. Frame, who during his life shot 89 Indians, whom the Lord delivered into his hands, and who was looking forward to making up his hundrded before the end of the year, when he fell asleep in Jesus at his house at Hawk's Ferry, March 27, 1843."

OFFERS EVERYBODY A CHANCE

A philanthropic fight promoter—one of the enterprising gentlemen who has been in the habit of putting on a boxing match every week or two—is much annoyed at the spasmodic interference of the officers of the law in his business affairs, and is proposing to throw open his hall for a weekly forum of free and uninterrupted speech, in place of the boxing bouts.

"I want every guy that has anything to say to come over and say it," said the promoter, according to the Seattle Post-Intelligencer, "and I'll give him ten minutes to spiel, and then he must shut his trap. I don't care what he is; any kind of a nut can come over and say right out what is on his chest. My luck has been so bad, and my spirits so depressed, that I want a laugh, and I believe a nut gathering of this kind would equal anything the Orpheum circuit or Pantages or the best of them ever put on. You know, nature keeps playing jokes on humanity all the time; she mixes together some queer patterns in heads, and a lot of fellows can't help what they think; some have a hunch for one thing and some for another; I suppose we could get a few startling facts on anything from religion to chess in these verbal tournaments. And it will be absolutely free; I might pass the hat around at the close of the entertainment to square me on the hall rent, but for the rest I wouldn't want a cent to pay outside of the entertainment I get out of it. As soon as I can pull a jazz band together to fit in with the speechmaking I will announce the details, and we will be sure in for a summer's entertainment, if the sheriff don't close us up."

HOMESICK FOR ARCTIC SNOWS

No Affectation About the Longing for Far North That is Experienced by Explorers.

If you are of ordinary health and strength, if you are young enough to be adaptable and independent enough to shake off the influence of books and belief, you can find good reason to be as content and comfortable in the North as anywhere on earth.

If you remember that all of us who have spent more than a year "living on the country," are quite of the Eskimo opinion that no food on earth is better than caribou meat, and if you have any experience in your life as a hunter anywhere, you will realize that in the evenings when we sit in these warm snow houses, feasting with keen appetites on unlimited quantities of boiled ribs, we have all the creature comforts.

What we lack, if we feel any lack at all, will be possibly the presence of friends far away, or the chance to hear opera or see the movies. At any rate, it is true that today in the movie infested city I long for more snow house evenings after caribou hunts as I never in the North longed for clubs or concerts or orange groves. And this is not peculiar to me. The men who have hunted with me are nearly all of the same mind—they are either in the North now, on the way back there by whaling ship, or eating their hearts out because they cannot go.—Vilhjalmur Stefansson in Harper's Magazine.

Probably Envious.

"After a few months in other states, I was returning to Indianapolis," remarked a traveling salesman, "and I don't mind telling you I was glad to be getting back home. As I sat down beside the stranger I told him how good it was to be back in the land of cornfields.

"So we started to talk about the beauty spots of Mother Nature. It is nothing more than natural for any Hoosier to talk about his own state. And I had to ask him whether he had ever been in Brown county.

"The stranger looked out of the car window a minute, saying softly to himself: 'Brown county, Brown county.' When he looked around at me again he said:

"'Yes, I have been there. That's the place where the squirrels have to carry a lunch with them when they go across the county, is it not?'"—Indianapolis News.

Flowers of Poland.

According to an English newspaper correspondent who recently reported a journey he had made from Paris to the Polish capital, the most impressive spectacle that he saw was the mantle of blossoms, clustered profusely, which fringed the highways and byways about Warsaw. "All the wars of Poland," he writes, "could not check the new life that came riding through her borders at the head of the advancing spring; sprays of lilac found place in the gray caps of Polish lancers, tulips and chestnut leaves, tokens of the new dawn, in the garb of peer and peasant. Everywhere was spring yielding back a measure of her everlasting rights." But the flowers never took much notice of the war even "at the front."

Runs News Stand Without Hands.

There is a boy running a news stand in Union square, New York city, who has no hands. He opens and closes his stand, opens and folds his papers and passes them out to customers without delay or difficulty, and makes change like an expert.

Lou Young is his name. He lost both hands in an explosion when thirteen years old, but that handicap did not hinder him from going into business and making a success of it.

"The cripple who has spunk is as good as anyone else," he says.

Press and Peerage.

A notable figure seen recently in the Peers' Gallery at the House of Commons was Lord Russell of Liverpool, a distinguished journalist, who numbered Gladstone amongst his friends.

His presence as a peer of the realm reminded one that the personal connection between journalism and the peerage dates back beyond the time when newspaper proprietors and writer had titular honors bestowed upon them.

The Cecils are of the old aristocracy, but how many people know that the present Marquis and his "illustrious brothers," as Mr. Timothy Healy once called them, are, on the maternal side, the grandsons of the man who was once a member of the Press Gallery?

The late Lord Salisbury, twice Prime Minister, struggled as a younger son before he came to the title, and wrote for the press. He married a daughter of Baron Alderson, of the exchequer, who in his youth had been a Parliamentary journalist.

The late Lord Russell of Killowen, Lord Chief Justice (father of the new judge), was also in his youth a "gallery" man.—Tit-Bits.

THE MERCHANTS' COLUMN

Edited by
MANSFIELD F. HOUSE
(Copyright.)

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

"Cash More Valuable Than Stamps," Say Merchants.

Several retail merchants of Chico, Calif., annoyed by the constantly growing number of premium tickets and stamps being handed out by other merchants to attract trade, held a get-together meeting and decided to give a cash discount for cash. They figured it that money was worth more to a customer than any sort of prize or premium.

Securing a half page in the daily newspapers, they explained their plan thus:

"Thrift—the Discount for Cash—has come to you. This is not a premium, prize nor present. It is just what it says—a cash discount; and the merchants mentioned below want you to know that you are really entitled to it as they get their cash discount from the wholesaler if they pay on time, and further, they want you to have it.

"Thrift—the Discount for Cash—pays you interest on what you buy. The difference of cost and carrying your charge account on the books you get by paying cash at the time of purchase. There is no work or chance of loss attached to a cash transaction, and although your charge account may be perfectly safe, still the merchant has to pay for labor and interest besides the average of some other account that is not good. So he is glad to give you thrift stamps if you pay cash. When you have filled the thrift book, you can go to any thrift merchant and get $2.50 in cash to spend when or where you choose."

A woman who was heartily sick of the whole "premium" system remarked: "Just about the time I collect half enough trading stamps or tickets for a premium the company breaks up. The local firms interested commence pushing some other kind of tickets and I have to begin all over. I'm glad to know that we are going to get a good, honest cash discount from our home-town merchants."

The new thrift campaign has started off with a bang, and bids fair to eclipse anything ever invented in the old-time "premium" line.

"People Are Honest—As Long As You Keep After Them."

When Ingolf Pederson, credit man for Olsen & Ebann, who sell approximately $500,000 worth of jewelry to the people of Chicago on credit each year, was asked the question, "Are people honest?" here was his rather unique answer:

"Did you ever borrow $5 from a friend when you were making only a so-so salary and had no extra cash in reserve? Remember how hard it was to pay back, as the weeks flew by and you didn't see Bill, the fellow you borrowed of, you almost quit thinking about the debt, and then one day Bill dropped in for a chat, and casually sarted talking about money, and you made a "gallant sacrifice" and dug up that old five and handed it to him? Yes? All right, now you know how the public feels about paying its debts to us.

"You see, it all amounts to this: The man who buys on credit, unless he is unusually wealthy, usually tries to swing more than he should, and somebody gets left, at least temporarily. Even an honest man can't pay his bills promptly when he hasn't sufficient income to cover them.

"But, as long as you keep gently prodding our well-known friends, Mr. Mrs. and Miss American Public, he, she and they will pay."

Blue Ribbons Help to Sell Prize Turkeys.

Adam Iffert, Hazleton, Pa., street butcher, has learned how to sell the more expensive turkeys.

In these days the man of average pocketbook picks out the smaller and runtier birds, for with turkey at fifty five and sixty-five cents a pound, he passes up the more noble looking turks.

How to arouse that desire to possess, which lies back of all sales, was a problem that bothered Iffert until one day recently he conceived the idea of putting blue ribbons around the necks of the birds as they hung outside and within his market, denuded of their plumage and ready for the kitchen table's final stage of preparations for the oven.

"That's how I sell the best birds," said Mr. Iffert. "When I put them all out together, I found that I sold the runts and the best fowl were left because they ran a few pounds over the weight the average customer has determined his or her turk should be. So that instead of having the culls at the end of the day, I had the best and they had to go at any old price.

Now, it is different. Some people get that blue ribbon prize idea with no explanations to be made. I tell the rest who ask. I point out to them, the blue ribbons mark the very best in stock, worth the extra weight because the excess is meat, whereas on the runts it is mostly bones. The blue ribbons sell at the same rate per pound as do the others, but they move along with the rest of the stock now, simply through hammering home the point that they are the cream of the collection—are blue ribbon prize winners."

Notes, on Billheads, Land Many Orders.

F. W. Walters, credit manager of Gimbel Brothers, New York, reports that excellent results have been obtained through the use of the following statement circular:

Dear Madam—Do you realize that for some time we haven't had the pleasure of mailing you one of our regular monthly bills

Now, if you have discontinued the use of your account because of any fault in our goods or service, won't you write us the full particulars?

Your account is open and we will be glad to have you avail yourself of its convenience to a liberal degree, for never before have the season's offerings been so attractive as now.

Use it today. Yours very truly.

It has been directed to customers who have allowed their accounts to lapse mainly because they have sought variety in making purchases rather than because they were dissatisfied with Gimbel Brothers' merchandise.

The replies to this circular, which is sent out on regular billheads, are kept on file in the credit department of the store. In those cases where through some error of the sales force or fault in merchandise, the customer has become dissatisfied, the circular has offered an opportunity to customers to explain their complaints and has given the store the opportunity of improving and eliminating conditions.

The circular is mailed in the regular transparent envelope used for monthly statements. It is an exact duplicate of the billheads sent out by the store, and acording to Mr. Walter has proved an unexampled means of getting directly to former patrons.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

~~Editor Review: It has been my humble wish to do what I could to aid the churches in their mighty effort to throw off materialism so prominently set forth at present in many ways. As a contribution to this determined attempt to rescue us from the new temptation, I ask you to publish the following for one week as an advertisement: "These five separate communions are of one mind as to their belief in God the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and Earth, and in Jesus Christ His Son our Lord. They now declare to their respective constituencies and also unitedly to the Canadian people, that the Only Effective Method of Making Good Citizens is by urging men to a more faithful practice of Christianity by inculcating personal faith in Jesus Christ. They insist that there is no other dependable way of correcting evil tendencies in individual and national life. Signed by the United National Campaign, representing the simultaneous but independent Forward Movement of the Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian Communions of Canada."~~

HE "CHEEKED" THE QUEEN.

Pte. James H. Rawlinson, of the 58th Battalion, Canadian Expeditionary Force, a Canadian soldier who was blinded at the front, has written an account of his experiences since he lost his sight, which is entitled "Through St. Dunstan to Light." In the book he bears his testimony to the wonderful work done at St. Dunstan's, and the book will undoubtedly help the Canadian effort to give better attention to sightless men. So far as we know, this is the first book written by a Canadian fighting man that tells what it means to lose one's eyesight at the front. The story starts with an account of the fight in which Pte. Rawlinson was blinded, and the only hard thing that the soldier has to say in the book is a reference to the R.A.M.C. He accuses them of robbing him, which recalls that W. L. George has been roundly criticised for saying in "Blind Alley" that the letters stand for "Rob Any Man's Corpse." Pte. Rawlinson says that his experience with the R.A.M.C. explains to him why "all the best souvenirs of the war are in the possession of men who seldom or never saw the front line."

There is nothing but praise in the book for the work done by the people in charge of St. Dunstan's, and a full account has been given of the work done there. His reminiscences include an amusing and rather embarrassing experience that Pte. Rawlinson had with Queen Mary. Her Majesty had paid a visit to St. Dunstan's, and Pte. Rawlinson was presented to her. Then his story goes on: "About half an hour later I was going down the garden walk leading to the Outer Circle, when I heard women's voice farther down the path. I honk-honked—the usual signal of the boys when wishing the right-of-way. Among the party in front of me was the matron of the house, who said to me, 'Come on, Rawlinson; the way is clear.'

"'Is that you, Matron?' I replied; then, in a simulated injured tone, I remarked that I had been talking to Queen Mary that afternoon, and; 'Would you believe it, Matron, she had not the good manners to shake hands with a guy?'

"Needless to say, I was somewhat abashed. Canada had gone far beyond his objective, as usual, but Canada was unfamiliar with retreat, and I determined to stand by my guns.

"'Well,' said I, 'will she shake hands now?'

"'I surely will,' replied the Queen. She did it with a firm pressure that showed genuine feeling. She then asked me if I were out for a walk. 'No,' I replied, 'I'm going to meet another queen. Two queens in one afternoon is not bad going for an old Canuck, is it?' 'It certainly is not,' she replied. 'And I do hope,' she added, with a merry laugh, 'that the other queen will not forget to shake hands when she meets you.'"

While at St. Dunstan's, Pte. Rawlinson had another experience with royalty, which embarrassed him even more than his talk with Queen Mary. He says: 'One day I was walking up the lounge, along the strip sacred to the sightless, when bump I went against someone who was stooping over while questioning another student. I had collided with a woman, who immediately turned and apologized most profusely for being in my way. She was most sorry that she 'did not see me coming.' I was in an irritated mood; the sightless always are under such circumstances. A collision of this sort always reminds them of their handicap, a thing they delight to ignore. Impatiently, I replied: 'That's all right, ma'am. But if you people with eyes, when you visit us, would only remember that there are some men here that cannot see just as well as they once did, it would make it easier for us.' Again she apologized, and took my hand, giving it such a hearty, sympathetic pressure that I felt somewhat ashamed of myself for my hasty words. As I renewed my walk up the lounge, one of the V.A.D.'s overtook me, and asked what had happened. I told her, and she almost took my breath away by telling me that I had been 'saucing' her Most Gracious Majesty Queen Alexandra. I quite expected to be 'on the carpet' before the chief for my words, but Sir Arthur had a way of avoiding causing his boys the slightest pain, and he no doubt knew that when I realized to whom I had spoken so hastily my chagrin would be sufficient punishment. I hope the good Queen has forgiven my lack of courtesy and forgotten the incident—a thing I am not likely to do."

A Shock for the Prince.

The Prince of Wales has had some embarrassing experiences during his Canadian tour, but none more so than in a small inland town when he attended a concert given in his honor. The leading townsman, a nervous old chap of seventy-six, was rather at a loss for conversation, and suggested, in a timorous voice that the prince might like to try a song. The prince—to borrow the expression of an onlooker, who has since written describing the incident—looked as if he had gone cold all over, and then, after a moment's hesitation, hinted that the leading townsman himself might like to delight the audience. The old man remained silent for the rest of the evening.—The London Bystander.

A Difference.

The Pugnacious Gentleman—But 'e bin an' called me a "'Un."

The Peacemaker—Well, he may have meant it quite kindly-like, Bill. It ain't as if we was still at war with the dirty 'ounds.

He Was Wise.

"Have you any witnesses?" enquired the judge of the negro who had been accused of stealing chickens.

"Noh, sah; ah don't take no witnesses along when ah steals chickens," was the reply.

Former Magistrate W. J. Hughes, of Philadelphia, now 69 years old and the father of thirteen children, has just passed the State Bar law exams.

May Mean Riches for Ontario

THE invention of a new steel, far in advance of any high-speed steel hitherto made, is described in the London Daily Mail by John Oliver Arnold, professor metallurgy at Sheffield University. Prof. Arnold, who is said to have been the discoverer of vanadium steel, claims, according to the Daily Mail, that the new steel possesses far more commercial possibilities, that it is unrivaled in hardness, that in tool form it will remove a greater weight than any other steel, and that it possesses comparatively longer life.

The Daily Mail indicates that Prof. Arnold uses molybdenum instead of Tungsten, and says:

"If large quantities of molybdenum (a hard silver-white metallic element) can be found and the price reduced, Tungsten will take a back seat, because 6 per cent. molybdenum will achieve more than 18 per cent. Tungsten."

Prof. Arnold, says the newspaper, is prevented, under the Defence of the Realm Act, from utilizing his invention industrially. He is patenting his invention in England and America, and will be allowed to proceed with his American patent on condition that he publishes nothing concerning it. He is absolutely forbidden to communicate the details of his discovery to anybody in Great Britain except under censorship.

The Daily Mail says the Government has asked Prof. Arnold whether he is willing to hand over his invention to the state and on what terms, but that Arnold does not intend to comply with the Government's desire to secure it. A representative of the American Government, the newspaper continues, made a special journey to Sheffield to investigate Prof. Arnold's discovery, and agents of the United States are prospecting in America and Europe for deposits of molybdenum, which previously has been found chiefly in Canada.

Immense deposits of molybdenite have been found in the Ottawa Valley, on the Quebec side of the river, especially in Pontiac County, in the district about Quyon.

In the early part of the war there was a tremendous demand for this mineral for the purpose of hardening steel, but it is understood that latterly the enquiry fell off, due chiefly to a substitution of other hardening processes. For this reason many of the showings were never developed.

Should Prof. Arnold's discovery prove to be of such great value, the future of the Ottawa district properties will be assured.

According to the best authorities molybdenum is usually found as molybdenite. Molybdenite has also been found in British Columbia in considerable quantities.

The report of the Ontario Bureau of Mines for 1919 contains these particulars of the molybdenum mines in the province:—

International Molybdenum Co.—The only mines operated by this company in 1917 in Ontario was the Moran in Brougham Township adjoining the O'Brien mine. Most of the ore mined was taken from an open cut, and the shaft was continued to a depth of 40 feet. The company is also a purchaser of molybdenite ores, having a custom concentrator at Renfrew and a smelter and refinery at Orillia.

At the concentrating plant at Renfrew three additional flotation machines were installed, and the capacity increased about 30 per cent.

The smelting plant at Orillia was operated for seven months when all equipment was transferred to a new plant, an additional electric furnace, new transformers and other equipment being added, thereby doubling the capacity of the old plant. The company manufactures molybdic acid, ammonia molybdate and ferro-molybdenum.

Renfrew Molybdenum Mines, Ltd.—The mine and concentrating mill of this company, situated on lots 8 and 9, concession 11, Township of Brougham, operated continuously during 1917.

During the year the two-compartment shaft was sunk 75 feet to the 150-foot level, and about 600 feet of lateral development done.

Owing to lack of fuel for power, the mill ran only about 34 per cent. of the possible running time. The total production of molybdenite for the year was about 58,000 pounds. The concentrates are shipped to France in barrels, the weight being about 1,000 pounds each. The mill has a daily capacity of 40 tons.

The Spain Mine on Lot 31, in the fourth concession of the Township of Griffith, operated intermittently during the year. The production came principally from the open pit.

Wilberforce Molybdenite Co., Ltd.—lot 32 in the fifteenth concession and on part of lot 33 in the fourteenth concession of the Township of Cardiff, the above company is opening up a molybdenite prospect. A concentrator is being erected at Wilberforce.

The Sunset Mine, concession 14, Township of Brougham, is being operated by a company known as the Steel Alloys Corporation.

Molybdenum Products Co., Ltd.—This company has a capitalization of 1,075,00 shares of a par value of $1. The mine is located in the sixteenth concession of the Township of Monmouth, in Haliburton County, about half a mile from the village of Wilberforce. A 75-ton mill is in course of construction.

Paudash Lake Molybdenite Mines, Ltd.—Mr. Joiner has also done some work on a molybdenite deposit on lot 18 in the ninth concession of Cardiff, the Mooney farm, about fifteen miles southeast of Wilberforce.

DIME NOVELS COMING BACK

In Eighteen Months "Nick Carter" Has Had Sales That Have Been Record Breaking.

Nick Carter has come into his own again. The king of the "paperbacks" has made a record-breaking return to popularity. About eighteen months ago his sales began to mount steadily until the entire supply of Nick Carter books was exhausted, says the Sun.

His return to fame was unexpected. It was not the result of an advertising campaign, for the publishers of the paper-bound books do not advertise. They depend instead for the sale of their books on the lists printed in the back pages of each volume.

And Nick Carter was not the only member of the "paperback" tribe to return. All the old favorites—Laura Jean Libbey, Bertha M. Clay, Mrs. E. D. E. N. Southworth and Augusta J. Evans—have "come back" surprisingly.

Five years ago everyone was willing to predict that the movies had killed the production of cheap books. Thrills could be absorbed more quickly from the screen than from the printed page—and the price was the same.

Publishers of the paper books are uncertain whether their old reading public has tired of the motion picture or whether a new class of readers has arisen. Of one thing they are certain, though, the demand for the 10 and 15-cent book has increased fourfold. If it were not for the increased cost of production these publishers would be reaping the harvest of their lives.

Stories of American life—as seen by Bertha M. Clay and other writers of her class—and detective stories are most in demand. Fortune-telling books and letter writers also have a large steady sale. "Dream" books were never so popular as they are today, their publishers say.

PETE HAD OBEYED ORDERS

Literal-Minded Soldier Came Near Getting His Commanding Officer Into a Bad Mess.

There is a certain young officer who, according to his own story, is thanking his stars that General Pershing had a sense of humor.

"Some of my men were Polish, and better soldiers never lived, but I guess in Poland life has been one long, sad story," said the officer. "Anyway, I never ran across a bunch who took things so literally. One night the Germans sent out a three-inch shell that landed square in the trench. In the morning I told one of my men, Pete, we called him, to take it away.

"'Where shall I take it?' he asked.

"A little later a brother officer came along and said: 'The old man wants you, and there's something doing.'

"I couldn't imagine what was up until I stood before the chief. He eyed me sternly and then pointed to his bunk, and would you believe it, there was that blamed shell. Pete sure had obeyed orders. Well, I thought I was in for it, but Pershing suddenly began to smile. He said: 'I just want to caution you not to order Pete to capture Berlin until the rest of us are ready to go with him. He might go and do it, you know.'"—Rehoboth Sunday Herald.

All That Affected Her.

That the Empress Eugenie is not prone to brood sentimentally over the past is evidenced by an incident that occurred some years ago. She visited Windsor castle, a palace in which in the golden days of the empire she was received as an honored guest. Those who accompanied her on this second visit hovered near her, fearing that she would be overcome with the contrast between the past and the present, especially when she viewed the apartments fitted up for her use and which had not been changed. But it was merely her artistic sense that was offended. The hangings of the huge bed were of imperial purple with the green of Napoleon, and the ex-empress remarked disgustedly, "Toujours ces affreux rideaux!" "Always those frightful curtains."

No Woman Passenger Pilots.

In England women will not be given permission to serve as pilots on passenger airplanes. An official of the air ministry gave the reason for this decision to a writer on the London Sketch as "physical disability as well as nerves," declaring that women's nerves are much more likely to give way than men's.

"I think there are no women in this country capable of passing the air ministry's test. If one does succeed, however, she will be permitted to fly her own private machine, but whether she will be allowed to take a friend with her is a point that remains to be decided.

"In any case women will be barred as pilots of passenger-carrying machines."

A Senator's Lunch.

Instead of dining at the senate restaurant, where senatorial dignity and flitting white-apron garbed waiters predominate, when night sessions prevent him from going home, the senator repairs to a nearby cafeteria, collects tray, napkin, knife, fork, spoon and other implements of table warfare, nestles his liver and bacon and other seasonal delicacies on the tray, walks over to a table and lays out his spread.

When a man says he has forgotten about that little loan you just returned—he is generally a liar.

CAUSED A CHANGE IN MILL

Circumstance That Made Mill Owner Somewhat Relax His Ideas About Strict Discipline.

"I personally began with the idea that people might be hired and good work gained from them," Julian S. Carr, Jr., in System, writes. Mr. Carr, who is president of the Durham Hosiery mills, goes on: "I thought in my youth that rules made order and that a certain military discipline was essential; that it was foolish to humor people and all that, nor was I going to recognize certain local traditions about days on which no work should be done. For instance, I made up my mind that quitting work to go to the circus was not in accord with the best industrial practices.

"The first circus came to town about three months after we took charge of the mill, and I was keen for the test. We posted positive orders that the regular hours of work were to be observed on that day, and that any person who went off to the circus would be discharged. The full force reported as usual on the morning of circus day, and I went home to dinner confident that at last we had brought order. It gave me a bit of a pang, for I should have liked to go myself!

"But duty is a stern master, and reflecting on that fact I hurried back to the mill. Noticing a crowd in a side street, I stopped to look. It was our whole mill force wending its merry way to the magic tent! I went along myself, and resolved that, although abstract rules were well enough, a bit of common sense and knowledge of human nature might profitably be blended with them. How much of our labor trouble generally is due to enforcing countless rules with military exactness?"

MANIFOLD USES OF THE OX

Animal May With Truth Be Said to Be Most Useful of All the Domestic Animals.

Of all our domestic animals the ox is certainly the most useful, writes Henri Fabre in Our Humble Helpers. During its lifetime it draws the cart in mountainous regions and works at the plow in the tillage of the fields; furthermore, the cow furnishes milk in abundance. Given over to the butcher, the animal becomes a source of manifold products, each part of its body having a value of its own. The flesh is highly nutritious; the skin is made into leather for harness and shoes; the hair furnishes stuffing for saddles; the tallow serves for making candles and soap; the bones, half calcined, give a kind of charcoal or bone black used especially for refining sugar and making it perfectly white; this charcoal, after thus being used; is a very rich agricultural fertiliser; heated in water to a high temperature, the same bone yields the blue used by carpenters; the largest and thickest bones go to the turner's shop, where they are manufactured into buttons and other small objects, the horns are fashioned by the maker of small wares into snuff boxes and powder boxes; the blood is used concurrently with the bone of black in refining sugar; the intestines cured, twisted, and dried are made into strings for musical instruments; finally, the gall is frequently turned to account by dyers and cleaners in cleaning fabrics and partially restoring their original luster.

Curious Clubs.

The recent announcement that an English "Bald-Headed Men's club" had just met—the first time since 1916, owing to the war—serves to recall one or two odd clubs.

"The Fat Man's club," for instance was known to exist in Paris in 1807. Its heaviest member turned the scale at 338 pounds and the chief qualification for membership was to weigh at least 220 pounds.

About this time there also met in New York the "Society of the Pointed Beards"—a most exclusive club. No one was eligible unless he had a carefully cultivated beard of natural growth and terminating in one symmetrical point half an inch from the apex of the chin.

At two club dinners in 1898 even the celery was served with its leaves trimmed to a point.

"Here in the service of the Lord Thomas a Kempis lived and wrote 'The Imitation of Christ,'" are the words that appear on the foot of the monument to the author recently erected at Zwolle. In a gentle spot surrounded by ancient oaks and firs and with shrubbery around, this monument stands on a hill which was presented for the purpose by the van Royen family. The monument is in the shape of a cross with the monogram of Christ and the symbols of the four evangelists. The inscription on the main part is "In Cruce Salus."

Many subscriptions were received for the monument as soon as the plan was suggested in 1916. Queen Wilhelmina was among those who gave.

Coating Iron With Lead.

Lead as a substitute for tin as a coating for sheet iron, iron wire and wire gauze was strongly advocated at the Buffalo meeting of the American Chemical society by Charles Baskerville, who exhibited some specimens of a process worked out by him.

Iron shingles, so treated, have been exposed to the weather in a roof test for two years and eleven months and show no signs of rust. They may be bent without cracking the coating and exposing the iron. Chicken wire so treated is quite as good as the galvanized and cheaper to produce.

A Byron Center, Mich., farmer was hit in the eye by a cow switching its tail. Infection set in and the eyeball was removed.

BOUGHT HIS HOME TOWN.

Remarkable Career of a Poor Yorkshire Boy.

Thirty-seven years ago he left Huddersfield with less than $1 in his pocket; to-day he virtually has completed a transaction making him, at a cost of $5,000,000, owner of the greater part of that Yorkshire town.

That is the remarkable achievement of Sam Copley, a banker of London. He is short and sturdily built man of sixty years, yet, despite the strenuous life he has lived, he looks many years younger. Although he has been away from Yorkshire so many years, there is no mistaking his accent, and Copley is as proud of it as anything he has achieved in his life. He remembers with relish that when a lad living with his father, a barber in Berry Brow, outside Huddersfield, he was known as the "Young Terrier," always in mischief.

Copley made his fortune in Australia. He says:

"When I was a boy everyone in Huddersfield was cursing landlordism. Ever since I have always thought that if I were rich enough I would buy Huddersfield and free it, and now I think the opportunity has come. It was at the suggestion of my friend, Wilfrid Dawson, a well-known stock broker of Huddersfield, that I gave the corporation an offer of the property I bought. If the corporation does not accept the offer I shall give every man in Huddersfield the opportunity of becoming the owner of his own freehold property.

"This buying of the Ramsden estate is just one of those changes in social conditions in England to which we are now getting accustomed.

"There was a period of slavery, then a period of serfdom and then a period of landlord and tenant. To-day is the period when people are going to own their own freeholds, which is one of the greatest ties to keep men at home, and satisfied men will always fight for home."

London Bridge's Predecessor.

Probably few of the millions who pass over London Bridge know much of the romantic story of its predecessor, which spanned the Thames for six centuries and a half, with its long street of houses and shops.

This was the bridge that was a familiar spectacle to every Londoner and to every "country cousin" from the days of Henry II, before Magna Charta was yet thought of, to the days of people still living. Three times the bridge was in danger of being destroyed by fire—once in its infancy in 1212, again when the Great Fire laid London low, and lastly, seventeen years later, in 1683.

This old bridge had witnessed many strange happenings; but one of the oddest, and certainly the most romantic of them all, was when it served as a tilting-ground for two doughty knights of the fourteenth century. John de Wells, a valiant knight, who was Ambassador to Scotland, had boasted that there was no such cavalier north of the Tweed as the south could produce, and David Lindsay, Earl of Crawford, had picked up the gauntlet the Englishman had thus thrown down. The duel was arranged for St. George's Day, 1390, and the scene of it was to be—of all places in the world—London Bridge.

On the day appointed the two gallant champions, John de Wells and David Lindsay, each clad in mail, took up his position.

At the first onslaught the knights met in the centre of the bridge with a terrific crash; but, though their lances were splintered like matchwood, each remained immovable in his saddle.

A second course had a like result, so sturdy and so equally matched were the antagonists; but in the third course the assault of the Scottish knight was so irresistible that De Wells was flung senseless to the ground.

Such was one out of hundreds of the strange sights old London Bridge had looked on before, in 1832, it vanished altogether from a city in which it was evident it had "lagged superfluous."

Charm Lasts Only Year.

It is a curious fact that the snake-charmers of India change their victims every year, letting loose the snakes they have had for exactly a year, to the very day, and procuring fresh ones to take their places. The superstition in the family is to the effect that their power over individual snakes becomes ineffectual after exactly one year, says the Wide World Magazine. They cite as proof the fact that a venturesome female snake-charmer once attempted to keep a particularly fine specimen beyond the specified time. The result was fatal; the woman died from the creature's bite. This odd belief could be easily explained by the fact that, knowing this legend, the women lose their confidence.

Prizes for Weavers.

A gift of $10,000 from John Crompton, of Manchester, England, will provide rewards to the designers and weavers of original cotton fabrics designed and woven in technical colleges or weaving schools in the British Empire. One-half of the fabrics sent in for competition must be entirely of cotton, and the remainder may contain 70 per cent. of cotton threads. A special committee of the Textile Institute, of Manchester, will take care of the collection of the samples.

Men Wear Combs.

In India men wear combs in their hair much more than women do. A Cingalese gentleman wears what we know as the circular comb, and a very ornamental back comb of tortoise shell to gather his curly locks together.

Music Hath Charms.

"Why don't you learn the violin, my dear?"

"Why should I?"

"It would give your chin a rest."

Five men stole cocaine, morphine and heroin, valued at $250,000, from the plant of the Standard Medical Co., Minneapolis.

FAMOUS JAPANESE ORATOR TELLS CONGREGATION THE STORY OF HIS LIFE

Was Converted by an American Soldie: Years Before Missionaries Found Their Way to Japan—Preached on the Cross of Christ 800 Times in Four Years.

A congregation that filled George Street Methodist Church to its capacity last night sat and listened with intense interest for forty minutes while Rev. Paul Kanamori, from Japan, addressed them. The famous Japanese minister is a little short of medium height and has an earnestness about his manner that carries with it power. He talks good English, but with a decidedly foreign accent that at times is rather difficult to understand.

For the past four years, he said, he has preached the same sermon eight hundred times to 312,000 people who came to hear the Gospel. Of these, 43,348 had been converted and had accepted Christ as their Saviour and Lord.

Then he went on to tell why he preached that sermon and why he had seen so many decide for Christ. The subject of this remarkable sermon is "The Cross of Christ."

Story of Conversion.

Over forty-six years ago, when no Christian missionaries had yet found their way into the great Japanese empire, a small military school was started at the request of one of the princes of the country. The instructor of that school was Capt. Jones, of the American army, who had seen service in the American Civil War. He was a layman, but a very honest Christian, stated Mr. Kanamori. He could not talk Japanese, and did not employ an interpreter, so after three years in the school, the boys, who included the speaker, could talk and read English.

"Then he taught us Christ," continued the speaker. "He was earnest about us one hundred boys. He offered to teach us the Bible in his own house. He was a very eloquent preacher."

The result of this was that in 1875 a couple of dozen of the boys had grown to believe in Christ. During the winter vacation these boys remained at the school and read the Bible from morning till night every day. There was no Japanese translation at that time, so all the reading was done in the English language.

These boys prayed together, and in the spring, when the younger boys returned to the school those who had remained taught them Christ and the Bible. Bible classes were formed all over the school, and a great revival followed, in which one hundred boys read the Bible continuously for one week and all came to believe in Christ. At that time they knew nothing of preachers, church, organizations, etc., but they knew the men of the Bible and their mighty spirits and they tried to emulate them.

Christians Persecuted.

Then the persecution of the Christians by the army broke out. But Christ had such a deep hold that even this danger could not shake it. Forty boys persevered in spite of it, and thirty of them finally went to the university and prepared for the ministry.

Although the oldest boy of the group was but eighteen years of age, they climbed the Mount of Flowers near that school and there held a dedication service among themselves and consecrated themselves to the service of Christ.

At home the boys were subjected to all sorts of severe treatment. One mother declared she would commit suicide to atone for her son if he would not renounce Christ. "But something came from Heaven and he did not renounce Christ and she did not commit suicide."

Faith Destroyed.

From the first the speaker had been much interested in theology and was called to the university to teach it. "Then I read the new theology, higher criticism, and it destroyed my faith in the Bible, then faith in the Divine Saviour, and I had lost everything."

He felt he could no longer preach Christ's salvation when he had not the Bible, so he left the Christian university and went into political work, where he remained as a specialist in political economy for twenty years.

"Those were the darkest days in my Christian life. I kept drifting farther and farther away from God and Christ," declared Mr. Kanamori.

Then God directly interfered and saved him. He took away his wife and left him with nine children, who cried all day long in grief over the loss of their dear mother. Then a light from Heaven flashed into the home through the simple faith of one of his children who came to believe that, although mother was up in Heaven, she was always with them in the spirit. That was the opening of Heaven for the second time to this Japanese orator, and once more he could see Christ standing at the right hand of God.

Then he saw how salvation came through death, and from that time continued to preach on the Cross of Christ from one end of his nation to the other.

Mr. Kanamori concluded his address with an eloquent appeal to the Anglo-Saxon race to send men and women to Japan, China and India and save the billion people over there who are in total darkness.

"You have the money, the power and the intelligence," he said, "and I thank God that through the Inter-Church Movement you are getting the spirit that will do it."

he Phantoms of Horses Haunt Streets of Dublin, Says an Irish Writer

ONCE, before the electric trams came, Dublin seemed a noisy city; a city of cobblestones and of mighty horses that clashed sparks out of the same cobbles, writes James Stephens in the Irish edition of the London Times. Carriage horses, dray horses, outside-car horses (the foreigner calls them "side cars," but the inhabitant would be ashamed to refer to them otherwise than as "outside cars").

The city neighed in those days; it snorted and whinnied; it champed on its bit; it jingled brazen harness; it tossed its nosebag in the air to shake the last oat from the southernmost recess of the bag; about its ears were birds innumerable; birds popped and hopped under its legs, winning the easiest existence that fate has vouchsafed to feathers.

There were jehus in charge of the gorgeous monsters, and they were as marvelous as their own horses; purple chapped, spiky jowled, wide smiled, hard eyed, imperturbable ancients; caparisoned, not clothed, in frieze many-caped coats, balancing hard, shiny hats on one side of their heads with huge hairy, chilblainy hands. They chewed tobacco, their mouths were all to one side, and they had great yellow teeth, two of which wobbled.

A nose-red city half as old as time. In the fanlight over every door there were small plaster horses with one leg up, with both ears cocked, with interrogative names. The city was on tiptoe, it was alert, vivid, it was a sparkling eye, it was a hoof! But conversation languished under the menace of those thudding, deeply-whiskered fetlocks. Dublin was a silence in a tempest, as it is now a solitude in a multitude.

The electric trams came and a new era. That Dublin is as remote as the Stone Age. The horses disappeared. The birds are searching vainly elsewhere for a like city of nosebags, a ity of dream. Only here and there will you now see a plaster horse in fanlight; and Dublin, silent under he dashing of those hoofs, has not et recovered from the silence they ad forced upon it. The streets then ere thronged, men and women went ut then to look at the horses, to rown themselves in the uproar and enace of the horses, and to this ay the Dublin people do not speak the streets, but they talk much private and are the most voluble ace of silent people that the world s ever known.

Prof. Macalister considers that the re-historic Irish totem was a horse, nd perhaps Dublin is yet mourning r vanished steeds, for to this day r people do not use the streets r any social purpose except nerals.

It is a haunted city. The ear of a ranger, halted at midnight in those erted ways, will catch a sound riving toward him which never mes near; he will hear a rumble hich will not materialise. He will nd waiting for the vehicle that ll never come. It will be long ere realises, as all Dublin people do, t at midnight the ghosts of long d horse-trams revisit the phases the moon. If a finger should h his eye he would see again a ing city and hear once more the der of the hoofs. The stranger s to his hotel with his overcoat ed protectively about him and umbrella at the ready. He is glad get back to London, where the ets are full, and away from emp- Dublin, where the streets are too

SAM BROWNE.

The Soldier After Whom the Belts Were Called.

Who was Sam Browne?

Thousands of Canadian enlisted men in France who did not have to wear one in France to look like an officer, and many officers over there who were glad to buckle one around the waist and over the shoulder to distinguish them from some enlisted men, have possibly thought he was some great leather magnate overloaded with war orders.

According to an authority, the original Sam Browne was a most gallant British officer and gentleman, who won the Victoria Cross fighting for the Empire in India during the autumn of 1858.

Lord Roberts, field marshal and advocate of preparedness in Britain, who was a friend of the dashing cavalry officer, gives this account of the dead hero who received so much publicity in the late war because he was careless enough to have his arm cut off and therefore forced to devise some means whereby he could be present at parade without his trusty saber dragging on the ground: "This popular and gallant officer, well known to every native in upper India as 'Sam Brun Sahib,' and to the officers of the whole of His Majesty's army as the inventor of the sword belt universally adopted on service, distinguished himself greatly in the autumn of 1858. With 230 sabers of his own regiment and 350 native infantry he attacked a party of rebels who had taken up a position at Nurai, about ten miles from Philibhit. Browne managed to get to the rear of the enemy without being discovered. A hand-to-hand fight then ensued, in which he got two severe wounds, one on the knee, from which he nearly bled to death, the other on the left shoulder, cutting right through the arm. The enemy were completely routed and fled, leaving their four guns and 300 dead on the ground. Browne was deservedly rewarded with the Victoria Cross."

Sam Browne died at the Wood, Ryde, Isle of Wight, on March 14, 1901, and after cremation was buried there. A memorial tablet has been put up for him in St. Paul's Cathedral in London. There are memorials to the tough old cavalry officer in every community of Canada. Wherever a community of second-hand clothing stores there will be found on the counters discarded Sam Browne belts, linking the reconstruction period with a band-to-~~hand fight~~ in far away India many, many years ago.

A Privy Councillor.

New Year's honors in Canada are this year few, but of a highly exclusive character. The apointment of Sir Thomas White, Hon. C. J. Doherty, and Hon. A. L. Sifton to the position of members of His Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council, with the right to use the title of "Right Honorable" before their names, brings the list of those who bear that title in Canada up to the inconsiderable number of eight, as follows: Sir Charles Fitzpatrick (198), Sir Robert Borden (1912), Sir George Foster (1916), Chief Justice Sir Louis H. Davies (1919), Mr. Justice Lyman P. Duff (1919), Sir Thomas White (1920), Charles J. Doherty (1920), and Arthur L. Sifton (1920). The office is an honorary one, involving no duties.

His Majesty's Most Honorable Privy Council—commonly called the Imperial Privy Council—is a council of state appointed periodically by the sovereign to concert matters for the public welfare. In the table of precedence, Privy Councillors stand above all knights, except Knights of the Garter, and, like barons, viscounts, and earls, the style "Right Honorable" is prefixed to their names. In Great Britain, all the political heads of departments must be sworn in as Privy Councillors before being placed in charge of their department, just as in Ontario, the members of the Drury Government were sworn in as members of the Executive Council before being appointed Ministers. The Cabinet in the United Kingdom is a committee of the Privy Council, and the theory is the same at Ottawa. There is legally no such body as the Cabinet, either in Great Britain or Canada. There are, it is stated, about 350 Imperial Privy Councillors in the whole Empire, of whom only about 35 are resident outside of Great Britain.

Retail Troubles.

A chemist who appeared before the Brentwood Profiteering Tribunal in England for charging a customer 18 cents for half a pint of methylated spirit produced invoices showing that the cost to him was $2.41 a gallon. He added: "Then there is the loss by evaporation, and I have to sell sixteen half pints, say 'Good morning' sixteen times, stick sixteen labels on sixteen bottles and say 'Good day' sixteen times." The case was dismissed.

The Army Way.

"I thought a doctor had to tell people what was the matter with them?"

"No, not in the army. In the army it's up to the patient to say what's the matter with him, and it's up to the doctor to prove that he hasn't got it."

PARSON PLAYS POKER

"SKY PILOT" WAS QUITE WILLING TO LEARN.

Red-blooded Young Divine Ready to Tackle Rough and Tumble Pastorate in Northern Manitoba, Where the Men Who Are Miners Refuse to Have a "Namby Pamby Dude Preacher."

"I 'ad no pious pamphlets to 'elp me to cheat the tomb;
I 'ad no 'oly leaflets to baffle
a bullet's 'arm;
I'd only—a deck of cards, boys, but —it seemed
To do just the same."

Found—a preacher who can play poker and knows every card in the deck. A minister has been discovered who believes that not all profanity is sacrilege, and who prefers the rough and ready manner of the Canadian miner to a $6,000 job in an eastern city.

Rev. R. Arthur Basham, a young Presbyterian minister of Columbus, Ohio, has answered the call sent out by the miners of the copper camps at Athapupuskow Lake County; in northern Manitoba, for a parson who "is a he-man, who wears a mackinaw jacket and stuffs his pants in his boots, can paddle a canoe, play a good game of poker, and give a good account of himself in a knock-down and drag-out row."

The advertisement reads: "Wanted—A minister of the gospel for Athapupuskow camp. Must be a good poker player. No namby pamby dude preachers need apply."

"I am not an adept poker player, but I can learn, just as I expect those miners to learn my game," declared Mr. Basham. He prefers not to be called "Reverend."

"It is the only call to preach that appeals to me. I'd rather be a Santa Claus to a bunch of miners in that Canadian copper camp, than a minister to all the elders in Christendom. I do not think the church shall fail to supply these fellows with a preacher, and the kind of a preacher they want."

Mr. Basham knows the needs of these men, having served as a circuit rider in Northern Manitoba before he went to France as a Y.M.C.A. worker.

"I had a circuit of 40 miles, and lots of times I had to run along behind the dogs and the sled to keep from freezing to death. One of the happiest recollections of my life is the meeting, up in the north country, with a derelict, who was a Cornell graduate. The minute I met him he said, 'Basham, I'm a drunkard.'

"I liked him and his case impressed me deeply. Many a night I have played chess with him all night, trying to help him forget liquor. I spent a lot of time with him, and one night it was necessary to knock a man down in a saloon because he tempted my friend with a bottle of whiskey. After that they let him alone. I count one of the greatest achievements of my life the wooing of that man from the control of the grip of liquor. That man is now one of the most splendid fellows I know.

"I have spent eleven years in the pit, and eleven in the pulpit," said Basham. "At the age of 11, I was a coal miner in Wales. Now I have six brothers in the mines of Wales. There were eight of us in the world war. One was killed, and all were wounded. I am not green at the job. I know the lives of miners. I have played cards with them, and I am willing to match the miners' bible, (a deck of cards) against the bible I teach, any day."

"Oh, yes, I have played cards. I was tried for heresy once for playing whist in the home of one of the elders of my church. Because of the action of this church I received great publicity. Dr. James L. Gordon, of Winnipeg, took a kindly interest in me and encouraged me to continue my work in the ministry, pointing out the advantage of going to college, and personally helped me in that respect by sending me to the United States, after I had preached several times in his church in Winnipeg. I have written Dr. Charles W. Gordon (Ralph Connor) whom I knew in Winnipeg, of my willingness to take the job with the miners. While spades are trumps as a rule among the miners, I believe that I can tell them something about Christ, who is the Ace of Hearts and am confident that he will take some tricks."

"Did you ever play cards for money?" he was asked.

"Yes, but I didn't know it at the time. It was in France. I was spending the afternoon at the home of a French colonel. The colonel's daughters, and a countess with whom I had been associated in the Red Cross Bazaar, suggested that we play bridge. I learned the game that afternoon, and at the end of the game, I noticed the women counting up, but it never dawned on me that we had been playing for money, until the colonel told me that I had won. It was rathering an embarrassing position, so I took the money and turned it over to the fund for disabled French Soldiers."

"I am not content to be a drone in the Bee Hive of the Kingdom of God," declared Basham. "If 50 per cent. of us as ministers were to go on a strike at once, Protestantism on this continent would not suffer in the least degree. We aren't essential, but most of us are not willing to admit it."

"The chief reason I am interested in this mining camp job, is first, because of the opportunities for building up. The common run of preachers are merely holding down jobs. Second, there is more appeal to go out in the north to help those miners than there is to preach to a bunch of elders who are not supposed to need it."

Mrs. Basham expects to accompany her husband and help him in his work. "No doubt they will have a pair of deuces when they get us," Mr. Basham said.

While a man was leaning out of a moving train at Jackson, Mich., to wave good-bye to a young lady, his head struck a car on a siding, killing him.

ANNELIDES.

One evening early in the February of a recent year the citizens of San Diego, California, experienced quite a scare, almost a panic. About eight o'clock the calm surface of their beautiful bay presented such a tremendous phosphorescent glow that many persons living on the bordering hillsides became greatly alarmed, rushed to their telephones and anxiously called up the fire department to inquire as to the cause of masses of fiery lights that gleamed on the water.

Definite knowledge relative to the strange sight was not fully obtained, however, until the next day, when the chief of the State Marine Biological Station, after closely examining a bucketful of the eel-like worms, which had been captured by an old skipper on the ferryboat, explained that the bright light was caused by millions of small reptiles known as annelides that had suddenly come to the surface. He further mentioned that these strange creatures had a habit of making periodical visits about once every fifteen years.

From eight o'clock to midnight the broad harbor in front of the city appeared to be filled to the brim with luminous snakes, its waters being literally alive with wriggling phosphorescent reptiles, averaging about two feet in length, their slender flat bodies resembling shiny blades of matted grass. So thickly massed were the squirming reptiles that the steam launches from the anchored warships in the harbor were apparently barely able to make headway through them and many thousands of the lustrous snakes were killed by being crushed in the propellers of the vessels.

Annelides appear to consist of one or more species of red-blooded sea worms that have long, symmetrical bodies and numerous paddlelike appendages. In outward appearance these annulated marine worms or snakes are rather handsome creatures. Some display the rainbow tints of the humming bird, while others emit the metallic brilliancy of the most lustrous beetle, as they gracefully glide over the waves or dive among the rocky crevices on the bottom to conceal themselves in the sand.

The wormlike body of the annelide is susceptible of both great extension and contraction. The slender trunk consists of a series of soft rings or annular segments, every transverse fold being alike and all joined by an elastic skin, the first section forming the creature's head, the last constituting its tail. The head of this marine snake is said to be provided with eye specks, feelers and a mouth armed with rows of miniature teeth. It is rarely more than two and a half feet in length, although specimens have been captured that measured six feet with bodies as thick as one's finger. It is made up of hundreds of rings.

Those who are authorities in such matters assure us that the whole body is divided into segments scarce a line and a half long and ten or twelve lines broad, thus consisting of about three hundred rings.

A brain of three hundred ganglions, from which about three thousand nervous branches proceed, regulates the movements, sensations and vegetative functions. Two hundred and eighty stomachs digest its food; two hundred and fifty brachia refresh its blood, six hundred hearts distribute this vital fluid through the whole body and thirty thousand muscles obey the will of the creature and execute its snaky movements. With this astonishing profusion of bodily organs, we are prone to admit that truly the annelide is "fearfully and wonderfully made."

Each segment composing the stringy form is provided on both sides with variously formed silky bristles of a metallic color, which serve as oars and also as a means for locomotion, since they take the place of feet. The little creature is limbless, has no skeleton or backbone and breathes through little gills arranged along its back, where the thin cuticle is pierced by many pores, while the hairlike fins or bristle bearing feet aid the serpent on swimming expeditions.

Each of these sea snakes appears to possess, tucked away somewhere beneath the delicate cuticle of its shiny back, all its own, a sort of ready-made electric light apparatus, with which the graceful swimmer is able to make a dazzling display whenever occasion demands. From its unusual possessions and queer habits the peculiar creature is sometimes called a "phosphorescent snake."

The seemingly happy annelides are not without their troubles, however, for eels and flat fish, sea spiders and lobsters are their special enemies. And untold millions of both old and young of the unfortunate creatures fall prey every year to their foes while innocently skirmishing about on sandy bottoms where they feed and pass the greater portion of their lives in little lime tubes of their own construction.

Piecework.

Virtually all wages in England are based on piecework. In March, 1919, the time rates for women weavers were fixed, starting at $3.35 for girls under 15, up to $7.79 for women over 21. The piecework rate was fixed so that a girl of average ability could get 20 per cent. more than at time rates.

THE ESKIMO HUTS.

They Prefer Snow to Civilised Concrete.

The movement to modernize the Eskimo by providing him with concrete huts in place of his picturesque snow "igloos" as suggested by an official of the United States Bureau of Fisheries, would be the death of the denizen of the icy north, in the opinion of Vilhjalmur Stefansson, the Arctic explorer. Not only is the Eskimo devoted to his age-long habitation as the South Sea Islanders are to their traditional garb of flower garlands and fresh smiles, but he is far healthier, warmer and more comfortable in his domed mansion of snow blocks than he could be in any modern house of concrete.

The statement that the natives of the Prybiloff Islands were about to discard their snow huts for modern concrete huts, finding the gales of the Bering Sea too strong for the former, upon which the story of the intended change of Eskimo habits was based, Mr. Stefansson characterized as too silly for discussion. The explorer said that the Prybiloff Islanders had never lived in snow but in wooden huts and that further north, where the natives do live in snow houses, it would be next to impossible to convert them to any other dwelling.

"Their igloo serves as a home for two or three weeks. Then they build a new one. Because it is new it is clean and sanitary. It is as warm and comfortable as your library. A candle gives as much illumination as three electric lights, because of the intense whiteness of the snow. The snow house will stand under any conditions. In all, the igloo is as comfortable a home as a man could wish.

"The concrete hut, like the wooden hut, must be uncomfortable and unsanitary. Wherever the natives have changed from the snow to the wooden home there has followed penumonia and typhoid and a tremendous increase in the death rate.

"The Eskimos are a migratory race. Contact with civilization has affected them and they are dying off. They must soon be extinct and the concrete hut hastens that extinction. The Eskimos are like the gypsies. Try to keep a gypsy in a house of concrete and see what happens.

"Still, the Eskimos might be converted to the concrete hut," went on Mr. Stefansson, smiling. "If it becomes the fashion. Should concrete homes become fashionable, all Eskimos would soon be living in them. Human nature is the same the world over. Let some one introduce the wearing of furs, as a fashion, in the Zulu Islands, and the natives there would wear furs. Women wear furs in California and Florida, where the chimate is just as hot as on the Zulu Islands. So you see, you never can tell."

Airman Got a "Sub."

One minute passed, two minutes, four minutes. We had roared over six miles of sea, and still I could see the little fountain ahead.

Then I saw the submarine. She was a mile away—a big grey Fritz of the U-class, long flush deck rising toward the bows, conning tower between bow and stern, two guns; one before and one aft of the conning-tower, and a straight stem. She was shoving through the water at top-speed, about thirteen knots, and above her bow was the little fountain.

It was caused by a thread of water running up her straight stem and leaping into the air about five feet. It glittered in the sun.

Two men were on the conning-tower, but they did not see or hear us coming. We were attacking up wind and down sun. We read part of her number, U4?, but the second numeral was blurred.

Forty seconds after seeing the U-boat Dickey pulled the release lever and dropped one bomb. He threw up his arm. I banked over and looked down. The bomb had detonated on the starboard side half way between the conning-tower and the stern.

The submarine heeled slowly over to port. She stopped in her own length and began to sink.

Cuckney close behind me passed over. I saw a bomb burst on the starboard side right in front of the conning-tower. Her decks were now awash. An explosion occurred in her bow and several smaller explosions between the stem and the conning-tower.

By this time I was again in position and Dickey dropped a second bomb. The bomb detonated about thirty feet away from her. Only the very top of her conning-tower was showing. And then she vanished.

The little fountain had been fatal. —From Squadron Commander T. D. Hallam's new book, "The Spider Web," an account of his own share in fighting submarines in the North Sea.

Poet Refused Money.

Among the British men of prominence probably the one who most frequently refused money was Browning, the poet. During the last twenty-five years of his life editors offered large sums for a short poem from his pen. But Browning said, "No." He told his friends when they pointed out the unwisdom of this course that he was determined not to thrust his poems down the throats of people; that if they wanted to read him they could buy his books.

Agony Column of "The Times"

ONE of the most interesting newspaper features in the world is the personal column of the London Times, christened the "agony" column by Thackeray. It was never more interesting than at present. It is perhaps the best of all mirrors of after-war conditions in England. Things are to be learned there that are not to be found in the news columns nor in any other department of the Times or any other newspaper. With the identity of the advertiser screened from the public, he can lay bare his innermost heart in the firm knowledge that his appeal will come to the attention of thousands of people who might help, and that his distress cannot be known by anyone from whom he desires it kept secret. The "agony" advertisements are always anonymous. Nevertheless, the Times, like other English papers which feature such departments, always satisfies itself of the genuineness of the appeal before publishing it, and has the name and address of every advertiser.

It is only this guarantee that would cause us to accept as genuine the following: "£1,000,000 will be paid for an English estate with commensurate income. Any estate with rent roll of from £30,000 to £50,000 a year considered, being required for investment of surplus capital. Replies, which will be treated in strictest confidence, to Croesus, Box X 184, the Times." It is plain enough that this is the call of a profiteer, of somebody whom the war has made fabulously rich so swiftly that he has not been able to invest his surplus. It is also plain that the million pounds is a mere surplus, since no sane person would now think of investing his entire fortune or even the greater part of it in an English estate, with a view of present and future taxation. Indeed, the sanity of the advertiser, even as it is, cannot be regarded as beyond suspicion. A man who buys a million pound estate at once advertises the fact that he is tremendously wealthy, and apart from the taxation of the land he may expect Government experts to be extremely curious about his other sources of income. It is certain that there exists in England some desperate profiteers whom the Government has not been able to reach.

Side by side with the conscienceless Croesus are the appeals of those who helped amass his fortune. Here is one: "Would anyone like to subscribe to my wedding? I have the girl and nothing else. I work hard, but unless miracles happen marriage is hopeless. Will anyone help a 'busted' warrior?—Box X 568, the Times." There is a breeziness about this appeal that, one would think, would have enabled the "busted" warrior to get married before this. Here is another:

"Pseudo - gentleman - lieutenant, having been segregated from H. M. Forces, emerges with five years' intellectual stagnation, jobless. Will soon be financially abashed as gratuity is smitten with a wasting sickness. No qualification beyond general clerical work, but would accept anything from shoeblack to manager of picture house. Good military record.—Box 10,072,380, Oxford street, W."

Two more specimens:

"Will anyone help aged officer of very good birth, demobilized about middle November, to earn his living? Experienced motor driver, ride and drive, traveled and motored in many countries; would invest gratuity and small savings in motor if regular employment could be got or would act as chauffeur-companion to elderly person.—Box R. 34, the Times, London, E.C.4."

"An ex-officer (age 40, family), who came 6,000 miles to join up (France, 1915), has for months past sought appointment in vain. Earned £7-800 p.a. pre-war. Now nearly 'broke.' Qualifications: Served practical apprenticeship shipbuilding (twice won National Competition for original designs of steam yachts), subsequently many years' experience both shipbuilding and general construction of big buildings, including various ferro-concrete work; rapid at quantities, estimates and calculations; engineer in charge of large construction work and organization and control of labor. Advertiser offers services in practical capacity to anyone who will endeavor to make use of same.—Box .179, the Times."

There is not an issue of the Times in which similar advertisements do not appear. Many of them are inspired by the difficulty of getting homes. One man advertises his willingness to give £100 to anyone who will bring him the key to a cottage or house that rents for £60 a year. Another offers a bonus for what he calls a "white elephant," a house that is large, in disrepair, inaccessible or haunted. Another wants three rooms in a stable for which he is ready to pay handsomely. This is a demobilized Canadian, who describes himself as an artist craftsman. There are, of course, the old pre-war advertisements of men struck with a pretty appearance and desiring the name and address of the young lady who was seen stepping off a bus at the Charing Cross station. There are the mysterious messages which are daily scanned by Scotland Yard and which are now have resulted in the discovery of serious crimes, and there are the touching in memoriam cards which are likely to appear before the eyes of readers for at least a generation to come.

A moderate trickle of water from an ordinary tap will waste 150 gallons a day, or 54,750 gallons in a year.

Apostle Spoons.

Apostle spoons, also called "gossip spoons," were gilt spoons given by the sponsors or "gossips" to a child at its christening. They were so called because each spoon had a figure of an apostle on the handle. Wealthy people gave the whole twelve Apostles; those of less means and generosity gave the four Evangelists; while poorer persons had to be contented with one, being generally the figure of the donor's or of the child's patron saint.

Many Questions.

An assistant station master at Paddington, London, Eng., took, by means of a number-recording watch, a record of the number of questions asked by the public during a single week. The total was 2,188. Some of the questions were extremely foolish.

The little Republic of San Marino has the longest national anthem after China. To hear it from beginning to end would take several hours.

COLD FEET IN ADVERTISING

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

BRIDGES OF BAMBOO.

Natives of Java Erect Unique Structures.

The natives of Java have a bridge-building technique which utilizes to the limit their slight resources for work of this character. Of raw materials they are acquainted with but two, and one of these is really a product of their own ingenuity. They have no nails, no iron, no true wood; they are forced to rely entirely upon bamboo for the structural parts, and upon a rope of their own manufacture to effect the junctures.

The span is almost 150 feet, and the width of the roadway some four feet. The four bamboo columns at either side of the stream are built up of a double length of from fifty to sixty bamboos, tied up with rope and firmly pressed together by forcing a quantity of wedges between rope and bamboos. Such columns are found to be of remarkable strength and elasticity.

The original element which the Javan natives have brought to the construction of these bridges, as remarked, it the rope. This is made of a fibre taken from the native aren-palm, which grows all over the island.

It makes a rope that resists effectively the heavy decaying action of the hot and damp tropical climate with its legions of fungi; in fact, it lasts for many years without any indications of rotting. So between this rope and the bamboo the natives are able to achieve a semi-permanent structure for which it would be hard to find a peer on the ground of cheapness and durability. Perhaps the most surprising feature of the whole thing is the degree to which has been approximated the best type of bridge arch. How does an ignorant savage know that a bridge ought not to be built perfectly flat?

Chinese Fighters.

China as an old and highly civilized nation, lives, speaks, acts, sleeps and wakes up in periods of long centuries, writes T. Y. Leo, in Asia magazine.

She is reluctant to waste her energy on any accomplishment, however brilliant and clever, that can add nothing to the moral or spiritual greatness of her people. Indeed her civilization has reached such a stage that she has no use for any transient glory and success to be won only by means of either antiquated and ill-principled diplomacy or primitive and ungodly brute force. Yet China does not shrink shudderingly from fight if necessity demand it, for fighting has been as much innate in the nature of her people as it has been in yours. What has apparently made a world of difference between the Chinese and the rest of the world is that while you admire the fighting spirit, worship it, and do everything to promote it, we, on the contrary, have ever been condemning it, curbing it and forcing it to lie dormant until it almost ceases to respond spontaneously to any call short of life and death. Nevertheless, this spirit in the Chinese is not dead; it is there, quite alive and serenely waiting. Wiseacres invariably would say that fighting needs an army and a navy, and that an army and a navy depend on organization and discipline. But this is only superficially true; for China is a grand old witch. She learns by her experience of forty or fifty centuries; she learns from the history of the world; and she knows that ancient Greece never gained her victory over Persia wholly through her better discipline and organization of her fighting people, and that Prussian Germany in our day was never defeated by the Allies because of inefficiency of her army or the inferiority of her guns and gas. Be that as it may, with the present European settlement regarding Shantung as a hard blow at her, China will conquer the world in due time. She can conquer the world, and she can conquer the conqueror of the world. In all probabilities she will never need to follow the teachings of her great ancient Shantung strategists. Virtue triumps. Honesty wins. Chinese philosophy leads.

Fur Shortage Rumored.

Short catches are being reported this year throughout the fur country of Northern Canada. A. Bassett, chief inspector of the Hudson Bay Co. Fur Trade Dept., said the other day that the catches received so far are the advance guard, sent out from the interior by natives in need of an immediate "grub stake." So far as he could judge, there will not be the absolute shortage of muskrat, which had been rumored, but rat undoubtedly would be scarce, as it had been for three years. Lynx, while scarce, might be expected to show a slight improvement over 1913, when it reached the lowest ebb since 1910.

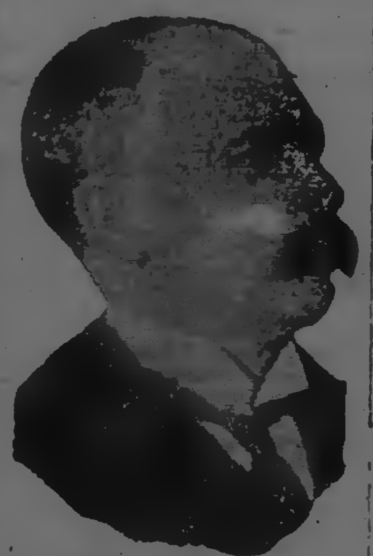
Sir William Osler Was One of the Greatest Men Given to World by Canada

WITH the death of Sir William Osler Canada loses one of her greatest sons. Fashioned by fate for a career in the world of scientific medicine, he became in his own sphere one of those overtowering authorities who are recognized the world over, and as such he added lustre to the name of his native land, as imperishable as any that springs from the achievements of the nation's political heroes.

Up till a fortnight before his death there had been every hope for the recovery of the famous physician, who was known to be suffering from the effects of an attack of pneumonia contracted in November. Toward the middle of that month he was reported convalescent, and in spite of a slight relapse which occurred a fortnight before the died he was well enough on Christmas Day to be able to extend his greetings to his friends the world over through the medium of a message sent to the Johns Hopkins Hospital, Baltimore, in which he stated that he was "making a good fight," after an empyema operation, which he was compelled to undergo.

Born at Bond Head, Ont., on July 12, 1849, he was the sixth son of the late Rev. F. L. Osler, the Anglican rector there. He passed successively through Trinity College, Port Hope, Trinity College, University of Toronto, receiving his medical degree from McGill University in 1872. Almost immediately his distinctive genius made itself apparent, and, pursuing his academic studies further, he proceeded to University College, London, and passed on to Berlin and Vienna to acquire what he could from German sources. His closest attention always centred upon physiology and pathology, and from the first he carefully began to build up that wonderful acumen in the diagnosis of disease, springing from a profound knowledge of the parts and functions of the human body and its reactions. Indeed, within a few years he had demonstrated that he could probe more deeply and go straighter to the heart of the problem than other accepted authorities.



SIR WILLIAM OSLER.

Returning to Canada in 1873, he accepted a professorship at McGill University, Montreal. Here he put in a number of years of hard work, steadily building up his reputation and increasing his mastery of medicine, till in 1883 he was elected a Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians of London, and acceded to the Gladstonian scholarship at the same institution the following year.

In 1884 he was unanimously chosen to the Chair of Clinical Medicine at the University of Pennsylvania. Dr. Osler remained in Philadelphia for a year. Two years later he was made Cartwright lecturer in the College of Physicians and Surgeons, New York. Finally, in 1888, he went to Baltimore as physician to Johns Hopkins Hospital and Professor of Principles and Practice of Medicine in the Johns Hopkins University. He became Dean of the Faculty.

After fifteen years at Johns Hopkins' he was elevated to the position of Regius Professor of Medicine at Oxford University, in which capacity he was recognized as practically the greatest medical authority throughout the English - speaking world.

In 1892 he was married to Grace Revere, daughter of the late John Revere of Boston. He had previously been elected president of the Canadian Medical Association in 1886, and his baronetcy was conferred on him in 1911. He dies now without an heir.

One of the controversies in which the great man's name was implicated, was the rather futile storm of criticism and protest which arose as the result of his being incorrectly reported as advocating that all men should be automatically chloroformed when they reached the age of sixty. In fact, to the public at large he was almost better known for this alleged dictum than for his actual achievements in medical science. The origin of this remark, which gave rise to a story which for a long time he did not consider worth refuting, was a speech delivered at Johns Hopkins' University in 1905, in which he referred to "The Fixed Period," a novel of Anthony Trollope's, in which the pivotal idea is the author's picture of a comfortable college for men to retire into at the age of sixty, whence they may be privileged to make a peaceful departure from this life by undergoing chloroform. What Sir William wished to draw attention to was the greater robustness and value of the work performed by men before they reach the age of sixty. The words he actually used were: "My fixed idea is the uselessness of men above 60 years of age and the incalculable benefit it would be in commercial, political and professional life, if, as a matter of course, men stopped work at this age."

Sir William himself remained in active practice until the end of his life, thus exceeding by ten years the age which he had set as representing the turning point of man's decline. To the end, too, his contributions to the study of medicine commanded the attention of the world. By understanding intimately the larger bearings of physiological phenomena, he was able to work out their more detailed implications. He was a great teacher, knowing well how to kindle the interest of his disciples, and was a capable organizer. Above all, it is his writings which give him his pre-eminent place. They cover almost every place.

Sir William's only son, the late Lieut. Edward Osler, was killed in action in 1917.

VALUE OF RUBIES.

Manufactured Ones Are Usually Inferior.

Many people will be surprised to know that even during the war dealers in precious stones did quite good business, says Pearson's Weekly. The reason for this is that while ordinary investments may, in times of stress, decrease in value, the purchaser of jewels has a fairly secure method of hoarding up his wealth. The diamond merchant's art requires more knowledge and skill than any other profession, and even the most cunning dealer is sometimes liable to be caught napping.

You can take two rubies that are the same in every respect—weight, cutting and lustre—to a dealer to be valued, and after a few minutes with a lens or microscope, he may tell you that one is worth practically nothing and the other a fortune.

If you looked at them under the glass you would see that both have minute air bubbles in them, but in one stone these bubbles will be distorted and will seem to flow along definite lines, while in the other they will be spherical, and will, perhaps, be arranged about the centre. This is just the all-important difference: the former was mined in Burma, while the latter was made in the laboratory.

The Burma ruby may be inferior to the manufactured one, which has been produced by artificial heat in a blowpipe, yet you will have to pay ten times the price for it, simply because it was dug from the earth.

Paste stones are readily distinguishable from the genuine by the fact that all spurious gems of this sort are soft; they can be scratched by a piece of quartz, and no real gem of the transparent sort can.

Since the earliest times twenty-nine tons of diamonds have been taken from the earth. After being cut and polished their weight is, of course, considerably reduced.

A box three feet high, six feet wide and eight long, would hold the world's total output of these gems in their finished condition, and would have a market value of about £1,000,000,000.

"Marching Through Georgia."

The song, "Marching Through Georgia," was the product, in 1866, of Henry Clay Work, a popular song writer, who wrote many songs that were popular in civil war time. He was a printer by trade and often composed the words while working at the "case," and when he was setting up music type he would compose the music "free hand." "Marching Through Georgia" is probably unique among war songs, in that it was composed without appearing in manuscript.

Hawaiians.

There probably are not 10,000 pure-blooded Hawaiians living to-day. In 1778 there were about 300,000; in 1823 there were only 142,000; in 1833, 130,000; in 1860, 44,000; in 1900, 30,000; in 1910, 26,000.

BISHOP SWEENEY OF TORONTO PREACHES ON THE ANGLICAN FORWARD MOVEMENT

World Seething With Unrest Because Varied Interests Do Not Realize Inherent Rights of Each Other.

The Bishop of Toronto Diocese preached a forceful and timely sermon at All Saint's Church yast evening. His Lordship built up an eloquent discourse from the text: "I gave my life for Thee, what hast thou done for Me," and applied these words to the needs and aims of the Anglican Forward Movement, which, he said, is a movement of prayer, service and sacrifice. Fundamentally, first and foremost, the movement is a spiritual one, and not a cloak for raising vast sums of money, as is sneeringly asserted by scoffers and agnostics. And even supposing such contentions were true, how can the kingdom of God be extended without vast sums of money asked the Bishop.

Faith in Prayer

Explaining that the real object of the Anglican Forward Movement is the glorification of God and the extension of his kingdom on earth, His Lordship contended that were prayer for its success based on faith in the officiency of intelligent and persistent prayer the movement must go forward and it will succeed. In this connection he exhorted his hearers to by means of the literature distributed, acquaint themselves with the needs of Anglican mission work among the Esquimaux, the Canadian Indians, China, Africa, India, Palestine and in other distant lands; and he besought all to pray persistently and perseveringly that the strongholds of Satan might be broken down and God's kingdom firmly established throughout the world.

Generous Service

The distinguished visitor here urged generous "service" in the Forward Movement, even as Christ came to minister and not to be ministered unto; he hoped for emulation, in an appropriate spirit of Christ's example of service in washing His disciples' feet, that is to say not to consider any service for weal of the community or of individuals in ordinary everyday life, too humble to engage in. This Anglican Forward Movement he said, offers in truth opportunity to go out and work for the Kingdom of Christ, and bring in results which will help us go over the top of our objective, and do exceedingly more than we think can be accomplished.

Liberal Giving

The Bishop pointed out that the Forward Movement is also essentially one for sacrifice, and declared it calls for giving six times as much as before in order to prosecute the great work in hand. There are, he said, two hundred thousand Anglican families in Canada, and were each to give in this proportion it would mean that not merely $1,500,000 would be contributed, but $3,000,000 or $4,000,000. Sacrifice, he went on to say, means something given up that we might hold back, and in ninety-nine cases out of one hundred, no one has been giving to hurt himself or herself, as a sacrifice to the kingdom of God. "Have you?" his Lordship asked, "like the Apostles, counted yourself worthy to be beaten and rejected for the cause of Christ." Religion today, he declared, is becoming too easy-going and too conventional——and that is all wrong. In the war our soldiers trained themselves to endure hardship and sacrifice that they might make good soldiers of the King, and we ought to be ready to suffer hardship as good soldiers of the King of Kings.

Seething With Unrest

This world, the speaker concluded, is seething with unrest—commercial, industrial, social, domestic—unrest of every character, all due to a question of rights. There is not a single living creature or being but what has attached it some inherent right. Parents, children, workmen and employers, each have their own inherent rights, but confusion has arisen because men are not realising those rights in their interrelationship with each other. Go forth into the world's highways, he urged seize and use every opportunity given in relation with the Forward Movement for the expansion of Christian friendship and brotherhood, so that at the last you shall hear God's commendation: "well done, enter now into the Glory of thy God."

Mr. J. J. Turner, layman of St. Luke's Church, preceded the Bishop with a brief but appropritate address in the course of which he emphasized the laity's duty to attend regularly divine worship, and to partake of holy communion. He appealed strongly for one hundred per cent efficiency and labor in the service of God.

THE POLITICAL ECONOMY OF POWER

Summary of Address of W. H. Pretty, A. M. Inst. C. E., Before Members of Board of Trade.

The following is a brief summary of the points dealt with by Mr. W. H. Pretty in his recent address before the Board of Trade:

The importance of the study of the solution of political economy generally, and in reference to our proper use of our fuel and power resources, which can be drawn upon for purposes of light, heat and power, in particular.

The necessity of drawing upon fact and incidents in history bearing upon these commodities, for information when considering their gradual subservice to the service and convenience of man.

The Horse and Man as a means of obtaining power in past times for various purposes. Power is now the servant of man.

The association of the political economy of power with Adam Smith and James Watt, and its bearing upon the vast advance to industrial production and transportation by the latter's inventions, whereby the natural resources of fuel in Great Britain and elsewhere was utilised for increasing the natural wealth and comfort of life of nations.

The great waste of fuel that still maintains even in our most modern steam turbines and comparison with internal combustion engines and Hy-Electric supply for light heat and power purposes.

Comparisons of various national resources of energy producing the public commodities of light, heat and power such as peat-straw, sawdust coal, liquid fuels, gasoline, etc.

The steam boiler as a reasonably efficient means of utilizing fuels for heating purposes—and the production of steam under pressure for power purposes. The steam engine still excessivly wastes the heat value of the coal and fuel used for generating the steam it consumes.

The use and abuse of electric supply for heating purposes.

The value of electric energy for lighting purposes and comparisons of some of the various types of lamps now in regular use.

The domestic electric supply for reducing household labor and setting this labor free for industrial production.

Natural resources of fuel are "capital" held in trust for the people of this and future generations.

Manufactured fuels, such as alcohol are the "revenue" of production of labor.

The value of alcohol for industrial purposes and for replacing gasoline and other fuels in internal combustion.

Its economical manufacture, thereby releasing sums of money sent out of Canada for commodities used for light, heat, power and transportation purposes.

The value to Peterborough of the coupling up, now established of Hydro Electric generating stations with which we are more or less surrounded.

The consumption of horse power per capita for (1) industrial, (2) local transportation, (3) radial transportation, (4) domestic service, (5) public service, with a view to its economic use from the standpoint of the population or number of people it should serve.

The importance of the establishment of more small industries in our midst for retaining ambitious young men in Peterborough, and also for finding a greater variety of employment for the young people of the coming generation

Following a brief illness from pneumonia, the death occurred on Thursday of Mrs. Margaret Flavelle Milner, wife of Prof. W. S. Milner, and sister of Sir Joseph Flavelle, at her home, 74 Grenville street.

The late Mrs. Milner was born in Peterborough, Ont., the daughter of Mr. John Flavelle. In 1891 she married Prof. Milner and since then had resided in Toronto. One son survives, Lieut. Arthur Milner, who has just returned from active service in India, and three brothers, Sir Joseph, Mr. J. D. and Mr. Wm. Flavelle, fo Lindsay.

Y.W.C.A. WHATS DOING THIS WEEK

The new week promises to be a good one at the Young Women's Christian Association. In addition to the regular club meetings on Tuesday night, the members of the Athena Club are having a skating party and will return to the building for refreshments. The conversational French class will be held Tuesday at 7:30, and on Thursday at the same hour a class in French for beginners will be started.

On Friday night the Story-Telling Circle will meet at 7:15 as usual, and on Thursday at 8 p.m. Judge Huycke will give the second of his series of lectures entitled "Courts and Their Constitution." Those who attended Judge Huycke's lecture last week will agree that the course promises to be an interesting one. Saturday night there is to be a snowshoe tramp, starting from the building at 7:30. All girls are invited to come and join in the laughter and fun.

: : AT THE GRAND : :

"Friendly Enemies," a play which should have filled the house to capacity, but which only drew a medium sized audience, was the attraction at the Grand Saturday both matinee and evening. This play centres around two German-Americans at the time the United States was getting into the war. One of the men is strongly American in his sentiments but the other is just as strongly pro-German, and their arguments are very funny. The son of Pfeiffer, the pro-German, enlists with the American forces without his father's knowledge and just before he is about to sail for France the father is told. The old gentleman had given a German secret agent a substantial subscription to aid in propaganda work for the Fatherland but when he found that this money had been used for the purpose of destroying the ship in which his son was sailing he became as rabidly American as he had previously been German. Together with his old friend Block, he decided to trap the German agent and in this was successful.

The difficult parts of Karl Pfeiffer and Henry Block, the two old German-Americans, were played by Henry J. Kooper and Will H. Sloan respectively and Miss Augusta Burmester played the part of Marie Pfeiffer, wife of Karl. Miss Natalie Manning played the part of June Block, and Ray Wildon, the part of Wm. Pfeiffer, the son. Lewis Hartman, in the part of Walter Stuart, the German spy, was perfect.

"Friendly Enemies" gives one some idea of the way in which old friends were divided in the United States in the matter of the war. There is no doubt there were lots of men like Pfeiffer who think of committing the least of the atrocities perpetrated by the German army yet who would not believe that these atrocities were committed by the men many of whom, he knew, in the Kaiser's host, and who maintained right to the last that these stories were all lies.

It is to be regretted though that more people do not take advantage of the opportunities offered by the management of the Grand to see the better class of entertainments which they are now offering. One show of the kind of "Friendly Enemies" is worth half a dozen of the cheap variety which seems to fill the house every time they come around, yet it would appear that it is the latter kind which the theatre-going public wants.

THE WEATHER

Saturday night's lowest temperature was 24 degrees below zero, and the thermometer was considerably below zero most of Sunday. The lowest Sunday night was also 24 below. Towards morning the weather moderated somewhat and at daybreak it was 10 below. Every day since the 14th inst. has shown below zero. To those interested it may be said that the barometer yesterday stood at a higher point than it has done for 12 years, and went up to over 30 inches. This means that a pronounced high pressure area was passing over this section and that the air was particularly heavy.—W. P.

ST. LUKE'S VESTRY ANNUAL MEETING

FINANCIAL CONDITION OF THE CHURCH IN SATISFACTORY CONDITION

OFFICERS FOR CURRENT YEAR

EXPRESSIONS OF REGRET AT RETIREMENT OF WARDEN J. J. TURNER

Last night the annual vestry meeting of St. Luke's Church was held in the Parish Hall, and a good representation of the membership was present. The rector, Rev. W. H. White, occupied the chair, and Mr. Harry Adams was appointed vestry clerk.

The report of the wardens, Mr. R. B. Rogers and Mr. J. J. Turner, was read and showed the financial condition of the church to be in a most satisfactory condition, a credit balance being on hand at the end of the year. The report though, intimated the fact that greater efforts would have to be made this year than last in order to take care of the increased expenditure made necessary by some increases in the salaries of the rector the organist and the sexton.

Reports were also read from the Sunday School, the W. A., and the various other church organizations, and all were found to be in a flourishing condition.

Officers Elected

After the reading of reports, officers were elected for the ensuing year as follows:

Peoples Warden, Mr. H. A. Perry.

Rector's Warden, Mr R. B. Rogers.

Parish Executive. R. B. Rogers, J. J. Turner, W. H. Carter, Robt. Starr, Arthur Green, J. Marshall, Hugh McWha, R. McKee, Frank Adams, R H. Parsons, William Maplese, R. H. Turner, George Curtis, R. A. Wilson, R. G. Northcott, J. Michels, George Carpenter, A. R. Dawson, Frank Whitehouse, Mark Butcham, Arthur Whittaker, B. B. Johnston, Ed. Heal, Harold Fitch, F. A. Adams, E. A. Peck, H. A. Perry, F. H. Patterson.

Lay Delegates to Synod, R. B. Rogers, A. E. Dawson, Frank Whitehouse.

Vestry Clerk, Mr. Harry Adams.

Retirement Regretted

One of the outstanding features of the meeting was the resignation of Mr. J. J. Turner from the office of People's Warden, a post which he has filled for the past eight years. Mr. Turner, who has not been enjoying the best health lately, felt that he should be relieved of his office, and although many expressions of regret were heard, his wish in this respect was granted.

Social Hour

After the business of the meeting was finished a social hour was spent, the ladies of the congregation serving refreshments.

GENERAL CURRIE NOT TO ENTER POLITICS

DECLARES HE WILL CONTINUE TO WORK FOR MILITIA REORGANIZING

Toronto, Jan. 27.— General Sir Arthur Currie, who is in Toronto to confer with the local militia authorities on matters connected with the reorganisation of the forces here, stated yesterday that he had no intention or desire to engage in any other sphere of work than the one in which he was at present engaged. The suggestion of General Victor Odlum, that he should aspire to leadership of the Unionist party he characterised as a tribute from one of his former brigadiers, exemplifying the confidence the officers of the Canadian Corps had in each other. He spoke in glowing terms of the work done in the war by General Odlum and said that he would make a valuable member of Parliament himself. General Currie forcasted an early announcement of the reorganization of Toronto's militia. The announcement already made, said he, regarding the reorganization of the Canadian Militia had been well received. All the artillery units had been perpetuated in the new militia, and he hoped, he said, to be able to make announcements shortly regarding the other branches of the service which would be as well received as the former.

Rev. Max Arendt, one of Ontario's best known Lutheran clergymen died in Kitchener.

ST. JOHN'S CHURCH VESTRY MEETING

WARDENS' FINANCIAL STATEMENT SHAWS CONDITIONS VERY ENCOURAGING

CREDIT BALANCES A FEATURE

VESTRY CONGRATULATES ARCH DEACON, THE RECTOR, ON HIS RECENT ELEVATION

The annual vestry meeting of St. John's Anglican Church, held last evening, was well attended by the members of the congregation.

The financial statement as presented by the wardens was very encouraging and showed deep interest taken by the laity in the affairs of the church.

The several financial reports of the church's organizations all showed a credit balance.

Officers Elected.

Rector's Warden — G. Stewart Cameron.

People's Warden—J. A. Aylmer.

Executive Committee—W. R. Morris, A. L. Killaly, A. W. Turner, Arthur Stevenson, J. J. Howden, and one representative from the Church Women's Association and the Women's Auxiliary.

Vestry Clerk—G. A. Smith.

Lay Delegates to Synod—George Lenton, A. G. Roberts, Col. Mills.

Auditor—J. F. Linton.

The following resolution was moved and seconded by the wardens and unanimously passed:

"It is with the utmost pleasure that the people of St. John's parish have learned of the elevation of our rector to the honorable position of Archdeacon of Peterborough. His years of faithful duty to the church and to his parishioners, together with his wide interest in the general welfare of the whole of mankind of whatever nation, religion or creed, has well merited the recognition which has now come to him.

"It therefore gives us much pleasure to move that the congratulations and best wishes of this vestry be extended to Archdeacon Davidson."

UNION JOB PRINTERS ARE OUT ON STRIKE

HAMILTON MEMBERS OF CRAFT REFUSE EMPLOYERS' OFFER OF INCREASE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Hamilton, Jan. 27. — Union job printers, pressmen and bookbinders of this city numbering 350 went on strike today because their demand for an increase from $28.80 to $35 per week for the next six months and $37 for the following six months was refused. The employers offered $32, same as the Toronto scale, and to meet any advance that might be made in Toronto, or $32 unconditionally. The offer was refused.

"CRIMINAL EXCESS OF POLITICAL WARFARE"

ATTEMPTED ASSASINATION OF ERZBERGER IS SO REGARDED IN GERMANY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 27.—Heavy patrols of soldiers guarded the government buildings during the past night and stopped all traffic over the streets in that neighborhod, where barricades were thrown up by the troops before nightfall. Deep indignation over the attack on Mathias Erzberger was expressed in the proclamation issued last night, the attempted assassination being called, "Criminal excess of political warfare."

OTTAWA'S POPULATION 110,000

This is Estimate Based on Figures of City Assessor.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—According to figures given out by the city assessor the population of the Capital increased last year from 104,000 to 107,732. The figures are only compiled up to October 1, and civic officials believe the present population is nearly 110,000.

CALEDONIAN CLUB PAYS HOMAGE TO THE MEMORY OF SCOTLAND'S NATIONAL BARD

Over One Hundred Members and Guests Sit Down to Banquet at the Empress Hotel—Bagpipe Music, Eloquent Addresses and Scottish Songs Features of the Entertainment.

With a burst of bagpipe music furnished by A. A. MacLaren of Wiarton and James R. Muir, piper of the famous 48th. Highlanders of Toronto, the banquet given by the Caledonian Society to commemorate the anniversary of the birth of Scotland's national poet Robert Burns, was opened at the Empress Hotel last night, the first function of the kind held in six years, the annual entertainment having been suspended owing to the war, in which nearly ninety per cent of the members of the society took an active part. It was with renewed enthusiasm that the affair was entered into last night, the best of its kind, by long odds, ever held in this city. The very atmosphere seemed filled with the spirit of Scotland and the shades of the departed Ayrshire singer appeared to pervade the assembly. The walls of the dining room were decorated with some of the favorite and famous epigrams of the man to whose memory so much genuine tribute was suitably paid by singers and speakers alike. The bill of fare, aside from the Scottish dish, the haggis, was one of the best that has ever graced festive boards. Over one hundred guests sat down to the banquet, these including, not Scotchmen alone, but English and Irish and visitors from other cities and from the United States. The grace, before meat, pronounced by Mr. John Moyes, the first president of the society, who holds that position yet in an honorary capacity, was one of the metrical prayers for the extempore utterance for which Robert Burns was famous. Of course, the main item on the menu was the haggis, which was served in becoming state, being carried on a tray on the shoulder of Sergt. Reid, Robert French, J. A. Smith and Robert Veitch, who marched in from the kitchen in the rear of the pipers. The dainty was toothsome, worthy of all the praise that Burns sang in its honor.

The Speeches

The speeches of the evening were all laudatory of Burns as well as of the Scottish race. Any Scotchman who heard the flow of oratory last night and does not feel a greater pride in his country and of the Ayrshire bard is deserving of the fate of the man who never whispers to himself: "this is my own, my native land one of the oppribrium that Burns himself attached to the one of the three cronies who by any chance might fail to sit out the banquet.

After a brief address by toastmaster E. G. Hardie, president of the society, and due honor had been paid to the King, Mr. E. W. McKay, of Toronto, the speaker of the evening, paid one of the most eloquent and graceful tributes to the memory of the departed bard that the oldest Sotchmen of the clan has ever had the pleasure of hearing. He spoke of the esteem in which Burns was held by other poets, these including Longfellow and Wordsworth. Mr. McKay spoke a volume when he remarked that the weakness of the bard's moral nature made his poetry but spoiled his life. Burns' power of description was unexcelled; his pictures of "Tam O'Shanter" and "Souter Johnny" being so true to life that no one meeting these worthies unexpect-

CHARGE AGAINST BARTENDER DISMISSED

MAGISTRATE HAS REASONABLE DOUBT AND WOULD NOT IMPOSE FINE

The local bar-tender who was charged in Police Court yesterday with drinking liquor in a public place, was found not guilty by Magistrate Dumble and the charge dismissed. The magistrate stated that not sufficient evidence had been produced to convict the man witnout a reasonable double, therefore, he felt he could not justly impose a fine.

The case of the Syrian, who it is alleged deceived his creditors, was adjourned for two weeks to give time to his friends to make restitution.

GOVERNMENT SHOULD HOLD ON

To American Railroads, Say Farmers and Workingmen

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 27.—The continuance of Government control of railroads for at least two years was asked of President Wilson again today by representatives of the Farmers' organizations, the American Federation of Labor and four big brotherhoods. The return of the railroads, they claimed, would involve an increase in freight rates of twenty-five to forty per cent.

TEXTILE MEN SAY THAT RECENT DEMAND FOR INFORMATION IS UNFAIR

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—Charges against the Board of Commerce and its officials were laid before the Government today by a delegation of textile manufacturers, who protested against the questionnaire sent out by the Board of Textile Trades, demanding certain information. Manufacturers presented to the Government a formal petition claiming that the questionnaire be required detailed information to be furnished covering a period of ten and in some cases eleven years.

GERMANY PLANS JAP ALLIANCE

DR. SOLF IS APPOINTED REPRESENTATIVE AT THE COURT OF TOKIO

ANGLO-JAP TREATY EXPIRES

GERMAN REPRESENTATIVE WILL COUNSEL AGAINST ITS RENEWAL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 27.—Germany's appointment of Dr. Wilhelm's Solf as Charge d'Affaires and eventual ambassador at Tokio is accepted here as an indication that a close understanding with Japan is to be a feature of the new German foreign policy, now that it is permitted the German republic to re-open diplomatic relations with other governments. That Dr. Solf should be sent to Tokio is regarded here as highly significant, for one thing, because the Anglo-Japanese alliance expires by limitation at the end of the year and there is said to be some division of sentiment both in Japan and in Great Britain over its renewal. It is believed by some that Solf will encourage the party in Japan opposed to the renewal of the alliance.

OBJECTS TO PLANS FOR RIVERSIDE PARK

MR. BURNHAM TELLS COUNCIL IT WILL INTERFERE WITH INDUSTRIAL PROGRESS

J. H. Burnham, M.P., has addressed the following open letter to Mayor McIntyre and the members of the City Council:

The Mayor and Council of Peterborough:

Your Worship and Gentlemen,—As Federal Parliamentary representative for the present, of the west riding, including the city, I feel it my duty to call your attention to the fact that the setting aside of a portion of Ashburnham's industrial front on the canal, extending perhaps from the Hunter street bridge along the east shore of the river for a very considerable distance, will handicap a member very seriously in his effort to have the dry-dock and perhaps other government repair stations erected in Peterborough. I had the whole dry-dock basin and repair shops scheme approved by Parliament and the Government and a preliminary sum put in the estimates for the work when the war came down on us and stopped it, as it did the Federal building for a time.

It does not look to me as if we can urge on the Government the development of Peterborough as an industrial centre if we are taking what is not vital for a park, but what is vital for business and devoting it to aesthetic purposes. The canal from here to lake Ontario is 8 ft. 4 in. in the locks and with further dredging will be a real waterway for us to connect up with at Lake Ontario. It is practically still water from here to Hastings and below that increases in volume by the addition of the Crowe River, etc. It is true that by making this land a park and athletic ground the bridge from the river east may be scrapped and removed to the west as unnecessary, the bridge then beginning at the east shore on the east and ending at the top of the incline on the west as at present, but that does not in my humble poinion help out the solution of the matter I refer to.

I have the honor to remain,

Yours truly,

J. H. BURNHAM

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE OF THE ENGINEER AND FIREMAN OF WRECKED TRAIN

Thought That Possibly Noise of Latter's Shovel Prevented the Hearing of the Torpedoes—Officially Announced That Eight Were Killed.

North Bay, Jan. 27.—Individual railroad men here last night asserted that there may be more bodies still buried under the wreckage of the Winnipeg train, No. 1, the second section of which telescoped the first at a curve about one and a half miles east of Corbell and eight miles from North Bay. The total of eight dead, officially announced this afternoon, included two bodies recovered from the wreckage today.

One body is believed to be that of Beale, son of G. H. Beale, Vancouver. The other is that of Mrs. James Tilley, Vancouver, whose husband was also killed. Her name did not appear in the list of killed yesterday and she makes the eighth. The thirteen injured are doing well. There are many others with very minor injuries.

On the left side of the track coming toward North Bay the huge freight engine which was drawing the second section lies on her side on top of a mass of wreckage. Railway men say when she is lifted there may be bodies found underneath. Officially, it is not expected the death list will be added to.

Miraculous Escape of Crew.

How the fireman and engineer of the engine on No. 2 section escaped is one of the miracles of the tragedy. The fireman was feeding his fires as their engine rounded the curve. The noise of his shovel may have had much to do with the failure to hear the torpedoes which Brakeman Curley vowed he had placed on the track some 30 poles behind the stalled train. As his engine rounded the curve towards the stalled train, the huge boiler shut off the engineer's view of the track until he was within a car-length of the first train.

Engine Turns Over.

Neither the engineer nor the fireman had time to jump. Engineer Godin of North Bay shut off steam and jammed on his emergency brakes. The next thing he knew his engine had turned over and he was lying beside a telegraph pole with a few minor scratches about the face. His fireman, Gleeson, also escaped serious hurt, but today he is in bed suffering from the effects of the shock.

Brakeman Kent of Ottawa was on the rear platform of the observation car and beside him stood the colored porter, Simmons, of Montreal. Kent jumped off when he saw that a smash was inevitable. Simmons turned and walked into the car. A mail clerk found his body in the snow several car-lengths away a few minutes later.

REEVE G. B. NICHOLS IS ELECTED WARDEN OF COUNTY FOR 1920

After Three Years of Service Reeve of Smith Becomes Head of The County Legislature—Standing Committees Being Struck.

George B. Nichols, reeve of Smith, was elected warden of the county at the opening meeting of the winter session of the County Council this afternoon. W. E. Griffith was also nominated, but Councillor Nichols recived ten votes among the eighteen councillors.

The new warden has been three years on the Council, the first year as deputy reeve and the last two years as reeve of his township.

Last year's Council commenced the year with a deficit of $2,739.44, and after a year of heavy expenditures closed with an estimated deficit of $4,460.47. An instance of the unlooked-for increased expense is to be noted in the administration of justice, for which $12,500 was appropriated, and the total expenditure was $15,200.

Those present this afternoon were Warden G. B. Nichols, Councillors J. Scott, D. Brown, W. E. Griffith, C. J. Darling, M. Coughlin, D. Holland, J. Clark, R. Shaw, J. McIntosh, F. Wilson, F. A. Easson, D. Lawrie, J. A. Middleton, B W. Squire, J. Strickland and N. Matheson.

LABOR MEMBERS OF THE LEGISLATURE ARE IN SESSION IN TORONTO TODAY

Mayor McBride of Brantford Says Party Has no Intention of Bolting the Government.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 27. — A conference of the elected Labor members of the local Legislature is to be held here this afternoon to discuss the present relations between the Labor party and the Provincial Government. The meeting was convened by Mayor M. M. McBride of Brantford. It will be attended by Hon. Walter Rollo and Hon. Mr. Mills.

Mayor McBride this morning denied that there was any secession movement on the part of certain Labor men from the Provincial Government. "We are in favor of reasonable support of the Government, but we object to 'Druryism' and the one-man government now going on. Drury is wrecking his Government," said Mayor McBride, who added that he was opposed to the Premier attempting so much without first securing a seat. Mr. McBride will arrange for Hon. Mr. Rollo for a debate in Brantford, but says he thinks the Labor Minister chooses Brantford so that afterwards he can say that he didn't get a fair show.

THE VETERANS' CONVENTION.

PROVINCIAL SECRETARY TURLEY of the G.W.V.A. in Toronto yesterday made the announcement that Peterborough is preparing to extend a royal welcome to the Veterans, who will meet in convention in this city beginning March 17th. He expects the largest attendance of any at previous conventions, and recognizes the fact that the hotels will not be able to take care of all the visitors. He believes, however, that the citizens will open their homes to the delegates, so that there is no misgiving on the score of accommodation. From information which he has received from this city, Secretary Turley adds that banquets and entertainments of all forms are being arranged, and the City Council, the Board of Trade, Labor organizations, religious bodies and the public are going to do everything in their power to insure hospitality at its best.

Special railroad rates have been requested for delegates. Definite information in this connection will be forthcoming in the near future.

"There are two points which are important to remember," said Secretary Turley. "Where a poll is demanded at either convention, delegates will vote on the latest membership returns made to Provincial Headquartes on which per capita tax has been paid prior to the convention. And all resolutions intended for submission to the convention should be sent to headquarters not later than March 1."

TWO PAPERS JOIN FORTUNES.

TWO OF THE OLDEST and most influential newspapers in New York, the Sun and the Herald, have passed under the same ownership, and are in future to be issued as one publication, a move which beyond all question will result in giving the reading public one of the greatest newspapers on the American continent. The Herald has, by general consent, held for years the lead as the greatest news-gatherer in the United States and the Sun has been distinguished since the days of its founder, the late Charles A. Dana, for maintaining the brightest and ablest editorial page of any newspaper in the world. Such a combination cannot fail of results, and the benefits of the amalgamation will be shared not by the publishers alone but by the working staff and the patrons of the combination.

OPPOSITION TO EXISTING LAWS.

"THE SUBJECT who is truly loyal, etc." Everyone knows the rest of it, or should, seeing that the maxim has been frequently quoted for the last hundred years or so. But to reverse the proposition, the subject who is truly loyal will not offer violent opposition to any law so long as it remains on the statute books of the country. To agitate for its repeal is a different matter, and not characteristic of the methods of the Bolshevist, who employs no argument except that which is backed up by a deadly weapon.

It does not savor of Bolshevism, for example, to advocate the abolition of capital punishment, which has been a law in British domains ever since the memory of man runneth not to the contrary. It would be Bolshevism, however, to employ force to rescue from the keeping of the State a man who was under sentence of death and so deprive the hangman of a subject. It would properly be regarded as treason to resort to any illegal means to frustrate the operation of a recognized law of the land.

Prohibition has divided that portion of humanity that is affected by it into two classes, the one supporters and the other antis. Every man has a right to his own opinions, but no man is justified in defying any law by flagrant violations. Prohibition was won not by force, but as the result of generations of moral suasion, by the education of the masses along particular lines up to a certain standard. If legislative enactment is to be regarded as the exercise of force, then the entire fabric of government falls to the ground, and the rule of the majority becomes a comedy. Agitation against sumptuary laws is likely to continue for years, but legitimate agitation does not imply the existence of organization with the avowed purpose of setting the prohibitory law at open defiance.

ABOLISHING ALDERMEN.

IT IS A DIFFICULT MATTER to decide whether to accept the move as a step taken in good faith and with the loftiest intentions or to regard it as a sarcastic joke. Anyway, the facts are as follows: Nation-wide prohibition in the United States has brought to the front a variety of freaks, personal and in the way of proposed legislation. In Patterson, New Jersey, a worthy and hitherto impenetrable member of the board of aldermen introduced a resolution in the city council calling upon the Legislature of that State to abolish the office of alderman as an unnecessary legislative adjunct now that the entire country is dry. The eighteenth amendment, which provides for prohibition, is by the alderman regarded as all-sufficient. Nothing further in the way of law-making is required to regulate the affairs of a city. The millennium is here. Why perpetuate official representatives of the people now that they have outgrown their usefulness? As before hinted, however, the record fails to show whether the alderman who fathered the resolution was acting in sober jest or was inspired by grim irony. From the newspaper reports of the affair, it is impossible to decide whether he is a friend or a foe to prohibition.

The resolution was as follows: "In view of the fact that the Eighteenth Amendment is now in effect and that the office of aldermen under present conditions is useless, be it

"Resolved, that we, the honorable board of aldermen, request our local representatives at Trenton to have introduced at the present session a bill abolishing the local board of aldermen."

This was defeated by a vote of six to four, the slimness of the majority justifying the contention of the alderman who sponsored the move that he has won a moral victory, that so frequent solace of the vanquished.

If that idea had prevailed and had been transplanted to Peterborough, worked out to its logical conclusion, the U. F. O. Government would do away with the offices now filled by Mayor McIntyre and his ten colleagues in the mangement of the city's affairs. Chief Thompson and License Inspector Stewart, with harmonious relations restored and an occasional helping hand from the staff of the county constabulary, could act as a city commission. It might, however, be necessary to secure the services of a new official qualified to give expert testimony as to whether suspected liquor was really of the brand prohibited by the Ontario Temperance Act, when such decoction is consumed in places specified as unlawful.

A CHANCE FOR CHILDHOOD.

THE ESTABLISHING of a psychiatric clinic in connection with the Juvenile Court in Toronto is emphatically urged by Judge Mott, the newly appointed judge, who is a firm believer in "cause and effect."

"The presence of a child in court is a symptom of a diseased condition either in the social relationship of the child at home, or its mental or physical condition," said Judge Mott. "It is the duty of the court to diagnose that condition. If this is not done the court cannot decide intelligently in the best interests of the child. Therefore, the judge must have the advice of the clinic.

"Almost every court in the large cities of the American continent has a clinic. If correct judgment is going to be administered by the court, the judge must have the full facts before him. In dealing with the delinquent he should have a thorough knowledge of the mental, social and physical conditions and all the driving forces which have contributed to the present condition of the child.

"It is necessary for the judge to take into account the physical condition of the child. He must also take into consideration whether the boy has a high enough mentality to make him responsible for his conduct. His brain may be unequally developed. The difficulties the boy has to contend with at home should also be considered. In other words, a carefully prepared brief should be in the hands of the judge to assist him in making a reasonable and fair judgment."

Judge Mott emphasized that the court was for construction purposes. It was not the only purpose of the court to impose penalties. The real good it could do was to return the child back to society as a normal and responsible being. The aim was to make the boy an earning factor. Judge Mott holds that the trouble comes not from the boys who are earning steady wages, but from the idlers.

He would have the boys followed up systematically to see if they were making good. "This clinic would give the court a chance to carry on a 'follow-up' system with its wards. The clinic could aid the boy in finding out what he would be best engaged in."

The judge suggests that the clinic should be composed of two members, a doctor and a social worker, the latter to be a woman, as she could enter the homes and get information where a man would fail. It would also enable the clinic to handle both sexes.

The clinic, in Judge Mott's opinion, should be open for free consultation to all parents who were having difficulty in managing their children. Everything would be strictly confidential.

"The clinic should be open for any parent without the necessity of the child having to come before the court," said Judge Mott. "They should feel that the court is not a place they should shun, but should come to in times of difficulty to get scientific advice on the welfare of the child.

"I believe the time will come when the age of jurisdiction of the court will be raised from under sixteen to under twenty-one, for it is evident that childhood does not stop at the age of under sixteen."

How much different is this plan proposed by Judge Mott from that followed in other courts dealing with children, in which the sovereign remedy for all juvenile delinquencies is an official whipping administered with the consent of the parents who, in nine cases out of ten, are the real offenders and whose conduct most of all stands in need of regulation?

CALEDONIAN CLUB

edly could fail to recognize them. While ploughing in the fields he turned up the nest of a mouse, and out of that seemingly trivial incident, created a poem which stands as one of the best testimonies to his greatness. Nothing in life was too trivial to escape his notice. He taught his people the highest brand of patriotism when he told them that British ills could be settled only by British hands.

Burns, the speaker said, was not a irreligious man but he hated hypocrisy in every form and would prefer to be an out and out wastrel, rather than to live under false colours. If the Scottish people were closer to Burns, Scotland would have a new dearness for them. Mr. McKay claimed that the three greatest men the world had ever produced, men long since dead but the like of whom has never yet arisen, were Burns of Scotland, Shakespeare of England and Linclon of the United States.

"The Twa Countrees."

The toast was responded to by Mr. H. R. H. Kenner, in one of his characteristic polished addresses, in which he incidentally declared his conviction that imperial federation is the manifest destiny of the Empire. Appreciative reference was made to the character of the Scotch, to some of the best known works of the poet and to outstanding figures, including Bruce and Wallace in Scottish history.

Mayor McIntyre's Address

Mayor McIntyre, in replying to the toast "The City" made his first official appearance at a public function and spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman and gentlemen:

I do not intend making any lengthy address, as I see by the program that you have a number of speakers to hear from. However, I do want, as Mayor of Peterborough, to say that it is a great pleasure for me to be here tonight. I am informed that this is the first Burns celebration held in Peterborough, since the war, and the reason it was not held, was the fact that the Caledonia Club of Peterborough had sent almost ninety per cent of its membership overseas. Gentlemen, I congratulate the club on such a record.

The Scottish people, because of their sound training and staunch character and their very keen realization of their duties as citizens, are a welcome addtion and a valuable asset to any community; and I would urge that the members of the Caledonian Club, as individuals, to inform the folk in the old land of the many advantages Peterborough has to offer.

We are met here tonight to pay tribute to the memory of one whose writings have been enjoyed not only by his countrymen alone but by the entire English speaking world. Caledonia Clubs, if one would judge by the press, are in existence in every town of any size and I am glad that Peterborough has such an up to date club as has been demonstrated here tonight. I believe that the club has wired greetings to clubs of other leading cities of Canada. These messages serve the purpose of bringing Peterborough before the best men of these towns and cities.

Gentlemen, I thank you for the privilege of being with you tonight and wish the Caledonia Club every success it deserves.

The Lassies

R. Dobie, chosen for the toast, on account of his bachelorhood, responded to the toast of the Lassies, and made it clear that his present condition was due to excessive Scottish caution and an objection to assume any risks.

The Caledonian Club

Mr. G. N. Gordon, who responded to this toast, said that last year 385,000 Scotch had immigrated to Canada and that a cabinet minister, Hon. Mr. Calder, had said that no better class of citizens would be found in the country. Scotland, with three-fourths of the British Cabinet, is not worrying about home rule, but has is to all practical purposes already. The Scotch are the best educated people on earth. They had been taught their religious responsibility at their mother's knees, they know their duty as citizens, and no matter how successful they may become, they never forget their smaller duties and their obligations to the land of their adoption. He was proud of the opportunity to pay tribute to the memory of Robert Burns, who had left his impression not upon Scotland alone but upon all the nations of the world.

Absent Members

Rev. J. A. MacKenzie paid an eloquent tribute to the absent members to the memory of those who went to the war and never returned. If they could come back now, the message to the living would be to live for those things that are imperishable, instead of wasting our energies on things that pass away.

Our Visitors.

The day of the celebration had passed out. Tuesday morning was here, when G. O. Cameron arose to reply to this toast, and in one of his bright and witty addresses, he covered a large field in a short time, referring to Haig, as commander-in-chief of the British army, to the Scottish soldier, who won glory on the planis of Abraham, to the members of the race who had built a railway across the Canadian prairies, and to the McKenzies, the McIntoshs, the McIntyres and the McDonalds, who had taken such an active part in making Peterborough what it is today.

The Musical Program

The musical part of the program was rendered by well-known local vocalists, who are members of the club, with several selections by Piper MacLaren, who fairly brought down the house with his rendition of a "Wee Deoch and Doris."

The numbers were as follows:

"There was a Lad," John A. Smith

"Star O' Robbie Burns," Harry Taylor.

"Flow Gently Sweet Afton,' cello solo; Tom Smith.

"O Canada," the audience.

"Green Grow the Rashes,' John Anderson.

"Ye Banks and Braes," William Petrie.

"Dumfrees Volunteers," William Weatherstone.

"Tam OShanter" (recitation); W. Thompson.

"Auld Lang Syne and God Save the King," the audience.

Mr. W. H. Barry acted as accompanist.

One of the Burns relics, exhibited was the head of a cane, formed of the horns of a deer, once the property of the poet, but now in the possession of Robert Veitch, whose forefathers were neighbors of the Burns family. The relic is now cherished as an heirloom and has been handed down from one generation to another.

It is ten years since the last reunion, the intended 1918 celebration having been interfered with by the war.

REMAINS OF ROMAN SMELTER

Intensely Interesting Discovery Said to Have Been Made in the North of England.

A lady member of the Cumberland and Westmoreland Antiquarian society of England has had the good fortune to discover what is believed to be a Roman bloomery, or ancient smelting furnace. Her attention was drawn to the place by the work of moles, which recently exposed some of the remains, and again later by the burning of the whins formerly concealing the hearth and other features of the bloomery, near Forest How.

By some exploration with a spade, she traced the foundations of a large hearth, twelve yards in diameter, and a number of heaps of cinders, slag and ore; and she also turned up specimens of Roman tiles, with pottery, slag and hematite. The size of the hearth of the Forest How bloomery marks it as quite different from the ordinary north-country medieval iron furnaces, which run from seven to nine or ten feet in diameter, for the one just found is twelve yards across. This appears to be worth further exploration and probably money for that purpose will be found.

Hadn't Seemed to Work.

An oldish man in rusty-brown clothes and with a rusty-brown beard met up with a pin. It was shining sharply bright on a flagging, and he stopped to pick it up.

He had stiff joints and his fingers were in that state informally known as buugly. So he had trouble picking up the pin.

A young man paused to offer his services, but the old one refused. He just grunted and grumbled until at last victory came his way. Then he straightened up his rickety joints and put a hand on his back.

"I'm not as young as I used to be," he admitted, as genially as his joints would allow. "But you know the old saying:

"'See a pin and let it lay, you'll have bad luck all the day. See a pin and pick it up and you are sure to have good luck.'

"So I never pass one by."

And yet he didn't look as lucky as a man ought to be who had made a life habit of picking up pins.—Washington Star.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Do Women Read Newspaper Advertising

¶ Since Women do over 80 per cent of the Retail buying that is done, Advertisers are constantly investigating the Appeal which Advertising mediums exert upon Women. This fact is continually before manufactures in every line, and recently the Bureau of Investigation was asked to conduct an investigation to show how much Underwear for Men was bought by Women, so that the manufacturer who made the request could write his advertisements accordingly.

¶ Many investigations have been made by Women's Clubs, Merchants' Organizations, Statistical Bureaus, and the like, but while these inquiries invariably show that Women are more influenced by Newspaper Advertising that by any other kind, they are inconclusive because of the high percentage of non-commital or unsatisfactory replies.

¶ The question broadly answers itself in that Women do most of the buying, and Newspapers carry far more Advertising than all other mediums combined.

The Bonus

By T. B. ALDERSON

(Copyright, 1919, by Western Newspaper Union.)

Twice Walton Gresham had met Miss Luella Tyron. The first time he had scarcely joined in the general conversation of a pleasant chaffy coterie of young people. He was so enthralled with her gracious ways and rare beauty that he could only sit and drink in her loveliness. She seemed to like him greatly at their second meeting and Walton left the elegant mansion of his employer, John Tyron, treading on air. That Miss Tyron was beautiful and probably an heiress meant nothing to him. He loved her for herself alone.

Then came, not the evaporation of his lofty dreams, but total demoralization of the same. The chief clerk in the business establishment of Tyron & Co. sent such a shower of cold water over his aspirations that they seemed incapable of recovering from the shock.

"Hear you've been twice up to the house of the boss," spoke this individual. "Put a peg there. Don't cross the danger limit."

"Why, what do you mean?" interrogated Walton.

"Just this: Three times and out. Miss Tyron is inclined to adhere to her own preferences, but Mr. Tyron has his own ideas as to a son-in-law. Two likely young fellows, and both traveling salesmen like yourself, got going too often to the Tyron mansion. They were dropped from the pay roll summarily."

"I see," nodded Walton, and went away disconsolate and perturbed. He tried to forget Miss Tyron.

Walton managed to live without a broken heart amid engrossing road work. In reality he was constantly dreaming of making a great selling record, and did so. He had never been so successful and he anticipated with a good deal of satisfaction the liberal bonus which the firm annually awarded its higher employees.

Reckoning up the snug sum that would await him, Walton was getting ready to terminate his trip at the end of the season, when he received a startler, as he expressed it later, a direct blow between the eyes. A telegram arrived:

"Full need of your extending your trip thirty days. Regular bonus will be passed until next year. This is confidential."

"The mischief!" commented Walton in dismay. "It can't be possible that the house is weakening!"

Yet that was the suggestion of the disappointing telegram. Walton kept his own counsel. His heart was not now fully in his work; still he rolled in some good orders. The thirty days had nearly passed by when he was confronted with a second staggerer. It was a letter from an attorney in his home town announcing the death of a wealthy relative who had left a large estate in which he was a beneficiary to the extent of twenty-five thousand dollars.

It was natural that Walton should pay exclusive attention for the time being to this unexpected legacy. He spent a week away from business, advising headquarters of the fact. The legacy was paid in cash as directed by the testator and Walton left the executor with a certified check in his pocket.

He arrived in the city at nine o'clock in the evening. His way to his hotel led by the establishment of Tyron & Co. His curiosity was aroused as he noticed a light in the office.

Walton peered through a street window. Mr. Tyron sat at his desk. He looked wan, worried, abstracted. He was gazing vacantly into space. Abruptly he stretched out his arms and his head fell across them in an apparent state of collapse.

"There's trouble brewing, that's sure!" reflected Walton. Maybe Mr. Tyron is ill," and he shook the office door. His employer started up rather weakly, it seemed, advanced to the door, made out Walton through its glass panel and admitted him. Then he unsteadily resumed his seat. Walton sank to a chair opposite him.

"So you're in off the road?" spoke Tyron, casually.

"Yes, sir, I noticed a light here and dropped in. Mr. Tyron," he added, impelled to the outburst by the actions and appearance of his employer, whom he really liked and respected, "is there some trouble in the business? If there is, let me help you, if I can."

"I fear you can't do that in any practical way," answered Mr. Tyron. "You may as well know, however, that if the house fails to meet a pressing obligation by this time tomorrow we shall have to close the doors. Collections are slow, our credit at bank is fully employed, a rival house has bought up an overdue note and it is a question of twenty thousand dollars at once or we cannot tide over."

Walton Gresham reached over and took up a pen. He drew the certified check from his pocket and indorsed it. "Mr. Tyron," he said, with no suggestion of ostentation, "use that the best way you know how."

Two months later a fellow salesman hailed Walton on the street. "I say, Gresham, the house is going to pay the passed bonus tomorrow," he announced.

"That so?" smiled Walton, and passed on. "I've got mine already!" he whispered to himself in a sort of wild ecstasy, and he meant Luella, for Luella had promised to become his bride.

TAI SHAN A SACRED PLACE

Chinese Mountain Said to Be the Oldest Permanent Place of Worship on Earth.

There are five sacred mountains in China, and the most sacred of all is Tai Shan, the Great mountain, said to be the oldest permanent place of worship in the world. In 2000 B. C. Tai Shan's crest had been a regular scene of sacrifices and prayers for nobody knew how long. Emperors and lesser officials, even Confucius the Wise, journeyed up the long, narrow trail of Tai Shan to come near to the God of Heaven and Earth and made their prayers before Him.

Since those days of simple worship, many temples and shrines have been built on Tai Shan's slopes. Buddhism, Taoism, Confucianism, all are represented, and there are temples, too, to the Lady of the Mountain, who is called by some a fairy, by others a goddess, and by others the spirit or soul of the mountain. Whatever her character, the lady is well represented on her mountain top and her shrines are popular.

The journey up the mountainside is accomplished by the traveler partly in a swinging chair supported by Chinese bearers and partly on foot. The "Way" consists of a granite walk, interrupted every little while by flights of steps which stretch on and on and become steeper and closer together until the pilgrim has mounted 6,000 steps and the peak of Tai Shan is reached.

Here there are more temples and thick incense and grave old priests who announce a pilgrim's presence to the gods by ringing deep-toned bells. A little way off is pointed out a rock overhanging a sheer precipice. From this rock, called "The Rock of the Love of Life," persons who had sick relatives used to fling themselves, hoping that the sacrifice of one life would appease the gods so that the other would be spared. Now the dangerous cliff is barred, and pilgrims are forced to appeal to the gods in the conventional Chinese methods.

WILL BE WONDERFUL ROAD

Highway of Solid Granite in the Rocky Mountains a Rival of the Appian Way.

Taking example from the famous Appian way, which has the name of being the first great road undertaken by the Romans as a public work, the state of Colorado, with the help of an appropriation by the United States government, is building a highway of solid granite in the Rocky mountains. No other highway in the world, it is predicted, will provide travelers with so magnificent a scenic setting, close to a sheer fall of 3,000 feet on the other side of the great concrete posts and cables that will safeguard vehicular traffic. One gets an idea of the road from the practical statement that it is costing $25,000 a mile to build. Like the Appian way, on which long stretches of pavement first traveled over 300-odd years before the Christian era, still remain practically perfect, the chairman of the Colorado highway commission believes that Colorado is creating a work which will defy the centuries and stand, on completion, as the most wonderful road in the modern world.

Quite Comfortable, Thank You.

A comfortable widow is Mrs. Amanda Jackson, colored. She is drawing three $57.50 pensions, or $172.50 a month, for the loss of three husbands during the war, and will draw that amount for 20 years. Mrs. Jones' husband died of spinal meningitis soon after entering the service and taking out a $10,000 insurance policy. The widow married one Smith. He took a maximum life insurance policy in her favor and was killed in action. Then Mrs. Jones-Smith married Private Jackson, a returned soldier, who also named her in a $10,000 policy. Influenza made her a widow a third time in less than two years. The war risk bureau declines to make known her address, doubtless fearing that she would be inundated with offers of marriage.

Brother to the Mosquito.

The prolonged drought has produced a prolific host of insects, and certain species of gnats are developing a disconcerting interest in ankles says London Daily Mail. Some women are wearing linen bandages as a protection.

An official at the Natural History museum, South Kensington, states that the chief offender is a tiny insect bearing the long name of Ochlerotatus dorsalis, which breeds in estuaries and explores inland. It is to be found all around London, especially on the Surrey downs.

Another bloodthirsty gnat is the Pulicaris, which is labeled at the museum as "particularly troublesome in the evening. Its bite is severe, and with many people causes bad sores."

Same Old Arithmetic.

Some university professors are talking about getting out a new arithmetic. However, our guess is that it will bother the boys just as much to discover how long it will take one man to build a wall 18 feet long and six feet high and 12 inches thick, if eight men can build a wall three times that size in four days. Arithmetic has always been the castor oil of school life; they may fool with it as much as they will but they'll never find a way to make it pleasant to take.

First Mirror Was Water.

Brushes were probably invented much later than the comb, but the mirror, the one toilet article without which woman could not exist, must date from a very early period. Perhaps a clear pool allowed curious woman a first view of her face, though we must say that she is not the only vain creature to exist, for a certain gentleman named Narcissus gazed at his reflection in the still water, and gazing fell so in love with his beauty that he pined away and died.

Sea-Island Cotton.

Practically all of the sea-island cotton is produced in the states of Georgia, Florida and South Carolina, the finest coming from the chain of islands off the Carolina coast. It is well named sea-island cotton, as when grown away from the coast the fiber rapidly degenerates into upland cotton unless seed grown in the islands is obtained for planting successive crops.

Learned Her Lesson.

A friend of ours was a collector for a lodge. His little daughter was in the habit of accepting pennies from the members. Her mother chastised her and told her she must not accept pennies any more. So the next day, when one of the members offered her a penny, she said: "I can't take pennies; I can only take nickels and dimes."—Exchange.

The Sowing.

Every harvest looks back to a sowing, every fruit to a seed. Each golden-wheated October pre-supposes a grain-sowing May: logic, commonplace and inevitable, in conditions material. But humanity is not so inclined to recognize the fact, or to appreciate the meaning of the fact in conditions intellectual, moral, human.—Charles F. Thwing.

Gold's Great Power.

One of the funny things about human nature is the tender affection we all have for money, the way we work to get it, and then, the way we talk about everyone who has succeeded in getting a lot of it.

FREED AFTER SERVING 10 YEARS PUNISHMENT

MAN CONVICTED OF NEGLECT IS EMANCIPATED AFTER NEW TRIAL.

A case which deserves much thoughtful consideration is that of Wm. H. Barron, 103 Morgan Street, Bennington. For ten years Mr. Barron suffered the agonies caused by Rheumatism. At times he was bound hand and foot by the grip of Rheumatic pains. On the advice of a friend he stood for a new trial and used T.R.C.'s.

Read what he has to say:—

"I have been a sufferer from Rheumatism for ten years. Have been so bad at times I could not move hand or foot for months. A friend advised me to try Templeton's Rheumatic Capsules and I have been thankful ever since. They worked wonders for me, and I have never felt any return of the disease."

It's practically impossible to obtain evidence stronger than this testimonial and a word to the wise is always sufficient. If you suffer, have a new trial—use T.R.C.'s.

Ask your Druggist or write us for our booklet, interesting and costs you nothing. (Templetons, 142 King West, Toronto) Mail T.R.C.'s anywhere on [illegible]

DOCTOR'S DIRECTIONS TO AVOID THE 'FLU

TORONTO HEALTH OFFICER ISSUES INSTRUCTIONS TO WARD OFF PLAGUE

Dr. Hastings, M.O.H., of Toronto, has issued the following statement regarding influenza:

"We would recommend the citizens to observe the following precautions:

"Influenza like all forms of cold, is transmitted from one person to another largely through the excretions from the nose and throat of those infected, or of those carrying the germs. Therefore, as far as possible, avoid contact with those excretions from the nose and throat of others, either directly or indirectly. Keep your system in as good a fighting trim as possible.

First—Avoid as far as possible needless crwoding. Walk to work if you live within reasonable walking distance of your place of business or industry. Better get up five or ten minutes earlier in the morning and get that much earlier start and take your dinner five or ten minutes later in the evening than take chances of ridinng in crowded cars. Furthermore, by the walk you improve your general health as a result of this most healthful force of physical exercise. Acquire the habit of going to bed an hour earlier and getting up a half hour earlier. This will give you ample time to walk to your business in the morining.

Second—Be as much n the open air and sunshine as is possible.

Third—As far as lieth in you breathe clean air only, and plenty of it. Breathe through your nose. Avoid all overcrowded, poorly ventilated places.

Fourth—If the industry or store that you are engaged in its not properly ventilated, advise the Department of health. We will soon help you out.

Fifth—Keep the window of your sleeping room open. A very small aperature at your window when the wind is blowing against it will afford an ample supply of fresh air.

Sixth—Use plenty of covering to keep warm while you sleep.

Seventh—Avoid coughing, sneezing or snuffling persons. All those attending those afflicted with influenza should wear a gauze mask over the nose and mouth.

Eighth—Keep your pocket handkerchief handy.

Ninth—Wash your hands thoroughly not only after handling a person sick with grippe, and after handling anything likely to be infected, but take it for granted that everything is likely to be infected.

Lastly, cheer up! Have a pleasant word of greeting for everyone you meet, every morning.

DODGE BROTHERS
MOTOR CAR
Not Increased in Price
NEARLY ALL OTHER CARS HAVE

And we are ready to accept orders for future delivery accordingly.

In the Opinion of the Engineering Profession

There is no car in its class which so completely satisfies the popular demands of the Public as the Dodge.

Go where you will, you seldom see a Dodge Brothers car in the Repair Shop. It has become a bye-word that "the Dodge Car keeps the garage man poor."

Dodge Brothers have concentrated on one car and one car only, in a determination to make it as good as a car can be made. For every part and every process that enters into it they have personally established a standard.

The work done and the materials used in each part and each process, in every car, must conform to that standard. Dodge Brothers will always give to their car that overcare which the public expects of them.

GOVERNMENT PHONE SERVICE NOT EFFICIENT

PEOPLE OF ALBERTA NO BETTER OFF THAN WHERE BELL TELEPHONES ARE USED

In Alberta, where the operation of the telephone service is in the hands of the Provincial Government, the authorities have decided to discontinue furnishing "the time" to enquiring subscribers. The new regulation calls forth from the Calgary "Albertan," a leading Liberal newspaper, the following plaint:

"In many ways our Government telephone management is quite as difficult to deal with as the old private Bell Company of Eastern Canada. Certainly it is quite as autocratic, and even more dilatory in keeping up to public demands for service. If a private company kept would-be subscribers waiting more than six months for telephone service there would be a fine howl made about private monopoly and the inefficiency of private management. Yet our Government telephone department is doing that sort of thing and getting away with it without a murmur being made.

"The people of Alberta have no desire to hand over their telephone system to any private corporation. They believe in public ownership of telephones. At the same time, though, they want efficient service and courtesy. Heads of the Government telephone department might well resume their time information service in Calgary; also as a matter of good business they should see who is responsible for the inexcusable inconvenience hundreds of Calgary people are subjected to because there is not sufficient equipment here to give them the phone service they want and are willing to pay for."

INFLUENZA STILL ON INCREASE IN NEW YORK

131 DEATHS FROM PNEUMONIA THERE YESTERDAY AND 1,712 NEW CASES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Jan. 27.—New influenza cases reported today totalled 3,662, the highest number since the present outbreak began about a week ago. This compares with 1,712 new cases reported yesterday and 2,855 on Sunday. The heavy increase was attributed in part to the fact that numerous physicians failed to report week-end cases until today. Deaths from influenza reported during the last 24 hours numbered 57, an increase of 14 over yesterday. There were also 112 deaths from pneumonia as compared with 88 yesterday. New cases of pneumonia totalled 420, an increase of 182.

STOP CATARRH! OPEN NOSTRILS AND HEAD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Relieves Head-Colds at Once.

If your nostrils are clogged and your head is stuffed and you can't breathe freely because of a cold or catarrh, just get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm at any drug store. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic cream into your nostrils and let it penetrate through every air passage of your head, soothing and healing the inflamed, swollen mucous membrane and you get instant relief.

Ah! how good it feels. Your nostrils are open, your head is clear, no more hawking, snuffling, blowing; no more headache, dryness or struggling for breath. Ely's Cream Balm is just what sufferers from head colds and catarrh need. It's a delight.

TELEGRAPH COS. ARE AFTER AN INCREASE

HEARING IS IN PROGRESS TODAY BEFORE DOMINION RAILWAY BOARD

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 27.—What will probably be the final hearing in the application of the Canadian telegraph companies for increased rates was opened before the Railway Commission this morning. There was a large attendance of telegraph companies, boards of trade and municipalities interested. The examination of G. D. Perry, general manager of the G. N. W., consumed the whole morning. He took the stand that if the company was to bring its lines up to a proper condition and maintain them they would require over four hundred thousand dollars per annum.

HOLLAND OR UNITED STATES

SHE WENT FOR DAYS WITHOUT EATING

SYDNEY WOMAN HAS HARDLY MORE THAN FRAME, BUT TANLAC SOON MADE HER FEEL FINE.

"For the past seven years I have suffered from indigestion and stomach trouble and never found anything to help me until I began taking Tanlac," said Mrs. William W. McDonald, who resides on Prince St., Sydney, Nova Scotia, recently.

"I had scarcely any appetite at all," she continued, "and when I did manage to force down a little something it would sour and ferment and I would bloat something dreadful. At times I would also become terribly nauseated, when it would be utterly impossible for me to retain a thing, not even a glass of water. I finally was in such bad conditon I would go for days without being able to eat a mouthful. I could get but little sleep, and felt tired and worn out all the time. I had no energy and my housework was simply a burden to me and most of the time I would just have to leave a great part of it undone. I would have the worst sort of headaches that would nearly drive me wild. I lost weight until I was scarcely more than a frame, and became so weak I thought I would just have to give up entirely.

"One day I saw a statement in the newspaper from a friend of mine, in which she told of the remarkable benefit Tanlac had been to her, and this decided me to give it a trial. Well, when I started taking Tanlac I was so weak I could scarcely get about, but now, after taking only three bottles, my recovery is simply remarkable. I feel stronger than I have in years, and am able to do all my own housework with the greatest ease. My stomach never gives me the least trouble, my appetite is just fine, and everything I eat agrees with me perfectly. Those headaches have all gone, and I can sleep all night long as peaceful as a child. I have gained in weight considerably, and all my friends tell me they never saw me looking so well. Tanlac is certainly a great medicine, and I am glad to say a good word for it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

BUY PALACES FOR SONG.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Budapest, Jan. 27.—Hungarian palaces and estates which before the war were valued at one hundred to two hundred thousand dollars are being purchased by Englishmen, Frenchmen and Americans for comparatively insignificant sums. Dollars are now quoted at from twenty to fifty times their pre-war value and some magnificent properties have brought only from five to ten thousand dollars.

TO BUY MILK PRODUCTS PLANT

At a meeting of the Farmers' Club last night, a committee was appointed to consider the question of buying out the business of the Milk Products Company, in the interests of the proposed amalgamation of dairymen in this district. The committee will meet today in the office of Farm and Dairy.

Tree Trunks Made Cisterns.

The gigantic baobab tree of central Africa, the trunk of which sometimes attains a diameter of forty feet, often serves as a natural cistern, retaining rain-water in large quantities in a cavity formed at the top of the broad trunk. Taking the hint thus afforded by nature, the Arabs artificially hollow out the huge baobabs and fill them with water during the prevalence of rains, as a provision against the dry season. These cisterns are in many cases twenty feet in height and eight or ten feet in diameter.

The Sex of an Egg.

According to the Paris Academy of Science the sex of eggs laid by pure-bred fowls may be determined by weight and size. A test is to hold the egg in the left hand in the sun or close to an electric or gas light. Shade the end of the egg with the right hand, and look for the air space or "setting" (a dark, watery spot larger than a ten-cent piece); if this is found on the top it is a male, but if lower down the side it is a female egg.

Life.

Life is beautiful, and it should be lived in beauty. It has, and must have its shadows, to be sure, but there is a beauty in the shadow as well as in the glint and glimmer of the sun. Sometimes there are sorrows that are good for us, because they clear our hearts of selfishness and teach us to sympathize with our fellow human beings. Grief has made many a heart gentle that was not so before.

Masculine Contempt.

Small Richard asked his sister to roll his sleeve up for him and as she didn't do it neatly he remarked. "Gee, and you expect to be a wife yet!"

Well Fixed for Figs.

Spain has more than 5,000,000 fig trees, of which about one-fourth are in regularly planted and cultivated orchards.

Drury Cracks a Joke.

Premier E. C. Drury of Ontario has a sense of humor. It has not been very much in evidence so far. Perhaps that is because of the serious nature of the business he has had in hand.

But the humor in the man flashed out a bit at the recent dinner of the Schoolmen's Club at Hart House.

"I confess that it is with a distinct sense of disappointment that I face this audience," he began. The audience was entirely a masculine one, made up of Public and High School and University men, and educationists at large. Said audience sat tight and waited.

"When I was invited to come here and speak," he went on, "the invitation was given me over the telephone. Perhaps I did not hear distinctly but I understood over the telephone that I was being invited to the School Ma'ams' Club. And when I get here this is what I find," and he extended his hand toward the mere males in front of him.

American Consuls In Toronto.

The American Consul in Toronto from 1905 to 1913 was Robert S. Chilton, who had been for seven years chief of the consular bureau of the State Department. His successor was a native of South Carolina, Julius D. Dreher, LL.D., Ph.D., formerly a lieutenant in the Confederate army and for twenty-five years president of Roanoke College. He was appointed a consul by President Roosevelt, and was transferred to Toronto by President Wilson in 1913. He left there in 1915 to become consul at Colon, Panama. The consul who succeeded him in Toronto, and who still holds the office, is Chester W. Martin, who, like his predecessor, has held office under both Republican and Democratic Administrations. He was consul at Amherstburg, Ont., 1897-1906 (under McKinley and Roosevelt); at Martinique, 1906-09; at Barbados, 1908-15. So Mr. Martin has been 22 years in the consular service without interruption.

A New Disease.

An untraveled countryman once treated himself to a trip to Toronto. There for the first time in his life he saw a schoolgirl go through her gymnastic exercises for the amusement of the little ones with whom she was playing. After gazing at her with looks of interest and compassion for some time, he asked a boy near by if she had fits. "No," replied the boy; "them's gymnastics." "Ah, how sad," said the man. "How long has she had 'em?"

A New "Black Maria."

The practice of conveying prisoners to jail by airplane was begun in San Francisco recently when Ivan Gates, police aviator of the San Francisco department, flew across the bay to Alameda and returned with James M. Kelley, who had been sentenced to six months in jail.

Kaffir Customs.

The married Kaffir women are compelled to speak a language different from that of their husbands. They may not even pronounce their husbands' name, but commonly refer to them as "the father of So-and-So."

Analogous.

Spending a dollar before it is earned is like eating today the egg that is to be laid tomorrow.

BELMONTS WIN CITY BASKETBALL LEAGUE

DEFEAT CRESSMANS 26 TO 19 IN FINAL GAME LAST NIGHT

The Belmont Club are undisputed city basketball champions by their victory over Cressmans last night by the score of 26 to 19. It was a rough, hard game from start to finish, but the sturdy Belmont boys stood the pace better, scoring two baskets and a foul in the last four minutes.

Belmonts—Forwards, English and Jobbit; centre, Stewart; defence, Heslip and Darling.

Cressmans—Forwards, Flowers and Nichols; centre, DeGraw; defence, Ellis and Matthews; spare, Jackson.

JACK KEARNS SENDS WARNING TO BRONSON

MARTIN'S MANAGER IS BLAMED FOR PROPAGANDA AGAINST DEMPSEY

Los Angeles, Cal., Jan 27;—Jack Kearns, manager of Jack Dempsey, world's heavyweight champion, said he had sent the following telegram to Jimmy Bronson, manager of Bob the A. E. F.

"In justice to Jack Dempsey I must demand that you cease immediately your propaganda to boost Bob Martin and to promote a fight between him and Carpentier by sending out literature false and misleading, in which you are attempting to convey an impression that Jack Dempsey was a draft dodger and unfit to represent America in titular battles.

"I have in my possession a letter you are sending broadcast quoting unwarranted resolutions to show Dempsey was a draft dodger and which you are using in an effort to discredit Dempsey and using the American Legion in an effort to boost your fight.

"Your action is the most outrageous injustice ever attempted by a manager and rival fighter. Real these methods, and if there are any more moves like that I will be forced to take proper legal action."

The old McGarry Hotel at Lucknow will be converted into a garage.

TWO INTERESTING AND POWERFUL ADDRESSES AT MURRAY ST. CHURCH

Rev. John Neil Makes an Appeal For Home Missions and Rev. Paul Kanamori Comes as the Representative of the Heathen in Foreign Lands.

The ever increasing interest in the InterChurch Forward Movement was manifest last night when a large congregation turned out to hear Rev. John Neil, B. D., of Toronto, and Rev. Paul Kanamori, of Japan.

In speaking of the origin of the Forward Movement, Mr. Neil stated the idea of the churches was that they should do everything in their power to make the sacrifices of the boys who served and fell overseas worth while. It is the duty of the churches to make Canada worthy of their sacrifices.

The foundation of the movement, he said, is prayer. Its objects are briefly redemption of the youth of the land, more recruits for the ministry, more and fuller equipment for the colleges adequate provision for the aged ministers and widows of ministers, improvements in the Sunday School work and to increase active interest in home and foreign missions.

It would be a sad thing indeed if Canada had great natural wealth and not a soul. There are two sides to the movement, the spiritual and the financial. But the latter is as much spiritual as the former. The different denominations have set out to raise a thank offering to the Lord for his victory over evil.

And if this movement, great as its objectives are, is accomplished, and nothing else, it will be a failure. It must be the beginning of a great awakening of the people.

Canada's foundation is Christianity, the speaker declared. First came the Jesuits, then the Hugenauts, then the descendants of those who came over in the "May Flower," and finally the stalwart Scotch Highlander with his simple faith. Because of what our fathers have done and the hardships they endured, we want to make Canada worthy of them. It is the duty of the Church to see that the Indians, the French Canadians and foreigners in our midst, are taught to read the word of God as spoken in the Bible.

The speaker gave examples of the high morality among the foreigners of the country where missionary work has been carried on. They take the prizes at public and high schools, and their faith when connected is wonderful. And we are now in the midst of the great land wave after the terrific storm. There is unrest and social strife throughout the Dominion. By faith in God let us remove this unrest and discontent.

Japan as Dividing Point

Rev. Paul Kanamori, in opening his very able and eloquent address in somewhat broken English, said that Japan was now standing on the great dividing line. She will either be a civilized country with Christ or a civilized country without Christ. Now this great Empire of sixty millions of people is growing in wealth, power and intelligence, without the Christian religion.

From the outside of Japan only a material side is seen. But as one grows to know the people, it is seen that they are not satisfied, but are searching for some spiritual uplifting power. This sentiment is red hot now and if we strike it will become Christian. But if it is allowed to cool, the outlook for the great Empire will be dark indeed.

From his personal experience, Mr. Kanamori thinks the whole country can be made Christian before the middle of the century. If it is not by that time, it will have been doomed.

After preaching to 300,000 of his native people 48,000 had declared themselves for Christ. At that rate, when the gospel of the Cross of Christ has been preached to 60,000,000 at least 10,000,000 will be added to the faithful followers of the Lord Jesus Christ.

The preaching of the teachings of Christ alone, will not be effective among the heathen. The power of the gospel lies in the truth that Christ died upon the Cross to save them all. And they must not only preach the Cross of Christ, but they must live it in their daily lives. If the heathen are shown that Christ was wounded, bled and died upon the cross to save them, they will accept Christ.

"Who will carry this message to the billion of unsaved in the world?" "You who have saved this world from physical catastrophe, can you not save it from spiritual ruin? If you Anglo-Saxon race are determined to do it you can, with your money, your power and your intelligence," he declared.

"As the representative of these billion unsaved souls, I implore you to come and save us," concluded Mr. Kanamori.

YOU SEE OTHERS WEARING THEM

The shell rim glasses that you see so many people wearing these days are the very newest idea in eye-glasses, and have become very popular. Dr. Fowler provided for an exceptional demand for these, and has a very large and complete stock, in every style to suit the contour of any face. Look them over; the prices are moderate.

RUB YOUR BACK! STOPS LUMBAGO

Back hurt you? Can't straighten up without feeling sudden pains, sharp aches and twinges? Now, listen! That's lumbago, sciatica, or maybe from a strain, and you'll get blessed relief the moment you rub your back with soothing, penetrating "St. Jacobs Liniment." Nothing else takes out soreness, lameness and stiffness so quickly. You simply rub it on and out comes the pain. It is perfectly harmless and doesn't burn or discolor the skin.

Limber up! Don't suffer! Get a small trial bottle from any drug store, and after using it just once, you'll forget that you ever had backache, lumbago or sciatica, because your back will never hurt or cause any more misery. It never disappoints and has been recommended for 60 years. Stop drugging kidneys! They don't cause backache, because they have no nerves, therefore can not cause pain.

If you must look at people's faults shut your eyes.

PETERBOROUGH JUNIORS PLAY MIDGETS TONIGHT IN GAME FOR DISTRICT HONORS

Record Crowd Will be on Hand to See Their Rival Teams Battle to Break Tie on the Round.

Tonight's hockey match between the Peterborough Juniors and the Lindsay Midgets will be a battle royal from the opening bell until the final gong is sounded. Goals will count on the final round, the return game being played in Lindsay on Thursday night. Anyone who saw the 4-3 game last Friday night in Lindsay will tell you just how anxious the youngsters of both teams are to carry off the district honors.

A record crowd will no doubt be on hand to see the Juniors in their life and death struggle tonight. Go early to be sure of getting a seat as an overflow crowd is expected.

CARDINAL ANNETTE IS OPPOSED TO DANCING

HIS LETTER READ IN THE PULPITS CREATE MUCH CRITICISM

Paris, Jan. 27.—Cardinal Amette's recent pastoral letter against modern dances which was read from the pulpits of all Catholic churches has caused a great flurry among dancing professors. They have sent a delegation to the Cardinal to try and reach a compromise with him.

"Modern dancing can be decent. My nieces are taking lessons, and I can assure you there is nothing objectionable in the dances they are learning. It is up to you to find a means of conciliation."

A weekly newspaper is of the opinion that the Cardinal's letter was aimed principally at the American dances, such as the "fox-trot" and "bunny-hug."

The dancing teachers have decided that inasmuch as the church has condemned the fox-trot and other steps, there is nothing to do but to submit. They, therefore, decided to eliminate a step from the tango and rename it the "habanera." They have added a step to the fox-trot and called the dance the "Spanish schottische." Some steps have been modified in the one-step, and it has been named the "American polka."

Meanwhile, dancing continues, and the dance halls are crowded every evening.

Poor reputations are due to the fact that good intentions are seldom credited.

PUT STOMACH IN FINE CONDITION

SAYS INDIGESTION RESULTS FROM AN EXCESS OF HYDROCHLORIC ACID.

Undigested food delayed in the stomach decays, or rather, ferments the same as food left in the open air, says a noted authority. He also tells us that Indigestion is caused by Hyper-acidity, meaning, there is an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach which prevents complete digestion and starts food fermentation. Thus everything eaten sours in the stomach much like garbage sours in a can, forming acid fluids and gases which inflate the stomach like a toy balloon. Then we feel a heavy, lumpy misery in the chest, we belch up gas, we eructate sour food or have heartburn, flatulence, water-brash or nausea.

He tells us to lay aside all digestive aids and instead get from any pharmacy four ounces of Jad Salts and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast and drink while it is effervescing end furthermore, to continue this for a week. While relief follows the first dose it is important to neutralize the acidity, remove the gas-making mass, start the liver, stimulate the kidneys and thus promote a free flow of pure digestive juices.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and sodium phosphate. This harmless salts is used by thousands of people for stomach trouble with excellent results.

EDITOR'S MAIL

CHEMONG PARK STREETS.

Editor Review: I noticed in the Examiner where an application is going to be made to His Honor Judge Huycke on February 2 to close certain streets in Chemong Park. Now why allow this to be done About thirty years ago, when Mr. Alex. Elliott took over the park, the first thing he did was to have the park surveyed and laid out in streets and lots. Then the lots were put up for sale under certain conditions. One was that there was a street, or esplanade, as it is called, on the plan which started at what is now the Government wharf, and ran along the shore to the west end of the park. Then there were narrow streets running from the back streets to this esplanade, for the use of those who bought back lots, to get to the water's edge.

It appears now that certain parties who have shore lots are not satisfied. They want to hog the whole thing. If one lot holder can get part of the street closed, all the rest of the front lot holders can do the same, and where do the back lot holders come in? How are they to get to the water's edge without going away around by the wharf?

I hope all back lot holders and others who are interested in the park will appear before the Judge and protest against such a request, and I would ask the township council not to listen to such an unfair thing for one minute. Be at the Judge's chambers on February 2 at 11 a.m. and block this game.

KNOCKED DOWN BY STREET CAR

Richard Ringer Was Injured About the Head Last Evening.

Richard Ringer was badly injured about the leg and head last evening about 8.30 o'clock when a Charlotte street car knocked him down. Ringer, who is a rather old man and hard of hearing, was crossing Charlotte street at the corner of Aylmer and the car was travelling toward the G.T.R. station. The motorman sounded his gong but it is alleged he made no attempt to stop the car. The man was struck and knocked heavily to the ground after which he was taken to his home on Sherbrooke street.

HOW BRUTE BREAKER WAS FINALLY SUBDUED

Louis Grantaire sat apart from the other men around the stove in the smoke-reeking bunk-house of a big lumber camp. He was a newcomer in the big woods. LeBlanc, the local bully, reeled over to the silent man and said that he would like to print the calf of his boots on his face. Shortly afterward the lumbermen had to pry LeBlanc from under Grantaire's knee.

From camp to camp Grantaire wandered, breaking brutes. He trounced the bullies of the woods and sent them slinking into the forest planning revenge.

Not until he matched his might against the charms of a girl did he fall into the ranks of the vanquished.

The story of Grantaire and Annette is to be shown at the Empire Theatre on Thursday in "The Brute Breaker," a Universal photodrama with Frank Mayo and Kathryn Adams in the principal roles.

Lynn F. Reynolds directed the production at Universal City with a cast including Harry Northrup, Jack Curtis, Burwell Hamrick, Bert Sprotte, Frank Brownlee and Charles LeMoyne.

Frank Mayo's unusual physique serves him to splendid advantage in the work, and Kathryn Adams makes an appealing modern Evangeline.

"The Brute Breaker" will continue until Saturday.

"CHECKERS" PRODUCED AT ALLEN THEATRE

"Compelling" and "beyond" are adjectives which might well be applied to that photo-play, "Checkers," screened at the Allen last night. Assuming the role of dramatic critic, it can only be said that this is one of the most thoroughly pleasing and unexpected happenings of the motion picture world. Certainly it tops the summit in this line of entertainment. Only it is easily apparent that it didn't just happen. It represents the untiring concentration of gifted minds, the application of artistical talent, and the lavish expenditure of money.

The term "smooth-running," which is generally applied to approved productions, would not be appropriate in this instance, however desirable the attribute may be. There is nothing smooth in all the picture, excepting it be the race course. The inevitable villain is a character conspicuous by reason of his absence. No such thing as working yourself into a state of fury over the dishonorable actions of a villainous character, which character very often subsequently displays the angelic traits of a very cherub. But withal there is a sufficient strain of intrigue to excite the combative instinct and enough of conflict to hold the interest throughout.

There is such a depiction of horse racing as would delight the heart of a sportsman, made all the more interesting by the fact that the leading lady proves herself an efficient and capable rider. Among other beautiful scenic effects is the "Old Kentucky Home." This, with all the sacred home ties, the touching devotion, which we have learned to associate with the South. Love and laughter, sorrow and strife, speed and chance, all combine to make this play a perfectly balanced production.

THE OLD RAZOR MAN.

Former Canadian Woman Wore Disguise for Years.

The death of "John Young," known for many years along the highways between San Francisco and Los Angeles as "the quaint old razor man," discloses a secret long kept that the real name of the old peddler was Anna O'Connell. For many years, left alone in the world, she had worn men's clothing to enable her to earn a living unmolested.

She died on the doorstep of the home of Edwin Turner, toymaker. The Turners were her friends of early years. When her wanderings brought her to San Francisco she always went to their home. They chanced to be out this time when she called. A lodger in the house informed her they would soon be back. She was weak and ill, and as she turned on the doorstep she sank down, clutching at her heart, and died.

Mr. Turner told her story.

"More than twenty years ago," he said, "my wife and I made the acquaintance of a Canadian gentlewoman, Mrs. Anna O'Connell. She was then living in Montgomery block with her only child, Marie. Her husband, a Canadian army officer and a native of Yorkshire, England, had died.

"In the earthquake of 1906 Mrs. O'Connell and her daughter dropped out of sight. We heard nothing of them and, finally, we went on a long visit to the island of Guernsey, in the English Channel, my native place. About five years ago we returned to San Francisco.

"One evening, when my wife was alone at home there was a knock at the door. Opening it she saw a little old man wearing a small moustache. 'I am the brother of your old friend, Mrs. Anna O'Connell,' the caller said. 'Don't I resemble her?' My wife replied: 'Yes, the likeness is striking; come in.' They had a cup of tea and talked.

"Suddenly the old man rose, put his arms around my wife and said: 'I am Mrs. O'Connell; look well at me.'

"My wife was too surprised for words. Then the old peddler explained that she had adopted men's clothes in order to make a living, for her daughter had died and she was alone. She was in the house when I returned home. My wife and I both promised to keep her secret.

"From that time she visited us once a year. We were her only intimates. She had wished to live in San Francisco, but the climate of the south suited her delicate health better and so she made her home in Pasadena.

"She sold razor and knife-blade sharpeners, walking from place to place, and getting frequent lifts from passing motor cars. We will see that she has decent burial.

Frog Catcher Enlists.

Though Fritz is on the jump, his fate now is all the more certain. Peter Charon of New Haven, official frog catcher for the laboratories at Yale university, has enlisted in the marine corps.

"There isn't much doing in the frog line now," says Charon. "Before the war you used to hear them churning out their cries of 'Jug of rum! Jug of rum!' but now you can't find any of the creatures down our way. Besides there's no market since the laboratory men have all gone to war."

Charon is six feet and one inch in height. The marines consider him a good addition to their fighting corps.

WEDDED IN SMOCK

"A Bangor lawyer attending court in the ancient town of Wiscasset, Lincoln county, recently went rummaging in the Colonial court records of the place, and in the course of his reading came across the official registration of a 'smock marriage,'" writes L. T. Smyth from Bangor, Me., to the Boston Transcript. "Not knowing what a smock marriage was, the lawyer looked further, and got considerable light upon a custom that prevailed in England a century or more ago and also to some extent in the American colonies.

"Smock marriages were weddings where the bride appeared dressed in a white sheet or chemise. The reason for such a garb was the belief that if a man married a woman who was in debt he could be held liable for her indebtedness if be received with her any of her property; and also, that if a woman married a man who was in debt, his creditors could not take her property to satisfy their claims if he had received nothing from her at marriage. In England, says an antiquarian, there was at least one case where a bride was clothed in puris naturalibus while the ceremony was being performed in the great church at Birmingham. The minister at first refused to perform the ceremony, but, finding nothing in the rubric that would excuse him, he finally married the pair.

"To carry out the law fully as the people understood it, the ceremony should always have been performed as it was in the church at Birmingham, in the case noted; but, modesty forbidding, various expedients were used to accomplish the end without the unpleasant features. Sometimes the bride stood in a closet and put her hand through a hole in the door; sometimes she stood behind a cloth screen and put her hand out at one side; again, she wound about her a white sheet furnished by the bridegroom, and sometimes she stood in her chemise or smock. Eventually, in Essex county, at least, all immodesty was avoided by the groom furnishing all the clothes worn by the bride, retaining the title to the same in himself. This he did in the presence of witnesses, that he might be able to prove the fact in case he was sued for any debts she might have contracted. A marriage of this kind occurred at Bradford in 1773, and the following is true copy of the record of the same:

"'Bradford, Dec. ye 24, 1773—This may certifie whomsoever it may concerne that James Bailey of Bradford, who was married to the widow Mary Bacon November 22 last past by me ye subscriber then declared that he took said person without anything of estate and that Lydia the wife of Eliazer Burbank and Mary the wife of Thomas Stickney and Margaret the wife of Caleb Burbank all of Bradford were witnesses that the clothes she then had on were his providing and bestowed upon her.

"'WILLIAM BLACH,

"'Minister of ye Gospel.'

"It is noted by the same writer that in all cases of smock marriages that have come to his notice the brides have been widows.

"It is thought that during the reign of George III there were many smock marriages in Maine, then a part of the province of Massachusetts Bay, chiefly in the counties of Lincoln and York, or in the territory which is now so known. There is nothing to show that the practice outlived the Revolution. In Maine, up to 1852, a husband was liable for debts of his wife contracted before marriage, and no such subterfuge as the smock marriage could relieve him."

How Pipe Reveals Character.

A new method of telling a man's character is now advanced by William H. Critchlow, ninety, of Macon, Mo. He said:

"You can tell more about a man by the way he lights his pipe than you can by the shape of his head. There's the fellow who strikes a match on the south end of his trousers, holds his hands over the bowl until he gets it going, throws down the match any old place, and tilts his pipe up toward the North Star. That man may burn down his home and barn, but he'll never lick his wife or children, because his heart's right.

"Crooks and bad men don't often smoke pipes. They wouldn't be crooks if they did, because there's something about an old hickory pipe that inspires a man to play fair with his neighbors."

In Memory of James Watt.

The centenary of James Watt, the inventor of the modern condensing steam engine, who died on August 19, 1819, was celebrated in Scotland by the raising of a fund of $250,000 to further endow the engineering department of Glasgow university, to provide additional facilities for the training of engineers.

Taming Father

By MADGE WESTON

(Copyright, 1919, Western Newspaper Union.)

Robert Wayland sat before his littered desk and read a letter. As he read, his habitual frown deepened.

Yes, the girl was like her mother, he reflected bitterly, sensitiveness in every line. Now, she was coming home from school and he would be forced to live over again that life so long closed, of grievous misunderstanding.

Always he had been the one to blame. Robert Wayland acknowledged that. The pity of it all was that youthful fancied love had rushed two young college companions into marriage. Claudia's very dependence, that which had later so galled him, had been to the impetuous youth her irresistible charm. And Robert's masterfulness, which had later become sheer domination, had at first seemed virtue in Claudia's eyes.

Gazing absently across the lawn before his study window, Wayland recalled those first mistaken years, when his unreasoning temper had kept his young wife in a state of tearful apprehension. At last her tears had ceased to move him; his brain was overweary with struggle and ambitious plans for the frail girl's future comfort, but she had not understood, and the plans had only reached achievement when she was no longer there to share them.

Robert's greatest regret was the little creature left in her place. He had been glad to pass the infant Claudia over into her aunt's keeping, and their mother's sister, he knew, would instill no love for him into his daughter's heart.

So from Aunt Emmeline's, little Claudia was sent to a boarding school, and her generous, though indifferent father, seldom saw her face. He had made punctilious visits during her early stay at Aunt Emmeline's, when the child with her tutored fear of him showing in her trembling lips and figure invited no friendship. And now, Aunt Emmeline had gone to live abroad and Claudia was coming home.

And then, before Robert Wayland had time for more retrospection, the study door opened and a girl breezily entered the room.

"I didn't wait to be announced," said the girl. "I was in a hurry to see you. Oh, did you just receive that letter? It should have been delivered yesterday."

"I was away yesterday," Robert Wayland explained.

He was regarding in astonishment the glowing young face before him.

"I can see," continued the girl, "that you did not expect to find me grown strong and confident. I am both. Also, I have, to a degree, a temper which may equal your own notorious one."

Her sudden dimpling smile took the sting from her words, turning them into a joke. "On the other hand, I am surprised at you," she frowned in pretended severity. "No one had prepared me for a young and handsome father."

"Why," she murmured, "you—you are quite taking the wind out of my sails. I came here with the intention of having it out with you, of coming to a stern understanding about future rights and things. Instead—"

The girl's eyes filled with sudden tears.

"I'm sorry for you, instead," she murmured. "You have lacked much; you have been lonely."

"No one—ever—thought of—that—before," he said slowly. "No one—ever seemed to make allowance—there was only rebuke and blame. For a woman like you—" an unfamiliar smile crept about the grim corners of Robert Wayland's mouth—"a man might even overcome his notorious temper. Claudia—" he hesitated, "the name doesn't seem to fit, someway," he said.

"It doesn't fit," she burst out, "because it is not my name. I allowed you to drift into the mistake, hoping that Claudia might not seem so formidable afterward. I am a college chum of your daughter's, older than she by several years. If you had been confidential with Claudia, you would have heard of Nance Holden." The girl's eyes danced. "I've quite a reputation at school for daring—good kind of daring, you know; like to help people out of scrapes. Claudia's been frightened to death at the thought of coming home to live with you. Aunt Emmeline painted you up as an ogre, and the teachers colored aunt's picture. You must have been advising our teachers," she added. "They will forgive no dictation. So I agreed to come home with Claudia.

"My plan," said Nance—she smiled her infectious smile, "was to tame you. Claudia's waiting in the hall. By this time, I think, she will be hiding under the settle. Shall we relieve her mind? And, please—may I stay here with her, —with you—for a little while?"

"I want you to stay," he said. A smile transformed his somber face. "I need you to help me find a way, you too, to these things—I have lacked."

The birth rate of the Six Nations Indians at Brantford shows an increase over the death rate, and the population is now 4,651.

FIND STEAMER LONG BURIED

Dredging Operations in the Mersey Disclose Remains of Vessel That Had Been Forgotten.

For some time past the Mersey docks and harbor board has been conducting dredging operations in the neighborhood of the Burbo bank, one of the huge accumulations of sand which impede the navigation of the Mersey entrance, and these have resulted in a "find" of remarkable interest.

It is the remains of a steamer which have evidently been embedded for generations. Her date is long anterior to that of iron shipbuilding. Of sound English oak were her timbers and framing, to which circumstances doubtless is due the fact that they still retain cohesion and shape, and have so wonderfully resisted the forces of decay as to supply an abundant quantity of material for the souvenir manufacturer. Her beams, in point of fact, are described as being as "hard as iron."

The machinery has practically perished, but the engine bed-plates and the funnel remain, and relics of pottery and other articles are plentiful. The vessel, cleared of superabundant sand, is not only visible, but accessible at low water, and has been visited and examined by many interested people.

The prevailing opinion is that she is the William Huskisson, a paddle steamer belonging to the City of Dublin company, and trading between Liverpool and the Irish capital, which on the 12th of January, 1840, was wrecked on her passage to the Mersey. She had 120 passengers on board, of whom 95 were rescued by the ship Huddersfield, and the remainder perished. Captain Clegg of the Huddersfield subsequently received handsome presentations from the citizens of Liverpool in recognition of his good work.—Manchester Guardian.

Spanish Birth Rate.

Now it is in Spain that they are beginning to worry about the rising death rate and the falling birth rate. Dr. Gomez Ocana presents in El Siglo Medico (Barcelona) statistics for several years, showing that in 1912 the death rate was 21.6 per 1,000 population, and that by 1917, before the advent of the pandemic of influenza, it had risen to 26.16. And the birth rate fell from 31.60 per thousand in 1912 to 29.2 in 1917.

Official figures for 1918 are not yet available, but in the city of Madrid the death rate rose in that year to 30.37, while the birth rate fell to 26.70. The figures for 1918, however, are abnormal because of the pandemic.

Flax in the War.

With the restoration of industry on a peace-time basis, cotton once again, according to recent authoritative statements, forges ahead of linen in the world's favor. The exigencies of the recent conflict raised flax to the position as leader among fabrics, a rank which it had held for centuries but had lost almost simultaneously with the advent of the cotton gin. With a realization of the importance of cotton in the making of munitions, there came a speedy reversion to linen for the more commonplace usages—waistcoats, sails for ships, even "wings" for airplanes having lately consisted of material woven from the sun-hued fiber. But flax has reached the end of its days of monopoly. King Cotton now rises to the fore in ordinary pursuits, and linen once again becomes the aristocrat in this field of supply.

High Minded.

The teacher was impressing upon her scholars the need of saying their prayers. To illustrate the lesson she showed the class a picture of an Arab, with head between his hands, and looking upward. "Now, Billy Cubbs," she said to a boy who had not been paying close attention to her words, "what is that man doing?"

"Er—er—please, teacher, he's a-lookin' for—er—'planes.'—Blighty.

Cat-tail as Food.

Prof. P. W. Claassen, of Cornell University, recently called attention to a hitherto neglected source of food, viz., the common cat-tail of our marshes, says the Scientific American. It appears that the Indians made flour from the root stalks of the cat-tail, but for some reason white men did not adopt this item of the Indian dietary as they did maize and potatoes. There are thousands of acres of cat-tail marshes in the United States. Prof. Claassen finds that an acre of cat-tails yield a total dry weight of rhizomes amounting to about 10,800 pounds. From this it is possible to obtain 6,500 pounds of flour. The flour is found on analysis to contain approximately the same amount of protein as rice and corn flours, but the ash content approximates that found in potato, cassava and dasheen flours. Cat-tail flour has proved very satisfactory as a part substitute for wheat flour in baking, and a complete substitute for cornstarch in puddings.

Hungarian Weddings.

Hungarian wedding celebrations are generally of a very lively character, with much feasting and dancing and frequently last two or three days. The most interesting feature of the festivities is the "cracking of the plate" when the men throw silver in handfuls on the plate for the privilege of dancing with the bride. The contest becomes quite spirited, and finally the plate is smashed to fragments with the silver hurled at it by the contestants. Oftentimes as much as $50 is obtained in this way by the bride for the furnishing of a home. The custom is followed by Hungarians in different parts of Canada.

The Whale as an Eater.

The whale rarely, if ever, swallows anything larger than a herring. Although the head is of enormous size, from one-quarter to one-third length of the body, and the mouth fifteen to twenty feet long and six to eight feet wide, the opening of the gullet is not larger than a man's fist.

Dentistry and Engineering.

It does not require much imagination to realize that pulling an elephant's tooth is something of an engineering as well as a dental job.

An example of this was when Albert, one of the biggest elephants in the Ringling herd at Madison Square Gardens, New York, had refused to eat, and the circus veterinary found a great tooth cavity which was beyond remedy by filling.

The tooth that was giving Albert so much discomfort was as large as a man's fist. After a liberal dose of cocaine had been injected, forceps as big as ice tongs were clamped to the tooth, a rope attached to the forceps, and a squad of trainers made ready to supply the pulling power.

At a given signal the trainers gave a tremendous pull, and out came the huge tooth.

In this part of dental work the unknown quantity lies in what the elephant will do. Albert had been taken out of the menagerie to prevent panic among the rest of the herd in case he developed an inclination to object to the process. However, he underwent the ordeal calmly, and as soon as his jaw was dressed he was conducted back to his stall.—Tit-Bits.

Traveling Fingers.

Typists' fingers are the most amazing travelers in creation, and are capable of going tremendous distances without the fatigue that would come to the feet and legs in performing a similar journey, says an exchange. In ordinary typewriting the hand may travel, according to an expert, 10,000 miles a year and not indicate any impairment in efficiency. This refers, of course, to the average typist in an office.

Kingsley and His Children

THIS summer, the centenary of Charles Kingsley is being celebrated in England. Those who have read "Westward Ho!" "The Water Babies," "The Heroes," and other writings by this delightful author and honest and independent thinker will be interested to read of his love for and understanding of children and of the happiness of his family life. In "Charles Kingsley, His Letters and Memories of His Life," edited by his wife, we read:

"The family gatherings were the brightest hours in the day, lighted up as they were not only by love, but by his marvellous humor. 'I wonder,' he would say, 'if there is so much laughing in any other home in England as in ours.'

"'This tenderness,' as was said of Sir W. Napier, 'was never so marked as when he was looking at or talking with little children. At such times the expression which came over his face was wonderfully beautiful and touching. Toward these little creatures he had an eager way of stretching out his hands, as if to touch them, but with a hesitation arising from the evident dread of handling them too roughly. The same sort of feeling, too, he manifested in a minor degree, toward small animals, little dogs, kittens, and birds.'

"It has been remarked that there was an 'element of fierceness' about him, which would flash out in the presence of wrong and oppression, of meanness and untruth, and betray itself by abrupt and fierce rejoinder. But in the home, which he had made the very atmosphere of truth and love, of confidence and freedom of opinion, he was never abrupt, far less 'fierce,' ever yielding to every will and temper but his own."

The same book goes on to give the following memories, written by his son:—

"'Perfect love casteth out all fear' was the motto on which my father based his theory of bringing up his children; and this theory he put in practice from their babyhood till when he left them as men and women. From this, and from the interest he took in all their pursuits, their pleasures, trials, and even the petty details of their everyday life, there sprung up a 'friendship' between father and children that increased in intensity and depth with years. To speak for myself, and yet I know full well I speak for all, he was the best friend—the only true friend—I ever had. At once he was the most fatherly and the most unfatherly of fathers—fatherly in that he was our intimate friend, and our self-constituted adviser; unfatherly in that our feeling for him lacked that fear and restraint that make boys call their father 'the governor.' I remember him as essentially the same to all of us always; utterly unchanged and unchanging since the time that he used to draw Sunday pictures for us, to the time when he treated us as men and women of the world; there were no long lectures, no pithy arguments; but in his own life he showed, spoke, and lived his doctrines, so that his utter unselfishness, his genial tenderness toward their mother and themselves, gave the children an example that could not be passed by unnoticed, however unworthily followed.

"'Perhaps the brightest picture of the past that I look back to now—that we can all look back to—is, not the eager look of delight with which he used to hail any of our little successes—not any special case of approval, but it is the drawing room at Eversley in the evenings when we were all at home and by ourselves. There he sat, with one hand in mother's, forgetting his own hard work and worry in leading our fun and frolic with a kindly smile on his lips, and a loving light in that bright gray eye.'

"But to speak of his home without mentioning his love of animals would be to leave the picture incomplete," the book continues. "His dog and his horse were his friends, and they knew it, and understood his voice and eye. His dog Dandy, a fine Scotch terrier, was his companion in all his parish walks, attended at the cottage lectures and school lessons, and was his and the children's friend for 13 years. He took great delight in cats; the stable had always its white cat, and the house its black or tabby, whose graceful movements he never tired of watching. On the rectory lawn dwelt a family of natterjacks (running toads), who lived on from year to year in the same hole, which the scythe was never allowed to approach. He made friends with a pair of sand wasps, one of which he had saved from drowning. They lived in a crack of the window in his dressing room, and every spring he would look out eagerly for them or their children as they came out of, or returned to the same crack. The little flycatcher, who built its nest every year under his bedroom window, was a constant joy to him."

"'Many, now scattered far and wide,' says one who knew and loved the rector in his home, and has an especial right to speak, 'must remember how picturesque the rectory itself was. Here—in this beautiful home-scene, and truly ideal English rectory—was the fountainhead—as I certainly think, and as he often said—of all his strength and greatness. Indeed, great as I knew him to be in his books, I found him greater at his own fireside. Home was to him the sweetest, the fairest, the most romantic thing in life; and there all that was best and brightest in him shone with steady and purest lustre.'"

"Marching Through Georgia."

The song, "Marching Through Georgia," was the product, in 1865, of Henry Clay Work, a popular song writer, who wrote many songs that were popular in civil war time. He was a printer by trade and often composed the words while working at the "case," and when he was setting up music type he would compose the music "free hand." "Marching Through Georgia" is probably unique among war songs, in that it was composed without appearing in manuscript.

Sad Sunday Unpopular.

Britishers Now Demand Games and Amusements

ENGLAND is experiencing a great wave of feeling in favor of a brighter Sunday. From all parts of the kingdom protests are being made in regard to the limitations placed upon reasonable pleasure by local by-laws or the ancient Act of Parliament which still remain on the statute book centuries after their object no longer appeals to the greatest number of the population.

Home-coming soldiers are asking if something cannot be done to dispel the traditional gloom with which the first day of the week has been too long invested.

Under the law games are not prohibited, but local authorities with hardly an exception bar the playing of games in the public parks on Sunday. Their action in regard to these games is far from logical. Persons can swim in the open-air baths or lakes up to 10 a.m. on Sunday under one authority, but not another, but often those municipalities who prohibit the swimming permit the lakes to be used for boating all day, and with few exceptions bands play on Sunday evening in the parks.

At private pleasure grounds games like bowls, croquet and golf are generally tolerated, but when Sunday football or cricket or the new to England game of baseball is suggested along come the "killjoys," Mrs. Grundy and Mrs. Wigg and a host of advocates of the claims of the much-belauded, but practically non-existent in England, Non-conformist conscience to declaim against the desecration of a holy day which has no spiritual significance, as far as worship is concerned, for over nine-tenths of the population.

For the first time these killjoys are meeting their match. The "padres" who have now returned from the war are advocates of a reasonable Sunday. With the experiences of the good effect on discipline provided by the games played on Sundays during the war the padre points the moral of the amount of "crime" (all breach of army regulations is a crime according to military law) due to Sunday idleness that has occurred in the home camps since the men have returned, and claim that good games would prevent the greater amount of this "crime."

One padre has been using the incident of the crap trouble the other Sunday in the Strand as evidence of the need for the provision of Sunday games. While other claims as a precedent the permission granted by the authorities last year to play baseball in Hyde Park, giving special stress to the good effect on the morale of the troops who took part either as players or spectators of those games.

Many prominent personages are giving their support to the movement, but with almost a unanimous voice they give evidence to their desire to protect both the present hours of worship and the day of rest.

Bishop Welldon, Dean of Durham, gives his views, as follows: "I attach great value to Sunday as a day of rest and worship, but I cannot wholly oppose games on Sunday for the poor if they are played by the rich. I think games should be so organized as to cause the least possible increase of labor and interference with religion."

London Lonsdale says: "I have always been most strongly in favor of all legitimate games being played on Sunday afternoons, so long as religious matters are in no way interfered with."

The Duke of Rutland is not in favor of professional games on Sunday, but he gives his views thus: "I approve Sunday games generally, if they are played outside church hours and if no persons are paid for playing or taking any part. No kind of league or combination games should be played—only friendly ones. I approve a Sunday league on these terms."

Mr. Arthur Bourchier, the famous actor, is also supporting the demand. He says: "I am certainly in favor of Sunday games, except during church hours. Nothing could be more godly than such healthy recreation."

If the activities of the reformers are any guide as to the strength of the movement its success is certainly assured.

The question of amusements on Sunday is not so simple. Under the provisions of the Lord's Day Act of George III it is a penal offence for any room or place to be opened or used for public entertainments on Sundays to which persons shall be admitted by the payment of money or by tickets for which money has been paid.

This Act, while not prohibiting free amusements, works out badly in practice. According to the political pull of the killjoy brigade amusements are either prohibited entirely or the Act is simply evaded by giving a free show with admission tickets charged as reserved for 99 per cent. of the places, and these shows being freely advertised as charitable benefit performances; the basis of the charity working out at something like one-half of 1 per cent. of the profits.

The whole of the working of the Act is a farce. In one district the local authority allowed performances under the charitable guise, knowing all the time that the charity scheme is a delusion and a sham; while in the next municipal district perhaps every place of amusement is absolutely closed down. In the next town it is quite likely that the amusement caterers have quite a free hand and the authorities turn a blind eye.

Stork Welcomed in Holland.

A stork is treated with great respect in Holland. The house selected by the stork for a resting place is considered fortunate, and special facilities are provided by the householders to enable it to build a nest comfortably. At The Hague many of these birds are maintained at public expense.

Our Bounden Duty.

Man's bounden duty is everywhere and in all things to forward the progress of humanity. The supreme virtue is sacrifice—to think, work, fight, suffer, where our lot lies, not for ourselves but others, for the victory of good over evil.—Mazzini.

Well, Why?

Why is it that the man who has his picture taken standing beside a vase of flowers set on a table covered with a lace doily is always the man who is reported to the police and the newspapers by his wife as among those missing?

Lack of Tact.

Jones—What a Jonah that fellow Smith is. After owing me $5 for two years he came up to me on the street and paid me right while I was talking to Brown, whom I had owed $5 to for three years!

Sinfulness Reacts.

Never let a man imagine that he can pursue a good end by evil means without sinning against his own soul! Any other issue is doubtful; the evil effect on himself is certain.—Southey.

JAPANESE DIVERS.

There is, at any rate, one post-war activity in which Britons have to take a back seat.

That is as deep-sea divers in the work of salving vessels which have been sunk by mine or torpedo.

It is here that the Jap shows his superiority. The Japanese diver can descend to a greater depth than the British diver, and, what is more, he will remain longer under the water without apparent injury to health.

This is no mere boasting claim by the Japanese themselves; it is the rueful but truthful admission of an expert with a long association with marine salvage work. Few Japanese divers are engaged at work round the coasts of Britain, their activities in this direction being mostly confined to the Mediterranean.

The greatest depth at which a British diver can work under water without doing himself a serious injury is from twenty to twenty-two fathoms—that is, at the most, 130 feet below the surface. Even then our divers can remain only a comparatively short time at that depth, and they are obliged to descend and ascend very slowly to prevent the blood gushing from their bodies.

In some of the Government salvage ships what is known as a decompressing chamber is now provided, which the diver on ascending can enter and gradually become acclimatized to the natural atmosphere on the surface. A Japanese diver can work with comparative comfort at a depth of twenty-seven or twenty-eight fathoms, or nearly 170 feet below the point where the salvage ship is moored, and as a rule he is not in such haste to give the signal to be hoisted up as his British colleague.

Eastern fatalism enters largely into the composition of these Japanese divers, and on this account the yellow men are inclined to take risks far below the surface, which British divers, no less intrepid, would hesitate to take.

Unexpected danger often confronts the deep-sea diver who has located a wreck which has been sent to the bottom by torpedo.

The pressure of the water frequently has the effect of crumpling up parts of the vessel near the spot where the torpedo has shattered the sides, and sometimes even an ordinary touch will cause part of the splintered hull to collapse. The danger in such circumstances of being enveloped by a mass of wreckage is ever present.

Geo. M. Debus was unanimously elected chairman of Kitchener [illegible] Board.

COLD FEET IN ADVERTISING

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

REPORTS RECEIVED AT ANNUAL MEETING L.C.W

MRS. HARSTONE IS AGAIN RE ELECTED TO PRESIDENCY BY ACCLAMATION

The seventh annual meeting of the L. C. W. was held on Friday, January 23rd, in the Y. W. C. A. with a large attendance of interested members.

The President, Mrs. Harstone, in a brief address referred to the many matters of importance that had come before the Council during the past year, and to the success of the work of several committees.

The president emphasized the fact that the L. C. W. is a federation of societies for greater unity of thought sympathy and purpose in the support of any reform or work of common interest. This unity of action tends to foster the community spirit, and the L. C. W. provides a medium of expression of the opinions and sentiments of our citizens in all matters pertaining to our local and national life.

Secretary's Report

The corresponding secretary's report of the year's work showed much interesting work accomplished, and many things in process of development. This report also that of Miss Waltons committee on undesirable literature and movies, and Miss Rush's report of Committee of Fine and Applied Art will appear in tomorrow's paper.

The Baby Clinic

Dr. Birnie reported most satisfactory progress by committee dealing with the Baby Clinic. The co-operation of the doctors and the married nurses in the city has been secured and also the aid of many volunteer workers. The clinic will be held in rooms of the W. A. at the G. W. V. A. Hall, and $465.00 has already been contributed to the work.

Verbal reports from the Queen Mary's Home and School Association, Women's Art Association and Playgrounds Committee, were heard.

The business of the meeting was suspended at this point to hear a most interesting address from D. McPherson. This will be fully reported in tomorrow's papers.

The election of officers resulted as follows:

President: Mrs. Harstone (acclamation.)

Vice-Presidents: Mrs. Stevenson Mrs. Mowat, Dr. Birnie, Mrs. Rollins.

Corresponding Secretary: Mrs. C. E. Jamieson.

Recording Secretary: Mrs. W. R Morris.

Treasurer: Miss Mary Stratton.

It was decided to have not less than five open meetings during the coming year, the remainder to be executive meetings.

U. S. ARMY IN SIBERIA

Last of American Soldiers Out of That Country by March 15

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vladivostock, Jan. 27.— The American army authorities believe it will be March 15 before the last American soldiers and Red Cross workers are out of Siberia. CONDITIONS AT ALL SAINTS' CHURCH ARE FLOURISHING AND ENCOURAGING

Vestry Meeting Last Night Reveals Spirit of Progress and Extreme Optimism

The annual vestry meeting of All Saints' Anglican Church last night revealed conditions both financially and generally to be flourishing and encouraging. An atmosphere of hearty co-operation and extreme optimism for the current year pervaded the whole meeting, and the reports of the several church societies showed excellent work in 1919. One great outstanding feature of last year's efforts was that the synod's assessments for missions were met to the last cent for the first time in All Saints' history.

The attendance was large and commendable enthusiasm in the church's work and needs prevailed.

A Clean Sheet.

Treasurer Gray Copping's financial statement gave the receipts as $5,011.28, with 48c in the bank, as against an expenditure of $5,411.28. Included in these expenditures was an overdraft from 1918 of $163.98, so the church did better than hold its own last year, despite community conditions that were none too good.

Sunday School Report.

Secretary Price's report of the Sunday School showed a members' roll, including the four Bible classes, of 360 scholars, 30 teachers and 5 officials, a total of 395. The average attendance of scholars was 283, of teachers 25 and officials 4. The highest attendance was 396. The lowest 85.

The number on the roll of the four Bible classes, of which Mr. C. E. Sisson is the energetic head, was 96, the average attendance 60.

Mr. Sisson felt that a great deal had been accomplished in starting and organizing on a substantial footing this Bible class department, which he described as a live organization, each class being in a flourishing condition in every way.

The receipts from the whole Sunday School were $812.02, and there is a balance in hand of $112.18.

The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, expressed warm appreciation of the work of his Sunday School, including Bible classes, and of its faithful band of teachers.

Prosperous and Pleasant.

Mrs. Beatty reported an exceedingly prosperous year for the Woman's Auxiliary. Considerable contribution to the needs of missions had resulted.

The receipts were $194.50, the expenditures $182.36, leaving a balance of $12.14. Also a life membership fee of $6.

Girls' Auxiliary.

Miss Stephens reported this society's receipts as $37.85, and its expenditures $34.25, leaving in hand $3.60. These girls also had done their share in support of mission work.

Splendid Work.

The Woman's Guild was highly commended by the rector for its hard work and excellent showing, especially so in raising $600 for the church's building fund. For this energetic society Mrs. Joseph Crowe reported receipts to the tidy sum of $804.96. They expended $776.31, and have a balance of $28.65.

The Chancel Guild.

This organization, which takes care of the communion vessels and furnishes flowers for the altar, received $16.43, spent $16.35, and have 8 cents to the good. Miss Brown reported for this organisation.

The Choir.

Choir Master Mr. Geo. Chandler expressed his warm appreciation of the faithful co-operation of the choir members. The membership now stands at 48, including 12 chorister boys. He extended thanks to the organist, Miss Flowers, and spoke of her patience under difficulties with an organ which now needs replacing. The service by this choir is all voluntary.

Holding Its Own.

People's Warden L. G. Dobbin, in submitting the financial statement as before referred to, thought it exceedingly encouraging that the church should be holding its own under existing circumstances. The missions assessments, he said, had been paid in full last year for the first time in the history of the church.

A Special Fund.

The receipts for finishing the chancel basement were $1,372.75 and the expenditures $1,368.95, leaving in hand $3.80. Accounts outstanding amount to $189.08. This work was undertaken under the auspices of the Sunday School. The rector explained that the major portion of the receipts was made up by a few men.

Distinctly Encouraging.

The rector, Rev. R. B. Grobb, submitted a concise and comprehensive report of his work during the past year, a period which, he said, had been marked by many distinctly encouraging features. He expressed satisfaction in the financial situation, 1919 being the first year since the opening of the new church that the books had been closed without considerable liabilities. Another reason for encouragement lies, he said, in a substantial increase in missionary contributions.

Referring feelingly to the 29 members who had made the supreme sacrifice in the great war, he hoped the vestry would take some action toward getting a fitting memorial to their memory.

Fifty-nine were confirmed last year.

Officers Elected.

Mr. Thos. Hooper was again the rector's choice for warden, and Mr. L. G. Dobbin was re-elected people's warden.

Secretary-treasurer — Mr. Gray Copping, re-elected.

Manager Envelope System — Mr. Webber.

Manager Sidesmen System—Mr. Downs.

Representative at Protestant Home—Mrs. Beatty.

Representative on Charity Board—Mr. W. G. Howden.

Auditors — Messrs. J. W. Worth and F. H. Dawson, re-elected.

Lay Delegates to Synod—Messrs. W. G. Howden, Herbert Rush, Robt. Wolstenholm.

Executive Committee—The foregoing officials and Choirmaster Chandler, with the people's warden chairman; the Sunday School superintendent and heads of Sunday School departments are also included on this committee.

Soldiers' Memorial Committee—The Executive Committee.

Forward Movement.

Mr. Edgar Worth explained that the objective for this deanery in the Forward Movement is $80,000, of which Peterborough city must give $20,000. All Saints' he added, had shouldered the responsibility of raising $7,500. He called for 15 men canvassers, and his call was readily responded to.

Mr. Wm. Butler also offered a few explanations of the manner in which the money raised would be applied.

Vote of Condolence.

On motion of Messrs. Butler and Edgar Worth, a resolution of condolence with the widow and connections of the late Mr. James Edgar a past warden, was passed. The late Mr. Edgar's work in connection with building the new church was more than that of any other member, said Rev. R. B. Grobb.

New Name.

Anglican congregations are being canvassed for a more appropriate name for the church than "The Church of England in Canada." This vestry voted that the name be changed to "The Anglican Church of Canada."

NICHOLL'S HOSPITAL ALUMNI

Miss F. Dixon Was Elected President at Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Nicholls Hospital Allumani was held at the Nicholls Hospital, Jan 20th. The following officers were elected:

Cost is Soaring.

The estimates for the Fire Department this year, as submitted to Council's Fire, Water and Light Committee last night, total $40,770.60, a net increase of $6,815.95 over last year's appropriations. These estimates in detail will be found in another column of this issue.

Talking of the estimates, Fire Chief Grange saw that he asked each year for $36,000, but this was reduced to $32,961.65. The department's account for last year is overdraw to the time of $1,900 odd, as a result of the unforseen employment of two firemen returned from overseas, $740 for a set of tires for the motor truck, and an increase in the cost of supplies generally.

As to the demand for a new car for the chief, Chief Grange explained that the one now in use is a Ford, purchased in 1916, before his assuming office; its speed at the best is but 35 miles an hour as against 50 by the motor truck; then it is dangerous to the riders, he asserted, when in real practical use. He had in mind the purchase of a Reo car, the best for the purpose on the market, and generally used in both in Canada and the United States.

Bouquets.

Ald. Whitehouse considered the city fortunate in its fire chief, his staff and the department generally. He had inspected the fire hall and was delighted with conditions found therein. Then there have been very few fires the past year, due in a large measure to the chief's policy that "prevention is better than cure." Less fires redounds to the city's advantage generally. Congratulations are certainly due Chief Grange for the efficiency of himself and the brigade.

Ald. Morrison: "The chief always has his eyes open for danger; his inspection of premises is systematic and thorough, and the removal of combustible rubbish insisted on.

Ald. Crowe said he had known Grange for years, had always found him strict, prompt, and punctual, which qualifications he is satisfied he applies to his present position. "I recognise Grange as a valuable chief, and filling the bill, and I want to give him all the encouragement I can."

20 Per Cent. All Round.

To Ald. [illegible] Chief Grange recalled that the increases in salaries asked for meant a total of [illegible] per cent. on the combined salaries. Hamilton, said the chief, gave its brigade an increase of $[illegible] the man last September, and the [illegible] are now asking increases which would bring low paid firemen up to $14[illegible] a year and the highest paid privates up to a salary of $1,758, "more than I am getting now."—Kingston firemen received an increase of 25 per cent.

Ald. Crowe reminded Chief Grange that according to his report the men are asking an increase in salaries to meet the high cost of living, and he agreed that such an increase was justified. But, Ald. Crowe argued, it costs the higher officials no more to live than it does the privates, and he would only support a recommendation that each man on the brigade get a $200 increase to meet the high cost of living. He would not agree to the graded schedule of wages asked which called for $400 increase for the chief, $365 for the assistant chief, $301.25 for the captain, and so on down to a minimum of $143.75. "They all belong to the Federation of Labor, and that organization's platform is equalization of salaries."

Ald. Crowe: "That is already taken care of in the present salaries of the officers. With the same increase as the rank and file the officers' salaries would stand in the same relation to that of the men as at present, and their responsibilities equally recognised as now. The union is only asking an increase to meet the high cost of living, and I think $200 all round would be a fair raise. We should adopt a policy in this respect to govern all departments of the city under Council's control."

Chief Grange: "According the same increase to the officers and men would only cause dissention and trouble in the brigade. It will not pay to tamper with the efficiency of the department, which is higher today than ever before. Then we can't get men every day capable of being trained as firemen; fire-fighters are born, not made."

Ald. Crowe Stands Firm.

Ald. Crowe did not object to the other estimates, but stands to his guns in the matter of salary increases.

The committee adjourned without reaching any definite recommendation to Council. They will probably meet again tonight.

The members present, excepting Ald. Crowe, were inclined to recommending the salary increases demanded, or at least to a compromise on the amounts asked for the officers, leaving the salaries of the rank and file as presented by the chief.

Ald. Crowe stands for a flat rate bonus of $200 for each man on the brigade, officers included, for this year.

Those Present.

Senator McCumber, of North Dakota, says U. S. Government will start next fiscal year with $3,000,000,000 deficit.

CRITICAL SITUATION IN LABOR CIRCLES

IS CAUSED IN FRANCE BY EXPATRIATION OF GERM PRISONERS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 28.—The repatriation of German prisoners may bring about a critical situation in the labor market in some parts of France, according to an Amiens despatch. The work of the restoration of the devastated districts will be retarded it is said, and farmers who have been employing a large number of Germans fear they will not be able to sow a large acreage this spring. Efforts have been made to replace the Germans, but reports state that but few applications for work have made their appearance.

A WORTH WHILE MESSAGE FOR PETERBORO

The large increase in avoidable traffic accidents in Peterborough and in all of the cities of Ontario will be the text of an address to the Board of Trade on Thursday evening by Mr. R. B. Morley of Toronto.

Mr. Morley is general manager of the Ontario Safety League, a voluntary provincial organization working for the prevention of accidents and the causes of fire, ill health, and other defaults in the body politic.

It is now conducting a campaign of education in the leading cities to safeguard the public against avoidable dangers. Mr. Morley has a real message for Peterborough.

Much has been done through this League to cut down the percentage of risk attending industrial occupations.

Some years ago Mr. Morley was accountant in the Dominion Bank, and is therefore well known in the city.

Guests' tickets for the address may be obtained from members of the Board of Trade and at the office, 358 George street.

PREMIER DRURY DEFERS VISIT HERE

Cancels Date for Next Week But Will be in Peterborough on Monday February 22nd.

Owing to the Lieutenant-Governor having notified Premier Drury that he would be present at the Cabinet meeting, which was called for Monday next, the Premier has been compelled to postpone his visit to Peterborough until Monday, February 28.

As the Premier was the great attraction for the banquet to be held on February 2nd, the committee has decided to postpone the event until Monday, the 23rd, at the same time and place.

In a telephone conversation with Mr. Rogers this morning, Premier Drury assured him that he would be present at the banquet without fail on the 23rd, and perhaps some of his Ministers will be here as well. An endeavor is now being made to have Mr. Drury and his Cabinet Ministers arrive her on the noon train instead of coming in the evening, as was proposed, in order that they can be shown around the city and also meet the committee which has been appointed from the Farmers' Club, the County Council and the Board of Trade regarding the establishing of a demonstration farm and a winter fat stock exhibition for this county.

ALL IS HARMONIOUS AMONG THE LABOR MEMBERS OF ONTARIO LEGISLATURE

T. Tooms, M.P.P., Reports Results of Conference at Walker House, Toronto, Yesterday—Mayor McBride's Vaulting Ambition Caused the Recent Flurry.

All is peace and harmony among the members of the Independent Labor party in the Legislature. The differences of opinion have been wiped out. There is to be no bolt. The debate on the merits of the controversy between Mayor MacBride of Brantford, Thomas Tooms of this city, and W. R. Rollo, Minister of Labor, which was advertised to be held in Mayor MacBride's home city, has been called off. The three met at the Walker House in Toronto yesterday and cleared up everything like a misunderstanding, shook hands and vowed fealty to the cause. Mayor MacBride practically admitted that the others were right.

That was the report brought back from Toronto by Mr. Tooms last night, and submitted to a meeting of the Independent Labor party, at which Mr. Tooms also spoke on one of his favorite themes, "Industrial Democracy."

It seems that Mayor MacBride was disgruntled because a place had not been found for him in the Cabinet. If the portfolio of Education had been allotted to Labor, beyond all question Mayor MacBride would have been called upon to take it. But for the two Cabinet positions given the Labor party, two men with training in the matters to be dealt with were chosen. Mayor MacBride, however, appeared to believe that he was qualified to take on the official duties of any position from Premier down.

Vice-President McMurray presided at the meeting last night and made an urgent and eloquent appeal to wage earners to join the new party. Mr. George Ball, a lifelong Liberal, openly renounced the old faith and cast in his lot with the Labor party. He had been a Liberal, he said, because of the two old line parties he regarded that as the most democratic. The Labor party in this regard leads the Liberals by several laps, hence the transfer of his allegiance.

Other speakers were Alex. Morrison and T. H. Lane. The latter denounced the relief being handed to veterans from the forty-million dollar fund appropriated by the Government at the last session of Parliament as really a compact between the Government and the manufacturers. When a veteran applies to the fund for help he is sent to some manufacturer who needs men. He must accept the wages offered. If he refuses to do so he gets no Government aid. If he does go to work and finds he cannot live on the pay the Government supplemnts his earnings. In other words, the Government pays the wages that should be paid by the manufacturer, because every employer should give members of his staff enough to live on.

Mr. Lane cited the case of a man who worked in a local factory for 32 cents an hour and whose daughter received 18 cents an hour in the same place. The father's pay was insufficient to support he family, but when he applied to the Patriotic Fund to help him out, his daughter's earnings were added to his own, and the Fund allowed him $1 a month.

According to Mr. Lane, the daughter would have as well remained at home for all the good she was able to accomplish.

Officers for the current year will be elected at the next meeting two weeks hence.

FINANCIAL SITUATION IN STATE OF CHAOS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 28. — Foreign exchange was demoralised today under the lead of New York, which slumped to $3.50 to the pound, representing a decline of about 35 per cent. from the normal. Paris and Belgian cheques at low rates contributed to the demoralisation, while business with Italy was almost impossible.

The reasons for the decline of the New York rate were the same as those previously held responsible, the huge accumulation of the debt of Europe to America, with the additional factor that France and Belgium have recently been buying dollars through London. So hurtful to business are these conditions that it is considered in the street that the whole European financial position has reached a serious stage and that unless something is done the result will be chaos.

Decline in New York.

New York, Jan. 28.—English exchange rates dropped to another low level today when demand bills on the pound sterling fell to $3.52¼ at the opening, and later to $3.52¼. French, Italian and German exchange was also depressed.

BOLSHEVIK FALL BACK BEFORE LETTISH ARMY

LATTER HAVE TAKEN THE LAST TOWN OCCUPIED BY THE ENEMY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Copenhagen, Jan. 28. — Lettish troops have captured Guzyn, the last town in eastern Letvia occupied by Russian Bolsheviki, and have reached the Lettish-Russian frontier at many places, according to a Lettish official report quoted in Riga advices received here. Much material of war and 2,000 prisoners have been captured, and fighting continues along the whole front, it is said. The Bolshevik forces on the Lettish front are retreating eastward, and many detachments were annihilated in the recent fighting.

LUCIEN MOUISSETTE IS SHOT TO DEATH

WITH TWO COMPANIES WAS FIRED ON BY MAN AT LEVIS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Quebec, Jan. 28.—Lucien Morrisette, the great war veteran who was overseas with the 22nd Battalion, was murdered in cold blood last night in a dark street in Levis, across the river from Quebec. With two telegraphers, Morrissette intended visiting a man named Baker in Levis, but entered an adjacent house by mistake and were entertained for a short while by Mrs. R. Remilliard. Suddenly her husband burst into the house, under the influence of liquor, witnesses claim, and shouted to Romeo, one of his sons, to "shoot that bunch out." The three men fled from the house, but Morrissette was shot in the abdomen and groin, dying almost immediately. Romeo Remillard was placed under arrest.

TOTAL ESTIMATES FOR FIRE DEPT. THIS YEAR AGGREGATE $40,777.60

Net Increase of $6,815.95 Over Last Year's Appropriation An Overdraft From Nineteen Nineteen of Near $2,000 Committee Will Recommend Adoption of Estimates Excepting Those For Salaries.

Council's Fire, Water and Light Committee met last night and digested the report of Fire Chief Grange, in which he estimates his department's total needs this year at $40,777.60.

These estimates mean a net increase of $6,815.95 and the committee will probably recommend the adoption of the estimates as submitted with the exception of those items for salaries, on which they are not yet agreed.

The Report.

Following is the report, discussion on the salaries demanded will be found under another heading:

Peterborough, January 12 1920.
The Chairman and Committee on Fire Water and Light,
City Council
Peterborough.

Gentlemen—I am herewith submitting estimates for the Fire Department expenditure for the year 1920. Only those items which are most essential are included.

One of the most important items is the salaries. There has been a request presented by the department for a substantial increase in salary. The amount of the increase is $4,968.35. Owing to the increased cost of living and the abnormal conditions existing, I wish to strongly urge that the request be complied with and the amount of the salaries fixed at the figure given in the estimate re salary, for each member of the department. Since taking control of the department, I have had a complete staff at all times and the firemen, without a single exception are most thorougly experienced and capable. Undoubtedly, it is to the interest of the department and the city generally that the services of these men be retained. The fires during the abnormal period of the war proved of more educational value to the firemen than ten years experience under normal conditions, and my staff remained practically unchanged since I assumed the duties of Chief of the Department.

Since March 1st, 1919, we have had in operation what is known as the double platoon system. It has proven to be highly satisfactory from every standpoint. I might say that under this system one platoon is on duty at the fire station, and upon receiving an alarm of fire, responds immediately with the regular pieces of apparatus, while the off-duty platoon, upon receiving the alarm in their homes, come immediately to the station and take charge of the spare apparatus and respond in event of the second alarm coming from the same fire, or another fire taking place in some other section of the city. This arrangement gives the advantages of a second department without the added cost. During the period before the inauguration of this system it was necessary to have a watchman come to the station while the department was out. This arrangement makes the services of a watchman unnecessary. The salary paid the watchman was one hundred and twenty dollars. I wish to create a new office in the department which is absolutely necessary—that of secretary. I can use one of the members of the department, who is qualified for this position. The additional salary requested is only one hudred dollars per annum. Thus between the two positions (watchman and secretary) a saving of twenty dollars is made.

On October 31st, 1919, we severed our connection with the Bell Telephone Company, who have supplied us with battery power for the alarm system. We adopted a system of generating our own current. The outfit consists of a motor-generator set, storage batteries and rack, and a three panel 4 circuit switchboard. Since the installation of the new equipment it has given satisfaction in every way. Now in order to perfect the alarm system it will be necessary to purchase about 3,400 lbs. of No. 10 B& S. Guage hard drawn

VICTIMS OF FLU ARE FALLING ON STREETS

ALARMING SPREAD OF EPIDEMIC IN AUSTRIA AND EASTERN EUROPE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, Jan. 28.—The spread of the epidemic in Eastern Europe is gravely alarming Austria. Influenza in a virulent form is increasing in Vienna and Budapest. Reports from Eastern Silesia and Slovakia say that the plague is devloping rapidly. At Teschen people are falling in the streets. Three members of the Diet were among the victims. Many government offices are closed. Spotted fever is spreading in Ukraine, Bessarabia and Poland.

Spreading in Budapest.

Budapest, Jan. 28.—Influenza victims are increasing in this city, many dropping in the streets. The Hungarian frontiers are closed as a barrier against the disease as well as to prevent the export of food and valuables.

FOUR MEN AND CHILD PERISH IN FLAMES

OLD HISTORIC HERMITAGE NEAR WINNIPEG IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Jan. 28.—Four men and a five-months-old child perished in the flames that destroyed the old historic hermitage, Headingly, ten miles west of here, at 1 a.m. Tightly clasping her eighteen-months-old daughter in her arms, Mrs. W. C. Hall plunged to safety out of the flaming kitchen into bitter 20 below zero weather. She wore only her night attire. The dead are: W. C. Hall, Charles Wood, William, his five-months-old son, John Marigold and William Rogers.

POVERTY BREEDS VICE.

T. TOOMS, M.P.P., speaking at the meeting of the Independent Labor party last night, said that the agitation for an increase in wages meant something more to the workingmen of Ontario than the receipt of more money. The very soul's welfare of the wage earners and their families is involved in these questions. There must be more of the spirit of Christianity employed if the best results are to be attained. Better living conditions mean a better class of citizens.

Unquestionably Mr. Tooms is right. Discontent and anarchy are bred in the modern slums. Poverty begets vice. Coarseness of character is developed and the very moral nature of mankind is warped by sordid environments. Where there is no vision the people perish. Where there is no ambition there is no progress, little of physical development and infinitely less of moral advancement. The light of religion will brighten a man's domicile as well as shed its rays over his spiritual existence.

A CENTRAL HEATING PLANT.

ANOTHER suggested solution of the fuel problem is the establishing of a central heating plant, by which an entire district is furnished with steam heat from one source of supply, just as an office building or apartment house is kept warm by a single furnace today. This central heating idea is simply, after all, an extension of the system of furnishing water and light in municipalities. In its latest issue, Conservation, discussing this question, says:

"The advantages of central heating plants over individual systems for each house or builidng are numerous. In an individual system, as a rule, the plant is not large enough to warrant careful operation, and the coal is fired in large quantities and at long intervals. To obviate the difficulties of combustion, high-priced coal is burned. It is evident that, if a central station containing a power plant boiler of standard size, utilizing cheap fuel and operated intelligently, be substituted for the heating plants of several buildings, much of the inefficiency nuisance and discomfort from the small plants would be overcome.

"In central heating plants, where each building has to be charged its exact proportion for service, the question of rate must be carefully considered. Payment for the use of steam should be at a metre rate based on 1,000 pounds of condensed steam.

"An investigation of a large number of plants in the United States in pre-war times disclosed that the average rate was fifty cents per 1,000 pounds of condensed steam. Prices would now probably be from 50 to 75 per cent. higher, or, say, 75 to 87 cents.

"Respecting the economy: If we assume that one pound of steam contains 1,000 heat units and one pound of coal contains 13,000 heat units, and allow an efficiency of 50 per cent. for the coal, then we find that theoretically, coal at $13 per ton, if burned in a house furnace, would be equivalent to steam at $1 per 1,000 pounds, as compared with 75 to 87 cents for a central plant."

A STUDY IN PSYCHOLOGY.

JESSE POMEROY has been confined in Charlestown Mass., prison for forty-three years. At the age of seventeen he was convicted of murder. His mania was the dissection of animals and children. Sane on every other subject, he was possessed of the devil in one section of his mental make-up. As he grew older he was given more liberties in prison, nevertheless was watched carefully. Decidedly he was a dangerous character if at large, says the New York Herald.

That Pomeroy is perfectly sane and approaching genius is evidenced by the recent announcement that he has completed a book of poems to be distributed among his friends. "My years in prison," says Pomeroy, "have given me the solitude that is conducive to speculation. I owe my inspiration to the prison chaplain." Some of Pomeroy's writings—especially his "Philosophy of Life"—contain real merit and straight reasoning.

Pomeroy presents a rare study in psychology. In a degree he furnishes proof of the old saying that "genius is a form of insanity." Be that true or not, Pomeroy clearly demonstrates that genius and mania can exist side by side in the same brain. Some say that the twist in the mental structure of Pomeroy was due to some mysterious paternal influence. Some say that Pomeroy's mania is due to "arrested development"—that is, a failure on the part of nature to perfect some of his brain cells, or the failure of Pomeroy to rise above his environment. Nevertheless, this poetic and philosophical prisoner furnishes an unusually fine subject for study and for investigation.

As in the case of Pomeroy, so in the case of many others in his unfortunate position, it is a great pity that genius cannot be divorced from mania and given its full force and power for good.

ABOLISH THE SENATE.

(Farmers' Sun.)

THE APPOINTMENT of Mr. Lorne C. Webster of Montreal to fill a vacancy in the Senate calls fresh attention to this archaic institution which we maintain at Ottawa. Personally we have no quarrel with Mr. Webster. He is a very affable gentleman, but he represents a type of individual which is far too prevalent in the Senate at Ottawa. Mr. Webster represent the "Big Interests." He is president of the Quebec Railway, director of the Merchants Bank, director of the Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co., and of a half score of other powerful financial and industrial corporations.

The Senate has long been regarded as a last resort of the vested interests. When the Fathers of Confederation saw fit to appoint an Upper House, they did so for the purpose of providing a "drag on the House of Commons' coach" or a "check upon hasty legislation arising out of feverish popular agitation."

The only time that we have any records of the Senate coming into conflict with the House of Commons, is after a change of government, when the majority in the Senate is of a different political complexion to that in the Commons. This happened in 1896, when the Liberals came into power, and happened again in 1911 when the Conservatives got the upper hand. The rest of the time the Senate simply obeys the will of the party leaders who provide them with a lifelong job at $2500 a year.

The Senate consists of ninety-six members, who receive a sessional indemnity of $2500 a year, while the Speaker of the Senate gets $4000 and free living apartments in the Senate chambers. The senators enjoy the privilege of travelling free on all Canadian railways, frank all letters and parcels through the mails, and in general enjoy all the perquisites that go with office, and none of the responsibilities.

The Senate has had an evil influence in the political life of the country. The appointees are invariably men who have contributed to the campaign funds of one or other of the parties. The expectation of being given a safe seat and a comfortable salary has made these men subservient to the party leaders, and has killed all initiative and independence.

The Senate is not democratic. It is not useful, nor is it even ornamental, despite the fact that it costs the country well on towards half a million dollars a year. The Senate can best be reformed by abolishing it altogether.

Reduced to a few words, the situation in Ontario can be thus described: Messrs. Drury, Doherty and Raney are governing without the consent of the governor.

COALITION UNPOPULAR.

(Belleville Ontario.)

Coalition in England and Union in Canada now present the same characteristics. Pretending to foster national unity, they merely affront national intelligence and strictly national feelings. They are both seeking to organize a new kind of political party, a party without definite principles held together by the need of self-preservation. Coalition and Union both act as parties. They have an unholy fear of men of ability, honesty and distinction, getting into Parliament; they want members who will consent to support the inner circle; men who are interested in principles are not wanted, for the combine has no principles except compromise.

ANTI-SMOKING CRUSADE IS NOW STARTED

(New York Commercial.)

The insufferable Anti-This and Anti-That are having a larger success than they deserve. Now the anti-smoke fiend is putting in some strong licks. We have been told in the news columns, ever since prohibition began to vaunt itself, because of successful legislation, that the next big crusade would be to prohibit tobacco. So we have the Anti-Smoking nuisance with us. Strange as it may seem, this newcomer has invaded the South. He has not yet been able to go the entire length of his journey, but he has got a fine foothold from which he will be in position to widen his powers. The South Carolina Senate has actually passed a bill to prohibit smoking in the dining rooms of hotels, restaurants and other public places.

This is intolerance with a vengeance, prohibition run mad. We could have regarded it with more complaisance, for it would have been at least absurd if this Legislature had told the people of South Carolina that they must not smoke in their homes or in their private places well, say because of danger of fire, or because science had come to the conclusion that smoking was productive of some new, frightful menace which nothing but the harshest measures could prevent from exterminating the population of the land.

But to be told that a man may not enjoy a smoke after his meal, because, forsooth, he is compelled to, or chooses to, dine in a hotel or restaurant, is to perpetuate that which we only recently lifted from the shoulders of some European nations. It is useless to try to tell the people that delicate consideration prompted this thing; that the refinements of society have come to recognize a deference superior to that which we have been exhibiting, and to be exhibited hereafter, toward the gentler sex. It won't work. The gentler sex doesn't want that kind of deference. The gentler sex is far more sensible on this subject than the South Carolina Senators who voted for the anti-smoking bill have shown themselves to be. Most women like to see a man enjoy his smoke. If they have the slightest revulsion to the practice in their impressionistic days, the antipathy quickly passes away after the days of courtship have begun, and when the state of matrimony has been entered there is not a trace of it left.

Of course, everybody knows that there are a few fussy persons in the world, even among our dear womankind, who turn up their noses when the aroma of a fragrant perfecto stirs the olfactory organs. But they are an insignificant minority.

This incident will be treated from the serious and the serio-comic standpoint by newspapers all over the land. Some will rejoice in that they see in the action a prediction of an anti-smoke nation being fulfilled. Others will bemoan, in a sarcastic vein, the further intrusion upon our liberties. A great majority of the people will be astounded at the thought that a body of men could deliberately approve such legislation. We venture to say that if, instead of men, the South Carolina Senate were made up of women, a suggestion, to do what these men did would have been received with scorn.

HE LEARNED THE SIMIAN LANGUAGE

Chattanooga, Jan. 27 — Richard L. Garner, African explorer and the man who claimed to have succeeded in talking to and understanding the chatter of monkeys, died here recently. He was taken ill at the hotel several days ago and was removed to a hospital when his illness became worse. His identity was not known until after he had died.

As a result of Prof. Garner's trips into the jungles and his close study of simian life as he found it there, he had come to be regarded as an authority on the monkey. His research and tests were thought to have furnished new arguments to prove the logic of Darwin's theory of the development of the human race.

It was reported that Prof. Garner and Clark Abbott, a New York city lawyer, were about to establish a monkey colony of the east coast of Florida. There, it is understood, Prof. Garner was planning to spend the remainder of his life.

He had made twenty-three trips into the African wilds since the early '90.s.

Prof. Garner was a Virginian. He leaped into prominence among scientists in 1892 when he announced his belief that monkeys possessed a medium of conversation and loved and hated, laughed and cried in much the same manner as their more highly developed relative. To prove himself right he announced he would go into the jungle and live there alone, become acquainted with its sounds and finally reach the stage where he would be able to distinguish the different words the simians used.

So he went to Africa with the blessing of Thomas Edison, one of the few men who placed faith in his theories. With him went the most unusual explorer's outfit ever packed into the hinterland. There was a great cage in which he proposed to live, a collection of guns and other weapons and last, but most important from his viewpoint, a set of tiny home made reed instruments which he said would help him exchange news with the monkeys.

The instruments had been constructed wholly by himself, a few of them being fashioned from toy whistles he bought from Ann street vendors.

Next to the reed noisemakers in importance was a complicated instrument that combined the features of an electric lighting plant, a telephone exchange and an automatic phonograph.

It was in July, 1892, that he left New York, and it was not till almost three years later that he returned. He had landed at Gaboon, north of the Ogowe River, on the west coast. Several expeditions inland led him to decide on Lake Fernan Vax as a headquarters, and there he set up his steel mesh cage.

He lived in the cage three months. From a captured chimpanzee he later said he learned six different simian words. They were "caught" on the phonograph.

Frequently since then Prof. Garner had gone back to the jungle for further study. Each time he returned he reiterated his statements that monkeys used systems of sounds to convey thought. Finally he brought back with him Suzie, a long faced Kulu Kamba monkey, that later became the property of the New York Zoological Park, with the assistance of Raymond L. Ditmars of the New York Zoological Society Prof. Garner used Suzie as a medium in studying other simians in the cages in Bronx Park.

He had written magazine articles concerning his explorations and discoveries and had lectured in this country and abroad.

COMPENSATION ACT HELD ULTRA VIRES

DECISION OF MANITOBA COURT AFFECTS ONTARIO AND QUEBEC, TOO.

Winnipeg, Jan. 28:—According to a decision rendered by Chief Justice Mathers in the King's Bench the Manitoba Workmen's Compensation for Injuries Act is ultra vires of the Provincial Legislature, and the Compensation Board is shorn of its powers as a judicial body.

The decision is based upon the holding that the appointment of the Board is a direct violation of the B. N. A. Act.

"With all due reference to Chief Justice Mathers, I am convinced that decision will have to be appealed." This was the statement made by Hon T. H. Johnson, Attorney-General, with reference to the judgment.

More than four thousand claims have been passed, and awards totalling more than $1,000,000 have been made under the Act.

Other provinces are affected by decision, including Ontario, Quebec and British Columbia, which based their acts on Manitoba, the Attorney-General declared.

Gen. Chow, arriving at Seattle to purchase machinery, says largest hydro-electric plant in the world will be built in the province of Szechuan to utilize the power of Yangtse rapids, whose possibilities exceed those of Niagara.

It has been announced that the historic position of Constable of The Tower of London, rendered vacant by the recent death of Field-Marshal Sir Evelyn Wood, will be conferred upon Field-Marshal Earl Haig, late Commander-in-Chief of the British Forces in France and Belgium, whose victories during the late summer and autumn of 1918 were the knock-out blows that compelled Germany to sue for peace.

The post of Constable of The Tower is almost as old as The Tower whose history takes one far back in the history of England. Tradition assigns the commencement of the Keep or White Tower to Julius Caesar, who visited Britain half a century before the Christian era. However, that may be, it is an historical fact that the formulation of the Keep or White Tower dates from 1070, during the reign of William the Conqueror, the first Norman king. The White Tower is surrounded by towers of lesser note, but all associated with historical personages and events, by barracks and armouries, and the whole area extends to about 13 acres, which is surrounded by great walls and a deep moat.

The regalia of England is now housed within The Tower, which contains a military garrison, and is commanded by a military officer, with the ancient title of Constable of the Tower.

At times The Tower has been a royal residence. King Henry III, who resigned from 1216 to 1272, resided there for some time.

Rotten Row Loses Tone

WHEN the West End of London wants to meet the West End—and the North and East wish to brush up on West End styles—they take an hour off on Sunday morning at Rotten Row.

Rotten Row is not so bad as it sounds. It is, indeed, one of the most interesting and famous spots in London—probably in the world. It is a tan bark and dirt riding path that extends for almost a mile along the southern side of Hyde Park, from Hyde Park Corner to Albert Gate. To the west is Kensington Gardens, to the east Green Park, Buckingham Palace, James Park, and a host of other famous localities. Back of it, to the north, is the beautiful Serpentine and the wide spaces of Hyde Park. South lies Knightsbridge.

Theoretically, Rotten Row is a riding path—and before the war it still had a right to claim such a useful and pleasurable distinction. Women in the first stages of learning to ride visited the path early to avoid the throng; men and women and children, seeking exercise, came later that the throng might have their money's worth. It combined horse and society so skilfully that neither seemed to obtrude unnecessarily. A Sunday morning at Rotten Row was a review of the famous and titled people of London on horseback—in so far as fame and titles could display themselves to advantage thereon.

But the war introduced a difference and a sad one. Rotten Row has degenerated into a path for notoriety and a dress parade that is gradually swinging away from the Row and attaching itself to the eastern drive.

Rotten Row on a Sunday morning to-day is given over largely to actresses with bleached hair, military officers who care for nothing but the outing of it, families with ambitions and unexpected wealth, jockeys and trainers, foreigners. East Indians abound. There are negroes and French and Belgians, Australians and Canadians seeing how it feels, and a general assortment of the varied life of cosmopolitan London.

Fat women who defy appearances in search of health, male novices caring only for the practice, wee children on minute horses which seem to get lost in the shuffle, girls out to attract attention by their attire—these are Rotten Row's habitues to-day.

War and the changed class of riders have lowered the tone of the parade by offering a new standard of riding horse. Long, ribby racers slouch along under jockeys and trainers. Livery horses seem to monopolise the rest — with the exception of the show class of military horse, some of which are merely huge animals for formal parade. A few hunters maintain a certain tone.

There is, too, not the old style and finish of dress. The men seem to have lost every respect for an established uniform. And the varied characters of the women express themselves instantly in the clothes they wear. Practically no women ride with the side-saddle; and, astride, they use only knickers and long coats. On the best patronized of Sundays not more than a couple of divided skirts will appear. The stiff hat for the woman rider is almost crowded out by soft straws or felts, though those with ambitions to maintain the tone adhere to the stiff shape.

Rotten Row, as a Sunday strolling ground, has moved away from Rotten Row, the riding path. The penny chairs along the Row stand now, only in single line, and the occupants no longer find the loungers along the rail blocking their view. The seats still fill with a more or less shifting crowd from 11.30 to 1.00. There is still the steady flow of life along the front path. But it is a different kind of life—shop girls and ex-munition makers, clerks and factory workers, foreigners and painted ladies. These seldom sit down. In the chairs are the more sedate, hoping against hope that the Row will be itself to-day, marvelling at the new life along it.

The real jam—the atmosphere of Rotten Row as it once was — has turned its back on the Row and now extends along the eastern drive of the Park, from Grosvenor Gate to Hyde Park Corner. Here sit the "swells" in all their dignity and glory. The road is packed with cars drawn up empty, while the owners occupy the chairs along the west of the double walk. Four out of five of the men are in silk hats again. The women are there in their low necks and silk hose; and the "jazz" of their variegated parasols makes a wonderful picture. Groups smile and nod to other groups with a fine exclusive indifference to the mob sauntering along the paths. Fine old gentlemen pause with their wives for a moment's chat with other fine old gentlemen whom they seldom see elsewhere. Women exchange hasty gossip — and carefully inspect each other's gowns and jewelry.

It is largely a church throng, pausing for a moment's gaiety on the way home from church. And the quiet splendor of it, its well-cut tone, its good-natured crowding, its polite dignity promise to maintain a satisfactory substitute for the more lively atmosphere of the old days of Rotten Row.

What Might Have Been.

It has been estimated that had there been no wars and no epidemics, the present population of the world, 1,519,000,000 people, could have descended from a single couple in 1,782 years, or since 132 A.D. But in those days no one considered transplanting interstitial glands.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Do Women Read Newspaper Advertising

¶ Since Women do over 80 per cent of the Retail buying that is done, Advertisers are constantly investigating the Appeal which Advertising mediums exert upon Women. This fact is continually before manufactures in every line, and recently the Bureau of Investigation was asked to conduct an investigation to show how much Underwear for Men was bought by Women, so that the manufacturer who made the request could write his advertisements accordingly.

¶ Many investigations have been made by Women's Clubs, Merchants' Organizations, Statistical Bureaus, and the like, but while these inquiries invariably show that Women are more influenced by Newspaper Advertising that by any other kind, they are inconclusive because of the high percentage of non-committal or unsatisfactory replies.

¶ The question broadly answers itself in that Women do most of the buying, and Newspapers carry far more Advertising than all other mediums combined.

SCOTS MAY GO DRY.

Prohibitionist Vote Will Be Taken This Year.

Scotland is in the throes of a local option campaign. In 1913 by the Temperance (Scotland) Act Parliament gave Scotland the power to try local option after an interval of seven years. That period expires on June 1 next.

Every village and town in Scotland will be asked to vote for or against prohibition in its own particular locality, and the Scottish Temperance Association has been working for many months to prepare the ground for the creation of dry districts.

In Glasgow people laugh at the idea of Scotland going bone-dry, but while the average man has been smiling the temperance party has been working, especially among the women, on whom they are counting for the majority of their votes.

Under the Act, on the demand of one tenth of the electors of a district, the clerk of the local authority is to arrange for a poll of the electors on local option. On the polling day all the licensed houses in the district are to be closed. Electors will have a threefold choice. By a cross on the ballot paper they can signify their preference for.

No change in the number of licenses.

Reduction of licenses

Abolition of all licenses.

If abolition is carried, all licenses will end on May 28 following. But this "no-license" resolution can be carried only if 55 per cent. of the votes recorded are in favor of it and of these number not less than 35 per cent. of the electors on the register. If a district goes "dry" the sale of drink will stop entirely with this exception, that under special circumstances the licensing court may allow certain hotels or restaurants to sell drink to residents or to those taking a meal, but there is to be no drinking bar.

No greater contrast in character and mode of life could exist than between Rossetti and Browning: the one living apart in a seclusion that had about it truly something—though not so much as has been represented—of the morbid and mystical; and the other, having once determined to face daylight and the world again after the great tragedy of his wife's death, carrying out his determination resolutely and healthily to the full. Probably there is no instance on record of a great poet leading at once so strenuous a poetical and so busy a social life as Browning during his last twenty or twenty-five years, writes Sir Sidney Colvin, in the Scribner. To meet him during those years was for many of us, though always a lively pleasure, not an event but a matter of course seeing that one was apt to meet him at concerts, theatres, picture galleries, dinner parties, in a word everywhere. My own acquaintance with him began, I think, in the latest sixties or earliest seventies in a certain hospitable, historic castle on the Cumberland border, than which no house is associated in my mind with more grateful and cordial memories. The American sculptor and author William Wetmore Story was a fellow-guest at the same time. He and Browning had been intimate in Italy. Story was a man exuberantly alive, half Italianate in vivacity of gesture and manner, and I remember with what amused interest the rest of us sat by and listened while he and Browning lustily kept up between them hour by hour the ball of anecdote and reminiscence and repartee.

Loudness of voice and vigorous geniality of bearing were what, on the surface, chiefly distinguished Browning from other Englishmen in social life throughout these years. Needless to say, the veriest oaf could not have mistaken them for vulgarity. The poet's biographer and most confidential friend, the late Mrs. Sutherland Orr, used to say that they were originally the mask of real shyness and diffidence on first confronting, in advanced middle life, the ordeal of mixed general society. I should rather have supposed that they were the natural symptoms of an inborn vital energy surpassing by fivefold those of other men.

Cherol on Egypt.

Sir Valentine Cherol in a letter to the London Times writes: "It may seem foolish to us that Egyptians should worry about words when we are ready to offer them a wider measure of self-government than they have ever enjoyed before or would have had the slightest chance of enjoying if Turkey and the Central Powers had emerged victorious from the great war. But, after all, if they do not jump at the offer we must remember that the offer goes little beyond the many promises we have held out to them since the occupation—promises for the fulfilment of which they have been waiting ever since Lord Dufferin's famous report of 1883. Whether they or we are chiefly to blame for 'the hope deferred that maketh the heart sick' does not much affect the argument. They have now, indeed, an opportunity of securing its fulfilment as never before by co-operating heartily with the Milner Commission in building up a new and workable Egyptian Constitution, but much, it must be confessed, has happened in the past, and especially during the war, to shake their confidence in British assurances."

Highest Dam In World.

The highest dam in the world is the Arrowrock dam at Boise, Idaho, a massive arch wedge of solid concrete, weighing more than 1,000,000 tons, which rises to a height of 351 feet between mountains a mile high. It was built in four years at a cost of $5,000,000. The artificial mountain lake backing it floods a canyon to a depth of 200 feet for a distance of 18 miles when filled to its capacity. The dam was built by the United States reclamation service as a great irrigation project.

FISHERMEN'S LUCK.

All Sorts of Strange Finds on Dogger Banks.

North Sea fishermen are having anything but a happy time of it, says Answers. Although the stock of fish is larger and more plentiful than it has been for thirty years past, there is much besides fish lying about on the great Dogger Banks, and the amount of gear lost, in consequence, is a very serious matter.

If a trawl gets caught in a sunken wreck there is nothing for it but to cut the warp and the loss. All sorts of relics of the sea fights of the past four years are being fished up. Only the other day a trawler brought up a rusty machine gun which proved to have belonged to one of the many pirate U-boats which our men sent to the bottom.

The trawl net, remember, is like a great purse which is dragged, for hours on end, slowly along the bottom, and which gathers not only fish—principally soles, turbot and plaice—but also a mass of every sort of rubbish that litters the floor of the sea.

Among this rubbish are sometimes found objects of real interest or value. Some pieces of amber, for instance. Amber is the fossilized gum of a tree which once grew over the forgotten country which is now the North Sea, and fragments are often washed up on the East Coast after storms. A year or two before the war, a Lowestoft trawler found in her net a lump of amber weighing just on two pounds—the finest piece discovered for very many years. The lucky finder sent it to London and sold it for £27 10s.

In 1906 another Lowestoft trawler when working on the northern edge of the Dogger, got her trawl hung up in what at first her people thought must be an old anchor. There are plenty of these at the bottom of the sea. But by degrees the object was worked loose and came up.

It proved to be the right hand tusk of a mastodon. It was eight feet long, and so heavy that it took three men to lift it. How many million years ago its original owner lived it is impossible to say. The find was sold to a museum for £7.

Trawling in the Channel, a Brixham craft brought up a queer old vase, black with age and long immersion in salt water. The skipper kept it as a curiosity, and when he returned to port, stuck it up in his room, on a shelf. Some years later a visitor who happened to notice it offered him a sovereign for it. The offer was accepted; he took it home, had it cleaned, and found that it was solid silver, a very fine specimen of French sixteenth century work, and worth several hundred pounds.

An Ostend trawler had a most strange experience a few years ago. Working off the Belgian coast, she began to wind up her net, when her men found that she had an extraordinarily heavy capture. To their astonishment they found it was another net.

But this feeling was nothing to their amazement when it was discovered that the net was their own old one which they had lost in a sudden storm just a year previously.

On one occasion, off the Isle of Wight, a trawler's crew got hold of a torpedo, and managed to bring it ashore. It was one that had been lost during practice, and they claimed and obtained the regular £5 reward from the Admiralty.

Another fiver was more easily earned by two French fishermen of Etreta. They found in their net a bottle carefully corked and sealed which, being opened, proved to contain a sheet of paper on which were these words: "£5 will be given to whoever brings or sends me this scrap of paper. Address—Greenwich street, New York." The bottle had been dropped overboard by a New Yorker on his way across the Atlantic.

Jazzerizing the Buzzer.

A newly designed triple tone electric bell yields a clear ring from one push button, a buzz from the second and a combined ring and buzz from the third. The buttons may be placed on three different doors of a house, or in office or shop the signals may be used for calling three different persons.—Popular Science Monthly.

He Knew Papa.

Bernice was just recovering from an attack of the flu and the first day she was able to sit up she said: "Mamma, I'm going to ask daddy to buy a tricycle." Her brother, who was playing in the room, spoke up: "Well, you'd better strike him for it right away, for if you wait till you gets well you mightn't get it."

Dolls Long Popular.

There is ample evidence that the use of dolls as an assistance to the operations of the young mind dates from the most remote times. Among the native tribes of Africa it was the custom of married women to carry a doll with them until they had a child, when the doll was discarded.

Snow and Fireflies.

The oriental is always and ever picturesque. The student of the East does not "burn the midnight oil." He works by snow and fireflies. There is an ancient legend about a Chinese student who was too poor to buy oil. So in the summer months he studied all night by the light of fireflies caught and imprisoned in a paper lantern, and in the winter by the reflection of the snow.—Gertrude Emerson in World Outlook.

Willing to Help the Needy.

A famous woman teacher, eighty years old, was sitting on the veranda of a college dormitory, in her wheel chair. A student had just brought her some ice water in her silver mug and the teacher had finished drinking it when some tourists came up, saw her sitting there holding out her cup, and they dropped a half dollar in it. Imagine their feelings when they discovered who the "beggar" was!

The Industrious Bee.

The bee has two distinct stomachs. In the first it stores away the honey from the flowers until such time as it is ready to yield it up, while the other stomach is used simply and solely for digestion purposes. When the bee is ready to deposit the honey it contracts the muscles of the stomach and the honey is ejected through the mouth.

The Thoughtless Answer.

A certain Kansas City physician will never know just how near death he was the other day when, after a thorough examination of probably the brightest, sweetest and altogether supreme nine-months-old baby in the world, the mother asked, "Well, what do you think of my baby?" and he said, "Oh, it's a normal child."

LINDSAY MIDGETS

That First Period

The game was lost in the first twenty minutes. From the face-off Collins carried the puck in and shot on McClory's pads. The locals kept pressing for a few minutes and kept the play pretty well bottled up. Then the Lindsay forwards broke away and Burgoine was called on to save. The locals were tied up for some time and then the play opened up hard effective, back checking being in order.

Soon after Foley evened it up when he tore in and batted in his own rebound. The crowd went wild and pleaded for another.

Both teams battled hard, but Lawson and Burgoine got in a mix-up at the goal mouth with not a Lindsay man near them and the puck slid into the goal. Soon after Chambers made it 3 to 1 with a nice shot from the side.

Play Grew Earnest.

For the first half of the second period neither team could gain any advantage and the play became more strenuous, heavy, slashing and body checks being indulged in by both sides.

Finally Garnett was penalized and during his absence the locals had about a dozen shots on goal, Foley finally accepting a pass at the goal mouth and quickly batted it in.

Jackson was chased for tripping and was immediately followed by Sheehan and Stoddard. A few minutes before the end of the period Sutton shot a weak one up the ice and it rolled over Burgoine's stick into the goal, putting Lindsay two up once more.

One Each in the Last.

The last period started out with a rush but both teams weakened perceptibly under the strain and the game began to lag. Stoddard was finally benched after inviting the punishment several times. Collins grabbed the puck near the Peterborough end and after a pretty rush rounded the defence and scored.

It was thought for a minute that that goal was going to bring enthusiasm to the players, but they had given nearly all they had in the first two periods.

Bell got a trip to the penalty box. Finally Chambers and Bell got away to a nice combination, the former scoring and putting the game on ice for his team.

GIRLS! A MASS
OF WAVY, GLEAMY
BEAUTIFUL HAIR

Let "Danderine" save and glorify your hair

In a few moments you can transform your plain, dull, flat hair. You can have it abundant, soft, glossy and full of life. Just get at any drug or toilet counter a small bottle of "Danderine" for a few cents. Then moisten a soft cloth with the Danderine and draw this through your hair taking one small strand at a time. Instantly, yes, immediately, you have doubled the beauty of your hair. It will be a mass, so soft, lustrous, fluffy and so easy to do up. All dust, dirt and excessive oil is removed.

Let Danderine put more life, color, vigor and brightness in your hair. This stimulating tonic will freshen your scalp, check dandruff and falling hair, and help your hair to grow long, thick, strong and beautiful.

KEEPING SPAIN NEUTRAL.

Did Spain at one time plan to enter the war as an ally of Germany? The question is not of great importance now, but it is of no small interest, and recently documents have been published indicating that Spain was about to take the plunge. Spain's attitude for several years was widely discussed, and there was a consensus that her sympathies were with Germany. About King Alfonso's feelings there was much controversy. It was known that his favorite haunt in pre-war days was France, and that he had much admiration for the French people. The fact that his wife was an English woman might incline him to the cause of the Allies; and again it might have a directly contrary effect. Again it was said on what appeared to be good authority that the war was never discussed in his presence. After the armistice a statement was given out to the effect that as soon as the war began King Alfonso sent a message to the French that they could remove all their troops from their southern frontier in the certain knowledge that they need fear no aggression from Spain. Not long ago Alfonso visited Paris and publicly showed his deep satisfaction that the Allies had triumphed. So far as the King of Spain is concerned the evidence shows him a pro-Ally.

But there were other important factors that were pro-German. The church in Spain was sympathetic to Austria. The army had been built on the German model and among the high officers there was a belief in Germany's invincibility. The aristocracy's attitude was given by the church and the army. The middle classes were probably making money out of the war. Germany was spending vast sums with them. Great numbers of the poorer people, too, permitted the church to do their thinking for them. A staunch pro-Ally element was that of the "intellectuals" and the Socialists. These people saw clearly enough that the struggle was between freedom and autocracy, and knew that a victory for Germany would put back the hands of the clock of human progress all over the world. The most brilliant Spanish writer of the century, Ibanez, was a passionate pro-Ally, and has to his credit the most powerful novel dealing with the war in any language. It is as well a terrific indictment of Germany.

All these facts are familiar to the public. The new evidence is supplied in a letter by Admiral Decker, of the United States navy.

Admiral Decker believes that if the United States had not entered the war Spain would have plunged in to help Germany. Her motive was not sympathy for Germany so much as a desire to stand well with the victor, and as long as she picked Germany as the winner this danger remained. Entry of the United States caused her to hesitate, and it was the duty of those in charge of Allied propaganda to fill up the newspapers with propaganda showing that Germany had no chance with the tremendous weight of America tossed into the scales. The Press Bureau claims that there was not a German lie it was not able to expose the day after it was published. Opposed to the Allied propaganda was a German fund which spent an average of $4,000,000 a year in Spain, and we have an idea that $4,000,000 a year would go a long way with Spanish public opinion. Shortly before the United States came in, according to a gentleman who worked under Admiral Decker, a mobilization of Spanish troops was ordered at Burgoes, only a few miles from the French frontier. To this it may be said that the news is so startling that it is difficult to believe.

But the vital factor in the crisis was not the press bureau, but a bullfighter, Belmonte, the most famous toreador in Spain, who was known to have pro-Ally sentiments. On his return from a triumphal tour of several South American countries, the Press Bureau secured an interview from him in which he flatly came out as a friend of the Allies. The interview, having good news value, was telegraphed all over Spain. It had greater weight with the Spanish people, says the American propagandist, Mr. F. J. Marion, of Miami, than if the King had given it.

Bends, but Cuts Glass.

An American steel company, making all grades of electric tool steels, announces that it has produced an alloy chisel steel which can be made so hard that it will cut glass, yet may be bent by being hammered over the edge of an anvil.

Deserving of Reward.

We are to be rewarded, not only for work done, but for burdens borne, and I am not sure but that the brightest rewards will be for those who have borne burdens without murmuring.—Andrew Bonar.

Capital Reflections.

The pronoun "I" and the interjection "O" are better written without using a capital. Let "U" be added and it signifies that the writer has no capital at all.—Boston Transcript.

Not Flattering.

"You must have said something dreadful to Mr. Bestseller." "I merely suggested that he hire the fellow who got up his advertisements to write his books for him."

Tip for Employers.

AUSTRALIAN CATTLE KING.

He Started His Career as a Cowboy.

A correspondent of the New York Tribune writing from Adelaide, South Australia, tells a surprising story of Sidney Kidman, the Australian cattle king, as follows:—

"A rough diamond," Sidney Kidman is our most picturesque millionaire, a man who started a long way behind scratch and has won a fortune. He probably owns more of the British Empire than any other man, but he has the careless, unassuming, fuss detesting personality indigenous to the Australian bush.

Sidney Kidman is one of the most democratic millionaires in the world. He is a big child of nature, absolutely unspoiled by great luck and great wealth. He will tell you, as a fact, that he owns or controls 48,000 square miles of Australia, spread over six states; that he has 250,000 head of cattle and 20,000 horses, as a rough estimate, which might miss a thousand or two either way, and he does not mind people knowing what his railway bill for stock traffic comes to in a year.

Australia regards Sidney Kidman as peculiarly her own—a millionaire, a pioneer, a bush statesman, a true democrat, made out of fencing wire and covered all over with bullock hide.

I don't believe Kidman went to school. If he did he was not long enough there to remember it, and certainly what he got left him with no marked educational equipment. He is careless in everything but his business, caring not a flick of a bullock's tail for style or language or dress. A millionaire to-day, Kidman remains the bushman, looks it and cannot possibly get himself out of the habit of looking it.

"I laid out £2 10s. on a horse and hit out toward New South Wales. My first job was at the famous Barrier (Broken Hill, of mining eminence) as a cowboy, and I got 10 shillings a week. On my first job," he says, "I got the sack for asking for more wages after a year or two at the job, and the next work I tackled was among the cattle, earning £1 a week. Some months later I had saved up enough to purchase a bullock team, and did carting out in the back country. I sold my working bullocks after a time, went to Cobar and opened a butcher shop. I bought some more bullocks and bought sugar, tea and other rations, which I sold to the miners and made a bit in profit.

"By and by I got rid of the butchering business because I could not get the cattle. I started droving in real earnest when my brother got me, at 25 shillings a week, to take a mob to Adelaide. I suppose I must have been twenty-two when I arrived back and received then my share of £400 or £500 out of my grandfather's fortune. It was a big sum to me in those days, and off I went to the Darling and bought a mob of horses. I brought them to the market and got £20 a head."

The great silver mines of Broken Hill were "beginning to move along," as the cattle king puts it, when he was traveling cattle around those wide, drought-held areas. Kidman bought a fourteenth-share for a few poor cattle, but he missed his chance. He sold his mine share for £100. Six months later that fourteenth share was worth £70,000 and more than £1,000,000 would not purchase it to-day. "The fellows who got it made a fortune. After that little romance I went away to Queensland and bought cattle."

But Sidney Kidman struck the golden trail, too, although not until many years later. You could put the whole of Scotland inside his dominions and then have something left around the edges.

Home of Mocha Coffee.

All the genuine Mocha coffee and the skins known to the trade as mochas come from the Yemen plateau in Arabia. From Sana, the center and capital of this rich and fertile district, to Aden on the coast is about 200 miles, and to Hedeida about 150 miles. Everything is transported on the backs of camels, though a railroad thirty miles long, running from Aden to Lahey, has been opened.

"Writ Sarkastic."

In answer to a question as to whether it is safe to allow a baby and dog to sleep together the health department of the Brooklyn Eagle says: "A child of that age is capable of harboring all sorts of microbes, and she might infect the dog with something so it isn't very safe for the dog. A dog should have a separate bed with a change of sheets every night."

Londoners Are Fighting Serious Plague of Rats

Pests Are Very Prolific

I BELIEVE that everybody realizes that we are up against a rat plague, writes Jack Jarvis, official rat catcher to the London County Council, in Pearson's Weekly. There are more rats in London than ever there were. Why is it? Well, all kinds of reasons have been given, but I think myself the air raids have had something to do with it. There have always been plenty of rats in the disused sewers, and it is very probable that bombs have blown into them and disturbed the vermin.

Then, again, in the past, no systematic effort has been made by the authorities to stem the plague. What's one rat last year is a hundred or two this, and if the matter isn't dealt with we are bound to be overrun with rats sooner or later. They breed so quickly. A single pair may easily have a litter of anything from twelve to eighteen young ten times a year, so that in four years they would establish a family of close on three millions.

Luckily for us this appalling increase is considerably modified by the way in which rats prey on each other, the male rat having a special liking for the blood of his young. The rat is a confirmed cannibal.

The plague is worst in the towns for two reasons. First, it is in the cities that the largest and most attractive supplies of food are kept, and this is what Mr. Rat is after. Secondly, the strongest rats always drive the weaker ones away from a good hunting ground, so that in the towns you are up against the fittest specimens of the vermin — all the heavyweight champions, in fact.

The commonest rat is the dark brown house rat. He frequents the cellars and bottom places of buildings. But of late we have been troubled by a black rat, known as the Norwegian rat, who has come over apparently as a stowaway in neutral barques.

He is rather hard to catch, as he has nothing to do with the basement, but spends all his time in the roofs and running up and down inside of walls and chimneys.

The fiercest kind of rat is the water rat, who frequents the quays and gullies. He is a size smaller than the land rat.

The damage done by rats is terrific, £40,000,000 being the figure recently mentioned in the House of Lords; a national debt in itself. They make war on food-stuffs and clothing, and take a fancy to the most peculiar articles. Here is a story to the point. A lady once discharged several of her servants in rotation, because she thought they had stolen blouses and other articles. One day she discovered she was troubled with rats, and sent for me to clear them out. I took up a portion of the flooring and unearthed from beneath a collection of blouses, shawls, toys, cloths, forks, spoons, and even knives. A fragment of cheese or a trace of jam is sufficient inducement to the rat.

I was once summoned to a brand new building in London. They had rats — and that only a few weeks after the completion of the building.

When a house is being put up workmen leave fragments of their food under the flooring. This attracts rats, and when the house is finished they break their way into it. The brutes get through anything, even a concrete flooring.

A simple thing we rat-catchers use is the stocking-trap. This is merely a heavy iron ring, with a stocking attached half open at the toe end. We place that over a hole—this is done as a rule in the country—and send a ferret in to drive the rats out. They stick in the stocking, and we just lift them out.

It is quite an easy matter to pick up a rat if you know how to do it. You just put your hand quickly in front of his eyes, clap the other over his back, and grasp the skin at the back of his neck with your thumb and forefinger. Caught up like this he is perfectly harmless.

Rat-catching is an art which has fallen into decay, and there are few skilled rat-catchers in London to-day. A trained man can easily round up forty dozen rats in a few hours of darkness.

Age of the World.

"Speculations about geological time vary enormously. Estimates of the age of the oldest rocks by geologists and astronomers starting from different standpoints have varied between 1,600,000,000 and 25,000,000," says H. G. Wells, in his new 'History of the Ages.'

"The lowest estimate was made by Lord Kelvin in 1867. Prof. Huxley guessed at 400,000,000 years. There is a summary of views and the grounds upon which the estimates have been made in Osborne's 'Origin and Evolution of Life'; he inclines to the moderate total of 100,000,000. It must be clearly understood by the reader how sketchy and provisional all these time estimates are. They rest nearly always upon theoretical assumptions of the slenderest kind. That the period of time has been vast, that it is to be counted by scores and possibly by hundreds of millions of years, is the utmost that can be said with certainty in the matter.

"Most geologists are in agreement that half or more than half of the whole of geological time had passed before life had developed to the Later Paleozoic level."

Harnessing Ocean Tides.

Practical experiments to determine the possibility of harnessing ocean tides for the production of electric power will be conducted by the French Government.

A Canton, O., man had to marry before Feb. 1 to inherit $50,000 left by his brother. He advertised and had no difficulty in selecting a bride from the 150 answers received.

TYPIST DID NOT TIRE AS SPEED INCREASED

DID 28,200 WORDS IN SIX HOURS AT MILITARY ENQUIRY — HOLDS MANY MEDALS

What is claimed to be the world's record for long endurance in speed typing was achieved by Arthur Hanrahan, Toronto, at the inquiry into military accounts, which closed in St. Catharines on Saturday. At this inquiry Hanrahan wrote to the dictation of Thomas Bengough's, Toronto's veteran court reporter, at a speed of over seventy words a minute for over six hours, completing in that time ninety-four foolscap pages containing 300 words each. Deducting time lost in adjusting the paper, inserting it and removing it from the machine, the net speed figures out at about 100 words a minute.

Some idea of Hanrahan's speed may be gleaned from the fact that it is considered a good day's work for a fast typist to write sixty sheets of foolscap, allowing eight hours to the day, whereas in six hours Hanrahan completed ninety-four pages.

Hanrahan, who is not yet 22 years old, is the holder of seven medals for fast typing. In 1916 he won the Canadian championship for speed, when he averaged 105 words a minute for a period of half an hour, and this record has not yet been wrested from him; he is also the Canadian champion in accuracy. Writing for a period of half an hour he recently established another record of 126 words a minute, and on occasions hit up 260 words in two minutes.

Admiralty Red Tape.

Admiral Scott, discussing Admiralty red tape, relates this amusing anecdote in the London Times: "When I was in charge of the defence of London I wanted some guns; I knew that Lord Kitchener had some that he could spare; so I went over to the War Office and asked him for some; he said that he thought I could have them, but would let me know for certain in half an hour. In a quarter of an hour he telephoned to me that I could have them. I thought that it would be only polite if the Admiralty thanked him, so I sent a chit down to the secretary submitting that such a course might be taken. In a commercial house the secretary would have called in a shorthand writer and dictated to him: 'I am commanded by their lordships the Commissioners of the Admiralty to thank, etc., he would have signed it and Lord Kitchener would have received it in an hour. How did the secretary deal with it? He dealt with it according to the Admiralty custom. My request was put in a docket and passed round to all the Lords of the Admiralty and most of the heads of departments for their opinions; it was marked 'Immediate,' so it only took six days. Here was a waste of time and labor, and we were at war. As this is a fair sample of how business is done at the Admiralty no wonder Walter Long found the staff tired."

Flint Pebbles.

The flint pebble industry gives employment to many women and children along the French coast between Havre and Dieppe. The pebbles collected in and near Havre are selected for their spherical shape, and are used for pulverizing in certain industries, particularly in the manufacture of cement and in copper mines, being employed in the interior of large cylinders.

Title of Viscount.

The title of viscount is next to the lowest in the peerage, being just above that of baron. The name is equivalent of "vice-comes," and was formerly merely the title of a county sheriff. It was never used as a title of nobility until February 12, 1440, when Henry VI made John, Baron Beaumont, "Viscount Beaumont."

Met Fate of the Weak.

It seems that there can be no doubt that the cliff dwellers were exterminated by their more savage and warlike neighbors, the men being killed and the women being adopted into the tribe of the conquerors, though in some cases migrations may have become necessary as a result of drought or pressure from outside tribes.

Great Care Taken of Silk.

Silk is the most costly of all fibers and in the raw state represents a value so great as to be guarded in its transportation like a shipment of bullion. It is shipped from coast to coast in special, solid express trains, under strong guard, the shipments ranging in value from $5,000,000 to $25,000,000.

Fruits of Old.

Many of the fruits and vegetables now eaten in England were almost unknown to our forefathers. Not until Henry VIII's time were raspberries or strawberries or cherries grown in England, and we do not read of the turnip, cauliflower and quince being cultivated before the sixteenth century.

Big Man in His Day.

Goliath, the Philistine giant, must have caused a lot of trouble for the army quartermasters of his day. How did they get a regulation uniform to fit him, for he stood eleven feet three inches in his stocking feet: if, indeed, Philistines of those times wore stockings.—Boston Post.

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

For Colds, Pain, Neuralgia, Toothache, Headache, Earache, and for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuritis, take Aspirin marked with the name "Bayer" or you are not taking Aspirin at all.

Accept only "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in an unbroken "Bayer" package which contains complete directions. Then you are getting real Aspirin—the genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years. Now made in Canada.

Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

LAKEFIELD

(Special Correspondence)

Lakefield, Jan. 28.— On Sunday, February 1st., Rev. Albert Hughes of Toronto will preach in the Lakefield Baptist Church.

Rev. E. W. Mackay, B. D., of Toronto, in the Presbyterian Church on Sunday in the interests of the Forward movement.

The national aspect of the appeal of the Forward Movement was dealt with by the Rev. R. A. Whotton of Colborne, conference organizer of the Methodist National campaign at the Lakefield Methodist Church on Sunday., January 25th.

The attractions for Friday and Saturday, January 30 and 31st, at the Queen Street Theatre are Bessie Love in the film masterpiece "Over the Garden Wall," and the 4th episode of the "Tide of Death" of the serial "The Iron Test."

Mrs. (Dr.) C. Smith spent Tuesday in Peterborough.

Rev. Lintot Taylor, who has been taking the services in St. Johns Church Peterborough, for the past two Sundays, spent a couple of days in the village visiting friends.

Mrs. S. Ridpath of Toronto spent a few days in the village last week visiting relatives.

Mrs. Fred Brown has returned to the village after spending the past few weeks with her mother at Madoc.

Mrs. McKoy of Madoc is visiting her daughter, Mrs. Fred Brown.

Mrs. Jarrell has returned from Spencerville where she has been visiting her parents.

Vestry Meeting.

The annual vestry meeting of St. John's Anglican Church was held in the old church on Monday, Jan. 26th, at 7:30 p.m., with a very good attendance. Rev. Dr. Archbold. rector, in the chair, opened the meeting with prayer and after. the minutes of the two previous meetings were read and approved.

Mr. E. R. Tate was appointed vestry clerk for 1920.

The Churchwarden's financial statement was presented showing receipts for 1919 as $2060.77 with a balance on hand of $45.79. This report was received.

Under Canon No. 23, Dr. Archbald declined to elect a warden, and asked the vestry to elect both wardens this year, which were elected as follows:

Mr. S. White, for People's Warden; Mr. O. A. Langley, Rector's Warden.

An Advisory Committee, consisting of Messrs. E. R. Tate, J. C. Strickland,and George Jackman, were elected.

Messrs. G. Pattrick and J. C. Strickland were reappointed auditors.

Sidesmen were nominated by the rector: Messrs. William Watson, S. Walton, E. Macauley and H. G. Fitzgerald.

People's Sidesmen: Messrs. J. Hahood, B. Marling, G. Ogilvie and F. Lillicrap.

Messrs. W. M. Graham, E. Macauley and Walter Strickland, (Toronto), were elected as lay representatives to the synod.

A vote was taken regarding the matter of the proposed change of the name of the Church, which was submitted to be voted on at the annual meeting of vestries in January, 1920, by the Synod. The result was the parish was opposed to any change being made and instructed their representative that their answer be to that effect.

Mr. G. B. Hilliard was re-appointed treasurer of the parish, and the wardens were given authority to borrow a sum sufficient to pay for extension repairs that have been made.

A vote of tanks was passed to the various parochial organizations, choir and organist for their zealous work during the past year.

The rector, Dr. Archbold, spoke of the excellent work that had been done and thanked the retiring wardens and people for the splendid support they had given him since he became rector and for their many kindnesses and generosity.

A resolution was then carried unanimously to increase the rector's stipend of $200, and requesting him to give up all outside misson work and to devote his entire time to the parish at the earliest possible opportunity.

The vetry clerk was instructed to send a letter of condolence to Mrs. Harvey and son, expressing the loss of the late Mr. Harvey to the parish and sending them the sympathy of the congregation.

The meeting then adjourned.

The Anglican Young People's Association of St. John's Church held a meeting in the Sunday School room on Monday evening. The scheduled program for the evening was a mock trail, which caused much excitement. Several cases were dealt with and a very pleasant evening spent.

A meeting of the Soldiers' News Club was held on Monday at the home of Miss Graham, when the advisability of having a concert in the aid of the Armenian Relief Fund was discussed.

On Monday evening a public meeting was held in the Queen street theatre, when the cost of the Memorial Hall was discussed, also the advisability of suspending the work on the hall until spring. With the present high cost of fuel and the expense of heating, the hall for workmen would amount to several hundred dollars and public opinion seemed strongly in favor of the building being closed, but as far as can be learned, there was no definite outcome of the meeting.

MR. OR MRS. DYSPEPTIC

Get rid of Indigestion and Stomach Worries with "Pape's Diapepsin"

"Really does" put weak, disordered stomachs in order—"really does" overcome indigestion, dyspepsia, gas, heart-burn and sourness due to acid fermentation—that—just that—makes Pape's Diapepsin the largest selling stomach antacid and regulator in the world. If what you eat ferments and turns sour, you belch gas and eructate undigested food or water; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach all such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing—almost marvelous, and the joy is its harmlessness. A box of Pape's Diapepsin tablets costs so little at drug stores too.

Four boys were killed in coasting accidents at Pittsburg.

YOU SEE OTHERS WEARING THEM

The shell rim glasses that you see so many people wearing these days are the very newest idea in eye-glasses, and have become very popular. Dr. Fowler provided for an exceptional demand for these, and has a very large and complete stock, in every style to suit the contour of any face. Look them over; the prices are moderate.

BOARD OF EDUCATION ADOPTS NEW SCHEDULE FOR TEACHERS' SALARIES

Principal of Collegiate and Public School Inspector May Receive as High as $4,000—25 Per Cent. Increase Over 1914 Rate of Pay.

At a special meeting of the Board of Education last night, the following reports of committees were read and adopted. In moving the adoption of the report of the Committee on Appointments, Mr. Cameron explained that the new schedule for teachers' salaries, gave them a 25 per cent increase over their salaries in 1914.

Committee on Appointments.

1.—That the recommendation adopted by the Board, on the 10th of June last, having reference to the salary schedule, be rescinded and that the following schedule be adopted to take effect 1st. January 1920:

	Minimum.	Maximum	Yearly Increase.
Collegiate Institute.
Principal	$3500 00	$4000 00	$100 00
Specialists, who are honor graduates and in charge of a department	2000 00	3000 00	100 00
Assistants not in charge of a department	1800 00	2500 00	100 00
Public Schools.
Inspector	$3500 00	$4000 00	$100 00
Principals	1600 00	2500 00	100 00
Male vice-principals (holders of 1st-class certificates)	1600 00	2000 00	100 00
Male vice-principals (holders of 2nd-class certificates)	1500 00	1900 00	100 00
Lady assistant teachers holding 1st-class certificates and male assistants holding 2nd-class certificates	775 00	1250 00	100 00
Lady assistant teachers holding 2nd-class certificates	700 00	1250 00	100 00
Kindergarten directresses, same as holders of 2nd-class certificates	700 00	1250 00	100 00
Kindergarten assistants half-day classes	(Fixed salary at $600 00)
School nurse	775 00	1250 00	100 00
Manual Training instructor	700 00	1200 00	50 00
Household Science Instructor (full time	800 00	1400 00	100 00
Art instructor	600 00	1000 00	50 00
Music instructor	600 00	1000 00	50 00

It is to be understood that in determining the initial salary, previous successful teaching experience will be given consideration.

2.—That the principal of the Collegiate institute and the inspector of Public schools be paid the minimum under the above schedule dating from the 1st of January and $100.00 annually until the maximum is reached, the first increase to date from the 1st September, 1920.

3.—That the staff of the Collegiate Institute, excepting the principal, receive an increase over their September, 1919, salary of 25 per cent., dating from the 1st of January, 1920, and a further increase, according to schedule, on the 1st of September, 1920, and thereafter annually on the 1st of September until their maximum is reached.

5.—That the lady assistant teachers, except those who became members of the staff in January, 1920, together with the school nurse and Household Science instructor, be given a salary increase of $150.00 to be paid in six monthly instalments, beginning 1st January, 1920, such increase to be over and above the amount which they would have received in January, 1920, under the salary schedule referred to in clause one, and a further salary increase of $100.00, according to schedule on the 1st of September, 1920, and thereafter annually on the 1st of September until their maximum is reached.

6.—That the instructors in Manual Training, art and music, employed jointly by this Board and the Department of Education, receive a double increase from the 1st of January, 1920, and a further increase of $50.00, according to schedule on the 1st of September, 1920, and thereafter annually on the 1st of September until their maximum is reached.

7.—That Mr. F. W. Miller be appointed school attendance officer from the 1st of January, 1920, at an annual salary of $500.00, payable in ten equal monthly instalments.

8.—That the basis rate, per class room, up to and inclusive of 8 rooms, paid to janitors, be increased to $120.00, dating from the 1st of January, 1920.

9.—That the salary of the secretary-treasurer be $1000.00 per annum, dating from the 1st January, 1920, with an annual increase of $100.00 until a maximum of $1200.00 is reached.

Supervision Committee.

To the Chairman and Members of the Board of Education:

Gentlemen, — Your Supervision Committee beg to report and recommend as follows:

1.—That 10 additional typewriters be purchased for the Commercial Department of the Collegiate Institute, together with the necessary stands and also one filing cabinet.

2.—That an office assistant be appointed as soon as possible at the Collegiate Institute.

The Profit Tax.

The Business Profits War Tax expired on January 1, 1920. During the four years the tax has been in force, it has provided the major share of receipts from war taxes. Including 1919—returns for which are not yet available—the estimated yield of the tax since its inception is in the neighborhood of one hundred million dollars. For the four years, the revenue has been:

1916-17	$12,506,000
1918-19	32,970,000
1919-20 (estimated)	30,000,000
Total	$96,747,000

The tax was imposed on a sliding scale and designed to strike at big profits. From a rate of 25 per cent. on business profits between 7 and 15 per cent., the tax reaches as high as 75 per cent. on profits in excess of 25 per cent. Although, in view of war conditions, objection to the tax has not hitherto been made, manufacturers held that it hinders expansion of industries. In fact, in his last budget speech, Sir Thomas White took up this point. "Our business profits taxation," he said, "unless repealed as soon as war conditions terminate, must have an adverse influence upon the investment of money in business enterprise in Canada."

The Government's policy in regard to continuance or discontinuance of the tax is not likely to be announced before the budget speech. Then, if considered advisable (as has been done before) the tax can be renewed. The suggestion is made that, instead of renewing the business profits tax, the Government might make provision under the income tax for further taxation of corporations. In any event, there is evident need for revenue. Before the war, the great debt of the Dominion stood at $336,000,000. It now stands at $1,800,000,000. Immediately before the war, interest charges on the national debt were under thirteen million dollars. For the present year, they are estimated at $115,000,000.

GLASS OF SALTS CLEANS KIDNEYS

IF YOUR BACK HURTS OR BLADDER BOTHERS YOU, DRINK LOTS OF WATER

When your kidneys hurt and your back feels sore, don't get scared and proceed to load your stomach with a lot of drugs that excite the kidneys and irritate the entire urinary tract. Keep your kidneys clean like you keep your bowels clean, by flushing them with a mild, harmless salts which removes the body's urinous waste and stimulates them to their normal activity. The function of the kidneys is to filter the blood. In 24 hours they strain from it 500 grains of acid and waste, so we can readily understand the vital importance of keeping the kidneys active.

Drink lots of water—you can't drink too much; also get from any pharmacist about four ounces of Jad Salts; take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast each morning for a few days and your kidneys will act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and has been used for generations to clean and stimulate clogged kidneys; also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer is a source of irritation, thus ending bladder weakness.

Jad Salts is inexpensive; cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which everyone should take now and then to keep their kidneys clean and active. Try this, also keep up the water drinking, and no doubt you will wonder what became of your kidney trouble and backache.

Coal production has been so rapid that several mines in western and northwestern fields have shut down for lack of orders.

ARMISTICE!

Constipation, Headache, Colds, Biliousness, Surrender to "Cascarets"

Bring back peace. Enjoy life! Your system is filled with liver and bowel poison which keeps your skin sallow, your stomach upset, your head dull and aching. Your meals are turning into poison, gases and acids. You can not feel right. Don't stay bilious or constipated. Feel splendid always by taking Cascarets occasionally. They act without griping or inconvenience. They never sicken you like Calomel, Salts, Oil or nasty, harsh Pills. They cost so little too—Cascarets work while you sleep.

copper wire. At thirty-five cents per lb, this will cost $1,190.00 To have a satisfactory alarm circuit it is very necessary that the old worn out iron wire be replaced by copper wire. Some of the tap bells in use are in a condition beyond repair, and I am asking for six new ones.

In 1918 we purchased sixteen uniforms and in 1919 six uniforms. The six were for the four additional men required for the platoon system and two for the two men who were engaged upon their return from overseas. Thus, we have in stock at present two uniforms, beside those that are in service. For the regular staff (16 men) who were on the department previous to the platoon system, no uniforms have been purchased since 1918. Winter uniforms were ordered in the fall of 1929, leaving us without a 1910 issue. I must request that an additional pair of trousers be purchased in order to make the 1918 summer uniforms last out the summer of 1920. These are the only uniforms I am asking for this year.

We have in stock about 6,350 feet of first class fire hose, with 134 feet that are no longer fit for the fire service and can be turned over to the Board of Works for use on the streets. I am not asking for more hose this year, owing to the increases in cost of other essentials.

Included in last years estimate was two smoke helmets. I am repeating this request this year. Two new nozzles of a very necessary variety are requested. One of our ladders is in such a condition that I fear to ask men to use it, especialy with a loaded line, and I am asking for the new 27 foot trussed wall ladder, at a cost of about seventy-five dollars.

A new automobile to be used as a Chief's car is also asked for. Two of the older horses (Roy and Bill) have outlived their period of usefulness on the fire department, and I would like them sold and a new team purchased. The difference between the cost of a new team and the price we would probably receive for the old team is estimated at $300.00.

I also would like to have the Foamite Firefoam tanks purchased. This is a new chemical fire-fighting device. I might say that in my estimation it is the best. I had it demonstrated here for two days. The demonstrator used a pan 4'x10'x3" deep Into this he poured five gallons of gasoline and oils After this was ignited we tried out our acid and soda extinguishers, but they only increased the fury of the flame. With Firefoam the flame was entirely subdued in about sixty seconds. I would strongly recommend that two of these tanks be purchased.

There is also a request for six electric hand lanterns. In fighting fire in a building where there is dense smoke the old oil lanterns are practically useless. When the supply of oxygen becomes depleted the lantern goes out and men are sometimes left in a very dangerous predicament. The electric lantern is not depending upon the oxygen supply, and therefore gives service under all conditions.

Respectfully submitting the above,
I am, Sirs,
Your obedient servant
GEO. GRANGE
Chief of Fire Department.

AFTER EATING PLAY SAFE

It Is a Wise Precaution to Take a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet After Eating to Avoid Gas, Sour Risings, Heaviness, and the Lazy, Logy Feeling So Apt to Follow.

The range of food is so great, its preparation varies so widely, that

Few stomachs are strong enough to grapple with all conditions of restaurants, hotels, clubs, depots and banquets. The safe plan is to be provided with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, that you may eat rich and palatable food served or selected and not be troubled with gas, sour risings or such forms of indigestion. These tablets digest food, they assist the stomach secretions and, for this reason people who travel away from home and must eat as it is served may play safe by taking one or two Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after each meal.

You can get these tablets in any drug store anywhere in the United States or Canada, which shows in what general favor they are among those who have learned how to enjoy their meals.

"MAN-POWER."

A man rowing does one-third as much work as an ox ploughing.

An ox ploughing does a little more than half the work of an average cart-horse hauling a ton of coals.

A camel carrying five hundred pounds on its back is nearly equal to two average horses.

An elephant, which will bear a load of half a ton or lift a log of teak of the same weight, is worth in muscular power rather more than three good camels.

The lion, usually known as the King of Beasts, is by no means the strongest. Its strength is estimated at that of six men only; while that of a full-grown Indian tiger is a third greater.

Neither of these animals is equal in muscular power to the bear tribe, of which the Polar and the grizzly are the strongest. A grizzly weighing about one thousand pounds has been seen to carry a steer weighing eight hundred pounds up a steep mountain-side for over half a mile. Its strength is at least twice that of a lion.

A gorilla four-feet-six in height and weighing 155 pounds has the strength of four strong men. It can bend double a pair of twelve-bore gunbarrels in its hands.

The African buffalo and the Indian gaur—or wild ox—are the two largest and most powerful of the buffalo tribe. It is doubtful if twelve men could hold a gaur, which stands as much as six feet high, and is over eight feet in length.

The only other wild animals which are stronger than the gaur—always excepting the wild elephant—are the rhinoceros and the hippopotamus. The latter, when speared, has successfully resisted the combined efforts of twenty-two natives to pull it out of the water on to dry land.

The largest and by far the strongest of warm-blooded creatures is the whale. A right whale of the estimated weight of sixty tons has towed for a whole day a steamer of one hundred and twenty horse-power, with the full force of its engines working against it. Its strength is therefore at least equal to a regiment one thousand strong.

He Wanted Prices.

"This catalogue is no good," said a man visiting the Toronto Art Museum, according to a story that has reached us. "There aren't any prices in it." "What?" said his wife. "You weren't thinking of buying any?" "Certainly not," replied the complainer. "But how can you be expected to appreciate pictures if you don't know the prices of them?"

: : AT THE GRAND : :

Chock-a-block with tuneful music, crowded to the brim with dancing, and served in a sparkling manner by a company of fun-makers who never seem to tire of their work, but rather lend to it a spirit of mutual enjoyment, is "Watch Your Step," Irving Berlin's international syncopated musical success, which will be the attraction at the Grand tonight, and its bewitching influence will give the audience one of the treats of the theatrical season.

There is an intoxicating "something" about "Watch Your Step" that savors of the best the stage has produced in musical shows in a long time. It has a wealth of harmony of the sort that makes you want to join in the singing, or dance, or whistle the tunes. Its comedy is rich and its story amusing. It just seems to carry itself along with a dash and a verve that are irresistible.

The score of principals carry along the story to its finale in a way that makes the audience out front sit back and enjoy to their full the complications, counterplots and all the other things that go to make up a good musical comedy.

A large chorus of the most beautiful girls that have ever left New York to travel with a musical organization add much to the jollity of the performance. There are many songs in the score that will haunt one, even as did countless other famous hits that have passed into stage history.

: : AT THE EMPIRE : :

A drama of the north woods, vibrant in vigorous action, is offered at the Empire Theatre in "The Brute Breaker," a Universal release with Frank Mayo and Kathryn Adams in the starring roles.

The story deals with one Louis Grantaire, who inherits a vast woodland estate at the death of his father. Posing as an ordinary lumber-jack, he goes into the camps to rid them of the bullying element that has given the game a black reputation.

In the first camp Grantaire found a bully of the worst type. He thrashed him and sent him slinking off into the woods. At the second and third camps he found other cowards who prey upon the weak.

Affairs go rushingly for Grantaire until he meets pretty Annette, a girl of the woods. He loves her desperately, but she scorns his pleas and sends him away; beaten for the first time; but the climax, which is fast and dramatic, is satisfactory to the spectators.

The scenes for "The Brute Breaker" were made for the most part in the shadow of Mount Shasta, in northern California.

YOUNG TURKS STRONG

MOVEMENT MAY BECOME SERIOUS MENACE.

Program Directed Against the Allies, Especially the Greeks and Armenians — Organization Aims to Maintain the Integrity of Ottoman Empire and to Increase Its Power.

THE Young Turk Nationalist movement is daily increasing and seriously threatens not only the Christian population of the interior of Turkey, but also the allied military contingents which are scattered over the country. The program of these Turks has been carefully elaborated in a congress recently held at Sivas, at which the following decisions were arrived at:

1. To maintain what is called the integrity of the Ottoman Empire; not to cede any territory to Armenia nor those states which are in course of formation, nor to allow the Allies to occupy any of their territory to prevent massacres and plunders.

2. To expel the Allies from all territory which they actually occupy and refuse the payment of any taxes to the central government.

3. To open up new banks and compel the population to withdraw all money which they have deposited in banks; to issue no paper money and withdraw what is in circulation at present by the Ottoman bank.

4. To organize an army, arm the Turks, Kurds, and other Mohammedan population with arms and munitions, cut off the telephone lines with Constantinople and recognise Kemal as head of the Government, with headquarters at Erzeroum.

5. To co-ordinate the operations of the Turkish army with those of the Tartar army in the Caucasus.

This program is directed, not only against the Allies, but especially against the Armenians and Greeks. It has, moreover, the moral and material support of the Turkish authorities at Constantinople, who are seeking co-operation with Kemal. This is testified to not only by reports which reach this office from various quarters, but by a special envoy of the Paris Temps, who says this organization of Anatolia is nothing less than the Turkish army reorganized, notwithstanding the conditions of the armistice, and with the secret assistance of the Turkish Government.

Another report says the Mohammedans are being armed seriously. In the very heart of Constantinople, the European police have made raids and discovered large depots of arms, and stopped ships with bombs, ammunition, firearms, and infernal machines which were imported from Constantinople to the Asiatic coast opposite. European arms, whether they are smuggled or not, are imported from Europe.

Another danger which is impending, and which may play havoc with the country, is the repatriation of 200,000 prisoners of war, who are now interned abroad. The Turkish Government has appropriated 3,000,000 of Turkish pounds to cover the expense of the repatriation of these prisoners. These men will be incorporated in the new military units organized by the Young Turks unless Europe or America steps in and prevents such a calamity.

A recent report from Broussa stated that the men of the twenty-sixth army corps as commanded by Fuad Pasha had joined the insurgent troops. One of these bands has already had a fight with an English contingent. It is considered certain, too, that unless the armies finally organize, Kemal will send troops against Constantinople and the Young Turk Party will then be in full swing.

These facts go to show that the stipulations of the armistice, signed by Turkey in November, 1918, are being systematically violated by the Turks. Lord Robert Cecil declared in the House of Commons a few days after the armistice was signed, that if the Turks ill-treated the Armenians after the armistice was signed, Europe would doubtless intervene to protect them. The immediate protection, he said, of the Armenians could not be disregarded, and the Government had given the matter the most serious consideration. Britain would be exposed to the indignation of her people if new atrocities were perpetrated, since she now has the right and the power to prevent them by military means. If we except 135,000 deported Armenians who were able to settle in Silicia under French and British military protection, not a single Armenian of the remaining Armenian provinces of the interior has been able to return to his home. Murders and atrocities against them continue. In the very heart of Turkey entire armies are in preparation to move against the remnants of the race in Trans-Caucasia. The Armenians ask themselves often if really it is the cause of right and that of the oppressed nations that have triumphed through the ending of this war.

Waiterless Table.

A waiterless table was recently exhibited, says Tit-Bits. Miniature electric railways, somewhat on the principle of the cash carrier, connect each table in a restaurant with the kitchen. The guest writes his order and drops it into a slot on the table. A kitchen attendant places the dishes which the patron has ordered on the proper train, which stops automatically at the patron's table. The used dishes are put on the train by the guest, and they are whisked back to the kitchen.

Nigeria Coal.

The coal mined at Udi, Nigeria, is said to have calorific value of 75 per cent. of that of the best Welsh coal. Last year about 110,000 tons were mined at Udi.

Woman Visits Peace Conference

CURIOUSLY enough it is one of the most ancient of living races that has been the first to show supreme confidence in a woman by sending her as its sole representative to plead its cause before the entente powers. Lady Surma d'Mar Shimun, who is now in London, comes to ask that the Assyrian Christians of Turkey in Asia and of Persia, most of them now living in exile at Bakhoubah, under British protection, may be allowed to continue under that protection and that their lands and homes may be restored to them.

From Lady Surma herself and from Dr. Wigram, the writer of that interesting book, "The Cradle of Mankind," the representative of the Christian Science Monitor heard the story of the Assyrian Christians.

Her story begins at Qudshanis, a mountain village in Kurdistan, to the south of a line drawn between Lake Van and Lake Urumiyah. Here her brother, Mar Shimun, held his homely court as patriarch, spiritual and temporal ruler of his people, an office that had been in his family for nearly four centuries, descending from uncle to nephew. He became patriarch at the age of 14 and even then had sufficient firmness of character to refuse to appoint to an important office a candidate whom he considered unsuitable.

Receiving taxes from his people and remitting the allotted amount to the Sultan, Mar Shimun was a real ruler; every day he adjudicated in cases sent to him from lower courts, and during the year thousands of Assyrians or men of other races received hospitality at his home. Chivalrous, just, and generous, and gifted with a keen sense of humor, he was the type of mountain chieftain that Sir Walter Scott would have loved, and he was held in high esteem not only by the Christians but by his Kurdish neighbors. He was not much more than 24 when war broke out. The Turkish governor at Van sent for him, offering him practically anything he liked—beginning with a fine educational grant—if he would throw in his lot with the Turks.

"I must consult my chiefs," said Mar Shimun and pointed out that already Christians in Van were being persecuted. During the two months that followed, refugee Christians brought to Qudshanis fresh tales of persecution. The position was serious. All around them were enemies, and the nearest of the Allies, the Russians, entering Persia, were far away. If they refused the Turkish offer, the Christians risked lands and homes and lives. Mar Shimun sent his answer. "You have called a jehad. It is impossible for Christians to join with you. We have other recourse. We will fight."

The five independent Assyrian tribes — who paid taxes to Turkey when they felt inclined—were armed with indifferent weapons, the scattered Christians were less well provided, but they fought and when driven into the mountain strongholds where no human being can live in the winter, they took the women and children with them, and held those strongholds for three months. The Russians had promised them 4,000 guns, and when the ammunition was almost exhausted Mar Shimun with two servants made a desperate journey at night through the enemy lines to ask that these guns might be sent. After a five nights' journey he reached the Russian headquarters.

"I cannot spare you a single trooper," said the commander-in-chief. "You had better remain here." Refusing to stay one night in safety, Mar Shimun returned to the Assyrians, who by this time had little food, no salt, and only a few cartridges left for each rifle, and they began their perilous retreat to the Russian lines in Persia. Here they were distributed among various villages.

After the Russians retreated (after the revolution) they were in a worse plight than ever—Mar Shimun having been shot down—the Christians still held firm, and under the leadership of a man whose record, says Mr. Wigram, "had been picturesque rather than respectable," they gallantly defended themselves. He led them in 14 successive and successful actions against the Turks.

All this time they had no news of the Allies, until one day an airplane flew overhead, and was welcomed by the Assyrians. He told them guides were waiting 150 miles away to lead them to Bagdad and safety.

They reached the appointed spot, and were met by their new guides, who conducted them on the much longer trek to Bagdad, a journey less dangerous, indeed, but still beset with difficulties. Of the 70,000 who set out 50,000 reached Bagdad. The British had made arrangements for them to go into a refugee camp at Bakhoubah, arrangements that seemed to those desolate exiles marvelous in their comfort and the perfection of their sanitation.

Now the question is what is to happen to those refugees. They asked leave to send a deputation to Paris and London to lay their wishes before the Peace Council, and they were told that as so many delegations were coming they could only send one person. The choice of the combined Assyrians, those from Asiatic Turkey and those from Persia, fell upon Lady Surma, a woman educated in her girlhood by Dr. Browne, of the Archbishop's Assyrian Mission. She came to ask that her people may live henceforth under their own patriarch and under British protection, and that if possible they may be restored to their beloved mountains, and put in possession of those lands which might still be theirs had they not remained loyal to their faith and to their Allies.

A mother and fater, divorced, forgot differences long enough to accompany two daughters to the courthouse at Jeffersonville, Ky., and give them away in marriage.

THE STABLE IN WINTER

Keep Your Dairy Cows Comfortable and Clean.

Spray the Place With Whitewash—Add Some Germ-killer — Fill In All Broken Window Panes, and Provide Other Ventilation—Care of Plants In Winter.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE period of long, cold winter is here. Of necessity, our milking cows must have special protection from the cold, and at the same time must be made as comfortable as possible.

The whole of the inside of the stable should have a thorough cleaning. The dust and cobwebs should be swept from the walls, ceiling and windows; the windows should be thoroughly cleaned, also the mangers and stalls. Then spray whitewash all over the inside, except the windows. To the whitewash add some disinfectant such as a carbolic acid preparation, or a chloride germ-killer. This will kill disease germs, lurking in dark, damp places and maintain the health of the animals, which is at the foundation of profitable milk production.

The next step is to put in all broken window lights, but where the owner thinks he cannot afford to buy glass at the present high prices, a piece of coarse cloth, such as an old sack, may be tacked over the window space. This will provide some ventilation in a stable not otherwise ventilated.

Cow stables need ventilation in winter by having the foul air removed and fresh air introduced without a draft directly on the cows. A simple way to do this is to hinge all windows at the bottom and allow them to open inward, so as to shoot the air toward the ceiling. There should be a V-shaped board at each side or end of the window, to prevent the side-draft. Foul air outlets should extend below the ceiling of the stable, and preferably have two inlets for foul air—one near the floor and one at the ceiling, as in this way the foul air is removed without cooling the stable too much, by simply closing the top outlet. No system of cheap ventilation works automatically. They all require some attention.

Other points in stable preparation are to have all ties secure so that a cow may not get loose; repairs to mangers and gutters should be made so that they may be kept clean and sanitary without too much labor. Litter and feed carriers are great savers of labor in looking after a herd of milkers during the winter.

In a word, make the cows comfortable and lessen the labor of stabling cows by having them sanitary and convenient, with as many helps as possible in the form of machinery.—Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

Care of Plants In Winter.

Water growing pot plants only when they need it, then water them thoroughly. When the soil begins to get dry and powdery on the surface, or when the pot is tapped with the knuckles or a knife handle and it emits a ringing sound, the plant requires water. Give sufficient water so that it runs out through the bottom of the pot. Water plants in the morning in cold weather, not at night. Use tepid rain water, or water that has been exposed to air and sun for a day or two, if possible. The water should be lukewarm, about 50 to 60 degrees F. in winter.

Humidity in the atmosphere is one of the main requirements to be successful with plants indoors. Place pans or saucers of water on the heaters or registers. A steaming kettle or pot of water on the stove is a great help in this respect.

When the pots become full of roots, or where the soil is poor, worn out or exhausted, liquid fertilizers can be given plants. The soil should be moist, not dry, or very wet, when the fertilizer is applied. There are several good plant foods sold at seed stores. "Sterling Worth Plant Tablets" or "Bonora" are both good. Half an ounce of nitrate of soda dissolved in a little warm water first, and cold water added to make one gallon, also makes a fairly good fertilizer for pot plants. Apply once every week or ten days.

Spraying with water will help keep down insect pests. A fine spray thoroughly applied to all parts of the plant is necessary to be effective. Plants having very rough hirsute foliage, should not be sprayed or sponged, especially in winter, only the plants having glossy, glabrous foliage. Insect pests increase and thrive best in a dry, warm atmosphere. For aphis or green lice, white fly, red spider and thrip, "Sulpho-Tobacco Soap" is a good remedy. Black Leaf 40 is also a good remedy for most insect pests on house plants. Soapy water or a solution of whole oil soap and tobacco water are beneficial for scale insects on plants.

Slake about one-half pound of fresh lime in a pail of water, allow it to settle. Give about a teacupful of this solution once or twice to each plant suffering from earth worms.

Put frozen plants in a dark place at once, temperature about 45 degrees F. Do not touch the leaves. Sprinkling with ice cold water is beneficial.—W. Hunt, O. A. College, Guelph.

A Chat About Chickens.

In very cold weather to make the hen comfortable and to keep her in good condition feed (a little at a time, but often, in dry straw or other litter) some kind of mixed grain.

Milk to drink, or about a pound of meat or its equivalent in beef scrap each day, is required to supply material for the building of the egg white for twenty hens.

In an effort to rescue his wife from a Turkish harem, where she has been a captive for four years, Asadour Derboghes, an Armenian, of Racine, Wis., will sail for Turkey.

Heat Bursts Gravel.

The bureau of standards has found that if the concrete is made with gravel, particularly siliceous gravel, there is a tendency for the stones to burst in extreme heat, which disintegrates the concrete. Accordingly it is recommended that gravel be avoided wherever possible, but if impossible the gravel concrete may be protected from extreme heat by coating it with an inch of cement, held in place by a wire mesh. Plasters may also be used in which asbestos is the principal constituent.

Honor Not All Gutenberg's.

Printing is said to have been introduced to the world Aug. 14, 1437. John Gutenberg stands at the head of the early typographers, supported by the genius of Schoeffer and the generous patronage of Faust. Gutenberg used only blocks, and to Schoeffer is due the movable type cast from matrices. Caxton, who introduced the art into England, began life as a trader, but learned printing at Cologne. The first printed book on record is "The Psalter," which John Faust and Schoeffer published at Metz in 1437.

"TOGS" AND TEMPERAMENT.

Male Fashions Are Governed by Personal Opinions.

It is a remarkable fact that men dress according to their opinions, whilst women dress merely to keep pace with the fashion. A woman's dress signifies nothing. A man dresses either according to his opinions or his profession.

Why does a Bolshevik wear a red tie? Why are anarchists always recognised on the "pictures" by their long, pointed moustaches and Van Dyke beards? Women are not logical in their dress in this way. The woman who would faint if you killed a mouse before her eyes will wear feathers which have meant the torture of birds, and furs to which the deaths of fifty "little beasts" have contributed. Fashion demands it, and she obeys.

But an artist of the modern school, whose pictures might be indifferently labelled "Portrait of a Lady" or "A Sunset at the North Pole," gives himself away all the time by the dish-cloth he wears at his neck. He would instantly cease to be an artist if he swopped ties with a stockbroker.

On the contrary, the artist of the old school, who paints recognizable trees and water and people and cowsheds, always wears a velvet jacket. Why he does this nobody knows, but it is so.

There are fashions in hair. The woman wears it bobbed or on top, or stuck full of combs, because the other women wear it thus. But an actor wears his hair on his collar because he thinks he ought, and that it would dishonor his profession if he got his hair cut.

Yes, men's clothes give them away in a style which women's do not. It applies even in the lower walks of life, from which artists and doctors are rigidly excluded.

The Parisian apache is known by the cut of his "togs." The coster of London's East End, in spite of the decay of pearlies, is still instantly recognizable as a coster and nothing else. The man who has to do with horses invariably wears horsy trousers, and a butler is known by the cut of his coat, even when he is not "butling."

DEMPSEY IS THE MAN TO MEET CARPENTIER

SUCH IS THE OVERWHELMING OPINION OF SOLDIER AND CIVILIAN CROWD

Battle Creek, Mich., Jan. 28;—The boxing fans of America and the soldiers now in service prefer a bout between Jack Dempsey and Carpentier to one between Bob Martin and the French champion. At least this was the almost unanimous sentiment expressed by soldiers and civilians attending the Camp Custer bout, probably the first time the question has been put direct to the soldiers and the fans.

Referee E. W. Dickerson, of Grand Rapids, asked which man they preferred as the opponent of Carpentier. There was a babble of voices which left the question in dispute. Then he asked all those who preferred to see Dempsey meet Carpentier to stand up. Practically the entire assembled crowd, about 1,000 stood. He then asked those who preferred to see Martin, A. E. F. champion, meet Carpentier. Only a few, perhaps a twenty-fifth of the crowd arose.

Half Service Men.

The attendance was about evenly divided between soldiers and civilians. From the trend of conversation after the show, it was almost unanimously expresed that Dempsey is at present the logical man and that Martin is not sufficiently groomed. Martin fought here last December, on Pershing Day, and has a strong personal following, which seems to feel that his appearance against Carpentier if supposedly defending the championship would be ill timed.

Referee Dickerson said, that in Grand Rapids, where Martin fought New Year's, he believed the sentiment would be just as strong the other way.

CHURCH MEMBERSHIP GROUP IN AMERICA

NEARLY THREE MILLION NEW MEMBERS IN UNITED STATES SINCE 1916

New York, Jan. 28;—America's Churches have gained nearly three million members since the last Church census was taken in 1916, but there has been a marked decrease in the number of Sunday Schools and Sunday School pupils, according to "The Year Book of the Churches," which will be issued tomorrow by the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

More Organizations.

The total Church membership has increased 2,779,667, the announcement says, despite the disturbed social conditions due to reconstruction. There has also been an increase of 3,519 Ministers and 5,350 Church organizations. The total number of churches now stands at 233,834 and there are 195,543 ministers, priests and rabbis, with 44,709,521 members of their various denominations. The decrease in Sunday School membership is estimated at more than 3,500,000.

The total Protestant Church membership is given at 25,980,456, and the Roman Catholic figures as 17,549,324. It is explained that the Protestant figures include only adult communicant members of a family, while the Roman Catholic statistics represent the entire family. Estimating four persons to a family, the Protestant constituency would be more than 50,000,000, the book says.

Mormon Membership.

An estimate of members of Jewish synagogues is 260,000, and the two Mormon bodies report a membership of 494,388.

The largest Protestant body reporting was the Methodist Episcopal Church, with 4,175,502 members, and the smallest the Primitive Friends, with fifty members and two ministers. The National Baptist Convention (colored) is the second largest Protestant organization, with 2,938,579.

Besides a raise in salary, Montclair, N. J., School Board will erect a dormitory to house the women teachers.

A CHAMPIONSHIP BOUT WITHOUT A CHAMPION

EITHER STETCHER OR CADDOCK WILL RECEIVE WRESTLING TITLE

Will Earl Caddock, who will return to the matted ring to defend his heavyweight wrestling title against Joe Stecher, Jan. 30, join the so-called wrestling trust, or will he attempt to work on his "own?"

Stecher is a member of the "Big Three," the other two members being Wladeck Zbyszko and Strangler Lewis. The "Big Three" is controlled by the trust, and is practically the whole works in the heavyweight wrestling division. Before entering the service and going overseas, Caddock was considered a "straight" wrestler. He refused to enter into agreements with other mat artists regarding how long a bout was to last, or who was to get the most falls. That this is done there is no denial.

* * *

Caddock held the championship before crossing the big pond, but Lewis Zbyszko and Stecher began eliminating each other to claim the title as soon as Caddock shouldered a musket. Stecher, by virtue of victories over both Lewis and Zbyczko, laid claim to the championship after Caddock had announced his retirement from the sport.

Only recently, however, he declared his return, stating he would defend the title against the most logical contender. Stecher, providing that neither Stecher nor he was billed as a champion, but that the winner would be known as the legitimate title holder.

Thus by this old system a championship bout will be held without an official champion competing.

A prominent wrestling referee was asked how one could determine whether wrestlers were faking.

"You can't" he answered. "I think that one of the biggest matches in which I worked was wrestled the night before. I couldn't prove it, and had nothing on which to base a suspicion except that they did it too well. The first fall, a flying mare was a beauty, and the crowd went wild.

"The winner of the first fall was the loser of the second, succumbing to a punishing headlock with a look of agony that was perfect except that it was too well done. The same chap took the third fall, and they still have me guessing. I've quit the birds. I can't dope 'em"

Rehearsed wrestling matches very often are much better than the real article. Full of fancy holds and action they go great with the crowd. If the fans go to see wrestling matches just as they go to the theatre or the opera to see a good performance they get their money's worth, but an alienist better be called when any want to start betting on the outcome of almost any match.

VISITED THE SOUTH SEAS

VANCOUVER MAN GATHERED MANY VALUABLE RELICS.

Frank Burnett Spent Twenty-five Years of His Life Making One of the Most Valuable Collections in America—He Had His Own Ship and Risked His Life Freely in the Pursuit of His Hobby.

FOR twenty-five years, from his forty-second year until his sixty-seventh, Frank Burnett devoted much time to acquiring the greatest individual collection of things from the South Sea Islands that were most representative of the Polynesian and Papuan people that live on that wondrous stretch of islands scattered along 5,000 miles of way in the South Pacific Ocean. During these twenty-five years he roamed far in search of the treasures which made his collection perhaps the finest on the American continent and the greatest ever collected by one man entirely by personal endeavor in the world pertaining to this particular subject.

Though to-day 67 years of age, and having his home in the Canadian seaport city of Vancouver, he spends about half of his time in the islands. But though he will probably continue to collect rare things until he dies, he has bequeathed this whole magnificent collection to the new University of British Columbia, now under construction on the outskirts of the city of Vancouver.

When completed the university will be one of the finest halls of learning on the Pacific coast. Standing in the centre of an enormous campus in the suburb of West Point Gray, its windows look out over the Gulf of Georgia. And to one of the great rooms in this university in the future will be brought all these varied rare things representative of the varied life of those far flung islands.

To search them out he traveled more than a hundred thousand miles by steamer, small sailing coasting vessel, canoe and on foot. He penetrated into the very heart of the cannibal country, the dangerous Solomons, taking his life in his hands many times to obtain some particularly unique object difficult of acquiring, such as cannibal forks, plates and human meat hooks. These were utensils dedicated to the handling of human flesh alone, for with the cannibals the eating of their kind is accompanied by much ceremonial.

Even twenty-five years ago these utensils were rare and difficult of obtaining. To his great museum, which fills a room as large as the ballroom of a castle, he brought hundreds of spears widely varied in shape and design. There are some barbed with human bones, some edged with sharks' teeth.

Clubs that date back centuries and have taken scores of lives are mingled with the spears that line two walls of the long room. They are of every shape and pattern peculiar to the Polynesian and Papuan people, who inhabit that vast stretch of the Southern Pacific on several thousand islands.

To travel over even a portion of this territory is a labor of years, and though there are some places, of course, Frank Burnett has not gone, his journeyings among these islands have been most thorough and his selection of the objects representative of the various islands has been most careful and complete.

In his museum are human heads taken from bodies that served at cannibal banquets. The heads are both stripped clean and smoked, the latter ornamented in weird designs. There are cabinets filled with countless ornaments, shell money, feather money from Santa Cruz Island, long past out of existence, for the bird they made the money out of has become extinct, and the people themselves have changed. There is money from the Solomons made in the form of rings six inches across, a hundred dollars value of which is more than a man could carry.

Rare tapa clothes hang upon the walls and are piled in cases; mats of difficult weave and marvelously pliable, their texture speaking of the long labor they required.

Frank Burnett himself is quite as interesting as the collection he has made. Born at Peterhead, Scotland, Burnett went to sea at fourteen and experienced much adventure until he was twenty, when he emigrated to Canada. After ten years of business life he became a stock broker, but gave this up to pioneer the new Canadian West, a kind of life dear to his heart. For fifteen years he lived in Manitoba, seeing it change from a wilderness to a prosperous and fertile country. Always fond of new frontiers, he went to British Columbia and became a dealer in lands.

In 1895 he went to the South Seas for the first time on a short trip, when he began his collection. In 1901, to better cover the far reaches of the region, he purchased and outfitted his own ship, the Laurel, an 80-ton ship, and visited the most remote islands in various groups. For fifteen months he voyaged, seeing places seldom by white men visited. On this trip he made a great addition of particularly rare and valuable objects representative of the life in the islands.

Since 1901, he has traveled often to the South Seas, his trips becoming more frequent and more protracted until of late years half his time has been spent in roaming and combing the islands for new things of interest.

WILL FIGHT "JAZZ."

Movement Started to Reform the Modern Dances.

Old-fashioned keep-your-distance dances, are to replace the modern Jazz steps, if the nationwide reform movement undertaken by the American National Association of Masters of Dancing proves successful. The dancing masters, it is announced, count upon the support of mothers, fathers, daughters, sons, dance hall proprietors, dancing teachers and hostesses — and if necessary the police department — to exterminate the "half Nelson," "body hold," "Shimmy lock" and other imported ballroom grips which are practiced by some dancers. Cheap and vulgar music is also to come under the ban and, according to a circular just issued by the association, those in charge of community or public dances are urged to show their opposition to undesirable dances by distributing "You will please leave the ball" cards to those who persist in offending.

The women, it is charged, are often as much to blame as their partners and, in some cases, dance hall proprietors are advised to pick out ten or a dozen objectionable couples and, if a warning is disregarded, to oust them at once.

"You will soon see," the circular reads, "that you have raised the standard of your establishment and that the loss will be more than made up by persons who have respect for you and your dances."

"Dance music should be bright and phrases well divided. Cheap, vulgar music of the extreme 'Jazz' type invites cheap, vulgar meaningless dancing. It is useless to expect refined dancing when the music lacks all refinement, for, after all, what is dancing but an interpretation of music?

"The association has adopted the following tempos, it being impossible, the masters say, to regulate fast dancing:

Waltz ...... 48 measures to minute
Two-step .... 54 measures to minute
One-step .... 66 measures to minute
Fox Trot .... 40 measures to minute

"Dancers should assume a light, graceful position," says the masters. "There should be no jerky half-steps for these cause undesirable variations. Partners should not dance with cheeks close or touching nor should the clasp be tight. 'Neck holds' are positively unpardonable. The gentleman's arm should encircle his partner's waist, his hand resting lightly just above the waist line. The lady's arm should not encircle her partner's shoulders or neck.

"Steps or movements that cannot be controlled should not be taught by dancing teachers. Short side steps, first right, then left, when done continuously, are not conducive to refined dancing and should not be permitted. 'Shimmy dancing,' a shaking or jerking of the upper part of the body while taking short steps or standing still, should not be tolerated.

"The proper dancing step should be the same as a natural walking one except in exhibition dancing, which properly belongs to the stage, not the ballroom. Exceptionally long or short steps are not in good form.

"Dancing should be from the waist down, not from the waist up. Copying of the extremes used on the stage is in bad taste. Remember that the majority of dancers desire to dance according to the best accepted standards, that is, without the slightest trace of offence to dignity or decorum."

Spitsbergen Islands Rich.

The Spitsbergen Archipelago lies in the Arctic Ocean at about the latitude of northern Greenland, and although discovered in 1596, has never been permanently inhabited. Yet its age-long solitude may now be dispelled, for coal and iron have been found in rich deposits. All along the western coast, where the Gulf Stream warms the climate to a surprising mildness, these two minerals are lying in contiguous abundance, and so close to the shore that the ore could be carried in gravity trams. The possibilities of a thriving export trade are obvious, and, in fact, are realized as far as coal is concerned. But from a famous Arctic explorer comes the suggestion that steel be actually made on the spot for marketing in Northern Europe. Despite the month-long Arctic night and the barren isolation of the islands, he pictures the future Spitsbergen as a great steel-manufacturing centre. He points out that life so far above the Arctic Circle need not be drearily monotonous — coal means light as well as heat, while the wireless and the airship could practically always link the workers with the outer world. —Popular Mechanics.

The Philippine Climate.

The climate of the Philippines is one of the best in the tropics, says an exchange. The islands extend from five degrees to 21 degrees north latitude, and Manila is in 14 degrees 35 minutes. The thermometer during July and August rarely goes below 79 or above 85. The extreme ranges in a year are said to be 61 and 97, and the annual mean 81. There are three well marked seasons, temperate and dry from November to February, hot and dry from March to May, and temperate and wet from June to October. The rainy season reaches its maximum in July and August when the rains are constant and very heavy. The total rainfall has been as high as 114 inches in one year.

Rheims Cathedral.

Part of the Rheims Cathedral dates from the thirteenth century, and all of it is ancient. It is not likely that any accounts exist to-day which would show its total cost. To reproduce the cathedral now would cost many millions of dollars, labor and materials being so high. But at the time it was built labor cost but a few cents a day; labor of wonderful skill, far surpassing the quality that could be obtained now.

The Seats of the Mighty.

A certain captain went calling upon the village belle. The old man kept a very vicious housedog, and upon the occasion of the officer's call the dog was untied. When the fearsome canine had finished with the captain the seat of the latter's trousers was missing. His brother officers, joshing him about his predicament, asked if the girl was worth risking his anatomy in that fashion. The captain replied "Maybe not, but I have always been willing to give up my seat to any lady!"—Judge.

Benefits of Walks.

Through a daily walk in the open air, the hair may be made to grow, it is said, and this as a result of improved circulation. The skin may be improved, both in color and texture, if it is, in conjunction with this exercise, properly cleaned. The figure may be greatly improved. These blessings, with the calming of troubled nerves already mentioned, ought to make any woman, young or old, an advocate of this form of exercise.

The First Christmas Cards.

The honor of the Christmas card is ascribed frequently to the late W. C. T. Dobson, an English painter, says an exchange. In December, 1844, a date earlier than that given to any other claim, he was anxious to send some more novel Christmas greeting than that of a letter to a distant friend, and the idea occurred to him to make a little sketch symbolizing the spirit of the season. The sketch depicted in its centre a family party gathered around the Christmas dinner table raising glasses to the health of absent friends. Underneath were the words, "A Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year to You," while on each side was a smaller sketch representing an act of benevolence. Mr. Dobson's card so pleased his recipient that the following year he designed another card, of which he sent lithographed copies to a large circle of friends. Other artists followed his example, and the circle sending out Christmas cards grew wider and wider until an enterprising printer saw there was money in the business, and within a few years from its birth the Christmas card was to be seen in hundreds of shop windows.

Charities Get Profits.

Cinematograph pictures taken on the western front during the year ended July 31 brought in $360,000 to the British War Office Committee, which controls their exhibition.

Since the date mentioned $250,000 has been distributed: $100,000 to British War Office charities; $50,000 to the Canadian Government; $25,000 to Australia, $25,000 to New Zealand, $25,000 to South Africa and $25,000 to India.

All films taken on the various fronts have now been delivered into the possession of the War Office and certain sections to the Canadian Government. All expenses of the committee have been met out of profits, and no charges have been made upon public funds.

Mrs. H. Mills, of Akron, Ohio, has been visiting with Peterborough friends.

COUNTY COUNCIL WILL CO-OPERATE TO BRING DEMONSTRATION FARM HERE

Met This Morning and Adopted the Report of Committee to Strike the Standing Committees for the Year—Asked for Grant for Norwood Fair.

At this morning's session of the County Council the report of the committee to strike the standing committees was adopted. The following are the chairmen of the various committees:

County Property—Mr. Coughlin.
Appointments—Mr. Middleton.
Roads and Bridges—Mr. Squires.
Schools—Mr. Strickland.
Petitions—Mr. Matheson.
Printing—Mr. Brown.
Finance—Mr. Griffith.
Equalization and Assessment—Mr. Scott.
Joint Committee—Mr. Clarke.
Legislation and Railway—Mr. Bullied.
House of Refuge—Mr. Holland.

A committee to deal with the Foley estate was appointed, with Mr. Shaw chairman.

Deputation of Lawyers.

A deputation consisting of Mr. O. LePlant, F. D. Kerr, and Mr. Joseph Wearing was received from the Peterborough Law Association. They asked that the County Council take immediate steps to remedy the bad condition of the accoustics of the court room. They complimented the County Council on the efficient way in which they had restored the court room, but they considered it too bad that the otherwise complete room should be spoiled.

The matter was referred to the property committee with the assurance that some experiments would be carried out to make it possible to hear clearly during court proceedings.

Demonstration Farm.

Messrs. H. G. Webber and M. Smithson of the West Peterborough U. F. O., were present to request the co-operation of the County Council to have the proposed demonstration farm located in Peterborough County. The advantages of such a farm to the young farmers of the district were pointed out, and the Council promised to co-operate to have it located here. They will meet the committee who are working with this end in view, at 5 o'clock Thursday evening.

Norwood Fair.

E. Hawthorne and Col. F. E. Birdsall petitioned the Council for a grant to the East Peterborough Agricultural Society equal to that granted to the Peterborough Exhibition. They pointed out that the Norwood Fair was purely agricultural and was of great benefit to the farmers of the county. Consideration of this was left over for the finance committee.

J. Nevin was reappointed a High school trustee for Norwood.

Will Ask City Council for Appropriation of $157,700 to Carry on Work of Schools in the City—Increase in Salaries Means Greater Expense.

Last year the Board of Education estimated their expenses at $124,500, and ended with a small overdraft after all expenses had been met. This year they ask for $157,700 of $33,200 more than last year.

The estimates call for $45,100 for support of the Collegiate Institute. Of this the city must contribute $41,500, the balance to be made up by Government grant and pupils fees.

For the Public Schools, the amount required is $121,000 of which $166,200 is to be levied on the taxpayers, the balance to be made up of amount now on hand and the $2,500 Government grant.

The expense of the Public Schools is as folows:

Salaries of Teachers	87,800.00
Salaries of Officers	4,600.00
Salaries of Janitors	7,700.00
Fuel Account	6,300.00
Printing and Stationary	1,200.00
Repairs and Furniture	8,500.00
Insurance	1,300.00
Rent of Room in St. James Church	300.00
Expense Account	3,500.00
	$121,200.00

LINDSAY MIDGETS SECURE A TWO GOAL LEAD OVER LOCAL JUNIORS

Visitors Make a Gain in the First Period That Could Not Be Overcome—Two Locals on the Sick List Return Game on Thursday.

A large crowd was on hand last night to see the Lindsay Midgets defeat the local Lindsay squad 5 to 3. This gives the Scugogville team a lead of two goals for the game in their town Thursday night. This looks like a dark prospect for Peterborough but then the local youngsters have more than once this season pulled off a surprise, when they were up against a tough proposition. They have still a fight left in them and it would not be well for Garnett and company to take too many chances.

Lindsay, no doubt, had the best of the play last night, but then the breaks were decidedly against the locals. In the first place Thirnbeck and Burgoine were on the sick list, the latter leaving his bed to guard the nets. He was of course, not up to form and let a couple of easy ones get past him. He was game though, and for the condition he was in, played a remarkable game.

Sheehan and [illegible] on the defence blocked nicely the [illegible] making some spectacular rushes. Lawson however, was weak in that department and seldom carried the puck past centre ice. Both worked like trojans all night.

Jackson, on right wing, had an off night last night. He tried hard and used his weight to good advantage on ocasions. He failed to cary the puck as far as might be desired and often overskated it. He was probably troubled by the rough ice along the sides.

Foley on the other wing uncorcked a wicked shot that McClary was fortunate in stopping on several occasions. He checked nicely and was always dangerous. Collins played his usual hockey game but failed to wade into it as much as he usually does. His rush that ended in a goal was game.

It is just an impossibile to pick a star from among the Lindsay outfit as from the locals. They worked well together and show the results of five hard fought contests. Chambers on right wing has a very effective wide swing check that stopped many a rush at the very outset. Bell worked well and his eagerness caused him many a hard fall. Stoddard worked the best he has shown this season until the last half of the game when he marred his work with rough tactics and heavy slashing.

That Lindsa defence is like a stone wall. Garnett and Green are both big fellows and handle themselves nicely. Garnett was watched closely all the way and consequently his rushes were not as effective as on his last appearance here. McClary stopped a lot of shots, some of them hard ones but it is rumored around that he was rather lucky.

THE TEMPLE OF FAME

The "Temple of Fame" as presented at the Conservatory Music Hall last evening, had the pleasure of witnessing what was perhaps one of the most interesting and withal original dramatic productions of its class this season.

The "Temple of Fame," was presented by the Conservatory Dramatic Club under the direction of Miss M. Urquhart, provided an opportunity for bringing into the limelight, considerable local talent, and last evenings entertainment, gives promise of even greater things to come.

Each of the characters in the "Temple of Fame," acquitted themselves with such grace of deportment, interpreting their individual roles in such an expressive manner as to merit hearty applause, and many encores from the audience, rendering it difficult to single out any one for special approval. Altogether it was an evening's program of such excellence as to reflect credit not only on those who took part, but also their capable directress. Following is the program:

The Herald: Harold Cranfield.
The Goddess of Fame: Mae Perry.
Pages: Kenneth McDonald, Harry Westbrooks.
Flora McDonald: Lillian Eastwood.
Florence Nightingale: Violet Payton.
Grecian Dance: Martha Kirn.
Canada: Miss Evans.
Briget O'Flannigan: Lena Aikens.

Directress: Miss M. Urquhart.

REFUSE OFFER OF COMPROMISE

Jugo-Slavs Have New Plan of Adriatic Settlement

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Jan. 28.—The Jugo-Slav reply to the Allied ultimatum regarding the Adriatic question received in Paris this afternoon amounts to a virtual refusal of the compromise offered by the Italians. The reply, it is believed, suggests a new basis of compromise along the lines of President Wilson's proposal.

REPORT IS DENIED.

Ottawa, Jan. 28.—Reports that Hon. A. K. McLean has decided to accept the vacant portfolio of the Department of Public Works are officially denied.

MAY ORDER ANOTHER INQUEST INTO WRECK

AUTHORITIES NOT SATISFIED WITH VERDICT REGARDING RECENT TRAGEDY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 28.—It is probable that a second inquest will be held at North Bay in regard to the cause of the collision near Corbeil on Sunday, causing the death of eight persons and the injuring of many others. The Provincial Attorney-General's Department is not satisfied with the verdict of the jury in the Tilley case last night, exonerating the train crews, and Crown Attorney McKee of Nipissing has been asked to report on the advisability of holding an inquest on the body of another of the victims.

OTTAWA IS ALARMED OVER THE SITUATION

Ottawa, Jan. 28.—The further break in Canadian exchange in New York has aroused much concern. Quotations in New York fell to the new low level of 10¾, the lowest since the heavy break in discount of nearly 12 per cent. registered in December last. It was stated today that if the situation is an international one, "all that Canada could do would only deplete the Canadian gold reserve to that extent." The situation is being keenly felt by importers from the United States. There have been no requests for further shipments of gold from Ottawa to New York, as was done at the last break. Fluctuations in the rate and the whole position generally are under close study by the Finance Department with a view to action, if considered necessary. But there is no immediate intention, it is authoritatively learned, of making any further shipments of gold to the United States.

SOCIAL RE-UNION FRIDAY

Sons and Daughters of England Will Furnish Interesting Program

A very pleasant evening is in store for the members of the Daughters of England and the S. O. E. next Friday evening, the 30th inst. From 7:30 to 9 p.m. games of all sorts will be played, and all are requested to join in. From 9 to 10 o'clock a special musical program will be put on, to be followed by refreshments, games, etc. The Point Two troupe of returned men from Park Street Church will put on a new sketch, by special request, full of interest from start to finish. Special talent will appear in the musical program. The aim of the committee has been to please as many tastes as possible. The senior members of the Juvenile Lodge will also be present.

TURN HAIR DARK WITH SAGE TEA

IF MIXED WITH SULPHUR IT DARKENS SO NATURALLY NOBODY CAN TELL.

The old-time mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur for darkening gray, streaked and faded hair is grandmother's recipe, and folks are again using it to keep their hair a good even color, which is quite sensible, as we are living in an age when a youthful appearance is of the greatest advantage.

Nowadays, though, we don't have the troublesome task of gathering the sage and the mussy mixing at home. All drug stores sell the ready-to-use product, improved by the addition of other ingredients, called "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." It is very popular because nobody can discover it has been applied. Simply moisten your comb or a soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, but what delights the ladies with Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound, is that, besides beautifully darkening the hair after a few applications, it also produces that soft lustre and appearance of abundance which is so attractive.

RECITAL AT CONSERVATORY

By Junior Dancing and Dramatic Class Directed by Miss Urquhart

On Saturday afternoon, Jan. 24, in the Conservatory of Music Hall, a very enjoyable studio recital was held by the Junior Dancing and Dramatic Class, pupils of Miss Mae Urquhart of the Margaret Eaton School, Toronto.

The parents and friends of the little ones were delighted with their work, and Miss Urquhart is to be congratulated on the very efficient manner in which each of the little tots did his or her part, as the children had completed only one term of lessons. Following is the program:

Opening Speech — Kenneth McDonald.
Reading—Isabel Nelson.
Piano Solo—Jean Fraser.
Reading—Ruth Tracey.
Reading—Violet Davidson.
Reading—Irene Green.
Dance—Katherine and Ruth Tracey.
Reading—Dorothy Henderson.
Reading—Harry Westbrook.
Piano Solo—Margaret Johnston.
Reading—Katherine Tracey.
Reading—Alma Glentcobe.
Reading—Kathleen Whitehouse.
Dance—Isabel Davidson.
Reading—Irene Horigan.
Reading—Pearl Carruthers.
Piano Solo—Jean Gillman.
Folk Dance—Class.
Closing Speech—Harold Cranfield.
God Save the King.
Chairman, Arthur Westbrook.
Accompanist, Miss D. Stuart.

LIGHT AND PROTECTION

Hydrant For Aladdin Company — Lights on the Otonabee Road.

Council's Fire, Water and Light Committee agreed last night that arrangements should be made for a hydrant for the Canadian Aladdin Co.'s factory.

Mr. Alex. Stewart applied for a hydrant at his new woolstock factory on Gladstone avenue. This request was allowed.

The committee was petitioned for drop lights on the Otonabee road, from the Locks Bridge to Downer's Corners. On motion of Ald. Jones and Crowe, the committee will recommend four lights on the Otonabee road from the Locks Bridge to Concession street. Every light costs the city $9 a year.

There is one motor vehicle to every 33 persons in Chicago.

~~ICE WANTED~~

~~Tenders addressed to Mr. George H. Duncan, Chairman of the Board of Health, will be received at the office of the City Clerk up to four o'clock, p.m. on Saturday, January 31st., 1920 for filling the ice house at the Isolation Hospital with ice, the ice to be put in and to be properly packed to the satisfaction of the Chairman. The lowest or any tender not necessarily accepted.~~

SCHOOL INSPECTOR RICHARD LEES SUBMITS REPORT TO COUNTY COUNCIL

Asks for the Appointment of a School Attendance Officer as Required by the New Act—Attendance Severely Interfered With, by Sickness

Public School Inspector Richard Lees submitted the following annual report to the County Council at its meeting this morning.

To the Warden and Council of the County of Peterborough,

In making my annual statement on the educational affairs of the Inspectorate of Peterborough East for the year 1919, I beg respectfully to call attention to the following matters.

There were in operation during the year, in the inspectorate three village schools with sixteen teachers, one suburban school with five teachers, and seventy rural schools with seventy-two teachers, a total of nine teachers, of whom eighty-four were women and nine men during the last term. Of the men four served in the Canadian forces during the war.

Of the seventy rural schools, nine were open for less than the full school year. These were Nos. 13 and 14 Belmont and Methuen. 2 Burleigh. One school in 2 Anstruther. 2, 5, 6, 7 and 8 Chandos. Owing to prevailing sickness last winter several other schools were more or less severely interfered with.

Qualification and Salaries of Teachers

The teachers for the fall term may be classified according to qualification as follows.

Belmont and Methuen, 6 Second, 5 Third Class, 1 District and 4 Temporary Certificates.

Chandos, 3 Third Class, 2 District and 8 Temporary Certificates.

Douro, 10 Second and 1 Third.

Dummer, 8 Second, 1 Third Class, 1 District and 4 Temporary.

N. Monaghan, 7 Second Class Certificates.

Otonabee, 2 First, 11 Second, and 1 Third Class.

The Villages, 16 Second Class Certificates, making a total of 2 First, 58 Second, 13 Third Class, 9 District and 11 Temporary Certificates.

The average rate of salary being paid in the fall term was; Asphodel $650; Belmont and M. $629; Burleigh and A. $538; Chandos $548; Douro $630; Dummer $622; N. Monaghan $696; Otonabee $667; The Villages $668.75.

The average rate-paid according to qualification was; First Class $712.50; Second Class $659.40; Third Class $621.15; District $577.75; Temporary $527.25.

These figures would indicate that the reason for the lower grade of certificates is, in most cases, the lower rate of salary. This ought not to be in the case of the poorer sections at least. For some time it has been arranged that these sections could pay salaries high enough to command the services of fully qualified teachers without its costing the sections any more than is being paid to the partially qualified teachers, in some cases less indeed. This fact has been pointed out to trustees over and over again but still without effect on some.

The School Attendance Act

On the first of January of the present year, there came into operation "An Act respecting Compulsory School Attendance." This requires (1) that the council of every township shall appoint at least one school attendance officer, notice of whose appointment shall be sent to every school and to the inspector. (2) That the teacher shall report at least every month to this officer all cases in which the requirements of the act in regard to attendance have not been complied with. (3) That the inspector at his visit to each school shall see that the duties of the school attendance officer are be-

DEFINITE STEPS TO INSTALL SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT AT LAST UNDER WAY

Will Comply With Board of Health's Views as to Method—May Expropriate Allan Wilson's Land.

The city's Board of Works last night decided to bow to the inevitable, and install an activated sludge sewage disposal plant as practically ordered by the Provincial Board of Health, whose decision in this respect is endorsed by the Railways Board.

The city has till March 1 to submit to the Provincial Board of Health plans for this system of sewage disposal, and City Engineer Parsons was instructed to go ahead and complete his plans for this plant already started.

An Autocratic Board.

Engineer Parsons, Ald. Phelan and City Solicitor Widdifield appeared before both the Provincial Board last December, when their proposal for an Imhoff Tank system, which the engineer considers especially suitable for local conditions, was emphatically rejected.

Mr. Parsons admits that the sludge from an activated process is purer than that from Imhoff tanks, but its disposal is a costly and complex question. Then the activated sludge system is more costly in its operation than the Imhoff method. In illustration of this point, Engineer Parsons declared it would cost $[illegible],000 a year to pump air for the activated process, which, in addition would also require the services of high-priced mechanics.

Not Obsolete.

Engineer Parsons quoted many important centres in the United States using, adding and enlarging Imhoff tank sewage disposal systems in spite of the Provincial Board of Health's contention that this method is obsolete. He also contended that the activated sludge process is yet in more or less of an experimental stage, especially in regard to disposal of the sludge, which is of a jelly like substance with a top layer of slush, a centre layer of water, and a bottom of grease. Consequently, drying this sludge on gravel beds is a long and difficult process, the sun not gaining ready access to the water to assure quick evaporation. This sludge would not be acceptable for cultivation when dried out by open-air exposure, as the large percentage of grease contained therein would cake some soils and kill crops. The only way to use this sludge would be to commercialize it, and Peterborough is not large enough to warrant such a course.

Ald. Hamilton was strong for appealing against the Provincial Board's order, but Mr. Parsons did not consider such a course in Peterborough's best interests.

This activated sludge system of sewage disposal will cost the city at least $175,000 to install, apart from land costs.

On motion of Ald. Morrison, Mr. Parsons was instructed to complete plans for the plant as approved of by the Provincial Board of Health.

Expropriation of Land.

Council here decided for expropriating Allan Wilson's land across the river from the end of Park street, consisting of 35 acres, as a site for the system. However, another effort will be made to come to an agreement with Mr. Wilson as to price before resorting to arbitration. Any such agreement must be ready for Council's meeting Monday night. Council's valuation of this land is $17,500, but Wilson is holding out for a much higher figure.

Miscellaneous Items.

On motion of Ald. Gainey and Morrison, the city's cement mixer will be loaned the contractors for the Canadian Aladdin Co., the rental to be $3 a day.

The city engineer was authorized to report on a sewer and sidewalk for the Canadian Aladdin Co.

CROWN ATTORNEY SAYS ONE BIG UNION WAS IN ITSELF UNLAWFUL CONSPIRACY

And Sympathetic Strike too is Illegal Declares Lawyer in His Open Address at Trial of Winnipeg Strike Leaders.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Jan. 29.—That One Big Union was in itself an unlawful conspiracy, was the statement made by A. J. Andrews, K.C., leading counsel for the Crown in the trial of the seven remaining Winnipeg strike leaders charged with seditious conspiracy, in making his address to the jury at the opening session of the trial today. Mr. Andrews said that the Crown will urge that this case was brought down to test the legality of One Big Union and the general strike was used to demonstrate the solidarity of labor. That strike had the public by the throat. Mr. Andrews declared the reason why the O. B. U. was unlawful was because its avowed purpose was to obtain its ends by compelling force and massed action. One of the planks in the platform, said he, was the sympathetic strike, which the Crown counsel, on behalf of the people of Canada, contended was unlawful.

HAMILTON MAN COURTS FULL INVESTIGATION

WHOLESALE GROCER SAYS THAT CONSUMERS HAVE RIGHT TO DESIRED INFORMATION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Hamilton, Jan. 29.—H. C. Beckett, head of the W. A. Gillard wholesale grocery firm, who was prominent in the formation here recently of the retailers' association which Hon. W. E. Raney announced would be investigated today, said: "The consumer is entitled to the fullest information regarding all matters concerning the inland trade of Canada. It is the duty of those vested with authority to insist upon an investigation, not only of the grocery trade, but of other lines of trade in Canada. While the consumers undoubtedly have cause for complaint, they are apt to put the blame on the shoulders of the wrong people. An investigation will result in the commendation of some and the condemnation of others. This is as it should be if we are to get at the root of the trouble. As all classes of trade, therefore, need investigation, I sincerely trust that the wholesale grocers of the whole of Canada will be investigated first. Then follow the same process with all other lines of trade, after which adopt a standard of sound business ethics. We will then have a much happier state of affairs in Canada."

ANOTHER INQUIRY INTO RAILWAY TRAGEDY

ATTORNEY-GENERAL'S DEPARTMENT HAS SENT A REPRESENTATIVE TO NORTH BAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 29;—Dr. Julian Loudon has been sent by the Attorney-General's department to North Bay to institute further inquiry into the wreck on the C. P. R. at Corbeil, with a view to probing further into what precautions the railway took to prevent a collision. The Attorney-General's action is based on dissatisfaction with the finding of the coroner's jury exonerating the railway employes from all blame.

NEVER WROTE ALLEGED LETTER

Ex-Kaiser Did Not Write Statement Printed Yesterday.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

The Hague, Jan. 29. — General Von Gonland, adjutant to ex-Emperor Wilhelm, declares that the widely-printed letter purporting to have been sent by Count Hohenzollern to Prince Furstenberg saying that the former emperor had no desire to return to Germany, as he felt he had been deceived even by the officers of the German high command, was an invention in its entirety.

POLICE BARRACKS ATTACKED

One Person Report Injured in Trouble at Ardmore.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Youghal, County Cork, Jan. 29. — The police barracks at Ardmore, County of Waterford, were attacked for two hours early this morning. One person was injured. Details of the attack are lacking.

In a factory fire at Chelsea, Mass., 25 employes leaped from the second floor and 11 were injured.

GERMANS ASK ALLIES TO REVISE TREATY TERMS

CLAIMS THAT TO YIELD UP OFFENDER WOULD CAUSE DOMESTIC TROUBLE.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Jan. 29.—Indication of the government's growing concern over the extradition of the Germans accused of war offences was given in a note sent to the Allies yesterday asking for a revision of the clauses of the Versailles Treaty. The note, which will not be published in Germany, warns the Entente Powers that Germany cannot assume she is able to compel either national or local agencies of the law to lay hands on men wanted and transfer them to the German frontiers.

The attempted assassination of Mathias Erzberger last Monday is viewed in official circles as the precursor of what is likely to happen on a larger scale if the government yields to the Allies' appeals to force in arresting the men on the list submitted by the Entente. Editorial and partisan recriminations, provoked by the attack on the finance minister, have already reached the white heat stage.

LEGISLATURE TO OPEN TUESDAY, MARCH 9TH

PROVIDED PREMIER DRURY IS NOT DEFEATED IN HALTON BYE-ELECTION.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Jan. 29;—On Monday, March 9th, the Ontario Legislature will open. It is thought that by that date everything will be in readiness the bye-elections being over. If the Premier should be defeated in Halton the date may be further postponed.

ITALIAN RAILWAY STRIKE IS SETTLED

AGREEMENT WITH CABINET AND MEN RETURN TO WORK.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 29.—An agreement on all the principal points at issue has been reached between the Italian Cabinet and the leaders of the striking railwaymen, according to a Central News despatch from Rome. It is expected the strikers will return to work immediately, the message adds.

NEW FRANCHISE ACT UP AT NEXT SESSION

WILL BE ONE OF IMPORTANT MEASURES TO COME BEFORE PARLIAMENT, [illegible]

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Jan. 29.—One of the most important measures to come before Parliament at the coming session is the Franchise Act. It is understood that this will embody redistribution, but only to a limited extent. It is known that it is the intention to follow more closely the lines of representation by population than has been the custom in the past. This will necessarily mean that the representation of the larger centres will be increased.

OPTIONS ARE ALL AWAY TOO HIGH

PURCHASE OF PROPERTIES FOR PARK MAY BE DEFERRED

The Council's Committee of the Whole last evening discussed the questions of those options on the Bettes, Ellis, Rapid Tool and Riverside Park properties considered away too high above actual values. These properties are required for public park purposes. One option expires February 1st and another on February 5th.

Ald. Gordon said the options are all very high and could not be any higher without profiteering of the worst possible kind.

On motion of Ald. Gordon and Whitehouse, no action will be taken in regard to these options, which will be allowed to expire.

One of three courses may follow now. If owners of the properties claim damages by reason of the new bridge, the city will arbitrate; the city may expropriate the premises; or Council, in regard to purchase of the properties, may leave the whole question for a year or more.

Council is not bound to purchase under the park bylaw carried by the ratepayers last January. They were simply empowered to do so, should such a course appeal to them.

The Housing Commission asked that Council apply to the Legislature for a loan of $100 now under the Provincial Housing Scheme.

Ald. Gordon submitted that he knew very little of the scheme, and suggested waiting for fuller information.

Ald Hamilton: "There is no question but that Peterborough needs houses, and there is no better way of getting money for that purpose than through the Legislature."

Ald. Gordon: "That way may be very true; still there is a loan company in this city which advances money for building purposes, although I do not know their terms and conditions.

Ald. Jones understood the Housing Commission was to acquire information as to how the housing scheme was working in other places.

This information has been written for by the commission, and Council will avail results before deciding on what amount, if any, of loan to apply for.

There were present Mayor McIntyre, Aldermen Phelan, Jones, Whitehouse, Hamilton, Morrison, Gordon Gainey, Crowe and City Solicitor Widdifield.

SEWAGE DISPOSAL PLANT FOR LINDSAY

PLANS HAVE BEEN DRAWN UP AND APPROVED BY THE DEPARTMENT

At a special meeting of the Lindsay Council, at which Mr. F. A. Dallyn, Provincial Engineer of the Provincial Board of Health, was present, the proposed new sewerage system for the Eastern part of the South Ward was discussed.

The new system will not be built in a year, but work will start immediately on the ground work. The new system will cost the town between forty and fifty thousand dollars which will include a sewerage disposal plant valued at ten or twelve thousand dollars.

Work on the new sewers will start on Kent St. east from a point opposite the Canadian Cereal mills, east to Simcoe St. thence to Durham St. In time there will be several extensions to the main sewer on the different streets. The system will cover the eastern part of the South Ward at present unserved.

In course of time it is anticipated that a sewerage system will be built in the East Ward with a disposal plant; also a disposal plant in the North Ward to take care of sewerage matter.

The town will build the disposal plant, while the sewers will be charged to the property benefitting thereby.

Engineer Smith of Smith & Smith prepared the plans which have been approved.

PUBLIC SCHOOL INSPECTOR BRODERICK ADVOCATES EXTENSIVE REFORMS

Considers the Present System of Education in Rural Districts Unwieldy and Behind the Times—Annual Report to the County Council.

In the annual report of Mr. G. E. Brodwick, rural school inspector for West Peterborough, he presented a table which showed that with only one or two exceptions the salaries of the teachers had been raised from $75 to $175. The highest paid teacher in the inspectorate receives $1,000 per year.

Of a total enrolment of 953 the average attendance was 577 or 60 per cent.

THE REPORT

In my report to this Council a year ago I expressed the opinion that, in the matter of education the rural child is not getting a square deal; that, for several reasons, the rural schools are failing to provide an education adequate to meet the multiplied and complex demands of modern life. I am in good company. The new Premier is reported as saying that the education afforded by the Public School is a mere "smattering" and points out what has been so frequently reiterated that 95 per cent. of our P. S. pupils fail to reach the High School. He might have gone further, and stated that perhaps 85 per cent. never go beyond the third form.

It would not be difficult to substantiate the Premier's statement as to the superficiality of our elementary education. The condition is not acute, it is a chronic disease. For forty years to my certain knowledge business men have denounced the incompetency in elementary arithmetic and the execrable spelling of our public school graduates. This general lack of thoroughness in our public school education has been attributed to various causes—to irregularity of attendance by some; to the passing of the male teacher by others; to the multiplicity of subjects by others who forget that a smatterer can smatter in three subjects as easily as in ten.

An efficient education is the result of certain conditions:

First—A staff of teachers with scholarship, professional training, with the skill which comes from experience and a reasonable continuity of service in the same school. Thanks to the enlightened policy of Sir James Whitney rural communities may now secure—indeed most of them must secure—teachers having the same scholarship and the same training as those of urban centers. This has been a great gain to rural schools. Ten years ago there were, on this side of the Inspectorate only a few teachers qualified under the Regulations. At the present there are only a very small number who are not qualified. But while the number of second class teachers has, on the whole, increased satisfactorily the overwhelming majority of them are, at present, practically inexperienced and strangers to the community in which they work. It is no criticism of the training these young women have received nor any reflection upon the teachers themselves to say that their earliest efforts at teaching must be relatively tentative and crude. It is true that in a teacher's work experience counts and it is true that, given the right type of teacher the more familiar she is with the life of the community the better service she can render.

Why Do Teachers Move?

There are many reasons. Some teachers are urban born and cannot adapt themselves to rural life. The solitariness of the situation, the drab monotony of things makes life unbearable. Others—the great majority perhaps have been caught by the glamour of the graded schools and are influenced by the indisputable advantages of town and city life. Among these advantages is that of better salaries. This is the second condition of good rural schools;—

Increased Salary.

Why should a young woman spend, or her parents spend for her, fifteen hundred dollars for a four years' course preparing herself for teaching for the munificent salary of $650 to $700 a year when her younger sister can after an eight months' Business College Course begin work at a salary of $15.00 a week. A young woman's education makes her eligible to enter Normal School. Why should she expend upon her professional training say $350 and then earn $600

REFUSED TO GIVE NAMES TO MAGISTRATE DUMBLE

ROBERT McCOULEY CHOOSES TO GO TO JAIL RATHER THAN INFORM ON FRIENDS

Robert McConkey, who was found last night on George street in an intoxicated condition, will reside in the county jail for one week for refusing to tell from whom it was he received the precious liquor that was responsible for his disorderly conduct.

He pleaded guilty to the charge of being drunk and was put in the witness box.

"Where did you get your liquor?" asked the chief.

"From two or three people on the street."

"Do you expect us to believe you don't know the people who gave it to you?"

"Well, I don't know, as I have to tell you everything I know," was the reply.

"Perhaps you don't" replied the chief laughing, "but maybe the magistrate will want to know."

The magistrate: "If you don't tell us now you will have to spend some time in jail until you remember."

"I'll go." was the determined reply.

Upon further questioning the accused refused to give the names of the parties from whom he received the liquor and was taken to the county jail where he will remain for the next week.

NEW KING FOR HUNGARY

Will Be Chosen Immediately After National Assembly Meets.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Budapest, Jan. 29.—Hungary will be a monarchy and the new king will be chosen immediately after the National Assembly convenes, said Premier Huszar, speaking at a woman's gathering yesterday. He said it would be premature to mention the names of those considered for the throne.

"HAVE JANIN'S BLOOD" SLOGAN OF NEW LEAGUE

SAID HE ORDERED ADMIRAL KOLCHAK TO SURRENDER TO REVOLUTIONARIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 29.—Admiral Kolchak's surrender to the Siberian revolutionists was authorized by General Janin of the Czech army, who was placed in command of the Allied troops west of Irkutsk, on January 19, by Kolchak's order, says a Harbin dispatch to The Daily Mail. A profound sensation was caused throughout the far East by the report that Kolchak had given up, says the message, which was filed at Harbin on Monday, and one Russian general has challenged General Janin to a duel, while officers under the command of Semenoff have formed a league, the slogan of which is "Have Janin's blood."

General Janin's explanation is awaited but it is known that the Czech reports on the situation at Irkutsk which has been telegraphed to Janin, induced him to consent to Kolchak's surrender. The Czechs claim the choice lay between one man and a conflict in which they were likely to be annihilated. The Japanese representatives asked the Czechs to hand Kolchak over to the Japanese, but this request was refused.

FARMERS AND BOARD OF COMMERCE.

THE UNITED FARMERS' Conventon in Calgary, says the Lethbridge Herald, with considerable applause adopted a resolution practically censuring the Board of Commerce and calling for its abolition or immediate reconstruction. With all the working of the Board of Commerce, with which the public is familiar, and the comparatively little practical results that have come from them, the nature of the resolution is not by any means surprising.

The birth of the Board of Commerce was the result of the investigation of the Special Committee of the House of Commons into the cost of living. From the volume of evidence brought before the committee, as the farmers assembled at the convention were careful to note, the Board of Commerce was brought into being, with the object of reducing living costs as they existed at the time and exist today. When, however, we note there has been no particular decrease in prices of commodities, but rather the reverse; we are inclined to attach to the workings of the Board the moral of the fable of the mountains laboring and a little mouse being brought forth.

The farmers' resolution stated that the actions of the Board of Commerce ever since its appointment have assumed the form of superficial and fallacious regulations directed against the interests of the farmers and retail distributors in cities and towns, while manufacturers of textiles, flour, meats, boots and shoes and other necessities of life, whose evidence before the Special Committee of the House invited immediate investigation have been completely ignored. In other words, the big game have been allowed to go free, and the small fry have been hunted. There is in this a great deal of truth.

To cite a single instance, we may refer to the price of woollen clothing, over which there has been much illumination spread in the statement made recently in Salt Lake City by the secretary of the National Wool Growers' Association. He said that to manufacture a suit of man's clothing suitable for the average-sized individual, and made of medium winter goods, requires about sixty-two ounces of wool, which wool can be bought in Boston today at $5.25. This is on the presumption that the suit is made of all wool. Such suits as this retail today at from $60 to $75. This would mean that eliminating the wool as a factor in a suit, it would still cost from $54.75 to $69.75. What applies in the United States applies equally here, that is if the statement of the secretary of the National Wool Growers' Association is correct.

It might well be asked if the exact cost of the ingredients that go into fixing the price of a suit, such as labor, material, etc., has ever been investigated by the Board of Commerce. The original price, we presume, is made by the manufacturers and on these retail prices are based.

Limiting profits alone will not solve the question of the high cost of living. What is needed is a thorough scrutiny into first causes, which does not seem to have been a function of the Board of Commerce, however imperative it appears from the common sense point of view.

REPORT OF INSPECTOR BRODERICK.

SCHOOL INSPECTOR Broderick submits his annual report to the members of the County Council. It is the same old story that has been told regularly for years. The rural education is inadequate. The attendance is irregular, only 60 per cent. of the number enrolled. The teachers are underpaid and change frequently. The graduates of the township schools go into the world improperly equipped. Something must be done to remedy conditions.

The Inspector does not fail to call attention to means that may be employed to bring about an improvement. It is up to the members of the County Council to put those means into effect. But will they? They have passed up this most important of all propositions so long that the people have about given up all hope that anything will ever be done.

PLOTTING AGAINST DRURY.

THE EXECUTIVE committees of the two old line parties in Halton County are holding daily session at Milton, trying to arrive at some arrangement by which a so-called independent candidate can be put in the field to contest the riding with Premier Drury. It is only to be expected that it has so far been impossible to reach an agreement, both parties claiming the right to name the candidate.

The straws that are floating around Halton show which way the political wind is blowing all over the Province. It is the Liberals who have taken the initiative in the latest political move. They are in favor of the perpetuation of political unionism, recognizing that as their only hope, and to that end they are working throughout Ontario. They see that the Farmers' movement must be checked if they themselves are to survive as a party.

The Liberal proposition is that the Conservatives at the next Federal election agree to a fifty-fifty split of the constituencies in Ontario, and that only one representative of each of the old line parties be nominated in each. West Peterborough would nominate a Conservative, East Peterborough a Liberal; North Victoria a Liberal and the south riding a Conservative, or vice versa, as might be deemed advisable, these to fight it out with the nominees of farmers and workingmen combined.

Hon. Mackenzie King, leader of the Federal Liberal party, has already cast down the gage of battle before the farmers, although he appears to believe that the U. F. O. and the Liberals are in accord over the reciprocity issue, which Mr. King threatens to revive now, regardless of what that issue did to his party in 1911.

OF INTEREST TO YOU.

(Border Cities Star.)

A SHORT TIME AGO a great New York merchant advised the people to read the news of the stores to ascertain where and when to buy cheaply. How to beat the high cost of living is one of the greatest problems of the day. The common enemy is a doughty fighter. He has been one, too, for more than five years, but if he cannot be beaten at all seasons there are times when he can be temporarily vanquished, and one of these periods is in the early months of the year.

At this season, when stocks are taken, most business houses make it a point to reduce the merchandise they have on hand to a minimum so as to make room for the new goods to come in. Hence the January and February clearance sales, at which prices are invariably marked down to the lowest point of the year. People who take advantage of these opportunities can save very considerable sums of money, which is an important thing to do in these strenuous times.

To secure the benefit of these money-saving chances all that one need do is read the news of the stores in the Star and to act upon the suggestions therein contained. The bargains that are offered at these sales are genuine bargains. The basis of successful advertising is honesty. No store can succeed in business today that does not tell the truth in its advertisements. They must be dependable in descriptions of goods and in announcements of prices.

It is a matter of record that the women are the principal readers of advertisements. The women are literally the housekeepers; the men have the duty of providing the money to maintain the home, but the women have the responsibility of prudently spending it. That is one reason why the evening newspaper is the favored medium of advertisers; it reaches the home at the time when the women, free from the household tasks of the day, have the leisure to read the evening paper thoroughly.

This applies with equal force to the men, although admittedly, men are not the consistent readers of advertisements that women are. But it is also a fact that men are paying an increasing amount of attention to the news of stores. The high costs of wearing apparel and of other necessities which men usually buy for their own use, have forced men to realize the folly of indiscriminate buying, and all throughout America merchants have been discovering a new tendency among their men patrons, an evidence of a determination to buy carefully and get the best value for their money.

The Star would urge its men readers, the single men as well as those who are married and who, therefore, may be supposed to be alive to the wisdom of prudent expenditure, to develop the habit of reading advertisements concerning the articles they have to purchase. The custom will prove profitable.

EDUCATIONAL NEEDS OF RURAL ONTARIO

(Farmers' Sun.)

Many pressing problems are confronting the Drury Government, but no one problem touches the lives of the community in so many places and is so intimately bound up with the progress of the province as the school question. In a summary of the Government's plans, recently published in the Farmers' Sun, it was pointed out that a conference of school inspectors was to be called at an early date, when a discussion would take place as to ways and means of improving our rural schools.

The Little Red School has outlived its usefulness! Today the country requires something better and more up to date. Rural Ontario wants to have its country schools turned into consolidated schools which will become the centre of the intellectual and social life of the community; centres where continuation classes can be carried on and where country boys and girls will receive the equal of a High school education without leaving home. In the past, country children were forced to go to a town or city to receive their secondary education, where they were educated away from farm life. These continuation schools should have a large assembly hall, where lectures, concerts and meetings of various kinds can be held.

Another innovation needed is the use of moving pictures both as a means of teaching the pupils in the school and as an adjunct to the social life of the community. The possibilities of teaching geography, manufacturing processes, poultry raising, gardening, dairying and better farming methods in general are almost unlimited. The "movies" are here to stay, and we would be foolish not to avail ourselves of their many excellent features.

Briefly, therefore, some educational program must be put on which will insure the country boys and girls getting a good education without being forced to leave home. Further, the country school must be made a centre for the development of the community spirit.

Doubtless there are difficulties in the way, but our forefathers who hewed homes from the forest and laid the foundation of our social, educational and religious life, were not daunted by the difficulties confronting them. We, too, must meet and solve our problems, the chief of which is the giving our children better educational facilities.

ARE LEARNING THE POLITICAL GAME

(Journal of Commerce.)

In the strange political situation that has arisen in the Province of Ontario, there seems to be a pretty general feeling that the best way to avoid further confusion is to give the new Farmer-Labor Government a fair chance to show what it can do to carry on the business of the Province. The Government's position weakened by the inexperience of its members and by the fact that it has only a minority of the electorate behind it. However, the Farmer-Labor group has a larger membership in the House than either the Liberals or the Conservatives, and that fact gives it a title to the Cabinet seats. Nobody questions the sincerity of the Government's desire to do what they believe to be right. While on all sides there will be a disposition to give the new men every fair opportunity to do things, they must not be surprised if considerable amusement is afforded by their course.

Some of the alleged evil practices of the old parties are found to be very convenient in the new order of things. One of the habits of old party governments sometimes complained of was the arrangement of election contests in such a manner as to give the Government of the day an advantage. If several vacancies in the representative House existed the elections were not brought on simultaneously, as would be the case if there were no party interests to be served, but were called in the order in which they could best strengthen the ruling party. The fairly safe seats were first opened and the success won in them was counted on to strengthen the Government in the doubtful constituencies, where the elections were held later. It was perhaps, not a very grave fault in party government, but undoubtedly it at times gave good ground for criticism.

Our farmer friends at Toronto have not been slow to avail themselves of this political fine art. The Premier and two of his Cabinet colleagues are without seats in the Legislature. It is necessary for them to obtain seats. We are told that arrangements have been made by which elected members will make way for them. But only a part of the program is disclosed. The three elections are not to be brought on together. What is contemplated is thus naively explained by Hon. Mr. Grant, Minister of Education.

"The reason we are not running the three elections at the one time is that it is said Mr. Raney will be opposed and we want to have the others over so as to be able to concentrate and get him elected. If the election of Mr. Drury and Mr. Doherty will strengthen Mr. Raney, we want him to have this advantage, as there is so much obection to him reported."

It does not seem to have occurred to Mr. Grant that this is precisely the kind of political manoeuvring that the old parties were accused of practicing. If the three elections were called for the same day the people of each district would be able to vote independently on the general issues involved. What the Government are doing is to bring on the elections in Halton and Kent, where they feel assured of success, and then to use the prestige of their victories to influence the voters in the case of the third seat. For this purpose, and in order that the Government may concentrate their forces on the less certain seat—that is to say, for strictly party purposes—the principle of simultaneous polling is ignored, and the third election postponed to a convenient time. The sin is not one of the worst of those of which the old political parties were accused. But it is one that the new Government might have been expected to avoid.

The seat in the Senate of Canada, rendered vacant by the death of the late Senator Landry, has been filled by the appointment of Lorne C. Webster, a business man long connected with the industrial and commercial life of Montreal and Quebec. At Confederation the English-speaking population of the Province of Quebec, was represented by six Senators but of recent years that representation has consisted only of five Senators. The recent appointment increases it to six.

The new Senator, the Hon. Lorne C. Webster, was born in Quebec City in 1871, and received his early education there in both languages, speaking French as fluently as he does his mother-tongue. During a number of years Montreal has been his place of residence, and the headquarters of his business, but he has always maintained connection with the commercial and industrial life of his native city. He is president of two railway companies, and is connected with several industrial and mercantile enterprises. He is also a member of the Council of the Montreal Board of Trade, and a Governor of the Wesleyan Theological College of Montreal. When Canada's war loans were floated, he rendered great public service by means of large subscriptions, and by assisting in the organization of the campaign of publicity.

"Yes, Henry. I dare say your taste was highly gratified. I heard a loud smacking of lips and then you exclaimed, Ah! That's the stuff!"

Some Freaks of Lightning

SCIENTISTS are inclined to pooh-pooh the idea that lightning makes "pictures" on the bodies of its victims occasionally, a further example of which was quite lately quoted. A man was struck while sheltering under a tree, and the newspapers told how at the inquest it was reported that a photographic likeness of the tree was imprinted on the man's skin.

Four people were sitting in a room, when they were all rendered unconscious by a flash which cut in half a tree outside. They all recovered eventually, but one of them, a child, was found to bear on its body the imprint of the whole tree. Every limb, branch and leaf, even the severed portion were said to be visible. In a month's time the impression had totally faded.

Sometime ago the Lancet discussed this subject, and incidentally gave some interesting instances. Of course it was skeptical. It mentions the case of a woman who was struck when minding a cow. The cow was killed, and the woman rendered unconscious. On her breast was seen a representation of the cow. The paper remarks, "Here a healthy skepticism is reasonable, for the picture of the cow was only seen by peasants."

But a still more interesting story is told. It appears that in the summer of 1865 a doctor was returning home by train, and he found, on alighting at his wayside station, that his purse was missing. It was of tortoise shell. On one side it had a monogram of two D's intertwined.

Some days later this very doctor was called to see a stranger who had been found unconscious under a tree struck by lightning in a recent storm. To his surprise he found imprinted on the man's thigh his own monogram, the intertwined D's. Instead of jumping to the conclusion that there was something "spooky" about his occurrence, the doctor asked the hospital authorities to look in the man's pocket, and they would probably find his lost purse.

The guess proved correct, and the Lancet observes, "The monogram, being of metal, was a good conductor, so we can imagine how its image was impressed on the skin. Similar cases are recorded of the imprinting of money and other metallic objects on the skin by lightning strokes, and it is common to find burns on the body over metallic bodies, such as watches.

One of the commonest freaks of lightning is to strip its victims of their clothes. About twenty years ago three women were standing round a reaping machine, when one of them was struck by lightning and killed. The other two were injured, and were both stripped absolutely naked, even to their boots!

At Ashford, in Kent, Eng., a man was struck while standing under a willow tree. He was found lying on his back two yards away from the tree, his left leg broken, conscious, but badly burned, and the field was strewn with fragments of his clothing.

Sometimes lightning performs rather comical freaks. It was recorded just before the war that a certain mansion in Wales had been struck by lightning, which saved the servants the trouble of lighting a fire! The chimney was struck, and the fuel laid in one of the grates was ignited.

In the same severe storm a house at Northwich was struck twice, at the front first, and then at the back. The second flash denuded a scrubbing brush of all its bristles. Many instances are on record of hair and beard being shaved off by lightning, while the rest of the body was practically uninjured. Sometimes the hair returns, and sometimes the part is permanently bald.

Sometimes lightning is strangely selective. One will be taken and another left. Quite recently twenty sheep were killed under a tree, but the number sheltered was over forty, and those killed were by no means all in a bunch. But a stranger instance is reported. Lightning entered a stable containing twenty cows. The first, third and so on were killed, the second, fourth and so on escaped.

Two friends were going round the links together recently, when a storm came on from which they took shelter in a corrugated iron building. One of the golfers sat near the door, and while waiting for the passing of the storm commenced to cut up an old golf ball with a knife. A very vivid flash struck the knife, melted the blade, made a deep hole in the ball and scorched the golfer's fingers badly and that was all.—Toronto Saturday Night.

Aviation in Africa.

In East Africa, says Major W. T. Blake in the Wide World Magazine, it was almost impossible to find open ground suitable for airdrome, and space had to be cleared in the dense bush sufficient to allow a skilfully-piloted machine to rise and land. Frequently the airmen were away from headquarters and then returning to their lairs in the bush. Lions and leopards attacked the camps and waited for anyone who dared move far from the tents at night; on at least one occasion elephants charged down upon an airdrome and did tremendous damage. A forced landing in the bush meant almost certain death, for even if pilot and observer survived the crash it was highly probable that they would lose themselves in their efforts to return, or be killed by wild beasts during the journey.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Do Women Read Newspaper Advertising

¶ Since Women do over 80 per cent of the Retail buying that is done, Advertisers are constantly investigating the Appeal which Advertising mediums exert upon Women. This fact is continually before manufactures in every line, and recently the Bureau of Investigation was asked to conduct an investigation to show how much Underwear for Men was bought by Women, so that the manufacturer who made the request could write his advertisements accordingly.

¶ Many investigations have been made by Women's Clubs, Merchants' Organizations, Statistical Bureaus, and the like, but while these inquiries invariably show that Women are more influenced by Newspaper Advertising that by any other kind, they are inconclusive because of the high percentage of non-commital or unsatisfactory replies.

¶ The question broadly answers itself in that Women do most of the buying, and Newspapers carry far more Advertising than all other mediums combined.

Children as Witnesses Usually Carry Weight With the "Learned Judge"

A JUDGE has been saying complimentary things about the child witness, says London Answers. He declares that the child witness of to-day is vastly superior to those he used to know—"worth a great deal more as an observer, better able to describe facts, and anxious to state the truth. What could have been better than the evidence of the little boy you had before you?"

How keenly a child can observe was shown at the trial of a burglar a short time back at the Central Criminal Court, when a little girl of ten gave evidence that led to his conviction.

Even the burglar himself seems to have been filled with admiration of her, for, when he was asked to say anything in mitigation of sentence, he expressed his disgust that his barrister should have tried to discredit her by suggesting she had imagined a great deal—"the result of seeing things at cinema theatres.

"All I've got to say is that what the nipper said was true," the burglar declared. "She's a sharp girl, that! I'm sorry I frightened her. I wouldn't have hurt a hair of her head!"

Improved education has made the child-witness much more respected in our courts. A barrister, defending a prisoner before Mr. Marsham, the Bow Street (London) magistrate, remarked that the chief witness—a boy of eleven—would have been much better employed at play than in the court.

"But children are serious folk nowadays, Mr. X., said the magistrate. "I dare say the boy would not be at play if he were not here. What would you be doing, my boy?" he asked.

"Working sums, sir!" replied the lad, promptly.

"There, you see, Mr. X," said the magistrate, "quite a serious witness!"

Sir Albert de Rutzen, the famous magistrate, used to relate with a chuckle, how while he and a solicitor were trying with paper and pencil to calculate the value of a number of goods that had been stolen, a boy-witness in the box, whom the solicitor referred to as "the child," gave them the answer, having "done it in his head."

A hush descends upon the court when a child appears in the box to give evidence in a case of murder. A life may depend upon the words that fall from that little one, whose head, perhaps, does not much overtop the side of the witness box. And the barrister defending a man or woman for his or her life knows well that there is no more powerful witness to secure acquittal than a child who will testify in the accused one's favor.

Lord Alverstone was a kindly-hearted man. He did not lightly forgive a celebrated barrister, who, defending a prisoner accused of a terrible murder, put his little boy in the box upon a most frivolous pretence. The boy could only say that the accused man had been a tender father to him.

His evidence was over in a moment or two, but the little yellow-haired fellow when told to stand down, bursting into tears, flung out his hands towards the man in the dock, crying:

"Father! Father!"

People caught their breath—there was a great hush, and then something like a sob—and men bent their heads low, and women wiped their eyes. The calling of the child was an attempt to cheat justice by playing on human feeling, and Lord Alverstone resented the trick.

The child as an accusing witness may well be dreaded. No living barrister, perhaps, has had so great experience of such witnesses as Mr. Clarke-Hall, the present Thames Police Court magistrate. For many years he was counsel to the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, and hundreds of the saddest stories ever heard have been extracted by him from lips of little witnesses—sobbing boys and girls, pale and trembling under the malignant, threatening glances of the man or woman in the dock. Cases of cruelty to children are becoming more common than they were. The accusing child is seen more frequently in the courts.

Fisher Explodes.

Here is one of Lord Fisher's characteristic explosions in the London Times: "Hansard, December 11, 1919, column 1,121: Some three-quarters of a million sterling (£739,000, half her total cost!) being spent emasculating the fastest battle cruiser in the world with the lightest draught of water and an equal sum apportioned for similarly humbugging the Renown, her sister ship! Why? The Faddists want more armor! The Congenital Idiots can't see that speed is armor! The fast battle cruiser Invincible sent Admiral von Spee to perdition (where he belongs) without having a single man on board the Invincible killed or wounded! Why? Because she had superior speed and the bigger gun! Give Peace in our Time, O Lord! (Unless you sack the lot!) You know the French story! They operated successfully but they killed the patient!—and the surgeons said, 'Mort—gueri!' "

How Mammoth Cave Breathes.

Mammoth Cave breathes once a year; that is to say, in summer when the temperature of the external air is above that of the cave the current sets from the latter to the former. In fact the cave is the entire summer making an expiration

On the other hand, when the order is reversed or the outer atmosphere is below 54 degrees the cave makes an inspiration, or draws in its breath. This is accomplished during the winter. Hence it is frequently observed in the spring and autumn that there is no motion of air in either direction at the mouth of the cave. In summer, when the temperature is 100 degrees, the air rushes out at the entrance to the cave with such force as frequently to extinguish lanterns carried by visitors. This condition prevails, however, for only a few yards. At a distance of about half a mile from the entrance the motion of air is hardly perceptible at any time, from the fact that the main avenue enlarges so rapidly that it plays the part of a reservoir, where a current of air from any direction speedily is neutralised. If a current of air blows from without inward and is below 54 degrees it does not pass more than a quarter of a mile before it is brought up to that point. Air above the average temperature of the cave never blows into it. The element of change inevitably entwined with the passage of time above ground is singularly absent in the passage of time underground. In Mammoth Cave, where there is no variation of temperature, no water and no light, the three great forces of geological transformation cease to operate, and ever Father Time must perforce pass through some parts of Mammoth Cave and leave not the slightest imprint of his journey. A change of seasons is unknown; day and night, morning and evening, have no existence in this subterranean world.

Pheasants Caught With Raisins.

Pheasants are devoted to raisins, and poachers knowing this, fasten a hook to a line, baiting the hook with a raisin, and tie this line to a peg in the hedgerow.

Wild duck are caught in similar fashion, the bait in this case being not raisins but worms.

Another fiendish trick is the use of fat balls. These are small balls of suet, in the centre of each of which is placed a short length of whalebone or some similar substance with the pointed ends bent together. Almost any game bird will pick up a ball of this sort. When swallowed, the fat melts and the sprung whalebone is released, the end sticking in the bird's gullet and choking it.

Partridges have regular dusting places like poultry. One poacher hit upon the plan of putting a quantity of pepper into one of these dust baths, thereby blinding the unfortunate birds that came to use it. He was then able to pick them up quite easily.—Pearson's Weekly.

Japanese Sports.

Japan is offering somewhat of a market for American sporting goods at the present. Since the end of the war there has been an increased interest in sports, and it may be said of Japan that western games played there are essentially scholastic in nature, baseball being the most popular, with tennis second. The latter named sport has now found favor outside of student circles, and tennis courts are scattered here and there throughout the larger cities.

Iron Frames Best.

After testing steel underframes on its cars for several years an English railroad has returned to iron ones, as they are said to be less liable to corrosion.

Ancestors of Sheep.

All the present breeds of sheep are probably descended from the Moufflon, the European wild breed. The other leading wild breeds are the Argali of central Asia, and the Bighorn of the Rocky mountains in America; but it is doubtful if any domesticated varieties have been evolved from these. All the recently opened countries have been stocked from Europe, and nearly all from English breeds, with the exception of the Spanish merino.

The Almighty Dollar.

Bribery has been the downfall of many public men during the course of history. Francis Bacon, the greatest thinker of his age, was ruined by his cupidity. Lord Chancellor Macclesfield and Waterbury were destroyed by the same vice. Benedict Arnold sold a fort in New York to the enemy for $31,575. For this same sin Gorgei betrayed Austria, Ahithopel forsook David and Judas delivered up Christ.

Garibaldi.

Gen. Giuseppe Garibaldi of the Italian army, who arrived in New York recently on a special mission to aid in cementing the friendship of the Italian and American peoples, is a grandson and namesake of the Italian patriot, himself once a resident of New York. Before the European war he was what in the story books is called a "soldier of fortune." That is, he is the same Col. Guiseppe Garibaldi who was on Francisco I. Madero's staff and who fought at the first battle of Juarez in May, 1911, at the battle that made Madero president. Garibaldi was a bigger man in this battle than he ever received credit for. There was more jealousy at the battle of Juarez that there was ammunition.

Annual Report of L.C.W. Committees

REPORT OF CORRESPONDING SECRETARY.

In beginning my annual report for 1918-19 allow me to quote from the report of one of our National Council officers, "The most uninteresting business upon any agenda must of necessity be the report of the corresponding secretary, for at best it can be but a dry tabulated record of transactions. However, it is one of the evils that must be borne before the delights in store may be entered upon."

Shortly after our last annual meeting, Miss Virginia Gibbs, a representative of the Victorian Order of Nurses, visited the city. At her request, the Council arranged a meeting for the school girls in the Collegiate hall where Miss Gibbs addressed them.

On resolution of the Council a letter of condolence was sent to Lady Laurier.

Land Settlement Plan.

In February a resolution was brought before the Council by Mrs. Kendry re a land settlement scheme for soldiers wishing to become farmers. As the plan had so much to recommend it and as a similar idea was advocated by the Mail and Empire and the Toronto Saturday Night, this was adopted, and at the National Executive meeting held in Ottawa, Mrs. Kendry was our representative and spoke to her resolution.

At the March meeting we were honored in having our National president, Mrs. Sanford, with us when she gave a most inspiring address. On this occasion Miss Parker read a very interesting and instructive paper on "Immigration."

Poverty in Peterborough.

Our attention was attracted by a local editorial telling about certain conditions of poverty and destitution existing in the city. Dr. Amys, the acting M. H. O., was communicated with and he informed us that the newspaper article was only too true in the main and asked for the help of the Council that would in any way better these conditions.

Child Welfare Work.

Dr. Birnie presented her scheme for child welfare and plans for a baby clinic at the April meeting. This was unanimously endorsed and the earnest support of all pledged to make it a success.

In the early spring a communication was received from the Canadian Trade Commission and one from J. W. Worth re "made in Canada" goods. As a result of the discussion these aroused, a resolution was sent to the National Council endorsing the "made in Canada" policy, but asking that steps be taken to produce a better understanding between producer and consumer as to the quality and price of such articles. This was seconded by the Toronto Council and was brought up at the National meeting in Regina. After some discussion, showing the needs and drawbacks of a "made in Canada" policy and a universal desire for a good article at a fair price, the resolution was adopted. Lady Falconer represented us on this occasion.

Sale of Oleomargarine.

This Council, in common with several others, at the request of the Ottawa organization, memorialized the Government to allow the continued sale and manufacture of oleomargarine. A night letter was sent to Sir Thomas White, acting Prime Minister, and the influence of the local Federal Member and the Board of Trade was also asked.

In June a plan to license and supervise all boarding and rooming houses, asking that a municipal by-law be passed requiring all persons wishing to keep boarders or to rent rooms, to register and obtain a license, was submitted to the City Council but so far as known no definite action has been taken.

During the referendum campaign our president was a member of the local committee and effective work was accomplished.

When it was learned that Mrs. Pankhurst was coming to America again, it was decided to make every effort to engage her to speak here. Arrangements have since been made and she is to come in April.

Saturday Mail Delivery.

After careful consideration and discussion, the following resolution was sent to the Board of Trade in October and their co-operation invited:

"Whereas the delay in delivery of mail due to mail carriers' half holiday coming on Saturday is the cause of much inconvenience to the public, especially when a public holiday falls on Monday, and as this Saturday half-holiday is set by a ruling of the department of the Postmaster-General of Canada, therefore, the L. C. W. of Peterborough requests the Board of Trade in cities and towns where mail delivery exists to join in petitioning the Postmaster-General to appoint some day other than Saturday as the mail carriers' half-holiday."

In November it was decided to return to the Department of the Secretary of State our certificate of registration under the War Charities Act as the Council is not engaged in war relief work.

There have been nine open meetings held during the past year while executive and sub-executive meetings have been called when occasions demanded.

There were 28 affiliated societies, one new society has asked for affiliation and the 57th Regimental Chapter I.O.D.E. has re-established its relations with us.

The attendance has often left much to be desired and it is hoped that this discrepancy may be remedied during the coming year.

The election of Mrs. Morris to the Board of Education was very gratifying since her candidature was unanimously endorsed by the Council.

All of which is respectfully submitted.

KATHLEEN P. B. JAMIESON,
Corresponding Secretary.

UNDESIRABLE LITERATURE.

The following is the report of committee for the suppression of undesirable literature:

Your committee beg to submit the following report:

The first thing we did was to get into communication with the convenor of the International Society. They sent us lists of good books for childrens' libraries and also the makes of two very undesirable books they were endeavoring to suppress.

Miss Monroe, who had charge of the children's library, found that most of the books were already in her library. As to the two bad books we did not find them either in the Public Library or on sale in the book stores we visited.

Mr. DeLaFosse was quite in sympathy with our endeavors and promised his hearty co-operation. He said he had already removed quite a number of improper books from the shelves and if readers mentioned to him any book they considered not fit to be in circulation he always made a point to remove it if he found it as represented.

The proprietors of the two book stores we visited were also quite kind in their reception of us and promised their assistance at any time we called upon them to suppress any book.

Theatres To Co-operate.

At the two leading picture houses we visited in the interest of movies for children we were also kindly received and both the Grand and the Allen promised to screen childrens' pictures occasionally as a beginning, and I am sure if they were assured of good patronage would have a children's day regularly, but unless we have the co-operation of the mothers we cannot expect much success. Mr. Dahn of the Grand said he had about eight hundred children at one picture he screened and seemed quite pleased with that day. He had movies on Saturday mornings before Christmas from ten to twelve o'clock as an experiment, but only about one hundred and thirty children attended, so I did not know whether he will repeat this or not.

Mr. Rosenthal of the Allen had a picture running last Friday and Saturday, but I had not heard with what success. The managers are quite willing to cater regularly to children if the mothers would co-operate and they could be assured of a paying audience.

This is the extent of our endeavors for the year just ended, all of which is respectfully submitted.

A. WALTON, Convenor.

FINE AND APPLIED ARTS.

Madam President and Women of the Local Council:

This being the first year of the "Fine and Applied Arts Committee" we are just feeling our way and so have very little so far to report.

The committee consists of Miss Hatton, Miss Lenore Sanderson and the convenor.

During the period of the war the work of the Women's Art Association was almost at a standstill, but the medals and honorary mention cards to encourage the children in the annual competition held in each grade of the Public schools were not neglected. The association has now taken a new lease of life and has a splendid program arranged for the winter and already things are under way in their new studio in the Conservatory of Music.

Seven musicales have been arranged and their is no doubt about their success, the two already given have been most delightful. The "Study Club" has a course of lectures on "Architecture," and they are proving most interesting and instructive. I should like to draw your attention especially to a lecture on the "Art of Book Binding" by Miss Taylor of Toronto (date to be arranged and also one on "Interior Decoration" by Miss Muriel Shark of Toronto on March 20th. This, I am sure will be of interest to us all because "to choose the beautiful in design color and form in the furnishing of the home and in wearing apparel requires training along art lines particularly in the case of those who are not fortunate enough to live in an atmosphere of beauty, and until every girl or woman realizes that beauty is a part of the house and must be learned with not less diligence than is given to the other subjects that go toward the making of a home, it cannot be a natural inheritance of a people."

The committee has recommended some changes in the prize book list of the Peterborough Fall Fair and hope to have the changes made before the next exhibition.

The lack of a morning musicale for several years is, I think, due to the lack of sufficient help in most of the homes.

I hope if anyone feels that the committee or any member of the committee could be of help to them they will not hesitate to call on us as we should be so glad to do what we can.

Dean Farror says: "Art teaches us to see; next, that it teaches us what to see, and thirdly, it teaches us to see more than we should otherwise have seen."

Respectfully submitted,

MAUDE H. RUSH,
Convenor.

REDS TAKE 5000 CAPTIVES

Was Decisive Victory After Battle Lasting Two Days.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Jan. 29. — The Russian Soviet cavalry, commanded by Gen Dumenko, has forded the rivers in the Manych valley, in the lower Don region, and captured 5,000 prisoners, after a two days' battle, the Red forces then continuing to advance, says a Bolshevik communique received today. Further eastward along the same rivers, the fiercest fighting is proceeding against another force, the statement adds.

Five German buyers reached New York on their way to attend the fur auctions in St. Louis.

FRANKLIN AT HEAD OF LIST

His Book, "Way of Wealth," Has Had More Reprints Than the Work of Any Other Author.

Greeley's advice, "Young man, go West," is changed by A. Edward Newton to this:

Riding a hobby differs from riding a horse, said the wise lunatic, in that you can get off the horse.

Anyhow, Mr. Newton takes his own medicine, and for some 30 years he has ridden a hobby all over the continents in search of rare books, Girard writes in Philadelphia Press.

He's a collector, he is, and his home contains an immense and highly valuable library.

"What is the prize book in the whole world?" I asked him.

"The Gutenberg Bible," said he, "for which Henry E. Huntington paid $50,000."

This son of the old Southern Pacific railroad builder has what Mr. Newton declares easily the greatest private library on earth.

You would hardly think it possible to write a book about book collecting which would interest the rank outsider who doesn't know a first folio from a side of sole leather, but Mr. Newton, whose style is delightfully whimsical, has succeeded in doing it.

A copy of Ben Franklin's "Cato Major" was found in a Chester county garret not long ago and was afterward sold for $300, so Mr. Newton reports.

Of all the books and pamphlets Franklin turned off his Philadelphia press, that one, said the famous printer, was his best job typographically.

Franklin did so many things first that folks rarely remember that he also printed the first translation of a Greek or Latin classic that was issued in America.

No one has yet matched the old sage in another respect—400 reprints of a single work. Franklin's "Way of Wealth" has passed that number. There have been 75 editions of it printed in England, 55 in France, 11 in Germany and 8 in Italy.

It has even been translated in Russian and Chinese.

All other best sellers have been backed off the map by that unique output of the Boston lad who some one wittily said "was born in Philadelphia at the age of seventeen."

The Airplane as a Decoy.

Ever since wars have been waged man has made use of decoys to outwit the foe. Even in the recent war a decoy proved to be useful once in a while. An instance occurred at a point on the western front where the British trenches faced a salient of the German trench system. At the time when the British staff determined to reduce the salient, the Daily Chronicle tells us, the Germans were expecting an ordinary attack with its primary bombardment. They promptly fell into the trap set for them.

Early in the morning a British airplane flew very low over the front-line trenches and passed parallel to the German line, but 500 or 600 yards behind it. The Germans thought the plane a target that could not be missed, and turned their backs on the British trenches to fire on the machine. While they were engaging the airplane, the British infantry suddenly went over the top and in a few minutes captured the position and took a number of prisoners.

The machine returned to its airdrome riddled with bullet holes, but both the pilot and the observer were uninjured.

Industry Overdone.

The development of the coconut oil industry in the Philippines has been very rapid, due to war conditions. The exports of oil in 1918 amounted to 115,000 tons, as compared with 45,000 tons in 1917 and 16,000 tons in 1916. There is a scarcity of shipping to take copra to Hull, England, and Marseilles, France, which are the great centers for oil crushing, hence it is found more profitable to ship the less bulky oil to the United States. A number of new oil mills have been constructed in the Philippines in order to fill the demand for oil, but it is a serious question whether the present crushing capacity of the Philippine mills is not in excess of the normal supply of copra.

Philippine Tobacco.

The Philippine Islands' tobacco exports increased greatly in 1918. In that year 25,700 tons of tobacco were exported, as compared with 6,800 tons in 1917. The bulk of this tobacco was shipped during the early months of 1918, and the later months showed a marked decrease. The exports of cigars, however, showed a steady increase during the entire year, the number shipped being 359,000,000, valued at $7,000,000, as against 284,000,000 valued at $4,500,000, in 1917. Most of this production was absorbed by the American market. The increase is largely due to government supervision in order to guarantee the quality of all shipments to the United States.

Real War Scrap Book.

To keep a scrapbook on the recent war sounds like a herculean task, but it was really done by a regular, everyday human being, a man from Seattle, Wash. He began in August, 1914, never realising the enormity of the undertaking, but he stuck to the job and now owns a book containing thousands of columns of war reports and pictures clipped from his favorite papers. It weighs more than 100 pounds, is carefully indexed and promises to be a valuable addition to reference libraries.

An American syndicate may purchase Esplanade Hotel in Berlin Germany, for $1,000,000, giving sellers right to repurchase in ten years.

COUNTY WILL PETITION FOR PROVINCIAL ROAD

PROPOSED HIGHWAY WILL RUN FROM PORT HOPE THROUGH HERE TO COE HILL.

Mr. E. N. McDonald, M.L.A. for East Peterborough, was present at the meeting of the County Council this morning and addressed the members.

He suggested that a deputation from the council or all the councillors in a body wait on Hon. Mr. Biggs, Minister of Public Works, and urge the building of a provincial highway from Port Hope to Peterborough, and from thence in a north easterly direction to the Coe Hill district. Mr. McDonald felt that this proposition, if properly pressed might meet with the approval of the Government and would be a great advantage to the whole of Peterborough County.

A resolution moved by Deputy-Reeve Wilson and seconded by Reeve Brown was passed, in which it was agreed that the whole Council unite to convince the Minister of Public Works of the advantage of such a provincial road.

The co-operation of the Board of Trade and the Automobile Association will be requested for this purpose, and Mr. McDonald and the Council feel confident that their efforts will be rewarded.

At the same time as this deputation waits on the Government it will ask that the colonization road grant under bylaw be continued to all townships which have adopted the provincial highway system.

Capt. Bygot of Lakefield was present and asked for a grant to aid in the erection of a Great War Veterans' Home in Lakefield. This was referred to the finance committee.

The Council adjourned for the afternoon on account of the public live stock sale.

OBITUARY

BARNABAS F. WARD.

Barnabas F. Ward, formerly a resident of this city, and a brother of R. W. Ward, 467 Downie street, died recently at his home in Highland Grove, Haliburton, aged 80 years. For thirty-six years deceased was in the employ of the Waterous Engine Co. of Brantford. For the past seven or eight years he was practically disabled by a paralytic stroke, but the company so appreciated his long years of faithful service that they paid his salary to the end. In the pamphlet which they publish monthly the company say of the late Mr. Ward:

It is with genuine sorrow that we announce the death, on November 1 1919, at Highland Grove, Haliburton County, Ontario, of Barnabas F Ward, aged eighty years, who was for thirty-six years a valued employee of this Company.

Mr. Ward was a travelling engineer, covering for a number of years the territory north of Toronto, and during the late years the Province of Quebec. He resided for many years at Barrie, Ontario, where he was highly esteemed and respected.

He had been in failing health for some time, and had retired to a farm with the hope that he might regain his strength.

His customers and friends will feel a deep sense of loss because of his death.

Mr. Ward's nature was such that he won friends wherever he went. Company we and all his fellow-em- and during this connection with this ployees had learned to honor and respect him for his sterling worth.

What greater testimony of the esteem in which he was held by those who knew him than to say: He lived that all about him were better for his living.

Canada's Coal Regions.

Canada has the only two coal regions on the seacoasts of North America. The bituminous coal of Nova Scotia is estimated to last 700 years; that of Vancouver Island has been operated since 1890.

If you sustain a burn and no remedy is at hand try common toilet soap at once. Simply rub it over the burn and you will secure immediate relief and there will be no blistering.

His Difficulty.

At a training camp during the war the officer of the day was making the rounds of the post. It was during a challenging time. He seated himself on the corner post of a fence and waited for the sentry. The sentry, a raw recruit from the woods came slowly up and stopped only a few feet from the O. D. After waiting in silence for a few moments the officer asked: "Well, what are you going to say?" "Durned if I know what to say," drawled the recruit. "If you were walking I'd say 'Halt'!"

SCHOOL INSPECTOR R. LEES

ing properly attended to and report any failure of such performance to the Department of Education.

Up to the present, no notices of any appointments have reached me, nor have I any knowledge that steps have been taken for carrying out the provisions of the act. This matter is one of the most vital importance. Under our system provision has to be made at the public expense for the education of all the children. It is conceded that in the interests of the state, for the promotion of good citizenship, and the general wellbeing of the nation, every child should be educated. Provision for this is being made at great expense and it is surely reasonable that no child should be deprived, through the carelessness, indifference, or selfishness of parents of the advantages thus provided for them and to which they are justly entitled. To prevent such injustice and to secure for every young person full advantage of the provision thus made is the object of the act. It is an object sufficiently exalted to appeal to the highest sentiment and command the best effort of all who have anything to do with public affairs. It is to be hoped that municipal councils, in whose hands the initiative is placed will give it that prompt and serious consideration its importance deserves.

The Special Grant

The Legislature, at its last session, voted a quarter of a million dollars to be distributed among the rural schools for the purpose of increasing teachers' salaries. Intimation was made that sections that used this grant for the purpose of reducing local contributions instead of adding it to the remuneration of the teacher would not be permitted to share in it next year. This special grant was distributed in September. The mode of distribution was based on a combined consideration of the rate of salary paid and the assessment of the section. A percentage of the salary above a fixed initial amount was paid, the percentage increasing from 5 to 30 as the salary increased, and the initial amount on which no percentage was paid decreasing from $500 to $100 as the assessment decreased. The total amount received by the schools of Peterborough East was $4,390.59.

Consolidated Schools.

At the last session of the Legislature, there was also passed an act making fuller provision for the consolidation of rural schools. This new act makes very liberal provision in the way of grants for building and equipment as well as for maintenance and for transportation of children. One immediate result has been a greatly increased interest in this important movement. There are, at the present time, several communities in the inspectorate that are making inquiry and giving earnest thought to the question. While no consolidations are in immediate prospect I shall be disappointed if, in the near future, some of those who now have the matter under consideration do not get together and carry the plan to completion.

GOOD ROADS MEETING OPENS IN STRATFORD

HIGHWAY FROM SARNIA TO TORONTO IS CHIEF SUBJECT OF DISCUSSION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Stratford, Jan. 29. — Upwards of one hundred delegates from municipalities between Toronto and Sarnia interested in the straight line highway, are here today conferring with Hon. F. C. Biggs. Luncheon was held at noon, after which an informal discussion took place. Sarnia's big delegation did not arrive owing to transportation troubles, but in a five-hundred word telegram heartily endorsed the project of a highway from Toronto to Sarnia. Mr. Biggs will be pressed for some definite statement regarding the matter.

LABOR SEEKS PEACE WITH SOVIET RUSSIA

SAYS CONTINUATION OF WAR IMPOSES SUFFERING ON THE HELPLESS.

London, Jan. 29.—Complete and immediate peace for Soviet Russia is declared necessary in a manifesto signed by eighteen prominent Labor leaders, including John Robt. Clynes, former food controller; James Henry Thomas, general secretary of the National Union of Railwaymen, and William Brace, miners' leader.

Theories Not Accepted.

The signatories assert that they "do not subscribe to the political and social theories on which the Soviet Government is based," but contend that a continuance of the state of war is inexcusable, and that the course of least risk all round is peace.

They maintain that if the Soviet Government is merely imposing its power on the Russian people by tyranny, it is because the people are cowed by privation and hunger, and that those conditions will be perpetuated by a state of war, the horrors of which will fall, not upon the tyrannical government, but upon the peasants, women and children.

"Since Tanlac has fixed me up so fine and added fifteen pounds to my weight, everybody around where I live has commenced to take it, and they are highly pleased with it," said James Jones, a well known and prosperous farmer who lives at Grey, a small town thirteen miles south of Regina, Sask.

"For about a year I have been troubled with indigestion so bad that I cold hardly eat a thing that would agree with me," he continued. "I had such a poor appetite that I had to force myself to eat enough to keep alive, and even then the pains in my stomach would almost draw me double. Gas formed on my stomach and it would press up into my chest so bad that it caused my heart to palpitate terribly and gave me pains just under my heart. I had awful headaches and dizzy spells regularly and I have seen times when they were so bad that I would have to quit work for a day or more at a time. I had severe pains in my back that hurt me most when I had to bend over, and often I would be sitting down and my back would pain me so bad I could hardly stand it. My sleep was restless and irregular, and many a night I would wake up at all hours and could hardly get to sleep before it was time to get up.

"A friend of mine who had tried Tanlac told me it was just what I needed, and on his advice I began taking it. Now I am thankful to friend for he knew what he was talking about when he said Tanlac was just what I needed, for it has overcome my troubles and restored me to health. I have a fine appetite and after eating I am never troubled any more with pains in my stomach, and as the gas has stopped forming I am not bothered with palpitation or pains under my heart. Headaches and dizzy spells are a thing of the past, and I can sleep sound all night long. The pains in my back have entirely disappeared and I can bend over without an ache, and this fall I have shouldered a lot of wheat, but I haven't a pain in my back. I consider Tanlac the best medicine in the world, and I don't hesitate a minute to recommend it to others."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

NEW BUILDING FOR THE MILLBROOK FAIR

DIRECTORS AT ANNUAL MEETING DECIDE ON ERECTION OF NEW STRUCTURE.

Millbrook, Jan. 29.—The annual meeting of the Millbrook Agricultural Society was held in the Council Chambers on Wednesday, the 21st. There was a good attendance and a good meeting. The treasurer's report showed a balance on hand from 1919 of about $600.

Correspondence was read from J. Lockie Wilson, superintendent of fairs and exhibitions, complimenting the society on the excellence of their fair of 1919 as reported to him by the department judges employed.

It was decided to carry on the field crop competition for 1920 and two classes of grain will be competed in, namely, fall wheat and oats.

It was also decided to engage six Government judges for the 1920 fair as the work of the departmental judges has been quite satisfactory.

The fair this year will be held on Thursday and Friday, Sept. 30th and Oct. 1st.

The following officers and directors were appointed:

President—J. W. Hamilton,

Vice-President—R. J. McKnight.

2nd Vice-President—L. W. Smith.

Secretary-Treasurer—J. McGill.

Directors—W. T. Donaldson, W. H. Lough, T. A. Kelly, J. L. Fair. D. Sutton, W. S. Given, G. A. Fair, A. J. Henderson, N. Belch, H. A. Fallis, L. H. Winslow, Harold Tait, J. W. McCamns, O. Larmer, J. H. Paul Ed. Ball, J. L. McCamus, Leonard McNeil, J. W. Larmer, W. Rutherford.

Auditors — R. Stanton, and D. Humpton.

R. J. McKnight and O. Larmer were appointed delegates to attend the convention of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions to be held in Toronto on Feb. 3rd and 4th.

At the close of the annual meeting a directors' meeting was held and all entered very enthusiastically into the discussion of the question of building a main building on the grounds this year. All were strongly in favor of this step and consequently all may expect to see a fine steel building housing the indoor exhibits of 1920. Let all boost the fair for 1920 and also urge upon the members of the local Councils the great need of suitable buildings for an exhibition and also the fact that liberal assistance should be given by the local municipalities.

COUNTY COUNCIL VOTES $70,000 FOR GENERAL USE

$500 GRANTED TO CHILDREN'S AID SOCIETY FOR COMING YEAR.

Yesterday afternoon's meeting of the County Council was during most of the time held as a finance committee. A long list of accounts were approved and initialed by the chairman.

The Ontario Free Children's Hospital requested a grant from the Council and considerable discussion on this subject followed. Councillor Clarke stated that when a patient from their township was admitted to the hospital the municipality was called upon to guarantee $1.25 a day for the maintenance of the child.

Authority was given for a bylaw to be drawn up to borrow $70,000 for current expenses during the year of 1920. This will be used for general purposes, schools House of Refuge and the county roads. The various townships that are working on the county road system intimated that they would assess from 2 to 4 mills for this purpose.

Councillors Eason and Griffith were given authority to dispose of $4,000 of debentures for bridge building and repairing.

On a motion of Councillors Squire and Matheson, Mr. W. H. White's salary was raised to $4 a day and he will be paid extra for supervising the heating of the House of Refuge.

A $500 grant was passed for the Children's Aid Society.

Grants For Fairs.

The matter of making a grant to the East Peterborough Exhibition was again brought up. Reeve Squire, of Norwood, moved that $1,000 be granted, but upon expressions of disapproval being spoken by several of his associates, he modified it to $500.

Upon the motion of Councillors Shaw and Coughlin, the matter of this grant was left over for further consideration when it will be decided how much should be granted to each fair in the county.

Maine citizens have petitioned for a mandamus requiring Gov Milliken to submit the prohibition amendment to a referendum.

OMEMEE

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, Jan. 29 — Mrs. Bowie, of Toronto, is spending a few days with her aunt, Mrs. Johnston, who has been quite ill.

Congratulations are in order to Warden Wilson ,in whom the people of Omemee and Emily have fullest confidence.

The Cumming's sale, which was held on Tuesday afternoon, drew a lot of people to the village.

Mrs. Wm. Earl, assisted by Mrs. G. R. Earl, was the hostess of two afternoon teas last week, one on Wednesday and one on Friday.

The Misses Mordon entertained a number of young people last week.

Mr. Lou Windrim returned last week from a six months' tour of the West.

Mrs. Matthews was a visitors to Peterborough last week.

Dame rumor was particularly busy this week, a report having spread that one of our popular young high school students had been removed to the hospital where it had been found necessary to amputate her arm as a result of vaccination. Just when the report was at its highest the young lady in question returned to school, thus relieving the anxiety of her many friends.

Warden Wilson, of Emily, and Reeve Parsons, of Omemee, are in session at County Council this week.

Mr. Nobel Clement, of Oshawa, was home over the week-end.

A jolly sleighing party of five sleigh loads visited the Bethel League last Thursday night when the Omemee Methodist League furnished the program.

Miss Jewett returned last week from a pleasant month's visit spent with Mrs. Hoyle, of Cannington.

Miss Rita Johnston returned from Toronto a week ago and has accepted a position in the MacPherson store.

Mrs. Southworth was the hostess of a very successful tea on Wednesday afternoon.

Mr. Harry Stinson, of Oshawa spent the week-end with his parents.

Mrs. Golwell, of Peterborough, was a visitor to Omemee last week.

Mrs. Stillman is the guest of her brother, Inspector Elliott, in Toronto.

PUBLIC SCHOOL INSPECTOR

or $700 when she can begin work in a business office at once at a reasonable salary and in two or three years get a remuneration of $1,000.00? Why should a young girl with a High School Entrance standing enter upon a four or five years' course with the teaching profession and a $700 salary in view when she can immediately get a very useful and honorable position at $16.00 a week? And the cases I have cited are neither fictitious nor rare.

Thanks to the larger appropriations by the Legislature for educational purposes and to the more rational basis of distribution over $100,000 has been granted to the rural schools of the Inspectorate during the last ten years. These grants have resulted in a forward movement of salaries. But the increase has been too slow and utterly inadequate to meet the situation. It cannot be too strongly impressed upon both rural and urban Boards that if we are to retain the services of experienced and competent teachers and if we are to secure qualified teachers for the vacancies that naturally occur there must be a prompt and distinct increase in present salaries.

The Education Departments of Saskatchewan and Alberta have been advertising in Ontario papers for teachers offering $840.00 as the lowest salary to be paid. Ontario cities are increasing their salaries everywhere; and everywhere throughout the Province teachers are organizing for the purpose of securing that they should never have been compelled to ask for—a square deal. The following from the Farmer's Sun of Saturday last is pertinent and worthy of serious perusal.

SALARIES OF TEACHERS

The teachers of Toronto are asking that they be given a twenty-five per cent. increase to compensate them for the mounting cost of living. We are satisfied that the demand is a reasonable one, and we trust that the trustees will accede to their request.

There is no money expended which returns better value than that which is expended in educating the youth of the land. This is at the very basis of good citizenship, but we cannot expect to secure and retain good teachers unless we pay them a living wage.

During the past few years, the men and women on fixed salaries have been ground between the upper and lower millstones. The abnormal increase in the cost of living has been exceedingly hard on school teachers and other salaried people. The purchasing power of a dollar today is less than one-half of what it was in pre-war days.

This question of securing better teachers is a very pressing problem and must be faced in both country and city. In the Province as a whole teachers are under-paid, and as a result men leave it at the very first opportunity. It is one of the noblest and best of callings, and should not be used as a stepping-stone to some more remunerative occupation. We must pay our teachers a living wage and make it a worth while occupation. We hope that Toronto will set a good example to the rest of the Province.

A BETTER SYSTEM OF SCHOOL ORGANIZATION is the third condition of better rural schools. Our system of rural school management originated in Massachusetts two hundred years ago and was adopted here when our Public School system was founded in the forties. The management of schools by section Boards was admirably adopted to the primitive conditions of pioneer life when "settlements" were few and separated by long distances; when transportation was difficult and roads impassable. To-day the system is an anachronism. It belongs to the same class as the V harrow, the ox cart and the spinning wheel. It is unwieldy; it is cumbrous; it perpetuates the parochial vision; it is difficult to "get under way," it more than all other influences combined, stands in the way of real educational progress. There is absolutely no educational or business need for so many school sections and such a large number of trustees. The schools of Toronto with a staff of 1,800 teachers with an annual payment of salaries of a million and a half dollars and school buildings valued at over $13,000,000 are managed by a Board of a dozen members.

Chicago with six thousand teachers and costing over eight million dollars a year looks after its educational and business affairs with a Board of 21, and could do it better with half that number. The schools of with about pupils are managed by trustees. The argument is sometimes made that these Boards represent closely the wishes of the people. This statement may be true. If so it represents the weakness of the system. Good trustees and teachers are alike too much subject to the criticism, the caprice and the control of those who have no personal interest in the school.

NEW SYSTEM NEEDED

And this has a great deal to do with teachers leaving their schools. I am strongly convinced that no real educational progress can be made under our present system of organization. Where we have good individual schools it is in spite of the system and because of the progressive leadership of some individual. The system, once useful and necessary, has reached the stage of decrepitude. It ought to be laid aside and its place filled by a County Board of Education. Then we shall have a body of men whose business it would be to do educational work.

The Council's attention is directed to the provisions of the Compulsory School Attendance Act section 9, (1) and (3), section 10 and section 14 (1). (3). (4) and (5). I have communicated with the clerks of the various municipalities with reference to the matter of appointment of School Attendance Officers and the preparation of required lists. Up to the present I have had replies from only and these do not indicate that the provisions of the Act have been complied with. It may be that some Councils do not realize that the Act is imperative.

Permit me also to refer to the question of Medical and Dental Inspection of Schools. The Amendment to the Department of Education Act of 1919 gives the Minister of Education authority, "to appoint Officers for the purpose of Medical and Dental inspection and to fix and pay their salaries and to pay the travelling and other expenses incidental to Medical and Dental inspection."

Late in Autumn negotiations were under way with the dentists of the County preparatory to carrying out the Minister's instructions. The general vaccination of a few weeks ago seemed to make it undesirable to enter upon the work at the close of last term.

It is probable that in the near future steps will be taken to introduce both Medical and Dental inspection into the schools of the county.

USE MAILS TO COLLECT, BUT LOSE ONLY 2% OF ACCOUNTS

"Less than 4 per cent of our accounts go to our legal department; less than 2 per cent are lost," said Alfred J. Obst, credit manager of N. Bullinger's Peoples Credit Co., of Boston, in discussing the mtater of honesty of the general public.

This small proportion of losses from more than 130,000 accounts carried by the company, is all the more remarkable because this company employs no collectors nor investigators. The customers either call at the office and pay in person or send their remittance by mail. When accounts lag, Uncle Sam's postoffice department is the only collection agency used. Of the 4 per cent of accounts turned over to the legal department, half of them settle after a letter or two are sent out.

Credit is either given to a prospective customer within from two to twenty minutes, or refused him. There are no long waits sometimes of two or three days, as is often the case with other credit houses. The customer gives references and these are investigated by telephone. So large a number of accounts are carried that many of the references given can be found on the company's own books and they prove to be the best of references. Very often a new customer comes through recommendation of a customer already on the books.

The names are indexed and numbered. Card filing systems are used and the complete story of references transactions and payments is kept on the card. The concern keeps in touch with customers who have used the company's credit through form letters, urging them to again take advantage of the company's credit system whenever they desire. These letters are sent out with more or less frequency acording to the activity of the account, as long as the concern has the customer's address. Should the customer move away and the letters be returned to the company for a new address, then the form letters cease. No letters are sent while a customer's account is active unless the payments lapse and lapsed accounts are not turned over to the legal department until every form of letter in the regular channels fails to bring a response.

A THREE-PURPOSE GROCERY STORE FIXTURE

Grocery stores as a rule do not seem to make use of window backgrounds as much as do stores in other lines. Skaggs United Stores, of Boise, Idaho, have built in a feature that serves three distinct and worthwhile purposes.

This is a three-shelf fixture that runs along one side of the store up against the window base with an opening allowed for the radiator. This serves first of all the necessary function of stocking the package crackers and cookies. It also gives the store an inside display of these goods. And, as it is open at both sides and, against the window base it serves as a background that means a window display of the same goods.

It was figured that as long as a fixture had to be designed to take care of the stock it might just as well display the goods inside and out.

NEWSPAPER ADS SOLD 856 CARLOADS OF POTATOES

Such has been the experience of Charles Hechtman, a grower-shipper of potatoes of Osseo, Minn. Using space in the papers to tell of the merits of his "cash and carry" plan of selling car-lots of potatoes direct from the farm, Hechtman sold more than one-tenth of the total [illegible] movement up to October 18 last, with only "one kick to every fifty-five cars," as he stated recently in one of his advertisements, and then proceeded to explain the complaints and tell how he rectified them.

The advantage of this system of selling is apparent. When he sells Hechtman knows the exact amount he will receive, as colpared with shipping to a commission concern, when he doesn't know what he will get, or shipping to a delivery point buyer who may refuse the shipment, find fault with quality or condition and force an adjustment. This method also permits him to do business on a smaller capital, and because his selling expense is less, he can really sell for less.

Hechtmans advertising methods are original, even though his "copy" isn't always strictly grammatical. He usually pays no attention to spelling and punctuation, but confines himself to "talking" in his ads direct to the trade. One of his advertisements telling of a complaint he received, read as follows:

"'Twas so soft that I was just about to advertise for some one to kick in with a complaint when—Bing! W. J. Shellenberger, Republican, Neb., somewhere out in the Tall Grass country. This man was writing in at the rate of $2,000 to $3,000 per day. I don't know him from a nickle pot of sour beans, but did know he was all wool and a yard wide—when I had some 10m—15m dollars of his jack in my jeans, and he wired: 'Car so-and-so, at Dorchester, Neb., is a car of nutmegs, whatr-yu-goin-tu-do-about-it?' I said, 'Nothin' to do about, but settle the Hechtman way—wiring the return of your money; you handle the car!' Another guy at Akron, Ohio, says: 'Like buying a pig-in-a-poke. Car is short-weight seventeen bushels.' Next day he fainted dead away when he found a draft for the shortage."

NOW IT'S THE AUTO DEPARTMENT STORE

Because the automobile grocery stores of the A. B. Flory Grocery and Baking Co., which operates thirty stores and routes in Canton, O., have proved remarkably successful in interurban sales. A. B. Flory plans to put into service a department store on a large truck. The store will be thirty or forty feet long with entrance in the rear, with counter and meat refrigerator. One side will be stocked with groceries another with notions; another with drugs.

Two men will operate the auto department store in suburban villages and the rural communities near here. Hams and needles, bread and brooms candy and pills will be available at the front door of every house along the auto store route.

BISHOP UNSATISFIED WITH THE AFOLOGY

SUES QUEBEC NEWSPAPER PUBLISHERS OVER AN ALPUBLISHERS OVER AN ALLEGED LIBEL

Unstated damages are claimed by Bishop David Joseph Scollard of North Bay, whose home is in Baltimore and who is well known in this city, against Le Syndicat d'Oeuvres Socials, Limite, publishers of Le Droit, for alleged libel. The article which Bishop Scollard regarded as libelous appeared in the issue of Le Droit of November 22, 1919, in the form of a despatch from Sturgeon Falls, which claimed that the Bishop was discriminating against French-Canadian priests in appointing a successor to Rev. Mr. Langlois as parish priest at that place. The article stated further that Bishop Scollard had used unjust discrimination against the French-Canadian clergy in other appointments.

The publishers of Le Droit were requested to retract the statements, and in an article on January 10, 1920, issued a quasi-apology, which proved unacceptable to the Bishop. The publishers of the paper refused to make any further retraction, and the writ for libel is the result.

PICCADILLY JIM SHOWS LIFE ON BROADWAY

MOVIE STAR SAYS HE WAS IN EXCITEMENT ALL THE TIME

Owen Moore confesses to a fondness for the Broadway bright lights—within reason. He admits there are times when nothing pleases him more than to jazz about joyously with a group of congenial spirits, haunting certain cafes known for glittering atmosphere, dancing and staccato music.

But never again, says Owen Moore. He is off the man-about-town stuff for life.

Playing "Piccadilly Jim" did this thing to Owen of the Irish eyes and smile. After the Selznick star had finished the merry-go-round of adventure that "Piccadilly Jim," the P. G. Wodehouse hero, gets into five reels of scampering plot, he was ready for a return to quiet life.

"Piccadilly Jim" is my latest picture, and I thought it would be my last," said Mr. Moore. "I actually lived in cafes and jazz parlors and near-bars and vaudeville shows. My life was one continued round of excitement—they would keep me up until 2 A. M. 'shooting' the wild night life, and have me out at seven in the morning doing interiors. I thought I knew a good deal about the man-about-town sort of thing, but this "Piccadilly Jim" had me faded.

Owen Moore is the newest addition to Selznick's galaxy of stars and if "Piccadilly Jim" is an indication of what may be expected from him in the future, there are no heights to which he may not hope to attain. The play opens at the Empire Theatre Monday.

: : AT THE GRAND : :

Brimful of catchy music and with a score of attractive chorus girls bedecked in bright new costumes, "Watch Your Step," as presented at the Grand last night was a show well worth while. The music was by Irving Berlin, the clever American writer, who has so many successes to his credit, and the plot, though small, by Harry B. Smith.

While more on the burlesque order than any other, the singing and dancing of the various artistes places it in a class by itself. Mr. Chas. Udell as Ebenezer Hardacre was a scream. Harry C. Green had a good black-face specialty and his songs all had a point. The singing of Mr Arthur Sherman was of a high order, as was also that of Miss Charlotte Allen and Miss Margaret Wood. Probably the best song of the piece was "By-Lo" as sung by Miss Allen, but the songs were all good and it would be hard to discriminate.

For tonight the management of the Grand has a good bill of Keith vaudeville and pictures which should attract a large audience to the George street playhouse.

TRAVEL IN JAPAN

Hotel Customs Somewhat Embarrassing to Europeans.

Taking Bath in Public, in Water That Would Boil a Lobster, Is, or Used to Be, in the Nature of Torture.

With the advent of the "modern hotel" in Japan the old inns, or rest-houses, have been to a large extent relegated to obscurity, but some still survive in parts where European travelers seldom penetrate. The kind of welcome accorded to visitors in one of the village inns is very far removed from western ideas of hospitality. Here is the interesting experience of a traveler as related in The Caterer and Hotelkeepers' Gazette:

"As soon as I arrived I was conducted by the polite hostess into the chief guestroom, which looked out upon the cool orchard of a temple.

"Cushions were brought in, and bright kimonos. I took off my dusty English clothes, and put on first the lower kimona, made of cotton; and then a gaudy silk one, bright with the colors of the hotel.

"The room, like all Japanese rooms, was bare except for a single decoration. There is always a special corner for the room's ornament, which is sometimes a vase of flowers, sometimes a piece of china, sometimes simply a painting upon silk or a woodcut. The subjects are not seldom such as bring a blush to the European cheek, but they have no such effect on the Japanese, who seem more concerned with the arrangement than the subject of the ornaments. There are strict rules for decoration; it is laid down, for example, that flowers of different colors should not be mixed in one vase.

"At length, because I was famishing, a low table and a brazier were brought in and set in front of me and my cushions.

"Every time I thought I had finished, the hostess or one of the maids would trip in with another tray of dishes and put them before me on the table. Had I not been able to use chopsticks before, I should certainly have become expert by the end of that meal.

"A little while after the meal—for it did end at last—I was told that the bath was ready. I was taken to the open courtyard and introduced to the arrangements there.

"Two huge barrels were sunk in the earth, one filled with hot, the other with cold water. There was a thin screen on two sides—not against prying eyes, but simply to keep off the wind. Indeed, as I began to take off my kimonos an interested audience of both sexes turned to watch me. This was unpleasant, and I did my best to dodge their gaze behind the screen.

"I might have saved myself the trouble. A moment later, in reply to the calls of the innkeeper and his wife, their daughter came up hastily to bathe me, as her duty was. She was not in the least embarrassed—and I soon had other things to worry me, for when, at the young lady's direction, I let myself down into the hot tub I discovered that, in the usual Japanese fashion, the heat of the water in it was not less than 115 degrees Fahrenheit.

"Up to my neck in that hot bath I suffered exquisite torture, which turned to the most exquisite agony when I stepped on the still hotter kettle lying on the bottom of the tub. The innkeeper's daughter pulled me out, red as a lobster and very nearly boiled. She dropped me, more dead than alive, into the cold tub, pulled me out again, and dried me.

"Then she bowed politely, and left me to return to my room."

Husbands Are Hoping.

Recently an Irvington woman invited a few of her friends to play cards during the afternoon. There was a strong intimation that the highest score would be rewarded with a prize. That stimulated interest to a degree.

The women had visions of the ordinary prizes given for card proficiency. One of them thought of a nicely hemmed towel, another saw visions of a cut-glass tumbler, and still another dreamed of something else. There was but one table and as the hostess was barred the contest was wholly between the remaining three. Finally the games were over and the scores tabulated. Then the hostess came in with a big glass of currant jelly and presented it as the prize of the afternoon. She picked the currants in her own garden and had made the jelly herself.

There is hope in the hearts of some Irvington husbands that the fad of giving real food as prizes will grow. Then, if their wives are good enough bridge players there may be something to eat when husbands come home in the evening.—Indianapolis News.

No Jugo-Slav Race.

There is in strictness no such thing as a Jugo-Slav. There are Serbs, Croats and Slovenes, all of whom speak the same language, with variations, and are now of the same nationality. There is a religious question among Jugo-Slavs, which has, on occasion, been stressed by the intriguing imperialist politicians on the borders who have been anxious to prevent national unity, the Serbs being of the Greek, or Orthodox church, and the Croats and Slovenes of the Roman church. There are no more than 12,000,000 of them altogether, but the territory of the new nation is larger than that of Great Britain.

Pollution of waters in which they spawn is causing oysters to be scarce, and soon likely to be classed as a luxury.

NICK'S HARD FATE

One Romanoff to Whom Country Has Been Ungrateful.

From March, 1917, till October, 1918 Grand Duke Nicholas Romanoff, former commander in chief of the Russian armies and one of the most brilliant generals of the great war, was a prisoner in the town of Yalta in the Crimea. He is now in Milan with his family, humbly housed. The story of "Big Nick" is one of the most amazing romances of the war, the Pittsburgh Gazette-Times states.

When the bolsheviki gained control of Russia Nicholas was residing at Tiflis, where he had been governor under the czar and under the Lvoff regime. He was summoned to Yalta by the bolshevik authorities and obeyed the summons. His brother, his wife, his sister-in-law and other members of his family and his suite were imprisoned with him. Twenty-five bolshevik soldiers were detailed to guard the distinguished prisoners.

Late in the summer of 1918 it was decided by the Yalta soviet to execute all the prisoners. The bolshevik guards absolutely declined to permit the sentence of death to be executed and sent the firing squad back to headquarters. Three times thereafter executioners were sent to kill the prisoners, but in each instance the guard prevented the carrying-out of the sentence.

When the Germans came to Yalta Nicholas declined to permit the Germans to enter the house that had been his prison, declaring his utter loathing of all things German. Soon after this the allies took Yalta and Nicholas was rescued.

All the private fortune of the grand duke has been lost. His lands have been confiscated. At Milan he lives comfortably, but very unostentatiously.

Democracy owes much to Grand Duke Nicholas. He was, in fact, a stanch upholder of the old Russian absolutism. But first of all Nicholas was a Russian. He knew Russia's salvation depended on the vanquishing of Germany. He was a leader of consummate skill and it is more than probable that only his splendid generalship prevented Germany from winning the war in the early stages. His retreat before the tremendous attack of Mackesen and Hindenburg, which resulted in the saving of the Russian armies, was one of the most notable chapters of the war.

Between the bolshevist Russia of today and the old autocratic Russia for which Nicholas fought, practical students and statesmen find little choice, but it must be admitted that the autocracy produced great men, while the gutter communism has found only scoundrels for its leaders. In the awarding of justice there should be some provision for this gigantic Russian, who in 1914 and 1915 prevented Germany from marching to easy victory.

No Horses on Largest Farm.

A 200,000-acre farm, the largest in the world, which is the direct result of the government's efforts to stimulate the growing of wheat, is described by Robert H. Moulton in Everybody's.

"The farm is devoted entirely to wheat, and if it produces somewhere around the country's average of twenty-eight bushels per acre, which is practically certain, it will add approximately 5,650,000 bushels to the 1919 wheat crop," says the writer.

"All of the work is being done with tractors. Last fall when the first ground was broken, there were fifty monster machines at work tearing up the prairie sod. They plow on an average of one acre a minute for the working time. A record was made one day of 1,880 acres turned and broken. All the seeding, harvesting, etc., will also be done by tractors, and then, of course, there are the thrashing machines. Hence, the absolute no-accountness of horses about this place."

Price of Labor.

An Indiana suffragist, who is a widely-known speaker, went to her door the other morning to buy some blackberries of a young country woman, reports the Indianapolis News. The berries were fine, but the suffragist wished them at a lower price than they were offered. "Why, they just grow along the roadside so plentifully that all you have to do is to pick them," she told the woman. "Don't you think you are charging a rather exorbitant price for your labor?"

The country woman put her boxes back into her basket. "I've known of higher-priced labor," she retorted testily. "Words are more plentiful than blackberries and yet our club had to pay you $25 last winter for putting a bunch of them together."

His Resolve.

"It is better to do your losing early in the season."

"I know that axiom," said the baseball manager, "but if I happen to win a few games I'll endeavor to bear it with resignation."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

No Loss of Animation.

"I suppose Crimson Gulch is quieter since the bar closed."

"Not yet," said Cactus Joe. "All you've got to do is to say 'prohibition' and everybody begins to argue at the top of his voice."

HER LITTLE TRICK A FAILURE

Situation That Rather Mortified Indiana Miss Saved by Sense and Tact of Her Companion.

He had come all the way from Chicago, so the Terre Haute young woman was anxious to entertain him in style. Clad in her best dress she accompanied him to a hotel for dinner and then afterward to a picture house for the afternoon. But her joy had one rap when just before she started away from the home mother commissioned her to buy a pound of cheese while she was downtown. And after she saw the very modish costume of the young man she hated that errand worse than ever. 'He'd be provoked if I carried a greasy package along the street home," she thought, "but, still I have to get the cheese or mother will be angry."

They left the moving picture house and the young woman told of her next errand—a visit to one of the large department stores. "I have to get some cream and other toilet goods," she said, when they had reached the store. "You wait here and I'll be back in a minute."

So while the young man strolled up and down in front of the store, she bought the cheese, having it put into a fancy sack so that the package would resemble beauty preparations. Then, happy over her own ingenuity, she tripped out to meet the gallant. "We'll stop at the drug store for a soda and then we'll go home," he suggested.

They stopped at the drug store. Carefully the young woman deposited the sack of cheese on the empty chair opposite the young man so that he would not obtain a whiff of its contents. Placidly she went on with her conversation until some one touched her on the shoulder. "Lady," a man's voice said, "that cat has got your cheese out in the middle of the floor."

Horrorstricken, she turned to see a large cat happily eating the large wedge of cheese. She also noticed that her companion had heard and seen the man and the cat. She moistened her lips to speak but he spoke first: "If more girls would use such beauty preparations as that," he said, smilingly, "they wouldn't find husbands so hard to get."—Indianapolis News.

Hatless M. P.'s

Among the changes noticeable in this house of commons is the absence of the hat when members are in the house itself. Formerly hats were universally worn when members were seated or in the lobby. Only the whips were hatless in the lobby; that marked them out from the others. Now nearly the only members who still retain their headgear—both glossy silk toppers—are Mr. Chamberlain and Sir Frederick Banbury. Both make great play with it. Sir Frederick raises his hat when a minister answers one of his questions or when, in the fencing phrase, he is touche in debate. The chancellor of the exchequer takes his off when he rises to speak and puts it on the table in front of him, and when listening to a speaker sits with it well forward over his eyes and his feet planted high up on the side of the table.—London Morning Post

Week of Fasting Advised.

Fayette county, Pennsylvania physicians are advising a fast of one week to cause a reduction in food prices. The physicians state that anyone above sixteen can fast a week with beneficial results and that a half-million dollars would be saved by Fayette county folks in that time.

The physicians suggest that only water be taken in the six-day fast. In discussing the proposed fast, a physician said:

"Such a fast will positively not injure anyone. I would be willing to undertake a trial fast of a week simply to demonstrate the feasibility of the plan and its beneficial results physically. Water, of course, is to be taken, but, thank heaven, that costs little. If there are any persons who desire to join me in a trial fast I am willing to start any time."

Belgians Retain Old Customs.

When the Germans invaded Belgium, several of the fleeing families sought refuge in Staten Island, New York, says Popular Mechanics magazine, where they have settled permanently, adopting many American ways, of course, but clinging to certain homeland customs which are of much interest to their neighbors. One of these is the use of dogs as draft animals. Dog teams are hitched to two-wheel carts, loaded with milk or vegetables, which are made like hundreds of others to be found in Belgium. The animals wear muzzles of special design, which do not interfere with eating and drinking. A special collar, made in part of pronged egg-shaped units, is used in training the dogs to work.

Recognize God's Guidance.

The hand of the Lord is to be recognized officially in South Africa. A resolution unanimously passed the provincial council at Pretoria, calling on the government to amend the South African act in such a way that it clearly appears therefrom that the guidance of the Lord is acknowledged in all matters of the Union of South Africa.

Boys Discovered Cavern.

Boys snooping around at Lock Haven, Pa., found a hole fifteen feet wide and twelve feet deep extending under the state road near the Clinton Country club. They could hear water running, and it is thought that the cavern, unsuspected by those who use the road, had been made by the outbreak of a large spring from an underground stream.

Pelts valued at $10,000,000 will be placed on sale at the mid-winter New York fur auction, beginning Feb. 16.

Furs Boom Far North.

Preparations are already being made for a greatly increased trade into the far north. A number of new trading posts are being opened up, one company alone having 12 on its extension list. The outlook for a larger and more profitable traffic with the wilderness country of the Athabasca and Mackenzie river basins is considered so good that the traders into the north are buying up heavy stocks of merchandise for their Indian and Eskimo customers and are laying plans to move them as soon as navigation opens.

There are now four large trading concerns in the Mackenzie field, each with from 12 to 30 posts, and besides these many independent traders are doing business in a smaller way, but no less actively.

The ramifications of this northern business have been extended from a few outposts just beyond Edmonton to a network of wilderness trading centres all over the top country, as far north as the delta of the Mackenzie. This means that it is possible to buy things to eat and wear almost to the Arctic coast.

It is fur, of course, that forms the basis of all this business. With the present world-wide demand for fine furs, the cultivation of commercial relations with the Canadian north is found to be highly profitable, and it looks now as though a larger production of raw material will come from the sub-Arctics next year than ever before. At any rate, the traders are planning on an extra busy season, and the Indians are sending down word that the prospects for an abundant fur catch were never better.

New Business Methods.

Some new methods are being introduced into the northern fur trade, the most important, perhaps, being the substitution of a cash system for the time-honored bartering that has always been picturesque, but not always satisfactory. Much business will continue to be transacted at the northern posts in the old way, to which the Indian and halfbreed trappers have become accustomed, but some of the traders have now adopted the plan of paying money for the furs, which puts the north more clearly on a par with the rest of the world. The trappers, it has been found, like to handle money, and in the end it comes back over the traders' counters for store goods. Incidentally, the wilderness folk are learning to talk in terms of dollars instead of beaver skins, which used to be the money standard of the north.

Bryant's Writings.

Bryant's writings transport us to the depths of the solemn, primeval forest, to the shores of the lonely lake, the banks of the wild, nameless stream, or the brow of the rocky upland rising like a promontory from amidst a wide ocean of foliage, while they shed around us the glories of a climate fierce in its extremes, but splendid in its vicissitudes.—Irving.

To Dry Narrow-Necked Bottle.

In order to remove the last few drops of water which remain after washing and draining a narrow-necked bottle, dry the rim on the mouth and then hold the bottle upside down under cold water running from the tap. In about half a minute dry the outside of the bottle and examine the inside, when it will be found perfectly dry.

RECORD SCORE ROLLED BY THE LAWN BOWLERS

FOUR OF THE TEAM WENT OVER THE 600 MARK LAST NIGHT

Last night the Lawn bowlers defeated the Pastimes in three straight games and broke all records in the Five Pin League at the Water street alleys, roll the first single of 1069 and the game with 1072 and totalling the three games with 3083, now holding the record of the single and high three games. Four of the Lawn Bowlers passed the six hundred mark. Gillian was high man with 658, Maynard 627, Ross 626, Pratt 607. Hendry was low man with the nice score of 656. R. Ross had the high single of 307. For the Pastimes King rolled the nice score of 624, Miller next with 596. The scores:

Tonight—Leftovers vs. Centrals.

THE SALT OF THE EARTH.

High Praise Given to the Soldier Settlers.

The British Columbia Farmer estimates that 6,000 returned soldiers will settle on the land in that province with the assistance of the Soldier Settlement Board. While it is not expected that all will make good, the writer predicts that at least 85 per cent. will do so. He says:

"There may be many among this 85 per cent whose success will only be comparative, but I am convinced that among them there will be a much higher average of real successes than there are among farmers as a class, or in any other calling.

"I am chiefly convinced that this is so for a number of reasons, but chiefly from the actual knowledge I have of what the men we have already placed are doing. Our supervisors are keeping accurate tab on what the men have done, and the reports that are coming in are most encouraging. Our qualification boards are composed of practical men. They have real knowledge of the lands of the province, and are able to give enquiring applicants information of value about conditions that prevail in the various districts, and the qualifications which are necessary. These men take no arbitrary stand or make no decided effort to change the plans of any applicant, even if they believe him to be making a mistake, but they do not fail to give the young men the benefit of their advice, and in many cases prospective errors are avoided.

"Then," continued the speaker, "these men by the assistance rendered them by the Settlement Board, are placed in a position that in many cases would take them four or five years' of their lives to secure. In fact, if the assistance had not been extended it is practically certain that in hundreds of cases the men would not have sought the opportunity to get into this great producing industry, but would have gravitated to the cities, or into some non-producing activity. The small amount of money most of the men are able to put into the business would be utterly inadequate to give them the start. They are placed almost immediately in the producing class. How many men the Settlement Board will place in this province before the applications cease I could not hazard a guess, but the number will not be less than 6,000, and they will be settlers of the very salt of the earth. In no other way would it be possible for any Government to secure such a splendid class of settlers. In fact, viewing the wonderful success of the movement to secure the establishment of the soldier on the land, and the great demand there is among the men to get on the land, one is almost convinced that it would be a good idea for the Government to extend the scope of the land settlement plan to include classes other than soldiers."

His Memory Always Sweet.

On August 9, 1593, Izaak Walton, uncanonized patron saint of anglers, was born at Stafford, England. Although in his life Walton tasted much sorrow, losing his seven children and his wife, no author was the center of memories of such unmixed gentleness and peace. Charles Lamb said of him: "It might sweeten a man's temper at any time to read the 'Compleat Angler'"—a charming book still constantly reprinted and widely sold.

Duties of Aid-de-Camp.

An aid-de-camp is an officer attached to the general's staff who assists him in his work; he is an acting assistant adjutant general by reason of his detail as aid. He attends the general, acts practically as his private secretary and may be designated to some special military duty. During our Civil war the aids carried orders and acted in all sorts of useful ways.

Deserves Well of Posterity.

In 1754, on the 21st of October, James Hillhouse was born in New Haven, Conn. He represented Connecticut in the United State senate. The elm trees which line the New Haven streets, and give the town its name of Elm city, were planted by Hillhouse.

Face the Truth.

As courage and intelligence are the two qualities best worth a good man's cultivation, so it is the first part of intelligence to recognize our precarious estate in life, and the first part of courage to be not at all abashed before the fact.—Stevenson.

Polite.

At a wedding recently, when the clergyman asked the bride, "Wilt thou have this man to be thy wedded husband?" she, with a modesty which lent her beauty an additional grace, replied, "If you please."

NATURAL GAS.

History of the Wells, Ancient and Modern.

The use of natural gas is not in any sense a discovery of modern times as many people believe. Natural gas was used by the ancients in foreign countries.

In the days of the illustrious Julius Caesar there was a gas well in France that was called a "flaming fountain" by the people and was a source of much mystery to them.

The city of Genoa was illuminated centuries ago with gas and in China the gas was transported from place to place through bamboo pipes, the Chinese giving our gas company an indication of how to transport their article.

It has been worshipped by fire worshippers in places it bubbled from the ground.

The first well to be developed on this continent was discovered not far from Buffalo. This was a well at Fredonia that went down 37 feet in 1831 and was used to light the hotel there when Gen. Lafayette visited Fredonia.

The development of natural gas was begun in earnest in 1876 and the state of Pennsylvania became a leader in producing the gas. Gas follows oil naturally and oil was first discovered in large quantities in this country in the Keystone state.

Gas wells average from 25,000 cubic feet a day to 10,000,000 cubic feet a day. The smallest well, one of 25,000 feet, would only be enough to supply three average households a day.

Gas company officials in Canada say that natural gas must be conserved or else the supply will be exhausted in a few years. This remedy for conservation is higher prices so that gas is not used as commonly and as unthinkingly as it is now.

The biggest gas wells ever discovered are those discovered within the past few months at McKeesport, Pa., and there is a likelihood that the McKeesport field will prove a big boon to the natural gas industry in that section of the country.

There was considerable gas in Canada, but we have no record wells on this side of the line. In Texas gas was found in huge quantities coincident with the discovery of oil, but in Texas industries are so few that the product is almost useless. The Texas gas is being kept in the ground until such time as it may be used and in the meantime plans are under way to extract gasoline from it.

Glass factories are especially heavy users of natural gas. This is because of its high heating units. During the war special lenses were only made possible with the use of the heating of natural gas.

It is the opinion of many gas authorities that the next big gas field will be found in northwest Canada, which so far is practically an undeveloped country for a natural product.

Shah of Persia Is Superstitious.

Probably no monarch is a more firm believer in the power of the mascot than the young Shah of Persia.

Altogether, he has ready two hundred charms of various sorts, most of them heirlooms which have played some part in the history of his predecessors. Chief among these is a cube of amber which, according to Eastern lore, fell from heaven in Mohammed's time. It is supposed to ward off danger, and the Shah usually wears it round his neck.

Another famous mascot is the gold star, which is said to have the power of making criminals confess. Perhaps the quaintest of the Shah's possessions is a little box of gold set in emeralds and dating from the days of the prophet, who is said to have blessed it. It is believed to have the power of rendering members of the Persian royal family invisible so long as they are celibates, but it is not on record whether any of the Shahs have put its powers in this respect to the test.—Tit-Bits.

"Maine Law."

"Maine law" was the name given, in the state of Maine, to an act "to prohibit drinking houses and tippling shops." It was passed in May, 1851; received the signature of the governor on June 2 and was first enforced at Bangor on July 4 of the same year. This law was re-enacted, in all its parts, in 1858, and was made more stringent in 1867 and again in 1870. It was so amended in 1872 as to bring cider and wine from grapes grown in the state within the prohibition. In 1884, an amendment was added to the constitution, prohibiting forever the sale of intoxicating liquors within the limits of the state. Since 1851, the expression "Maine law" has been used colloquially to denote any state enactment prohibiting the sale of intoxicating drinks.—Boston Globe.

Built House In Seven Hours.

Building a house in seven hours was a feat once accomplished by a Syracuse contractor, the structure being of steel. At eight o'clock the building operations commenced, and at four o'clock the same afternoon, after allowing an hour for dinner, the structure was completed.

W. F. Nickle, of Kingston

ONE of the most interesting characters in Canadian public life is W. F. Nickle, K.C., of Kingston, who recently declined, on account of other duties, to become Attorney-General in Premier Drury's Cabinet.

Mr. Nickle has made a name for himself as a new type of politician, one who has enough personality to shake off the restraints of partyism and vote according to his sense of what is good for the country. Time and again Mr. Nickle has been defeated in party caucus only to continue the fight on the floor of the House and on public platforms. And on every occasion he has taken what he considered to be the side of the people. He stood out against the Government party to which he belonged in his opposition to the grant of fifteen million dollars to the Canadian Northern and also in his demand that no hereditary titles be conferred on Canadians. On both occasions he met defeat in the first place only to have the Government come round to his way of thinking in the end.

School trustee, alderman, member of the Legislature and member of the Commons, Mr. Nickle has obtained many honors at the hands of his fellow citizens in Kingston. When he first broke into Parliament he captured a seat that had been Liberal for seventeen years. He did so as a Conservative, yet his principles were progressive, if not radical. A lawyer by profession, but extremely fond of flowers and birds he went into dairying just to show how milk can be produced on a scientific and sanitary basis. He acted on the Milk Commission and introduced the bread bill that requires bakers to turn out loaves of standard weights.

In the Commons he was opposed to the increasing of the Parliamentary indemnities. When opposing Mackenzie and Mann's raid on the national treasury, he asked, "What has democracy come to that the wealthy plutocrats of the land can lay their hands upon the throats of the representatives of the people?" Mr. Nickle took a strong stand in favor of old age pensions and he promoted amendments to the banking law in the interests of the public. All through his career, he has shown a desire to protect the home of the people and advance the welfare of women and children.

But while Mr. Nickle has been the despair of party whips, and has earned the contempt of party fanatics, he is far from being a revolutionist or a dangerous man. He is on the directorate of a number of large companies, and has a legal man's respect for the rights of legitimate interests. He believed the banking law should give the people better protection. Though a small shareholder himself, in the defunct Farmers' Bank, he objected to the state reimbursing those who lost their money in it, no doubt, because he thought the proposal was being made for political purposes.

An amusing story is told of the way in which Mr. Nickle became a shareholder. A farmer was greatly distressed about being the owner of one share of stock in the bank, and could not sleep at nights on that account. To set this man's mind at rest, Mr. Nickle took over the stock, and later became a victim of double liability. Which, however, was not a very serious matter, as he had only the one share.

Mr. Nickle is fifty years of age. He is of Scotch extraction, and received his education at Queen's University and Osgoode Hall. During the war, he resigned his seat at Ottawa as a Conservative, so that the electors of his riding could unite on some one who they could trust to do everything calculated to aid in winning the war. The people sent Mr. Nickle back to the job. In 1917, Kingston again elected him as a Union Government supporter. But in August last, two months before the political revolution developed in Ontario, Mr. Nickle once more sent in his resignation as a member of the Commons, saying that he had been the choice of both parties to carry on for the duration of the war, and with the coming of peace the people should be permitted to indicate whom they wanted to represent them in directing ordinary domestic affairs.

The two sons of Mr. Nickle, who participated in the war, were not of the pink tea variety. "Billy" enlisted as a private when eighteen years old, was wounded at St. Eloi in 1915, gained a commission and became one of Canada's youngest majors. He won the Military Cross at Vimy Ridge. A younger brother enlisted at seventeen, and became a flight commander in the air force, in which he was severely wounded.

Mr. Nickle is known to be a great admirer of the Beck policies, and the ideals which have governed Mr. Nickle's conduct in public life tend to fit him for a place in a progressive, non-partizan administration. And Mr. Nickle must have some doubt that there is much of a future of public service for him in either of the old political parties.

Whiskey Imports Increase.

A recent statement by the head of a famous whiskey business that his firm was doing more Canadian trade under prohibition, receives remarkable confirmation in the Governmental returns just published. They show the following:

Figures of spirits exported to Canada in the past three years:

Year.	Gallons.	Value.
1917	52,000	£ 48,000
1918	5,000	7,000
1919	115,000	165,000

Combinations in Soap.

The principle of soap making is always the same and is based on the combination of fat and an alkali, as in the case of tallow and lye. Variations in soaps are largely due to additions of perfumes, coloring matter and such substances, which have nothing to do with the primary purpose of soap, which is to cleanse.

Britons Build Biggest Plane.

The Tarrant Aircraft Construction company of Farnborough, England, has just finished building the biggest airplane in the world. It is a triplane, the middle plane of which is 131 feet wide. Above and below this are two planes, each 98 feet long. All these planes are 15 feet 2 inches deep. The body is 76 feet long (20 feet longer than the biggest biplane), and the height is 37 feet. The pilot's seat juts out 12 feet beyond the line of the planes. The body of the machine resembles a whale in length and girth, with a great blunt-ended nose. Between the planes are six Napier-Lion engines, each developing 500-horsepower. Four of them operate two-bladed tractor propellers; two of them four-bladed "pusher" propellers.

Jap Industry Hard Hit.

During the war the Japanese zinc industry was very prosperous and large profits were made on ore which was imported from Australia and the French Indies. The signing of the armistice, however, has dealt a hard blow to this industry, and it is reported that it costs $200 a ton to produce Japanese zinc, while the market price is only $187 a ton. It is expected that this will result in a request for subsidies and import protection, since the deposits of Japanese ore are of such inferior quality that competition with imported ore cannot be met successfully.

People Who Write, But Can't Read.

A witness in a case at Ashby-de-la-Zouch was found to be suffering from the strange affection called "alexia." Though able to write and spell perfectly, he could not read. This applied not only to printed matter, but even to what he had written himself.

There are several similar diseases, all of which are very peculiar.

In "aphasia," the patient is unable to explain his thoughts by means of speech. It is a most painful business, for the sufferer tries desperately to talk but never gets hold of one correct word. For instance, if he means to say: "How do you do?" he may say, as in an actual instance, "Throw me out of window."

Sometimes he can form sentences, sometimes the words he utters are a mere meaningless jumble. The worst of it is that he knows perfectly well what he wants to say. It is not as if he were off his head. The "lesion," or weakness, affects only one particular portion of the brain.

A third form is "agraphia," or the inability to write. The sufferer is very often a person who has done a deal of writing and the blow falls quite suddenly. He can read as well as ever, but when he puts pen to paper he cannot form a single letter, let alone a word or sentence.—Pearson's Weekly.

KING OF ALL "RAINMAKERS"

Given an ingenious mind and an eye to business, a live man can make money out of almost any old thing.

Perhaps you remember the extraordinary success scored some years ago by Solly Greencup, the rainmaker. If not, you can read his record in a portfolio of newspaper clippings collected all the way from Nome to San Diego, from eastern Oregon to western Kansas.

Solly Greencup, indeed, occupied for a while a position unique in the annals of meteorology. Scientists might doubt and cynics might scoff, but whenever Solly went after the rain clouds he always got 'em. Moreover he didn't work on "the heads-I-win, tails-you-lose" principle of some other rainmakers. Solly Greencup, when he once decided he could produce rain in a given district, always backed his opinion with hard cash. If he asked the farmers to put up $1,000 for an inch of rain, he put up another $1,000 himself as a forfeit in case he failed. And he always won.

Greencup never explained his methods. All the farmers wanted was the rain. All Greencup wanted was the money. With the result both were satisfied. His apparatus consisted of a flag pole, an electric battery, a kite with a metal tail and an air balloon filled with a mysterious gas. If scientists demanded the reason for these contrivances, he shook his head and smiled.

Sometimes Greencup would have to stay a long time in a locality before he could find the exact combination necessary to coax the wet forces into action. Sometimes he had to confess that the drys were too strong for him. But as soon as he posted his forfeit and set up his apparatus the desired moisture followed in a few days.

Once in Elsinore valley he gave the ground a good soaking for a paltry $2,500, thus saving a $1,000,000 grain crop. Of course he made a tidy fortune, yet at the time no one considered his charges exorbitant. And everybody admitted he was a good sport. As he grew wealthy Greencup never gave himself frills nor assumed the title of "professor." These things were afterward remembered to his credit.

A few years ago Greencup went permanently out of the rainmaking business. In a street car accident he lost his left foot, which had to be amputated above the ankle. After that for love or money he refused to experiment with the weather.

When the secret of his success was finally revealed some carping moralists called him make-believe. He never claimed, like another famous personage, to be in partnership with the Almighty. But at least he had done something that nobody in the world had ever done before.

He had capitalized a corn.

Big Private Telephone Exchange.

The size of the private telephone exchange grows with the erection of every hotel or office building of any considerable proportions. The largest ever constructed is that of a New York hotel, which has been recently opened to the public. It occupies 3,165 square feet of floor space, having an operating room 110 feet long by 15 feet wide, a terminal room 30 feet long and 25 feet wide, a restroom 23 feet by 15 feet and a locker and wash room 30 feet by 14 feet. The operating force consists of one chief operator, one assistant chief operator, eight supervisors and 110 attendants. The switchboard consists of twenty-three positions. Thirteen positions are equipped with telautographs used for paging and announcing only. The switchboard has a capacity of 3,340 extensions and 180 trunks. The hotel has telephone service in each of its 2,200 rooms and there are forty public telephone booths served by four switchboards connected with the main switchboard. The following gives some idea of a few of the items which make up part of the telephone system: 630 fuses, 1,170 condensers, 2,400 relays, 5,350 lamps, 38,500 jacks, 750,000 soldered connections, 7,938,000 feet of wire.

The Potato.

In its native country, on the mountains of Chile and Peru, writes Jean Henri Fabre, in Field, Forest and Farm, the potato in its wild state is a poor diminutive tuber about as large as a hazelnut. Man takes the worthless wild stock into his garden, plants it in rich soil, tends it, waters it; and behold, from year to year the potato thrives more and more, gaining in size and in nutritive properties, and finally becomes a farinaceous tuber as large as your two fists.

FLU EPIDEMIC SHOWS STEADY INCREASE

REPORTS RECEIVED FROM VARIOUS SECTIONS OF THE UNITED STATES.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Jan. 29.—The steady spread of influenza over the country was indicated by reports to the Health Service today from state and city health officials. No marked increase in any particular locality was noted, however. The cases reported from twenty-three states for the week ending January 24 numbered 27,241, an increase of more than 23,000 over the week before. Deaths from influenza during the week in thirty cities totalled 467, an increase of 296, while deaths from pneumonia were 945, a decrease of 75.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ROWAND—ROWLAND.

A charming wedding took place at Walkerton when Florence, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John A. Rowland, became the bride of Elmer McLeod Rowand of Toronto. The marriage took place at the home of the bride, Rev. W. L. H. Rowand, of Toronto, father of the groom, conducting the ceremony, assisted by Rev. W. H. Burgess of Knox Church, Walkerton. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Norma Rowland, and by Miss Marion Robertson, Mr. Joseph Walsh of Toronto acted as groomsman, Prof. E. H. Leeson played the wedding music, and Miss Alma Stahlschmidt of Preston sang, during the signing of the register. The bride who was given away by her father looked charming in a gown of white duchess satin trimmed with silver lace, the court train being lined with shell pink chiffon. She wore a bridal veil finished with a bow-knot of seed pearls and orange blossoms. Her bouquet was of American Beauty roses and orchids. Miss Norma Rowland was attired in a silver-blue satin gown with point d'esprit lace and trimmings of silver lace and orchids and Miss Marion Robertson was gowned in a flame colored charmeuse satin. Both bridesmaids wore black tulle hats and carried flowers. After the wedding breakfast Mr. and Mrs Rowand left for Buffalo, N.Y., and Atlantic City. The bride's going-away suit was of navy blue serge and she wore also a seal coat with trimmings of sable, and an ermine hat and muff. On their return they will live at 45 Stibard avenue, Toronto.

ANNUAL MEETING OF ST. PAUL'S CHURCH

Total Amount Raised Last Year for All Purposes $18,787.81—Many New Members.

The annual congregational meeting of St. Paul's Church was held last evening in the Sunday School hall. After devotional exercises by the minister, Mr. Wm. Madill was elected chairman. Satisfactory reports were presented by the different organizations of the church. A few extracts may here be given from the report of session, whose report passes in review the different phases of congregational life and work.

"We began the year with a membership of 1045. There were added to the roll during 1919, 39 by profession of faith, 58 by certificate or 97 in all. There were removed by certificate 21, by death 16, and by being dropped from the roll 25, leaving a net membership of 1080, which is 35 more than at the close of 1918. The session and the church suffered a great loss in the death of one of its most honored elders, Mr. J. C. Shook. He was faithful in his duties as an elder and was honored and loved by all who knew him.

"The Sunday School continues to do good work in all its departments. Inspector Mowat continues the efficient superintendent of the intermediate department, and is ably assisted by Mr. Wm. Madill. Miss Nina Davidson is giving faithful service as superintendent of the junior department. In the primary section of the school Mrs. James McDonald is in charge. Miss Florence Cameron continues to make the beginner's department the attraction it should be for the youngest members of the school. These superintendents are assisted by groups of teachers who are doing good work in this sphere of service. A teacher training class is being conducted by Mrs. H. R. H. Kenner. Mrs. Kenner also conducted a class last year, all the members of which passed the examination set by the General Assembly.

"The work of the Women's Missionary Society speaks for itself. It is the most active organization we have in carrying out the Master's command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." The Fraser Auxiliary and the Faithful Workers, along with the Women's Missionary Society, afford an opportunity for missionary service to both young and old, and should enroll the entire girl and women membership of the congregation. In mentioning missionary endeavor we can at last thank God that one of our own members is now in the foreign field. In October Miss Maud Ackison was designated for service in Forosa and is now at the post of duty.

"The session appreciates the assistance given to our Sunday worship by our choir in their service of praise. It realizes that this faithful service entails a considerable sacrifice to many members of the choir."

Reference was made to the Forward Movement in the congregation. St. Paul's is asked to raise the sum of $25,000. A strong committee has been appointed to undertake the canvass. Four managers were elected at the meeting, three of whom served on the Board before. Mr. A. Garbutt was elected to take the place of Mr. E. Howson, who did not wish re-election.

The financial report of the congregation was presented by Mr. E. F. Mason, the treasurer of the church and was reviewed by Mr. R. Harstone, chairman of the Board of Managers. A discussion took place at the close on providing suitable accommodation for the Bible classes of the church. This matter has been before the congregation on a previous occasion. In view of the importance of work among our young men today a committee was appointed to take the matter into consideration. The givings of the congregation for all purposes are as follows:

Current revenue	$ 9509 04
Missions by congregation	5199 31
Missions by W.M.S.	1531 19
Missions by Fraser Auxiliary	450 00
Missions by Faithful Workers	74 00
Sunday School	967 51
Ladies' Aid Society	455 03
Choir, for expenses and Memorial Fund, some of which was raised in 1918	589 50
Young People's Guild	12 23
	$18787 81

The above summary does not represent any special bequests. It is the regular givings of the congregation through its different organizations. That the congregation has been making steady advance for a number of years is evident from the fact that a similar financial summary of the congregation in 1918 shows givings for all purposes $12,588.00.

MASQUERADE PARTY OF OTONABEE CHAPTER

An event that will go down in the social calendar of this season as the most notable for a general good time was the masquerade party held in the Y. W. C. A. last evening under the auspices of the Otonabee Chapter, I. O. D. E. Judging from the large attendance, over one hundred being present, a banner evening was anticipated, and it gives pleasure to note that there was no disappointment.

The excellence of the different costumes, each a splendid duplicate of the original, occasioned much favorable comment and lent the affair that fun-loving atmosphere which added much to the general enjoyment. For those who did not join in the dancing there were other diversions, such as games, etc., with a few recitations of special merit, which were thoroughly appreciated. A particularly unique spectacle was the grand march with everybody in costume

Mrs. Sarah Robinson was the winner of the first prize, hers being a striking old-time costume, and Miss Kingan carried off the prize for the comic outfit in a Charlie Chaplin regalia. Others were Mrs. Goodwill as "Old Bill," Mrs. Morris as R. M. C. cadet, Mrs. Roy as a Spanish girl, Mrs. Carmichael a Japanese lady, Mrs. Brewer as S. Hopkins, and others equally as good but too numerous to mention.

The guests provided their own refreshments.

FAITHFUL WORK AT HOUSE OF REFUGE

EX-REEVE BROWN PRESENTS ANNUAL REPORT TO COUNTY COUNCIL

At yesterday's meeting of the County Council ex-Reeve Brown submitted the report of the committee for the House of Refuge for 1919. It was as follows:

To the Members of the County Council:

Gentlemen,—I will be brief for lengthy reports are sometimes irksome. The usual statutory visits were made and special attention given when required.

Since the expiration of 1919 the boiler had some packing blown out that looked serious for a time, but due to the procuring of experts the fire was again on full strength in twelve hours.

Several of the inmates are very old and feeble and as a result require constant attention.

Two died during 1919 and those that remain seem to be well satisfied with treatment and conditions.

All of the stock and machinery give evidence of good management.

Some improvements have been made during the year but due to scarcity of help and abnormally high prices for material, your Board deemed it advisable to proceed slowly and not beyond actual requirements.

Permit me to say when leaving or separating my immediate connections, the honorable body, the County Council, that I consider the position that I was entrusted by you during 1919 as most gratifying to one of my greatest ambitions, namely, to participate in the caring for the old poor.

I fail in words to express my desire to enthuse you to continue in the good work that is being carried out by the various councils at the House of Refuge, namely: "Providing and caring for God's old poor as He would have you do."

JOINT DELIVERY SERVICE

President F. Whitehouse, of the Mercantile Association, states that numerous questions are engaging the attention of the association.

Amongst these, the question of a joint delivery service, has engaged considerable attention.

In the near future, definite plans will be laid before the association to minimize the multiplication of delivery service over the same routes and give better service to the buying public and reduce the expenses on deliveries for the merchants.

To better facilitate the hours of buying the various trade sections will take up the matter of time for opening and closing, accommodating both the trade and shop assistants.

CELEBRATE GOLDEN WEDDING

Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt Were Married in Millbrook in 1870.

Mr. and Mrs. George Moffatt, of Souris, Man., formerly of Millbrook, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding on January 6th. They were married in Millbrook January 6, 1870, Mrs. Moffatt's maiden name being Rebecca Baker. Mr. Moffatt was born in Cavan on December 2, 1843, while Mrs. Moffatt is six years younger. Prior to the outbreak of the American Civil War, Mr. Moffatt, at the age of 19 went to Rochester, and was in the employ of the New York Central railway when the call to arms came. He immediately enlisted with the Third New York Cavalry and saw service throughout the four years of the war, being wounded. He returned to Canada, and joined the Port Hope cavalry troop as sergeant-major. In 1881 he went west with the Sowden party and homesteaded one mile east of what is now Souris, Mrs. Moffatt following a short time later. For some years they have lived retired in Souris.

A great lover of horses, Mr. Moffatt has always taken a prominent part in racing, and was always a familiar figure at the Souris Fair, of which he was a director. Before going west he was a member of the First Mounted Cavalry Band of Canada, and a member of the orchestra and band of Millbrook for twenty-five years.

Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt have three children, five grandchildren and one grandchild.

Their many Millbrook friends will join in extending hearty congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Moffatt on reaching the fiftieth anniversary of their marriage.

AT THE Y.M.C.A.

A meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon to reorganize the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Association. Since the early days of the war this important organization has been suspended on account of the numerous phases of war work in which the ladies were so busily engaged. The meeting was well attended, practically every church was represented and great interest was taken in the election of officers and the discussion of plans that will make the auxiliary a vital help in the work of the institution. A complete list of members of the former auxiliary was not available, and some of the active workers may not have received notice of the meeting. It is hoped that those who were formerly members will again unite with the auxiliary. The officers and committees were elected as follows:

Hon. Pres.—Mrs. Wm. Davidson.

President—Mrs. W. R. Breyfogle.

1st Vice-President — Mrs. (Dr.) Morrison.

2nd Vice-President — Mrs. Geo. Laing.

Secretary—Mrs. D. A. Loomis.

Treasurer—Miss N. Davidson.

House Committee — Mrs. J. J. Turner, convenor; Mrs. J. Garbutt, Mrs. J. J. Howden, Mrs. B. McNeely, Mrs. A. McNab, Mrs. F. C. McBride, Mrs. S. Clegg.

Social Committee—Mrs. B. Shortly, convenor; Mrs. Robt. Wright, Mrs. F. M. Robinson; Mrs. F. Gray, Mrs. E. F. Mason, Mrs. H. Fry, Mrs. J. F. Diamond, Mrs. H. Foote.

Program Committee — Mrs. F. Clayton, Mrs. S. Clegg, and Mrs. T. Brown.

The regular meeting will be held at the Y. M. C. A. every fourth Wednesday at 3 o'clock.

Owners of a mine in Idaho have established a vocational school for employes underground.

BANDIT AND TRAIN ROBBER ENDS UP IN ELECTRIC CHAIR

"GO AHEAD BOYS" WAS LAST WORDS OF HAMBY TO EXECUTIONERS

Ossining, N. Y., Feb. 2.— Gordon Fawett Hamby, slayer, bank robber and train bandit, whose crime record reached from coast to coast and culminated in the killing of two Brooklyn bank employes in December, 1918, was electrocuted in Sing Sing prison.

Hamby maintained to the last the iron composure which marked his demeanor from the hour of his arrest in Tacoma, Wash., last June. He refused the offer of the Protestant and Roman Catholic chaplains to accompany him to the chair and walked to his death unaided and with a firm step. After he had seated himself he turned to Warden Lawes and asked permission to make a statement.

"Go, Ahead Boys."

In a clear voice which betrayed not the slighest symptom of emotion he said:

"I want to say that anyone who had the misfortune, for indeed it was a misfortune, to come in front of Jay B. Allen's gun, had a chance and a good chance. That's all. Go ahead boys.'

Hamby spent his last day in the death house writing letters, reading and "talking" with the ouija board. He expressed relief when he learned that an effort to get him a reprieve had failed.

Ate Hearty Supper

Hamby ordered lobster salad for supper and ate heartily. He then enjoyed some of the cigars and candy which his companions furnished him.

Father William E. Cashin, Roman Catholic chaplain, spent a half-hour with the condemned man. Hamby did not actually refuse spiritual consolation but requested the priest and Rev. Dr. A. Peterson, the Protestant chaplain, not to accompany him in his walk to the chair.

"Never Start Wrong."

When asked by Father Cashin if he had any message for the youth of the country, Hamby said: "I don't wish to appear in the light of a moralist but you can tell them for me never to start doing wrong. Once you get started in crime you can never stop.'

The body of Hamby will be buried in a local cemetery today. No one claimed the body and the mystery surrounding his parentage which he had studiously guarded, remained unsolved.

An autopsy disclosed that the brain of the youthful criminal was "normal" and well developed.

ALLIES TO INSIST UPON SURRENDER OF GUILTY

EIGHT HUNDRED CULPRITS IN LATE WAR MUST BE GIVEN UP

Paris, Feb. 2.—The list of German war guilty, whose surrender for trial by allied tribunals is demanded, will not be revised, it is stated officially.

The list, containing more than 800 names will be handed to Germany, February 10, it was said. It is absolutely unchangeable.

The list does not include the former Crown Prince, it was learned. Demand for his surrender, like that of the former Kaiser, will be separate.

Prominent Germans in the list, it was learned, include: Prince Rupprecht, of Bavaria, the Duke of Wuerttemburg, Generals von Kluck, von Buelow, von Mackensen, von Der Lanken, von Sanders, Stenger, von Ostrowsky, von Tessy, von Cassel, and von Manteuffel; Admiral von Capelle, the brothers Niemeyer, Majors von Goertz, von Buelow, Veltentler and Forstner, and Lieutenants Rudiger and Wernheir.

Berlin despatches reported the German Government had dispatched a note to the allies in Paris asking moderation in enforcement of the clause in the Versailles treaty demanding surrender of German war guilty. The German Government feared, it was said, that the surrender of the accused might precipitate internal troubles in the Republic.

FREE WHISKEY DISTRIBUTED IN DETROIT TO VICTIMS OF 'FLU

United States Marshal Given Authority by Federal Government to Supply Liquor to Physicians Without Charge

Detroit, Feb. 2.—United States Marshal Henry Behrendt was authorized in a telegram from Washington to furnish free of charge to all reputable physicians whiskey to be used in the treatment of influenza cases.

The marshal was instructed to deliver the whiskey only when satisfied that it was intended for legitimate purposes and to guard against any abuse of the order. He will be required to keep a record of the quantity furnished each physician, and the latter will report to the authorities the name of the patient for whom it is prescribed, and the amount furnished.

Marshal Behrendt plans to distribute the whiskey through the Wayne County Medical Association.

ALL BRANCHES OF CIVIC GOVERNMENT NEED TOPOGRAPHICAL MAP OF CITY

Development Commission Gives Number of Convincing Reasons Why Council Should Set Aside a Sum Sufficient to Defray Cost of Preparation.

The City Development Commission is an advisory rather than an operating branch of the local government, under the jurisdiction of the City Council. It was instituted by the Council on December 1st last to co-operate with Mr. Thomas Adams, the Government City Planning Advisor, in making a design for the physical development of Peterborough.

In its first communication to the Mayor and Council it recommends a grant of fifteen hundred dollars in order that a general topographical map of the city and environs be made.

Chairman Duncan and Secretary Ritchie, on behalf of the Commission, have prepared for publication the following statement giving the reasons which led to this recommendation.

The report to the Mayor and Council gives the essential considerations bearing upon city planning, but a brief statement of other advantages the proposed map will have is thought advisable, in order that the people themselves may fully understand the merits of the proposal.

Peterborough was a century old last year. The beautiful and prosperous city of our day is the result of nature, the high character and enterprise of the people who settled and have lived here, and kindly fortune.

During these hundred years the city has never been studied as a whole. No systematic or authoritative attempt has ever been made to plan it. In all these years the city has never had a comprehensive, graphic map for the purpose of city planning or the use of its officials or government.

But now, at the beginning of our second century, as we vision the greater city of the future, we realize more than ever the need of this map. It is essential if we are to study and plan for real growth.

It is absolutely necessary to the city's economic goverment, for every department will be aided and benefited by its use.

The Board of Education needs it to study localities and school development.

The Board of Health needs it to watch danger spots, sanitation and emergencies that may arise.

The City Trust, or sinking fund commissions, need it to help guage changes, growth, revenues, resources, appreciations and depreciations; for these affect our assets and financial operations.

The Library Board needs it in estimating and meeting sectional and educational demands.

The Utilities Commission needs it to figure upon and provide for city expansion and industrial growth. The [illegible] of the Water Works and distribution of electrical energy are wisely solved only by an intimate study and comprehension of the whole city.

The Charity Board needs it to keep an eye on neighborhood development. The segregation of classes, and especially of the poorer people in sections, should be avoided: so far as the poorer people are concerned the Charity Board's real job is "prevention."

The Board of Public Works needs it at almost every meeting and especially in studying and passing upon the many difficult problems, involving large sums of public money, which the city's demands impose upon that body.

The Police Commissioners need it in their study of the problems of good order and law observance.

The Fire Department needs it: no argument is necessary to make that very clear.

The Mayor and City Council need it constantly in their administrative and legislative work. An enlarged map of the city, placed in the Council Chamber, would greatly facilitate the business and deliberations of that body.

Every committee of the City Council needs it, particularly those of Fire, Water and Light, Manufactures, Property, Legal, Railways and Parks.

The City Assessor needs it: for want of it he is greatly handicapped in his efforts to arrive at a fair and equatable valuation of all property for taxation.

The City Clerk needs it in his daily work and especially in dealing with industrial companies and locations.

The Board of Trade and other societies that are voluntary workers for business, social and moral improvement need it. Indeed it would be tedious to enumerate the many uses such a map will conserve.

The City Development Commission has found a most satisfactory and economical method of making this city map and has brought it to the attention of the Mayor and City Council who will consider it at this evening's session.

The old way of making a map by ground surveys and sketches is cumbersome, tedious and costly, when compared with the advanced methods available today.

This new method should place the actual map in the Council Chamber within two months time.

NADIANS WILL NOT GIVE UP RIGHT TO VOTE

IN THE LEAGUE OF NATIONS SAYS HON. N. W. ROWELL AT OTTAWA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 2.—Dealing with the question of the voting power of the British Dominions in the League of Nations in an address before the Canadian Building and Construction Industries' Association here, Hon. N. W. Rowell said that no other nation disputed Canada's right to a voice in the League of Nations except the United States. He did not believe that the people of the United States would put themselves in the position of being the first to object. Referring to the trouble over the treaty in the United States, he said: "Stripped of all its diplomatic verbiage, the question which we face is, shall the Dominions be denied distinctive voting rights in the League in order that one of the many objections urged by some U. S. Senators be removed? To that question there is only one reply possible, and that is a dignified but unequivocal 'no'."

UNIONS IN RUSSIA ISSUE MESSAGE TO ALL WORKMEN

ASK FOR COOPERATION IN ORDER TO ACHIEVE VICTORY FOR SOCIALISM

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London— Moscow wireless despatch received here addresses the following message to trade unions: "Let your delegates come to study the situation themselves and become acquainted with our professional movement, with its positive and negative sides at first hand. We invite all workers and all oppressed or persecuted. We shall greet them with open soul and outstretched arms."

The message points out that Russian trade unions have often tried to inform their foreign comrades, but have met with the bayonets of the Governments, who are afraid of the truth about the mighty and heroic example of the Russian proletariat.

The appeal concludes: "For all real revolutionaries, Russian trade unions will have a special interest because good or bad, they are practical attempts at Socialism. We desire to share our experience with you. We want you to share with us, as only a joint struggle of the Proletariat of the whole world, close co-operation in its economic organizations and a direct struggle for Socialism can lead to the final victory."

ASQUITH IS FAVORITE IN BETTING CIRCLES

SPORTING FRATERNITY OFFER 4 TO 1 ON HIS ELECTION IN PAISLEY

Montreal, Feb. 2.— A cable from London to the Gazette says— Keen interest in the Paisley by-election, where the "Adventure", which Mr. Asquith described himself as undertaking, promises to end well. At any rate, Paisley sportsmen are said to be asking the ex-Premier at 2 to 1 and even 4 to 1. There is still some doubt as to whether the coalition will or will not formally espouse the cause of MacKean, who was selected to stand by the local Unionists. It was reported in Paisley today that MacKean had received a letter from Rt. Hon. Bonar Law, but the latter's private secretary in London denied that his chief had taken any such action.

Of Different Minds

Coalition circles are of two minds in the matter. Some held that it would be a gracious act on the part of the Government not to oppose officially a man like Asquith, whose return to Parliament is desired by all sections of opinion. Others say that as Asquith is violently attacking the coalition, which he yesterday declared was sentenced to death, the logical course for the Government is to give all their support to MacKean.

Giving Strong Support

The latter is in any case getting strong support from individual Unionists. Lady Astor has been invited to speak for him in order to offset the services of Lady Bonham Carter (nee Asquith), the wife of one of Mr. Asquith's former secretaries, on behalf of her father. Mrs. Asquith is not making any speeches.

The Labor party, not to be outdone, is calling upon the Countess of Warwick and Mrs. Pethick Laurence to speak on behalf of their candidate, Mr. Biggar.

GERMAN REDS PLOT WITH LENINE TO OVERTHROW BERLIN REGIME

Bolshevist Agents Travelling to Russia on Forged Passports Are Arrested With Important Papers in Their Possession.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 2.—The Bolshevist agents entrusted with messages regarding sensational widespread Red plans have been for a considerable time travelling between Berlin and Soviet Russia on false credentials, it is stated officially. They usually travel as American Red Cross delegates on the pretext of arranging for the exchange of German prisoners from Russia.

A number of agents have been arrested in Lithuania. Two men on their way to Moscow via Berlin were found to have letters concealed in their neckties. One was a German, the other a Swiss socialist. The German carried a letter to Tchitcherin, Soviet minister of foreign affairs, from the head of the Spartacist organization in Germany, emphasizing the Communist sympathies of that body. Another letter described a system of forged American, French and German passports. The Swiss had a letter from the head of the Red society in Berne asking for further supplies of Bolshevik literature. The German courier, under examination, said that the German independent socialists would attack and overcome the German government the moment they were assured of support from Lenine.

SIR ROBERT BORDEN IS IN SOUTHERN STATES

PREMIER EXPERTS TO VISIT SPECIALIST IN NEW YORK NEXT WEEK

Ottawa, Feb. 1.—According to information received here on Saturday, Sir Robert Borden is in the South, having returned thither when Lord Jellicoe was recalled to England. It is intimated that the Premier will come to New York next week to consult a specialist who has previously treated him. He is not expected to return to Ottawa, but, in New York or elsewhere, may confer with Hon. Dr. Reid regarding the political situation and what action in regard to it is desirable. The Minister of Railways, who is also impaired in health, is in the South, but is expected to return home well in advance of the opening of Parliament on the 26th inst. So far, the principal item of legislation in preparation is the Franchise Act, which is likely to be along the lines forecasted on Saturday.

Hon. Hugh Guthrie, recently appointed Minister of Militia, is continuing to act as Solicitor-General and no immediate move towards filling that position, or even the Public Works, seems in prospect. There is a marked tendency to let matters stand till, with the opening of the session and the arrival of the members, the "situation" can come to a head.

HIGH RECORD FOR N. Y. FUNDS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Feb. 2.—New York funds advanced to 12½ per cent. premium this morning, which is now the high record.

WILL GIVE HOSPITAL TO DUTCH ENTERTAINERS

WORK ALREADY COMMENCED ON PUBLIC GIFT OF EX-KAISER TO AMERONGEN

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amerongen, Feb. 2.—The former German Emperor expects to present to Amerongen a hospital in remembrance of his stay here. Preliminary construction of the hospital is under way on ground donated by Count von Bentinck. It was the former emperor's interest in the survey for this structure that occasioned rumors that a house was being built at Amerongen for one of his sons.

RUSSIA'S ENEMIES ARE RETIRING IN A PANIC

GOVERNMENT TROOPS HAVE MADE SUBSTANTIAL GAIN AT MANY POINTS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 2. A Moscow wireless despatch dated Saturday gives the following official communication "In the Elizabeth-Grad region our troops occupied Gloadas and a series of villages. Twenty-five to thirty miles west of Elizabeth-Grad in the Kransk region we occupied Nijnis-Ud'nsk. The enemy is retiring in a panic eastward."

MUST DO BUSINESS ON STRICTLY CASH BASIS

WHILST THIS IS DONE NO IMPROVEMENT IN EXCHANGE RATES LIKELY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 2.—Government officials point out too, that the decline in the Canadian exchange corresponds with the decline in sterling exchange. More export trade on a cash basis is regarded as the only way out of the difficulty.

In regard to trade, Canada and Great Britain have been following much the same lines. Export trade built up since the munition making ceased has been selling on credit and buying for cash, it was stated today. "Until there is a return to something like normal trade conditions, we cannot expect much permanent improvement in the exchange rates," one official said.

ALLIES PREPARE LIST OF GERMAN CULPRITS

NOTE DEMANDING EXTRADITION WILL BE HANDED TO REPRESENTATIVE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 2.—The list of German subjects whose extradition is demanded by the Allies was finally approved by the Council of Ambassadors today. The Council also approved the terms of the note to accompany the list. The list will probably be handed to Baron von Lersner as soon as the covering letter has been framed.

OBEYED ORDERS ISSUED BY COMMANDER-IN-CHIEF

WHY GEN. TOWNSEND FAILED TO FIGHT WAY OUT OF KUTELMARA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 2.—Major General Charles Townsend, defender of Kutelamara, who recently tendered his resignation to the War Office, declared, in answering critics who claim that he showed lack of resolution in not attempting to fight his way out, that he refrained from such a heroic sortie because he had positive orders from General Sir John Nicol, Meropatamian commander-in-chief, not to make such a move.

POLAND ABANDONS HER RUSSIAN CAMPAIGN

TEP TAKEN BECAUSE LIVONIA WITHDRAWS OFFER OF AID

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 2.— Bolshevik delegates at Dorpat declare that Poland has abandoned her military preparations against Russia, according to a Reval dispatch. They say this course was taken because Livonia has withdrawn her promise to place her army and Reval at Poland's disposal.

EARL GREY'S NOTE CAUSES TALK IN UNITED STATES

BELIEVED THAT ALLIES WILL CONCEDE TO RESERVATIONS OF THE AMERICANS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Feb. 2.— A profound imypression was created in the United States by the publication of Viscount Grey's letter, in which he sets forth his personal views regarding the attitude of the United States toward the League of Nations. There is a strong belief here that before publishing the letter, he submitted it to the London Foreign Office and British Cabinet members.

The statement in the letter, that Vscount Grey would be willing to accept the treaty with the proposed lodge reservations, is expected to have considerable effect in the treaty fight. The Republican Senators declared this morning that the Grey letter merely confirms what they had done for some time, namely, that Great Britain and France would be willing to have the United States enter the League on its own terms. Reservationists assert that the letter opens the way for President Wilson to reach a compromise with the Republicans over the League project.

A striking development this morning was that during informal talks, which he had with many Senators, Lord Grey made it clear that the British Government was willing to accept even the Lodge reservations which have served as a basis for the treaty fight in the Senate.

REDS PLAN OFFENSIVE ON POLAND'S CAPITAL

BELIEVED THAT ATTACK ON WARSAW WILL BEGIN AT EARLY DATE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Warsaw, Feb. 2.— The concentration of a large numbers of Bolshevik troops north of Dvinariver has been prevented by attacks by Polish units, according to an official statement issued by the War Office here today. Attempts to gather the Bolshevik forces along the Lithuanian and the White Russian fronts are believed by military authorities to be part of the Soviet Government's preparations for a spring attack against Warsaw. Newspapers here say the Red offensive against Poland will be commenced as soon as possible.

INFLUENZA IS ON WANE IN THE UNITED STATES

BUT NUMBER OF FATAL CASES ARE REPORTED IN SEVERAL CITIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 2.—Influenza and pneumonia cases in many cities of the United States continued to wane today. New York reported over one thousand reduction in influenza cases and over one hundred in pneumonia. Only 453 cases of influenza were reported in Chicago, but the death rate continues high with ninety-one reported since yesterday. Pneumonia claimed an additional 67 deaths, while 241 new cases were recorded. Reports from the state of Maine show a great decrease in the number of cases recorded.

LABOR MEMBERS WILL HOLD A CONFERENCE

IN TORONTO NEXT MONDAY TO PREPARE PROGRAM FOR SESSION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 2.— Labor members of the Legislature will meet at the Provincial Parliament building next Monday to discuss legislation for the coming session. Sergeant Major McNamara, Soldier-Labor member for Riverdale, has been invited to attend the conference. Until after the meeting no intimation can be secured as to what Labor legislation will be brought into the house by the Government next session.

About a million dollars has already been paid to ex-soldiers out of work, and General A. E. Ross, who is in charge, expects that the total will not exceed three millions.

THE PAY OF THE FIREMEN.

FOLLOWING THE EXAMPLE set by private employes and civil servants all over the Dominion of Canada, and in Ontario especially, the members of the Fire Brigade have applied to Council for a raise of pay, and the question is now before the aldermen. Of course, the matter has its partisans. Inside and outside of the Council there are those who hold that the firemen are already sufficiently paid, while others believe that in view of the increased cost of living they are entitled to more compensation and that this must be given them if the efficiency of the department is to be maintained.

The economists call attention to the fact that the upkeep of the department costs almost, if not quite twice as much as it did only a few years ago. Even if that be the case, it is the increased efficiency, the improvement in equipment, the personnel of the members of the brigade, and the improved discipline that must be considered rather than the cost of maintenance. It is not so long ago that the business men of the city, owners of large industrial plants, were obliged to take matters into their own hands and raise money by private contribution to supplement the salaries of officers in the Fire Brigade in order to induce them to remain on duty. It is not so long ago, either, that the underwriters raised the insurance rates in this city because the report of their inspector was to the effect that the equipment of the department was below standard.

Such conditions could not be continued indefinitely. Within the past year the expenditure for the upkeep of the department has been increased, but the efficiency has been advanced in proportion to the new outlay. A great deal of modern equipment has been secured. The service is prompt, and there has not been a disastrous fire in the city for two years or more. The living conditions of the members of the brigade have been improved by the introduction of the double platoon system, and the result has been manifest in a more efficient corps with stability in the service. Saved from a condition that was little better than social slavery, men can be found now to remain satisfied as members of the brigade when they are not denied the common privileges as to living conditions that are guaranteed other wage earners.

But firemen feel the pressure of the increased cost of living just as other men do. They, too, have families to support, and the landlord, the grocer, the butcher, baker and clothing merchants make no discrimination between firemen and private employes. Hence the request for an increase in pay, a request preferred in common with fire departments all over Ontario. Other cities have not hesitated to make the increases asked for.

Ald. Crowe has raised an interesting point in connection with the local application for a raise. Naturally the Chief and his assistant asked for more than the private members of the brigade. Ald. Crowe says that any increase asked for is to meet the high cost of living, not as a recognition of greater efficiency or responsibility and that on that account it should be the same to all alike. It does not, he argues, by way of illustrating his point, cost the Chief twice as much to live today on account of the high prices as it does any member of the department.

Ald. Crowe's argument does not lack logic. As a representative of Organized Labor, he is in this matter true to the creed of the workingmen. But the Council has in all its business affairs, either when setting the original wages or in granting an increase, made a substantial distinction between the pay of the man higher up and those in the ranks. Why break through a well-established precedent now in the case of the firemen whose services to the city will rank in point of value with that rendered by any class of men on the civic pay roll?

WHAT THE GROUNDHOG SAW.

WHEN THE GROUNDHOG, hibernating since the beginning of the cold weather, emerged from his lair this morning, in accordance with all tradition, after a careful look around, he decided to stay out and take his chances. The sky was overcast, and the little animal whose instinct never fails him as a prophet of the weather, did not see his shadow. All of which presages an early spring, if there is anything in the idea to which the people have clung from the beginning of history.

Anyway, there is a ray of hope. The mercury may abandon its efforts to reach the bottom of the thermometer, and Dan Whetnng's forecast of an open winter may yet eventuate, even if it is only the rear portal of the season that is to maintain this desired position.

THE FUTURE OF LLOYD GEORGE.

TWO WAR PREMIERS, Orlando of Italy and Clemenceau of France, both of whom took a prominent part in the framing of the peace treaty, have already been retired to private life. President Wilson, due solely to his activity in framing the treaty of peace, finds himself involved in a dispute with his Senate and in general disfavor with the American people. Lloyd George does not fail to note these signs of the times, and rather dolefully ventures the prediction that the next general election in England, if it be held six months hence, will see his finish.

In no great war in which England has ever taken part has the Government survived from beginning to end. No matter what the outcome of the war, the people as a whole seem to have been dissatisfied with the terms of peace, and the Government that framed the treaty has been defeated on the first opportunity offered. The armistice was only a few weeks old when the last general election was held in England. The voters were flushed with success, and Lloyd George, as the Premier under whose administration the war had been brought to a successful conclusion, was returned to power by an overwhelming majority. Had that election been deferred for even a few months, until the ardor of the people had cooled and until peace negotiations had begun, who does not believe that the result would have been different?

The victory of Lloyd George is not to be wondered at. He won the war, but in that Titanic task he had the help of the entire civilized world, the British dominions especially included; no expense was spared, as the tremendous war debt piled up by the Empire shows. Labor received any price it chose to ask, internal harmony was preserved at any cost. The production of foodstuffs and munitions was encouraged by the payment of prices never before heard of, and fabulous private fortunes were created as a result. The working people were placated by the payment of a non-employment insurance, the outstanding result of which, economists now claim, has been the encouragement of idleness. In the face of these conditions, Lloyd George appealed to the country and was returned to power.

Roseate promises were made to the war-worn electors. There was to be no more international strife. The League of Nations was to preserve the peace for all time to come. The power of Germany was to be circumscribed. And most popular election cry of all, the deposed kaiser was to be brought to trial, and, like any common criminal, was to be made to pay the penalty for his offences.

The peace treaty has in many respects proved a disappointment. There is another conflict still in progress in spite of the lengthy sessions of the diplomats who were supposed to end strife forever. The terms imposed on Germany are not drastic enough to suit the extremists. The League of Nations, conceived though it may have been in altruism, is likely to end in failure, or such is the general impression in England as given currency by the leading newspapers. The industrial situation in England is more serious than anything shown in the previous records of Labor. The working people demand the fruits of the victory which they helped to win. There is a popular clamor for a change, and another general election would show beyond all question a political revolution such as has marked such events recently in other parts of the world. Lloyd George sees the shadows cast by coming events when he predicts his own finish.

It must be conceded that Lloyd George as Premier has not followed out the same policies that made him a popular idol when he was either in Opposition or a plain member of the Government. These changes may have been caused by the war, but the masses of the people will not so regard them. The election in Paisley, in which ex-Premier Asquith is a candidate, is likely to prove a momentous event in Britain. If Mr. Asquith is returned, his success will mean the end of coalition in England, the finish of Lloyd George and his Government. If Mr. Asquith is defeated, his reverse will mean not endorsation for his successor in office but the rise of a new political party.

THE GENERAL ELECTION IN ITALY

(Farmers' Sun)

While, needless to say, conditions here differ very greatly from those in Italy, it may be of interest to know some thing of the fusion of the workers and the farmers of that country.

The general elections of November 16, fought on a system of proportional representation, with a block vote, have resulted in the election of about 300 new deputies. The Socialists gained 160 seats (former strength 40), and are the strongest single party in the new Chamber. The new popular Catholic party (Partito Popolare) comes second with 102 seats. The pro-Cabinet parties, i.e., Conservatives, Liberals, and various shades of Nationalists, have 217 seats, the Giolittians 8, the Republicans 8.

Not since 187 has there been an election of equal importance and significance. In that year the Conservatives suffered a crushing defeat. It was like the recent and to be remembered Ontario election—cataclysmic.

The success of both Socialists and Catholics surpassed the expectations of their leaders. The extreme Imperialists and Nationalists were defeated.

The old social order is (as in Ontario) dead. For the first time there is a fusion of the farmers and workers, who in a solid and disciplined mass routed the priviledged classes.

Even though one may not approve of the Socialist programme it is important that we in Canada should know as much as possible about the great European movements. A knowledge of them may help us to avoid some of the errors made and to be made.

The Socialist party does not offer any detailed programme to its electors, but the main points are: (1) A foreign policy which shall recognize the Soviet Republic of Russia; (2) a military policy which shall cause all traces of miltarism to disappear, barracks being transformed into establishments of public utility such as colleges or working class houses; (3) a financial policy which shall confiscate all wealth made through the war and all big fortunes, so as to redeem the debt incurred by the war and to restore the general condition of finance; (4) an internal policy which shall deprive the state of its centralized powers in favor of local administrations which shall recide the affairs of their own districts; (5) a social policy which shall give to the laborers the management of land and of all industries in which they are working, an adequate reward being given to those members of the capitalistic regime whose talents and technical skill and knowledge seem to be valuable; (6) a policy of provisioning (supply) "which shall make the organizatino obligatory in order to simplify the system of distribution and to promote the organization of purchase on a large scale, such supplies being entrusted for distribution to the local units—municipalities and provinces— careful supervision of such service being maintained in order to eliminate every form of speculation or the formation of cliques which contribute so greatly to the artificial high cost of living." (7) Finally, "a change of regime which shall transform Italy into a free republic, ruler and mistress of her own destiny."

It is claimed that it was not sympathy with Socialist ideals that caused the people to vote for Socialists but rather their dissatisfaction with and disillusionment from the war. A Communist revolution is not expected or wanted. The farmers wish peace and to make the land their own, and are buying land from the large proprietors whenever they can and at almost any price. It is felt that the peasant proprietors will be the strongest opponents of any such revolution as that which has taken place in Russia.

OUR PHOTO GALLERY

Every one who has seen "Princess Pat's" baby, including his proud father, Captain the Hon. Alexander Ramsay, R.N., says without exception that he is the image of his mother.

He is a splendid example of babyhood, with eyes of deepest blue—large eyes, like his mother's—and lots of curly dark hair. He is also described by those who have seen him as one of the best-tempered babies imaginable.

Young Master Ramsay—his names are not yet settled, but it may be taken for granted that one of those finally chosen will be Arthur after his maternal grandparent, the Duke of Connaught—was born on the Sunday before Christmas Day. The weather has been so unfavorable during the first eleven days of his life that he has yet to take his first airing abroad. On the next sunny day, however, he will be taken out by his nurse in the gardens at Clarence House.

DEATH TOLL IN CHICAGO.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—New cases of pneumonia and influenza showed a decrease again, but the total death toll from the two diseases continued to mount. One hundred and sixty-nine deaths were recorded in the 24 hour period ended Friday morning—eighty-nine from influenza and eighty from pneumonia—against 140 deaths on Thursday.

New influenza cases totalled 1,101, while pneumonia victims numbered 153, a considerable decrease from Thursday's high mark of 446.

BOSTON TOTALS FOR DAY 818.

Boston, Feb. 2. — Influenza reports to the State Department of Health rose to a total of 955 new cases for the 24 hours ended at noon Friday, an increase of approximately 150 from the previous high mark. The report issued on Thursday showed only 770 new cases, while that of the preceding day totalled 813. The number recorded on Friday included 818 in this city.

WHAT AMERICA REQUIRES

(Fargo Forum.)

What's the matter with America these days? Answer:

Too many diamonds and not enough alarm clocks.

Too much decollette and not enough aprons.

Too many consumers and not enough producers.

Too much oil stocks and not enough savings accounts.

Too much envy of the results of hard work and too little desire to emulate it.

Too many desiring short cuts to wealth and too few willing to pay the price.

Too much of the spirit of "get while the getting is good" and not enough old-fashioned Christianity.

Too much discontent that vents itself in mere complaining and too little real effort to remedy conditions.

Too much class consciousness and too little common democracy and love of humanity.

EDITOR'S MAIL

LOANS TO VETERANS

Editor Review: Will you please insert the following summary of the regulations governing loans to disabled soldiers for equipment upon completion of a course of vocational training and for educational purposes.

The Special Committee dealing with the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment Act recommended to Parliament that loans, without interest, not exceeding $500.00 should be provided for these purposes, and the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment is now prepared to deal with such applications, the money for these loans being provided as part of the sum of $40,000,000 at the last session of Parliament for the various aids of re-establishment.

There are two classes of loans, the maximum of each being $500.

In the first class, a disabled man, who has received re-training through the Vocational Branch of the Department of S. C. R., may apply for a loan for the purpose of purchasing tools and equipment necessary to enable him to follow an occupation or trade along the lines for which he has been retrained. The applicant must prove the necessity for such financial assistance and must offer recommendations from two responsible business men who will sign the application form. When this has been done and loan approved, the tools and equipment required will be purchased by the Department. No money will be issued to the applicant and the latter will execute a chattel mortgage ~~in favor~~ of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment. Repayment of such loan will be made by means of five personal notes not bearing interest, one being payable each year during a period of five years.

For the second class a loan not exceeding $500 free of interest, may be granted to a man suffering from a disability due to or aggravated by war service, who is not eligible for, or who has not received vocational training under the Department of S. C. R. and whose pre-war training or education has been substantially interrupted by the war service.

Substantial interruption is interpreted to mean loss of one school year or college year, or loss of at least one year from industrial training. In both cases the interruption must be due to war service. For this class the conditions of application are similar to those of the other class and the applicant must provide recommendations from two business men.

A loan having been approved of the Department will pay school or training fees necessary and will also pay such subsistence as may be deemed necessary. The amount of subsistence per month in any case not to exceed the amount of that a man would receive as vocational allowances, less the amount of any pension the applicant may be in receipt of. The Department will also provide for the purchases of such books and materials as may be necessary for the purposes of training.

Repayment of the loan will be made by means of personal promissory notes. Applications for loans must be made before the first day of April, 1920. Men now undergoing training who will be eligible for such loan and who desire to take of it, must make application within two months after completion of a training course. Men now undergoing hospital treatment and eligible for loans must apply within two months after discharge from an institution.

Men who have received loans from the Soldier Settlement Board will not be considered eligible. Application should be made to the nearest district vocational office of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment.

"All's Well That Ends Well"

By LILIAN HALL CROWLEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Come, girls," called Mrs. Stevens from the next room; "we shall be late for the train."

"In a minute!" "May has to put in another hairpin!" answered two joyous young voices. The girls then hurried in to join their waiting chaperon.

A taxi was waiting at the entrance to the hotel, into which they piled and were furiously driven to the station where they were to take the train. They had finished a three-days' sightseeing visit in the national capital, and were on their way to Annapolis to attend the January hop at the Naval academy.

May Withers, who was engaged to Midshipman Roy Bloomer, had persuaded Jean Stevens and her mother to go with her. Both girls were attending college, and this was holiday time. May intended finishing her college course the following June, and Roy would graduate the same month. Then they were to be married.

"You'll like Roy's chum, Philip Carson, Jean. Roy says he's a shark for study—like yourself—bones up on literature and writes verse. You two ought to get on splendidly. I'll let him know that you're the high brow of our class."

"I wanted to meet him because he is Roy's friend, but now I want to meet him for himself," said Jean.

"I don't see how he and Roy became roommates, because old Roy never reads a book unless he has to. We're alike, there."

When they arrived at the station in Annapolis, Mrs. Stevens called a rickety old carriage that had two listless horses and a fat darky driver. They ambled along Maryland avenue until they came to their hotel, a large white building in the center of the town.

For dinner they had some of the famous Maryland soft-shelled crabs, and then went into the parlor to wait for the "boys."

Presently May was introducing Roy Bloomer and his friend, Philip Carson. This was the ladies' first visit to Annapolis.

They soon exhausted all the small talk, and wise Mrs. Stevens suggested a walk. She would write letters while awaiting them. She was repaid for her thoughtfulness with the joy she saw in the faces of the lovers.

Later when they all came in Roy and May were blissfully happy. No one could mistake the fact that they were genuinely in love. Philip looked politely bored, while Jean seemed bewildered and wretched.

"Oh, Jean, I made a mistake about Phil being a student of literature. He's an athlete and never reads. I have confused his name with that of another fellow Roy wrote me about."

"Well," exclaimed Jean, "that's why we didn't hit it off. I broached every subject I thought he would like—not that I cared myself, for I would rather have talked about this quaint old town. "What must he think of me?"

"What did you say to him?"

"I started out on the technic of the short story of today in comparison with the long-drawn-out stories of Richardson, the father of the English novel."

"Heavens!" exclaimed May, while Mrs. Stevens repressed a smile. "He didn't know what you were talking about. I'm sorry for my sake, Jean. What else did you say?"

"When he didn't respond, I thought: 'He doesn't care to be serious tonight,' so I told him a joke, and he didn't even smile."

"What joke did you tell him?"

"That extremely funny one about the New York publisher, who, on his first visit to England, asked Herbert Spencer to give him the sole right to the 'Faerie Queene.'"

"How could he laugh at that? There's nothing funny about it, is there?"

"Perhaps not," Jean answered wearily.

"Never mind, dear," said her mother; "it often happens that two admirable persons cannot be congenial. Remember, there is the dance tomorrow night."

"Phil Carson has missed a lot!" exclaimed May, "because you're the dearest and sweetest thing that ever lived. Present company not excepted."

Next evening the two midshipmen were at the door of the gymnasium, where the balls are held, when the girls arrived with Mrs. Stevens. Their programs had been filled by their escorts before, as was the custom.

Roy said: "Phil and I are sorry about Billy Westerman. We wanted you to know him, but he's so popular that all his dances were taken before we knew you were coming."

"Who is he?" asked May.

"He's the fellow I wrote you about—the shark of the class—writes verse."

"He's the one I meant," May whispered to Jean.

Jean and her gallant, having started badly, could not get adjusted; especially after Jean, to show her interest in the best baseball pitcher in the academy, asked:

"Why do some of the players wear gray suits and the rest blue?"

The look on his face decided her that no subject was safe, so she became icily polite; he caught the infection, and so the evening passed.

Many times Roy tried to corral Billy, but did not succeed. However, as Phil had seen that Jean's program was full, she enjoyed all the dances except the six with him.

At last the beautiful ball was over and Mrs. Stevens gathered her charges into the carriage.

"There is one thing I regret, Jean," said May, when they were again in Mrs. Stevens' room; "I wish you had met Billy instead of Phil—although Phil is in love!"

"Never mind, dears," said Mrs. Stevens, "we all had a delightful time. Remember, we take the early train."

Next morning the same old rickety carriage was waiting to take them to the station. May was late, as usual, and Mrs. Stevens was hurrying them along. Each carried a heavy suitcase. The darky piled the bags on the seat beside him. They climbed in. When he closed the door the glass broke in a thousand pieces. He only grinned.

There had been sleet the night before and the street was very slippery. The crazy vehicle slid from side to side, while its occupants were convulsed with laughter. They enjoyed the primitive way of living. Then bang went something, and the girls, with showers of broken glass, were precipitated on poor Mrs. Stevens.

When they could separate themselves they saw the horses running down the street, with the darky pulling on the reins. The three suitcases were sliding after them. The tongue of the carriage had gone with the horses.

The shock of the fall had jammed the lock tight and they were unable to open the door. They could hear the whistle of the train. They must take it.

May called to a man in uniform who was hurrying down the street. He looked at them and laughed. Then went to their assistance.

Jean recognized him as Billy Westerman of the night before. Mrs. Stevens explained their predicament. The young man could not unfasten the lock so he kicked it in with his foot.

Each woman grabbed a bag and ran for the train, the young knight helping first one and then another, but helping Jean the most. He asked her: "Didn't I see you at the hop last night?"

Gaspingly, she answered: "Yes, I saw you, too."

By this time they were a half-block from the station and could see the conductor with his hand on the bell-rope, ready to pull it.

Billy gave a shrill whistle. The man hesitated and saw the frantic and exhausted women running, their faces contorted with merriment. Even Billy was panting.

"Thanks," they mumbled to the conductor.

The women climbed on and stood immovable on the platform while the porter threw the bags on their feet. Billy jumped after them.

Frantic shouts arrested their attention. They saw their driver running after the train.

"Pay you tomorrow," shrieked Billy.

The darky's face broke into a satisfied grin.

"I must extricate you again," Billy removed the luggage from six tired feet and found seats for their owners.

"Permit me to introduce myself," he smiled, and handed his card to Mrs. Stevens. She read, "Midshipman William Westerman, Naval Academy, Annapolis, Maryland."

Mrs. Stevens presented him to May and Jean.

"Oh," said May, "then you know Roy Bloomer. I have heard all about you."

They laughed and chatted on the way to Washington. Billy learned that they were all going again for the hop in February.

"May I claim my dances now?" he asked. "I won't trespass too much on Roy's preserves," said he, as he took three dances from May; the same from Mrs. Stevens, and while the others were looking at the scenery he claimed eight from Jean.

Denmark's Flag.

The flag of Denmark, a plain red banner, bearing on it a white cross, is the oldest flag now in existence. For more than 500 years both Norway and Sweden were united with Denmark under this flag. In the year 1212 King Waldemar of Denmark, when leading his troops to battle against the Livonians, saw, or thought he saw, a bright light in the form of a cross in the sky. He held this appearance to be a promise of divine aid, and pressed forward to victory. From this time he had the cross placed on the flag of his country and called it the Dannebrog—that is, the strength of Denmark.—Indianapolis News.

Huns Under the Canadians

THE entry of the Canadian troops into Germany over a year ago was a new experience in Canadian warfare. Probably the troops had been so well trained to respect the Belgians and the French and their property, that they failed to give complete satisfaction as an army of occupation. It was told in "barrack-room gossip," just before the boys left the Rhine, that though their fighting abilities had been fully recognized they had failed somewhat to "put it over" as an "army of terror" on the Rhine. The Canadian soldier had never had much chance to develop the bullying characteristics. He would rather learn the language and make himself at home when he wasn't actually fighting. He lost no love for the German, or for Germany, but he did not have the nack of shoving the "iron heel stuff" down in the approved Prussian style.

The passage through the Ardennes and into the sloping ground to the Rhine was made with practically no opposition. In advance of the Canadian forces ran tales throughout the German households, which pictured the coming soldiers as the last word in savage ferocity. "They had always been put in the vanguard by the English because of their ignorance, and they were so ferocious that even the troops of the dear Fatherland could hardly ever stand up against them."

Many incidents happened along the route which proved a revelation to the quiet business-like army in khaki. German women not infrequently fainted dead away on hearing that the Canadian troops were a matter of a day's march down the road. Little family parties were often seen in an attitude of fearful prayer as the bands of the infantry approached. But the Germans everywhere proved remarkably well disciplined as regards public orders. All that seemed necessary was to post up a placard signed by a British officer.

It was needless to go further. The orders were invariably obeyed. A number of the rules which a few weeks before had been imposed on Belgian civilians by the Hun were now imposed on the peoples of the Rhine. They must remove their hats to all British officers. They must not collect in groups or meetings of any sort without permission from the military authorities. No dances, concerts or entertainments of any kind were allowed. Every civilian must be in his house before seven o'clock in the evening, unless in possession of a pass signed by the British military authorities. Some of the soldiers who got the temporary job of military police for a few days, found it practically impossible to collect any "graft." Every German was invariably in his home by seven o'clock.

The saluting order, however, met with some little difficulty. The Germans at first appeared to know nothing of such etiquette except as applied to their own German officers. They were not long left in ignorance. The language was too strange for an officer to instruct the straggling wayside Hun to any advantage. But jerking off his hat and dropping it on the ground at his feet usually conveyed the desired instruction. The Heinie would usually pick up his hat with sullen gesture, and a gleam of ill-concealed hatred in his eyes. Soon, however, they were so well trained that n.c.o.'s as well as officers were taking the German salute.

When the Canadian army passed through Belgium, after the armistice, the German mark was rated at a franc and a half, or about 30 cents. That was the value the Germans placed on it when they ruled Belgium. When Germany was entered the mark was ordered down to seven marks for five francs, or a little over 14 cents for a mark.

The Germans immediately put up the old-time bluff. "It was ridiculous," they cried. "It would ruin the country." In the beerhouses, which were frequently by the passing soldiers, they refused to give more than a mark for a franc. This was reported to the commanding officers in the district, who ordered the reduction as official. Back would go the soldiers to collect the proper change which a few threatening demonstrations usually produced.

The Germans have an exasperating manner, which it does not require a knowledge of English to convey, but which consists of a bull-headed conceit of their own opinions. If you tell a Frenchman he is wrong, he will listen to your side of the question, absorb your point of view, and either prove his opinion or be persuaded against it. A German cannot possibly be wrong. He cannot be persuaded by arguments, but he must see the argument in a public placard signed by some military authority. That is one way to convince him. There was another way which was used in moderation by the Canadian soldiers. It was little short of miraculous to witness the complete change of expression which would come over a German merchant when you held a loaded pistol at his nose and informed him that five francs were worth seven marks. His agreement would then prove most cordial. In fact one would almost be led to believe that the mark might have been made even lower in value as far as he was concerned.

To Renovate Old Oil Paintings.

When old oil paintings have become dark and cracked they may be made to look like new by the following process, says the Illustrated World: Pour alcohol in a dish and put the picture over it, face downward. The fumes of the alcohol dissolve the paint of the picture, the cracks close up and the color becomes more fresh. Caution is absolutely necessary, as the paint may become so soft as to run together, thus spoiling the whole picture.

SHARP "AD-TALKS" BY GROCERS WIN RESPECT

Beginning with mild generalities, the advertising campaign instituted recently by the Indianapolis Grocers' Association gradually took a different keynote, and recent ads appearing on behalf of the corner grocers of the city have gotten down to a brass-tack basis and in some instances have taken housewives sharply to task for imposing on the trade.

"Your grocer is sitting on the lid of rising prices," was the headline of one of the earlier ads of the association, which explained that the corner grocer, instead of taking advantage of the rising market, was in many instances cutting his own margin of profit rather than passing the higher costs on to his customers.

Another ad inquired: "What's become of the grocer's boy who used to call at 9 in the morning for your day's order and deliver it some time before dark? He's a full-grown grocery man now and making three and four deliveries a day for many of his customers." This copy was designed to secure co-operation from the public in cutting down the number of daily deliveries.

The most recent ad of the association attracted more attention than any of the others. "Have you only a bread and milk acquaintance with your grocer?" it asked with some acerbity.

"Is it [illegible] to call the grocer before mealtime and ask him to deliver a loaf of bread and a pint of milk in a hurry?

"The neighborhood grocer has no way of knowing whether some of his customers ever eat anything but bread and milk, unless, perchance, they order a pound of sugar in addition."

The ad discussed this condition and asserted that the customer loses more than the grocer through this sort of a tenuous business connection.

The association believes the campaign is getting results, and bases this belief not only on the increasing volume of business done by members, but the fact that customers discuss the various points brought up with their neighborhood grocers. The latter have co-operated to bring the ads to the attention of their trade in many instances by cutting the copy out of the daily paper and pasting it on their bread-boxes inside the store. Customers waiting for service invariably eye the store and it has been difficult for them to escape the ad and the message it brought home.

BOY'S VIOLIN PLAYING DRAWS CUSTOMERS

As every one knows, Greenwich Village located in the lower part of the metropolis, is supposed to house the literary and art "bugs."

On Eighth street, just off Sixth avenue, there is a quaint little "ruching, pinking and pleating shop," run by Herman Kramer and his wife, Minnie. It is quite a pretentious shop and for many years has attended to the village's sartorial wants, to say nothing of the many visitors. The Kramers have one child, a boy, and true to the atmosphere of Greenwich Village, the youngster was allowed to take up the study of the violin.

Finally, when the lad's talent was verified by several famous teachers, Sammy was allowed to play when customers entered the shop. He played well and his youth added to the attraction. It was good practice in the meanwhile and the customers appeared to enjoy it greatly.

What has been the result?

People come from miles around to trade at the shop and to hear the child play on his violin. They may buy ruching and pinking, but music helps close the sale. The little shop has become famous because of this innovation. It is one of the sights of Greenwich Village and one of the things to hear.

HOSE IN WINTER AND SLEDS IN SUMMER? OH, YES!

Selling garden hose and screen doors in winter and sleds in summer would appear to be out of all proportion to the necessities of the seasons—and it is, but that doesn't prevent J. G. Esmonde, a Philadelphia hardware dealer, from doing it.

Of course there's an accidental element, and it doesn't happen every day in the year, but, nevertheless, Esmonde believes in being prepared for emergencies. That's the reason he keeps a large quantity of garden hose on the floor of his store throughout the winter, when snow shovels are being laboriously pushed across garden walks. As Esmonde says:

"Of course, it does look strange, but garden hose happens to be one of my biggest sellers these near-zero days, when most dealers have their stock packed away for the warm weather. There are many building operations going on now and contractors use a great quantity of garden hose to attach to the fireplugs and then carry the line for hundreds of feet to their mortar boxes.

"It doesn't always happen that these men remember to disconnect the hose at night, so that when the workmen arrive on the job in the morning the water in the hose has been frozen stiff. The lesser of two evils, considering the present rate of pay for workmen, would make it cheaper to buy 1000 feet of hose than to have the men wait while the thawing is accomplished. That's the main reason for my having so much hose on hand. The contractors know they can always buy it here, and, being more accessible than their supply places in town, I corner most of the trade.

"But selling things at other times of the year when it's hardly customary for them to be sold isn't unusual with my store. For instance, the summer of a couple of years ago was said to have been the hottest on record. Still I sold a sled, and it wasn't to be shipped to the Eskimos, either. It was to be presented to a boy just graduating from school, and I believe it was class day.

"Of course, there's a good deal of the accidental in these sales, but that they can be made in such off-times is proof that it pays to have a full stock at all times."

LOCAL TESTIMONIALS VALUABLE IN SELLING FURNACES

The Ernst Hardware Co., of Seattle, carried a heavy line of furnaces but there was such strong competition that sales did not come as fast as they should. The situation was investigated and certain suspicions were verified. People were confused by a too-wide choice in the open market. National advertising mediums confronted them with many heating equipments. They put off deciding.

Using single column space, the Ernst Co. adopted the advertising plan, locally, of reproducing typewritten facsimile letters from satisfied users of the furnace they recommended and handled. "Just one of many," these little ads were headed and then the letter followed.

Here is an example: "Ernst Hardware Co., Dear Sirs: Your furnace sure works fine. We can see that it will give perfect satisfaction from the way it's operating now. We would be pleased to recommend it to any one who needs a good furnace. Thanks for your prompt delivery."

It was the old testimonial scheme brought up to the minute and made intensely personal, because of local names. Response to this advertising was immediate—and successful.

DEAD IN BOX CAR

Belleville, Feb. 2. — Mr. William H. Ketcheson, a well-known resident of this city was Saturday found dead in a box car at Grafton on the line of the G. T. R. Deceased had a car of potatoes at Grafton, and on Friday night remained in the car all night to keep on fire, owing to the severe weather. Fumes from a stove caused death. Deceased was 60 years of age and for some time conducted a store in this city. Mr. Ketcheson in early life took an interest in military affairs and was for some time major of the 49th Hastings Rifles. He was a member of Moira Lodge, No. 11, A. F. and A. M., Moira Chapter, No. 7, and King Baldwin Perceptory. A wife but no family survive.

GERMAN SAVANT THINKS MARS IS INHABITED

But People are Intelligent, Not Likely to Communicate With Earth

London, Feb. 2.—A despatch to the Daily Mail from Berlin dated Thursday, says: "There's every reason to believe that Mars and other planets are inhabited," said Prof. Einstein, the celebrated German astronomer, speaking of the mysterious wireless signals which Marconi declared had been received from an unknown source simultaneously in London and New York. "Why should the earth be the only planet supporting human life?" he asked. "But if intelligent creatures do exist, as we may assume they do, elsewhere in the universe, I should not expect them to try to communicate with the earth by wireless. Light rays would more probably be the first method attempted, but, of course, all depends on the degree of development such other world beings have reached, and in the present state of our own technical equipment it is impossible to hope to satisfy ourselves of their existence.

"Personally, I should be inclined to believe that these wireless interruptions are due either to atmospheric disturbances or secret experiments being carried on by some other system of wireless telegraphy."

GAS IN COMMON USE

In Next War Says an Expert in England

London, Feb. 2.—There would be no more reason to forbid the use of gas than to prohibit the employment of rifles in the next war, says Major-General Sir Louis Jackson, of the Royal Engineers, formerly in charge of offensive gas production. There were, he declared, gases which killed painlessly, and it was easy to conceive cases in which it would be more humane to use gas than explosive shells. It might be possible to come to some arrangement whereby no gas should be used that caused unnecessary suffering.

SAYS TERMS OF TREATY MUST BE MODIFIED

SIR GEORGE PAISH BELIEVES GERMANY'S BURDEN IS TOO HEAVY

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Describing financial conditions in Germany as critical, Sir George Paish, the British financial expert, in the course of an address at the Opera Forum, Foresters' Hall, yesterday afternoon declared that it was essential that the terms of the Peace Treaty be modified. He said that the German people were disheartened in the face of their overwhelming burden, and that relief must be extended to them if they were to be saved from a plunge into anarchy and chaos, which would threaten the safety of the whole world. He based his conclusions on observations made in a trip to Germany just previous to coming to this side of the Atlantic.

WILL NOT HELP RESTORE HOUSE OF HAPSBURG

SUCH A STEP, ALLIES SAY, WOULD BE AT VARIANCE WITH TREATY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 2.—A formal denial of rumors that the Allies would promote or recognise the restoration of the Hapsburg dynasty in Hungary was issued by the Council of Ambassadors this afternoon. The statement said that such restoration would be in direct variance with the principles of the peace settlement.

BRITIAN MUST RESUME TRADE WITH GERMANY

Sunderland, Feb. 2. — Winston Churchill, British Secretary of State for War, declared in an address he delivered here, that while no one can tell what will emerge from Russia, "it will be something very menacing to civilization, and especially dangerous to the British Empire."

"Bolshevik fanatics are determined to destroy civilization, democratic parliaments, and the liberties of free peoples," declared the minister.

"Europe and Asia are in a desperate condition. The Allies may abandon Russia, but Russia will not abandon them. The ghost of the bear will cross the snows and menace them.

"New forces are springing up in Asia Minor, and if Russian Bolshevism and Turkish Mahometanism should join hands, the situation for Great Britain would be grave. Kolchak and Denekine have protected British interests in the past, but the armies of Kolchak are almost gone, the armies of Denekine are in jeopardy, and if they were to disappear serious danger would immediately arise.

"It is possible that there may be a combination between kaiser militarism and German Bolshevism to destroy the German republic. We must see that that does not happen. We are continually being told that we should not trade with Germany again, but how are we to get our indemnities unless we trade with her? France and America are taking all steps to trade with Germany, and we should not be called on to stand aside."

PLAN DRASTIC REFORM FOR FARMERS' RELIEF

SECRETARY MORRISON OF THE U. F. O DECLARES AGRICULTURE UNPROFITABLE

Toronto, Feb. 2.—Speaking at a meeting of the Independent Labor party at the Labor Temple yesterday afternoon Mr. J. J. Morrison, secretary of the U.F.O., enunciated some views on fiscal and economic matters that proved somewhat unpalatable to the labor men. He declared that at the present time agriculture, the basic industry of the country, was so unprofitable that thousands of farmers were leaving the land and going into the towns and cities, thereby increasing the urban population and, incidentally, the cost of living. In support of the contention, he cited figures from Government blue books to show that in the years 1916 to 1918 the rural population of Ontario had decreased by 16,000, while the population of the villages, which were semi-rural, decreased by 5,371. In the same period the population of the cities increased by 35,388. It was time to reverse this order of things, he said, and to make life on the farm more attractive and more profitable. One way of doing this would be to reduce the cost of transportation and distribution of farm products. Under present conditions the difference between the amount the farmer received for his produce and that paid by the consumer was far too great. There were too many middlemen taking a rake-off. Some middlemen were no doubt necessary, but not the number there were at the present time. He urged greater co-operation between the consumer and the producer, also drastic changes in the means of distribution.

BONE DRY LAW LIKELY FOR SASKATCHEWAN

Regina, Feb. 2.—The Saskatchewan Temperance Act of 1920 received its second reading by a vote of 40 to 6 in the Legislature on Saturday afternoon.

Donald McLean, leader of the opposition, criticized the bill as "not calculated to bring about the bone-dry condition it purported to do and criticized the Government for not recognizing the fact that an element of the population wished to secure liquor legally. The province had prohibition on paper which had filled the jails and brought the law into contempt. Why, therefore, pass a bill which more or less continued such conditions. The only different effect on the present law and the proposed act would be the price of liquor, which would advance. Eight out of ten persons, said Mr. McLean, so far as he could see, wanted a means provided to secure liquor legally. Prohibition sentiment had changed, he said, and disappeared on Armistice Day. Mr. McLean also wanted stronger beer. He said he did not introduce an amendment, but offered these suggestions.

Enforce to the Limit.

Hon. C. A. Dunning made it clear to the House that the Governing proposed to enforce the new Act to the uttermost limit of the law, if the referendum showed the people wanted prohibition. If there were loopholes in the Act they would be closed up.

Harris Turner, soldier-member for Saskatoon, believed that a compulsory law was calculated to bring about conditions worse than if legal sale of liquor was allowed. He had recently been at a soldiers' reunion, where the health of the King was drunk in whiskey in defiance of the law, yet these lawbreakers had all fought in France and made the continuance of making laws within the British Empire possible.

The proposed law would send these men to jail for a second offence and he could not 'stand for any such proposition."

Serving the New Canadians

DURING the past twenty years Canada received three million new settlers of whom about one million were of foreign speech. The war interrupted immigration, but soon the march westward will begin again.

Mutual Requirements

What do we expect of these new citizens? Respect for Law and order, a measure of diligence, that they may not become a charge upon the community, and a willingness to adjust themselves to a new environment.

What do they expect of us, the native-born? Justice, sympathy and kindness. They are entitled also to the stimulating influences of great Canadian Ideals. They have a right to the Gospel of Christ, not only explained in theory, but worked out in practice by Christian men and women.

The Church Hampered

The Church has not been neglectful of these new Canadians, whether settled in the crowded cities, or on the Western plains. But the effort to reach them with the ministry of Religion has been made difficult for lack of Missionaries to overtake the work, and by inadequate financial means.

A Case of Misunderstanding

Many Church Members do not realize the magnitude of the task. Lacking complete understanding of the situation, they have not sought out spiritual leaders for these new Canadians, and have been content with former standards of giving. Even with a slowing-down of immigration, the needs have not been met. What will happen when the flood-tide rolls in again?

Look! A Study in Contrasts

In the year 1800, the United States had a population of 5,308,483. During the next twenty years, 184,000 immigrants arrived in American ports.

In 1901, Canada had a population of 5,371,315. During the next fifteen years, the immigration to this Dominion reached a total of 2,906,021.

From 1904 to 1914, Canada accepted 250,000 MORE immigrants than the United States received in the same period — despite the fact that the population of the Republic was ten times that of Canada.

Israel Zangwill and others speak of the United States as the melting-pot of the world, and marvel at the task of assimilating the new comers. WHAT WOULD THEY THINK OF THE PROBLEM IN CANADA?

Moulding the National Spirit

The great [illegible] immigrants now settled in the Dominion are men of good will, [illegible] for useful citizenship. They are helping to do the [illegible] work [illegible] this [illegible] for the advantage of us all. The future public opinion of Canada, the future moral stability of the nation depends upon the will and [illegible] of the Church to fulfil its trust to these New Canadians.

Motives for Activity

You are a Canadian, proud of your country, and deeply concerned for its future. You are a Christian, believing that the Gospel is the only dependable and invincible civilizing agency. You are urged to pray, to serve and to give, that the Home Missions of your Church may be properly sustained in this day of national emergency.

THREE YEARS IN PENN.

Member Trenton Post Office Staff Tampers With Mails.

Belleville, Feb. 2.—Three years in Kingston Penitentiary, was the sentenced imposed on Russell Dafoe by Judge Deroche in the County Court Saturday, on a charge of tampering with registered mail. Dafoe was a member of the Post Office staff at Trenton. Complaints of money being extracted from registered letters having been received, an investigation was made by J. Campbell Strange, Assistant Post Office Inspector, with headquarters at Kingston. The result of Mr. Strange's investigation was the arrest of Dafoe. It was shown at the trial of Dafoe, who is 21 years of age, had opened envelopes of outgoing registered letters in an ingenious way, without breaking the sealed flap, removed the money closed the envelopes up again and sent them on. Being alone in the office at night he had ample opportunity to tamper with the letters undisturbed. There were eight charged in all; but evidence was taken on only three, conclusive proofs of guilty being shown in each case.

SMOKING ROOM FOR WOMEN

Has Been Opened by Management of Chicago Theatre.

Chicago, Feb. 2.—A local theatre announced that it had opened a smoking room for women at a cost of $10,000.

The manager said the women "drove him to it." He said he found girls were smoking in the washroom, the boudoir and even in the lobby. The women smoke more cigarettes than the men, he said.

MONS RESIDENTS CARE FOR GRAVES OF ALLIES

EIGHTY-ONE COMMUNES IN DISTRICT TO HONOR FALLEN SOLDIERS

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 2.—Word has been received by the office of the overseas military forces of Canada from M. Gustave Casy, president of an association formed by the people of Mons to care for the graves of allied soldiers. The Burgomasters and inhabitants of the 81 communes of the district of Mons are assisting the association. The aim is to allot one grave to a family to be cared for and beautified by that family. Further, the family must endeavor to get into communication with the next-of-kin of the deceased soldier and inform them that they are in charge of his grave, and if the next-of-kin proposes to visit Belgium they will be the guests of the family in charge of the grave whilst there.

The owners of the ground in which the deceased soldiers are buried, through the association, have given a free title for each plot to the families interested. Many headstones have been erected by public subscriptions and on the anniversaries of the two battles of Mons, (August 23rd, and November 11th), homage is to be paid to the deceased and wreaths are laid upon their graves. The association now reports that they have now in their charge the graves of 100 allied soldiers.

This information will be of general interest to Canadians in view of the friendship for the Canadian Corps which is entertained by the people of Mons. The Imperial War Graves Commission, to which the High Commissioner for Canada, Sir George Perley, is a member, has by agreement with the Belgian Government the general supervision of all maintenance.

PEACE TIME ARMY

Fourteen Divisions of Territorials—Churchill Outlines Plans

London, Feb. 2. — Britain's total war establishment, when fully recruited will be 345,000 men, according to plans outlined by Winston Spencer Churchill, War Secretary. An army of fourteen divisions of Territorials will be organized, but these will not be sent to foreign territory unless they volunteer.

Kitchener business men owning property between Foundry and Water Streets have had their assessment raised from $100 to $150 a foot.

WALK FROM BELLEVILLE TO ANTELOPE, SASK.

VETERAN AND YOUNG DAUGHTER WERE SIX LONG MONTHS ON JOURNEY

Regina, Feb. 2.— A pathetic story of hardship, suffering and poverty comes from Antelope, Saskatchewan, where a middle-aged man with his 14-year old daughter were interrogated by the police and discovered to be en route from Belleville, Ontario, to Cranbrooke, British Columbia, walking every foot of the way, save for such "lifts" as kindly auto drivers had given the pair.

George Hunter, a veteran of the great war, with two years' service to his credit, and two wound stripes, received his discharge from the army in 1918 and returned to his home in Belleville, Ontario. For a while all went well, and then sickness came. His wife died and then his children till only one girl was left. Out of work and in debt, according to his story to the police, he sold his few belongings, and after paying his debts found himself with 65 cents in the world. It was then he resolved to walk to Cranbrooke, where he said he had an uncle whom he thought would befriend him. For twenty-eight weeks he and his daughter hit the trail generally walking on the railway tracks to avoid the roads which meant publicity and the police. Sleeping in haystacks and barns by night they wended their slow way west. Now and again the man would get a job for a few days and with the little sum so earned, provisions and other necessaries would be bought to maintain them on their long journey.

Not once during all these weeks were they questioned until they reached Antelope, Sask., well to the west of Regina. Early in September they reached this place, where a Provincial police officer investigated their case. They seemed to have stood their hard experiences well. The girl, a strong, healthy country lass said the trip had been all right barring the cold sleeping out at nights. Paper's in Hunter's possession verifed his story to some extent, and inquiries made by the police further confirmed them. The uncle at Cranbrooke, B. C., was telegraphed and pending a reply the constable took the wayfarers in and for several days kept them. No answer came from the uncle in Cranbrooke and the constable loaned them money to take the train west. The latest information is that they arrived at Cranbrooke.

HEALTH OFFICER SAYS THAT RATE OF MORTALITY IS COMPARATIVELY LOW

(Canadian Press Despatch.)

Toronto, Feb. 2.— Dr. C. J. Hastings, stated today that although the "flu" is spreading rapidly in this city it is not anything like the virulent type of last year and the mortality so far is comparatively low. He is preparing auxiliary hospital accommodation and has decided not to publish the daily number of cases reported but will publish the deaths as compared with 1918.

$300,000 ON ROADS

Simcoe County Votes Large Sum on Good Roads System.

Barrie, Feb. 2. — At its closing session the County Council of Simcoe put through a report providing for the expenditure of $300,000 on the county, road system this year. Twenty seven thousand five hundred dollars of this is to be divided among Barrie, Collingwood, Orillia and Midland, upon the basis of equalized assessment, and $20,000 is to be divided equally among the ten other incorporated towns and villages. Of the remainder, $252,500 it is intended to spend $5,000 for machinery. All the work is to be done under the direct supervision of the county engineer, so that uniformity of work may be assured. Last year over $28,000 of the appropriation for good roads was unexpended owing to scarcity of labor and this promises to be a big difficulty in the way of carrying out this year's complete program.

ASQUITH PROMISES HOME RULE FOR THE IRISH

HORSE RAN AWAY HAD TO BE SHOT

RAN INTO STORE ENTRANCE AND FELL ON IRON STEP

Shortly after 10 o'clock last night a runaway horse dashed its cutter against a telegraph pole on Chambers street, continued on its mad flight across Hunter street and into the doorway of Mr. Frank Hourigan's Tartain Tailor Store, where the animal broke the plate glass window at the side of the entrance with its head, and then fell, fracturing one hind leg, on an iron step.

The horse and cutter belongd to Malony's livery, Chambers street and was hired by Lionel Lipsett and Stanley Record, both of about the same age, 18. The young men claim that the animal, when proceeding peacefully along George street southward, took fright opposite Central Park at the hooting and shouting of four occupants of another cutter. The frightened animal quickly got beyond their control. They managed to turn him westward, however, on Brock street, but the horse made a quick turn down Chambers street, washed the cutter against a pole throwing its occupants out and completely demolishing the vehicle. The animal, continuing its flight, found it impossible to turn on Hunter street, and landed in Mr. Hourigan's store entrance, where it sustained a broken leg, and had to be shot by Constable Lawrence.

Mr. Maloney, owner of the outfit, says he knew nothing of the accident until the young men entered his office ,and asked the price of a new cutter, saying the one they took out was wrecked. Shortly afterwards he received information of the horse's fatal hurt, of which Lipset and Record at the time knew nothing. nothing.

Mr. Maloney values the horse at $125, and the cutter, which is completely ruined, at $75. The broken window, which is insured, is valued at about $100.

Stanley Record sustained slight injury to one leg, but Lipsett escaped any ill effects from the accident.

SLEEPING SICKNESS IS SAME AS INFLUENZA

MEDICAL SCIENCE CLAIMS TO HAVE FOUND SERUM TO CURE BOTH

New York, Feb. 2.—Three-quarters of the world's population have been affected with Spanish influenza, which is now declared to be the same disease as sleeping sickness, and a serum has been found to cure both, according to reports today. Experiments are being carried on here and in Paris.

Simultaneously with the receipt of word from Paris that a serum had been made by Dr. Charles Folley, which would cure both influenza and sleeping sickness, came a report from Bellevue Hospital that a preliminary report had been issued from Mount Sinai Hospital of the probable isolation of the sleeping sickness germ.

To produce a serum to cure the encephalitis lethargica, as the sleeping sickness is known to science, it would be necessary to segregate the germ of the disease, as serums are made from the disease germs themselves, the live germs in the blood being killed by the injection into the blood of the dead bodies of the same germs.

The germs of Spanish influenza is said to have been isolated, but no perfect serum is known to have been produced.

GRANTS TO HORTICULTURE.

Elgin County Council Encourages Societies in District.

St. Thomas, Feb. 2. — The Elgin County Council at its Saturday's session voted a grant of 25 per cent. of the government grant to horticultural societies of the county to encourage them in their beautification work. The societies which will benefit are Dutton, Aylmer, Port Stanley and West Lorne. They all owe their inception to St. Thomas Horticultural Society, Dr. F. E. Bennett, president of the local organization, having been the moving spirit in the establishment of outside societies. The Dutton Society is growing rapidly, and already has a membership of nearly 150.

INCREASE IN CUSTOM RECEIPTS

Total Amount for Month of January Was $5,548,550.

Ottawa, Feb. 2.—An increase of $16,481,207, in Customs receipts for the ten months of the fiscal year ending Saturday is shown by the monthly statement issued from the Customs Department. For the ten month period last year, the receipts totalled $131,983,439, while this year they amounted to $148,464,646. For the month of January alone the increase was $5,548,550, the receipts totalling $18,176,426 as against $12,627,876 in January, 1920.

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Do Women Read Newspaper Advertising

¶ Since Women do over 80 per cent of the Retail buying that is done, Advertisers are constantly investigating the Appeal which Advertising mediums exert upon Women. This fact is continually before manufactures in every line, and recently the Bureau of Investigation was asked to conduct an investigation to show how much Underwear for Men was bought by Women, so that the manufacturer who made the request could write his advertisements accordingly.

¶ Many investigations have been made by Women's Clubs, Merchants' Organizations, Statistical Bureaus, and the like, but while these inquiries invariably show that Women are more influenced by Newspaper Advertising that by any other kind, they are inconclusive because of the high percentage of non-commital or unsatisfactory replies.

¶ The question broadly answers itself in that Women do most of the buying, and Newspapers carry far more Advertising than all other mediums combined.

AN OLD DUTCH LEGEND.

How Jantje the Bellringer Saved Sluis From the Spaniards.

An old statue in the steeple near the bells at Sluis, in Holland, which was originally erected in honor of Jantje van Sluis, is worked by mechanical means, which cause it to strike the bell at every hour and a half with a hammer.

Jantje was a bellringer and watchman during the eighty years' war with Spain. On the night of June 12, 1606, Du Terrail, a Spanish captain, resolved to recover Sluis, the principal fortress of Zeeland, from Prince Maurice of Orange, who had conquered it two years previously.

When the clock struck nine it was arranged that the Spanish soldiers should sound a false alarm at one gate in order to draw the Dutch soldiers away from another, thus leaving a means of ingress for the enemy.

Providentially Jantje forgot to wind up the clock till late in the evening, and, being terribly afraid of ghosts, he did it so hastily that he damaged the works. Another story avers that he was intoxicated, the result of Sluis fair, which had been held on that afternoon.

Be that as it may, Terrail waited in vain to hear the familiar striking of the old clock, and thus the attack was put off till midnight. In the meantime the garrison had suspected something amiss and were on the alert. Consequently the Spaniards were repulsed with great loss.

Jantje had accidentally saved his town, and to honor him his fellow citizens erected the bell ringing statue to his perpetual memory.—London Tatler.

FREDERICK THE GREAT.

On the 17th of August, 1786, died one of the most remarkable sovereigns Europe ever produced, Frederick II. of Prussia, called Frederick the Great. Thomas Carlyle thus describes him:

"The man is not of godlike physiognomy any more than of imposing stature or costume. Close shut mouth, with thin lips, prominent jaws and nose, receding brow by no means of Olympian height; head, however, is of long form and has superlative gray eyes in it. Not what is called a beautiful man, nor yet, by all appearances, what is called a happy.

"On the contrary, the face bears evidence of many sorrows, as they are termed; of much hard labor done in this world and seems to anticipate but more still coming. Quiet stoicism, capable enough of what joy there were, but not expecting any worth mention; great unconscious and some conscious pride tempered with a cheery mockery of humor—are written in that old face, which carries its chin well forward in spite of the slight stoop about the neck; snuffy nose rather flung into the air under its old cocked hat—like an old snuffy lion on the watch; and such a pair of eyes as no man or lion or lynx of that century bore elsewhere, according to all the testimony we have.

"This is the man who, among the common people who much loved and esteemed him, was Vater Fritz—Father Fred—a name of familiarity which had not bred contempt in that instance."

Forestalled the President.

Peggy is feeling important these days, having been chosen secretary of her little church club. She was laboring over the minutes of her first meeting when I suggested that she should always begin: "The meeting was called to order with the president in the chair." "But she wasn't," protested Peggy, indignantly. "I was. I got there first and got the big chair and the rest had only kindergarten seats."

Foolish Fad of Idle Rich.

At one time snail racing was a great fad in Austria. Vienna had a fashionable snail racing club, where fortunes were frequently wagered on the ridiculous contests. Careful records of the time taken by the winning snail to crawl around the miniature race course were kept, in order that contestants might be properly handicapped in subsequent matches.

A Gentleman Fairy

By EDNA DEANE LYALL

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

Where all the children came from Rodney Marsh could not comprehend! It seemed as if magically quick some telepathic signal had been conveyed to every juvenile in the vicinity of the great tenement row where he had paused to watch a little group make mud pies. They were soiled, ragged garments, were barefooted, and with pity and interest the kindly faced young man studied these poor and neglected, but happy children of the city.

Marsh drew out some small change and dropped as many coins among the four urchins who were engrossed in their mock pastry task. There was a scramble, a rapturous yell, a babel of voices from doorways and alleys. Then poured into the center children from far and near. They surrounded Marsh with grimed hands, extended and eloquent pleas for consideration.

"That is all," announced Marsh, as he detected specious repeaters in evidence and started away.

Only one of the throng ran after him, breathless and big eyed. He noticed that she was of a different brood to the general mass, being clean, poorly, but neatly dressed, and with a winning personality.

"Oh, mister, please!" uttered the little six-year-old miss. "Are you really throwing away money?"

"Why, yes, my dear, to good little children, and I am sure you must be that."

"Mamma says so, and Auntie Phyllis," came the prompt response. "Oh, how rich you must be! But I know—you're a gentleman fairy! You see, I've been saving up to buy the big doll down at the corner. Come along and I'll show you," and the little one took his hand with a trustfulness that caused him to thrill with pleasure. She halted finally beside a show window full of toys and pointed with enraptured ecstasy at the object of her admiration.

It was marked two dollars. Marsh took out a banknote.

"Oh! does it take all that money?" cried Edith Waldron. "Please, Mr. Fairy, I can do without the doll, and I'd rather you'd buy an invalid chair for poor sick mamma."

"You sweet, self-sacrificing little cherub. You shall have the doll first, and then we will see about the invalid chair," said Marsh, and, his companion hugging and chatting to her coveted acquaintance, they went back towards the tenement row.

"There's where we live," little Edith enlightened Marsh, and she pointed to a third story window. There was a box filled with flowering plants. The windows were clean and bright and adorned with snowy white curtains. "My papa is dead, and we are very poor, and Aunty Phyllis is nursing poor mamma, and she can't get about, and if any of your fairies have an invalid chair, won't you please send her one?"

"Indeed, I will!" pledged Marsh, and within the hour an invalid's wheeled chair was on its way to the old tenement. It had been a relief to mingle with the lowly and make at least a few humble ones happy, but now Marsh's own troubles filled his thoughts. He had come to the city to defend a lawsuit which, if it went against him, would mean the loss of nearly all he possessed. He knew that the claim against him was unjust, but it was in the hands of legal vampires.

Marsh located the rooms on the third floor. He knocked at an open door, noting the neatness of the place. A woman, pale and careworn, seated in a new invalid chair, greeted him.

"I understand that Miss Worth does copying at home," spoke Marsh, "and I have some work for her if she is not too busy."

"My sister will return in a few minutes. Won't you be seated, please?" said the invalid.

Marsh sat down in a chair near a typewriter. Upon a table lay a number of typed sheets. He could not help but notice them. As Mrs. Waldron wheeled herself into an adjoining room Marsh picked up one and then another of the sheets, deeply absorbed.

"It is fate!" he whispered, quite aroused, to himself, for by some strange coincidence Miss Worth had been copying the papers of the opposing counsel in his lawsuit. His face lightened as he became fully aware of the testimony and witnesses to be present, made some hurried notes and now knew what points to guard in the litigation.

Bright voices and footsteps sounded outside and Marsh arose to face a young girl twenty and a child of six, bearing in her loving clasp the famous doll of the corner store.

"Oh, Aunty Phyllis!" cried Edith ecstatically, rushing towards Marsh and throwing her arms about his neck. "It's the gentleman fairy!"

Marsh blundered through his equivocal mission as best he might. He said nothing when Miss Worth discovered his identity and insisted that as she could he should be repaid for the cherished invalid chair. It was destined to become a family possession, however, for the day Marsh won his case he asked gentle, faithful Phyllis Worth to become his wife.

USE IN ADVERSITY

Generally a Working Out of the Law of Compensation.

Undoubted Fact That Opposition or Hardship Tends to Bring Out the Best There Is in Man's Composition.

"I wish I could slide along in business as easily as George Seagrave," said John Nelson, as he joined his father in the library after dinner.

"What's up now?" asked his father.

"Oh, nothing," replied the son, "only George has just been appointed assistant general manager of his father's firm. It doesn't seem right for a fellow to have an advantage like that given to him, while fellows like me have to dig for everything they get."

"But that seems to be the way the world is made, John, and the more I see of it the more I'm convinced it's a capital arrangement. I used to feel as you do, but I've lived long enough to see a great many things adjust themselves. There is a law of compensation at work, my boy, and no class has all the advantages. It would be a very poor world if we all slid along as easily as George does."

"What do you mean by that?" asked the son.

"Just this: it takes opposition or hardship, or whatever you please to call it, to bring out the best in us and make us good for anything. You know the old saying, 'It's three generations from shirt sleeves to shirt sleeves.' A man goes out in his shirt sleeves and gets his living, but he decides that his children shall have more opportunity than he, so he gives them an education. The sons make money by their educational advantages, and they pass it on to their sons, who have never known the struggle of acquisition. The sons' sons go through it. And so, the shirt-sleeve process begins again. It doesn't always happen so, but it happens with sufficient regularity to form the basis of a proverb. The exception proves the rule."

"Yes, but it needn't be so," replied the boy.

"I know that," replied the father, "but there is enough truth in it to prove what I want to say. Even God himself put the Jews through the process of adversity to whip them into shape. It was only about four hundred miles in a bee line across the wilderness. But God made the Jews take forty years to get to Canaan, because he wanted to toughen them and make them ready for the conquest, when he got them there. The Bible says he 'led them not through the way of the land of the Philistines, although that was near.' They would have got there too quickly to stand the hardship. And if they had defeated the Philistines, they would have been unprepared for a still worse enemy; I mean the opulence and plenty of Canaan.

"Men are defeated by easy victories and cheap successes more than by adversities. Disraeli was hissed down in the British parliament when he made his maiden speech. But that only toughened his fibre and stiffened his resolve. Grant's reverses were the school in which he learned how to win his later victories. It makes all the difference whether a closed door is a final rebuff or an invitation to battle through. I'm more afraid of a cheap and easy success for you than I am of struggle. If you struggle before you achieve, you will have character to hold you steady when success arrives. The trouble with many persons is that they have no character to go with their acquisitions. It is a case of diamonds on dirty fingers.

"Have you never seen an engine pounding itself to pieces on a slippery rail in winter? What it needed was sand, opposition. Friction spelled progress. Even a kite can't rise with the wind. It must ascend against it. Don't spend your time quarreling with the order of things or fretting about some one else's easy success. An oak grows in the open, tortured by a thousand storms. The hothouse plant never knows the glory of the sky."—Youth's Companion.

Russian Bison Exterminated.

What has happened, during the war, to the bison herds of Central Europe? Protected by a ukase of the Czar Alexander, bisons still existed in some private parks of Poland and Lithuania, the last of their kind in Europe. Count Potocki's herd was kept in an immense park, and for some time was protected by the Cossacks of the Don. But according to a French writer, M. Grandidier, there is no doubt as to their ultimate fate. In 1917 the bolsheviki thought fitting to include the herd in their policy of extermination. Bisons could not be owned by everybody, therefore they must be owned by nobody, and so, in the general cataclysm, the famous herd disappeared.

Magpie Pet of Public.

The magpie in Kensington gardens has many friends who attend his daily levee. One of so tender a heart that she conceals chicken bones in her muff for his delight was told that an offering of meal-worms would prove irresistible.

She sought this delicacy, but only to learn that it is now unobtainable. For meal-worms, as an article of bird-fare, came from Germany.

Most of us will bear with equanimity the disappearance of this strangest of Hunnish trades. To the authorities of the Zoological gardens, however, the problem of meal-worm production is said to be a weighty one still unsolved.—London Chronicle.

A Freak of Fortune

By RALPH HAMILTON

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"A penny for your thoughts, Wilbur," spoke pretty Erna Barton, and the somber face of Wilbur Gray, evidencing a mood of profound abstraction, brightened up magically, as it always did when this charming girl was beside him.

"Am I sure of the compensation offered?" challenged the young man lightly.

"There!" and Erna pressed an old battered copper coin into his hand. "Now confess, sir! Not only do I reward you with the conventional penny, but I present what may be a rare coin."

"So rare and old that its inscription is fairly undecipherable," replied Wilbur. "It seems to wear the green and grime of the centuries."

"I found it among a lot of relics of the olden, olden time that poor dear grandfather so cherished," explained Erna. "He also left some old pieces of delftware and ancient firearms."

"I shall keep the coin always, Erna," said Wilbur. "I hope it will be a guardian of good fortune."

"But what about the pay?" inquired Erna, archly. "I bought your thoughts—what were they?"

"Well, Erna," answered Wilbur, his glance softening and replete with sentiment, "I was thinking how dearly I loved you when I came home for the holiday vacation."

Erna's fair golden head drooped, but she drew nearer to him on the porch seat.

"And how much more I love you now," continued Wilbur seriously. "And when I come home next summer I hope I can add to it all by asking you to become my wife."

"I hope so," said Erna spontaneously, lifting her clear, honest eyes to meet his own, "but you must not think of that until your are sure that little Eva and I will not be a burden to you. All grandfather has left us is this little place, and some money is owing on that."

"I hope to be able to clear up everything and more," spoke Wilbur confidently. "Send your sweet, best wishes after me when I go back to work in the city, that I may find some way of earning more money than I do now."

"Be patient, dear," soothed Erna encouragingly. "Our ship is sure to come in some day, and it will be the more precious for the waiting."

Wilbur was employed in a brokerage office. Opportunity came to him through this business connection of making money, but he had no capital to invest. About two weeks after his return to the city a close friend, Paul Warfield, dropped into his room at his boarding house.

"I wish I had a thousand dollars, Wilbur," he said. "I've got a tip that would make me a fortune in a month."

Wilbur smiled incredulously. He had always kept away from tips and speculative propositions generally, and, besides, he realized that Warfield was a good deal of a dreamer.

"Don't laugh at me, Wilbur," said Paul. "This is no wild fantasy, but a sure thing."

"Some stock on the boom, eh?"

"Nothing of the sort. It's a sure prospect, with a sound, substantial basis. It's land—land that never decays, never burns up, never wears out. Wall street can't play with it."

"Land with a gold mine on it, I suppose?" intimated Wilbur quizzically.

"No, Wilbur, it's an eight-acre strip and last week on the next forty a prospector made a strike. He sealed the well, and is trying to keep his discovery quiet until he can interest some capitalist to buy up all the other land in the vicinity. The very choicest is the piece I have a chance to buy. My old aunt is willing to invest half of the money required. Couldn't you raise the other five hundred in some way, Wilbur?"

"Oh, yes, sure; certainly!" derided Wilbur. "See," and he emptied his pocket of the few coins it held. "I might buy a hundredth part of an acre," and just then one of the coins slipped through his careless fingers and rolled against Paul's foot.

The latter picked it up to restore it to its owner. Then with a profound stare and a voluble: "Hello! Where did you ever get that?" He held close to the light the copper penny Erna Barton had given to Wilbur. He rubbed it, took out a magnifying glass and added: "Say, did you know that you have a treasure?"

"What do you mean?" questioned Wilbur.

"Why, that this is a Cirencester penny of the period of King Stephen, probably one of the rarest coins in the world, centuries old. Will you let me take it to an old collector I know? I'll be back in an hour."

The hour was just up when Paul, excited and breathless, returned. "One of the only two known!" he fairly shouted. "The other is in the British museum. I have an offer of six hundred dollars."

"Take it!" cried Wilbur impulsively, "and use five hundred dollars of it for your wonderful speculation."

Which turned out just as Paul had predicted. There was a later division of twenty thousand dollars' profits, and Wilbur Gray went back to his native village to make Erna Barton the happiest girl in the world.

Cold Feet In Advertising

Phone 189 and our Representative will Call and discuss Rates, etc., with you

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

Peculiar Strike.

One of the novel strikes on record was that of smugglers which occurred on the German-Polish frontier some years ago. Extensive smuggling operations were being carried on, principally through women who crossed into Germany two or three times a day in ragged clothing, returning in costumes of the latest fashion. From the smuggling organization the women received less than 50 cents a day, so they struck for higher wages, and won.

International Courtesy.

It is customary, however, for steamers to carry the United States flag at the forepeak when entering United States ports, but this is merely a matter of international courtesy and is not compulsory.

Deer Increasing in California.

Though the game reserve established in the greater portion of the Angeles forest reserve in California, which includes the San Bernardino and Sierra Madre Mountains, has been in existence but two years, wild deer are multiplying rapidly, according to forestry officials. It is believed that within a few years great herds of deer will be roaming the hills. Deer have been on the verge of extermination in the Southern California mountains, but establishment of the preserve is protecting the herds. Even now deer often appear along the boundary lines of the restricted area, and at times wander into cities near the foothills, seeming to be very tame. The forestry service will establish special patrols along the reserve during the coming hunting season to see that the law is not violated.—Christian Science Monitor.

Good-by, Dobbin.

Figures compiled by the New York sanitary bureau of the department of health and reported by Harry T. Gardner, secretary of the Automobile Dealers' association, show a great decrease in the number of stables, and, naturally, in the numbers of horses occupying them. In 1917 there were 108,036 horses. The most recent figures show a shrinkage of 32,936 horses. Chicago, too, shows a falling off in the registration of horse-drawn vehicles under the wheel tax law. In the four years ended May 1, this year, the number of such vehicles decreased from 49,582 to 32,489. This diminution of about 34 per cent compared with New York's falling off of about 30 per cent.

OLD TIME CONCERT

The young people of Knox Church have been fortunate in securing Dr. Park of the Normal School to give violin numbers at their Old Time Concert tomorrow evening. Another feature of marked interest in connection with this concert will be "The Old Family Album." Come and renew your acquaintance with many of the friends you knew in the long ago in Knox Church Lecture Hall tomorrow evening at 8 o'clock.

BUILDING PERMITS

Four building permits, totalling an expenditure of $4,900, were issued in January, as against four permits in the same month last year for a total expenditure of $190.

TO LOWER COST OF FOODS—THE CHANGE THAT IS COMING

The world's present facilities are totally inadequate to the new job. This applies to every business. A system which constituted a grocery with an efficient service that was fair to the consumer before the war, is not fair now, as everyone knows. Food prices must be lowered. This in turn demands that the cost of the cumbersome service must be cut off. To meet this demand for lower costs, E. F. Mason, 429 George street, has installed the latest new method for distributing foods. The counter system with many old ideas has been eliminated. The store now has, besides the regular credit department, a complete "Groceteria" branch which will give an easy and rapid service for the cash purchaser. Every purchaser visiting the store is greatly pleased with the new appearance and convenient service and still more impressed with the saving in cost of every line.

The CANADIAN EXPRESS CO. wishes to announce to their patrons that they have closed their George street office and have removed to their new office in the Grand Trunk depot and will carry on business there in future. The company respectfully solicits the continued patronage of their customers.

W. T. SKITCH, Agent.

GEORGE STREET CHOIR GUESTS OF MRS. KENDRY

PLESANT SOCIAL EVENING WAS SPENT WITH MUSIC, CONTESTS AND READINGS

The spacious residence [illegible] James Kendry, 754 Water street, presented an animated appearance last Thursday evening. Some sixty members and friends of the choir of George Street Methodist Church were the guests of Mrs. Kendry and enjoyed to the full her kindly hospitality.

The evening was devoted to an informal program of music rendered by members of the choir, contests and readings. The latter, which were given by Miss Urquhart, teacher of elocution at the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, were most enjoyable. Dainty refreshments were served by T. H. Hooper and Son. Mrs. Kendry proved a charming hostess and the evening passed all too quickly.

Before the gathering dispersed, as an evidence of the deep appreciation of the choir for her kindness, a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mrs. Kendry.

SUITABLE MEMORIAL FOR HONORED DEAD

Y. M. C. A. WILL ERECT TABLET IN MEMORY OF FALLEN MEMBERS

Arrangements are being completed to place a memorial in the Y.M.C.A. to those members who fell in the war. A committee of the Board of Directors has been appointed to elect a suitable memorial tablet and the list of members who paid the supreme sacrifice has been carefully compiled.

In order to prevent mistakes and to allow for any connections before the memorial is purchased the list of names is being published.

HAS FARM PROBLEM, TOO

Shortage of Help and Rural Depopulation Blamed for Conditions.

Washington, Feb. 2.—Questionnaires issued by the U.S. postal department to farmers throughout the country have brought the unanimous reply that conditions in rural districts are far from satisfactory and more than 20,000 farmers have avowed their intention of leaving their lands. The chief causes of complaint are shortagke of help and the facility with which young people leave the farm for the city. Many farmers also express a wish for closer contact with the ultimate consumer.

OLD ST. ANDREW'S CHURCH, TORONTO, KEPT OPEN EVERY NIGHT IN THE WEEK

Strangers Find a Home Welcome Whenever They Choose to Call—Refreshments Are Served Sunday Evenings

An experiment in making the church a genuine social centre, open every night in the week for all who care to gather there for companionship and recreation, and where the stranger may find a cordial welcome, is being tried at [illegible] Old St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church in Toronto.

Although this idea has only been originated recently, and put into action last week, it has proved a pronounced and immediate success.

Formed for War Work.

According to Mrs. E. French, president of the Women's Association in Old St. Andrew's Church, this new movement has been brought about largely by the women. With regard to this she says: "During the war, auxiliaries were formed for war work, and the church parlors were the popular centres of their activities. The women learned to appreciate the value of these meetings. They grew to know one another better, and looked forward to the social hours and companionship which they afforded. Discussions on home life revealed the fact that hundreds of young people were seeking recreation in the movies and other places, because there were no other common meeting places open to them. The matter was recently brought up before a gathering of all the presidents and secretaries in our church, and it was unanimously voted that the church should remain open every evening for the benefit of the stranger and any young people in the community who wished to take advantage of the church parlors as a place of recreation.

Amusements Provided.

"Games, books, writing material and a piano have been provided, and the parlors have taken on a touch of a real home. Monday nights are given over to the young people, who are on hand to receive any stranger who desires a welcome. On the other five nights it has been arranged among the members to provide a host and hostess, who do the honors of the evening, and see that everyone is comfortable and happy. Sunday evening is the special night of the week. After the service a cordial welcome is extended to any person who wishes to partake of the church's hospitality. An entertainment is provided, also refreshments are served, and a general 'get together' hour is spent by the visitors.

In conclusion Mrs. French stated that letters of appreciation had already been received from several of the strangers from out of town, who thanked the ladies for the happy time they had spent.

"We saw the announcement on your bulletin board, and as we had no friends whatever in the city, felt we would like to see what amusement the church had to offer us. It was one of the most enjoyable evenings I have spent, and the memory of the kind hospitality extended to us will not be forgotten," said a young traveler and a student who paid a visit to the city last week.

Sherbourne street church and many others in the city also welcomed a large number of strangers to their firesides last Sunday evening.

WOMEN'S ART ASSOCIATION

A large audience filled the studio of the Women's Art Association on Saturday afternoon at their fortnightly musicale. The program was arranged by Mrs. Percy Hooper and was one of particular interest.

Mr. Otto Gliddon's playing of "Egerie," by Kroeger, was greatly enjoyed, as was also Miss Ida Sanderson's piano selection, Chopin's "Polonaise Militaire." The cello solo by Mr. Tom Smith with piano accompaniment by Miss Agnes Logan was most delightful. Mr. Matthews, whose splendid voice was heard for the first time by a Peterborough audience, sang most acceptably two groups of songs, the first, "Until" and "An Old-Fashioned Town," and the second, "Roses of Picardy" and Bendeemer's "Spring." Miss Helen Maclaren's first selection, "The Wren," by Liza Lehrman, was very pleasing. Miss MacLaren sang also a group of songs, "The Will o' the Wisp," by Sprosse, and "Open Secret" by Woodman, in a very charming manner. Miss Aikens gave two readings, "Lady Clare" and "Katie's Answer," which were well received.

Mrs. A. Mowat and Mrs. F. C. Neal were hostesses at the tea hour, the assistants being Mrs. T. Cruikshanks, Mrs. Porter, Mrs. F. J. A. Morris and Miss Ethel Richardson.

THE WEATHER

In Saturday's issue it was stated that the temperature was down to 26 degrees below zero at daybreak, and going down. Later in the morning it reached 28 below zero. This is the lowest point that has been recorded this winter and lower than any reached last winter. Sunday morning's low point was 20 below.

January of this year has proved to be one of the most severe we have ever had. Though there were no bad storms, the cold weather was almost continuous. On 21 days the temperature was below zero in the morning and on four days it did not rise to zero during the day. The coldest was 28 below on the 31st. (Saturday last.) The highest was 34 on the 8th. There was no "January thaw," or any appearance of one. The snowfall was 25 inches.

Today is Candlemas Day, and according to the old saying Bruin is supposed to come out of his winter's sleep and take a look to see if the sun is shining sufficiently to cast his shadow. If he sees his shadow he goes back for another six weeks. If he sees no shadoy he stays out, and expects spring to be around the corner.—W. P.

SUNDAY SERVICE AT GEORGE ST CHURCH

Rev. A. J. Thomas Preached on Topic "The Man Who Was Taught a Great Truth in a Strange Way."

Communion services were observed at the George Street Methodist Church yesterday morning, with the love feast at 10 o'clock and the sacrament at 11 o'clock. In connection with the latter service twenty-six persons were received into membership.

In the evening the pastor preached, taking as his subject "A man who was taught a great fact in a strange way." This was the first of a short series of sermons on some of the unnamed men of the Bible. Mr. Thomas took as his text II. Kings vi., 17: "Wherein Elisha the prophet when news was brought by his servant that the Syrians had surrounded the town with an armed host, prayed that the eyes of the young man might be opened, "and the Lord opened the eyes of the young man and he saw and beheld the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round dabout Elisha."

Mr. Thomas pointed out that we must believe that this vision was not a mere subjective fancy, but a view of the spiritual hosts of heaven. The Bible is full of the existence of spiritual beings higher than man but lower than God, some of which have become visible to men at various times. There is a great sublime truth, that there is One in the universe of the unseen world Who stands alone, above all—God, the omnipotent, omniscient, and omnipresent, the climax of Whose revelation was in Jesus Christ.

"The world is not simply material," said Mr. Thomas, "and the reality of the spiritual is a constant protest against the materialism of human nature." Mr. Thomas showed that one of the good results of the Great War is a new sense of the spiritual which is revising our values of materialism. Yet many men still have eyes that do not see.

"We need an increasing sense of the unseen to solve the problems of today—the spiritual dominance of Jesus Christ.

"Everyone," said Mr. Thomas, "must be his own prophet in the last analysis. He must pray for himself. If all you can see is materialism, then cry out for sight to Christ, and He will say, 'Receive thy sight.' Get a vision of the spiritual, and you will have victory over everything that tempts to unrighteousness."

TWO MILLION DOLLARS NEEDED BY UNIVERSITY

UNLESS ACCOMMODATION IS INCREASED, APPLICANTS MUST BE TURNED AWAY

The University of Toronto is in urgent need of financial help from the Provincial Treasury. It is carrying a deficit of half a million dollars and it has under contemplation a building program which will require a very large grant from the Province. It is understood that the total amount that the University will require from the Government will not be less than $2,000,000. The needs of the institution already have been placed before the Government.

The shortage of accommodation for students in Queen's Park today is such that if action is not taken soon to provide relief the University will have to turn away applicants. At one time the University was receiving one-half of the amount paid in succession duties. This legal provision was changed, however and the yearly grant was fixed at $500,000. The estimate for this year's succession duties is $2,750,000.

CITY DEVELOPMENT COMMISSION ASK COUNCIL FOR $1,500 GRANT

Urge the Wisdom of Preparing Map of Peterborough From Photos to be Taken From an Airplane at an Altitude of 4,000 Feet

The following is a copy of the communication received by the City Council last night from the members of the City Development Commission:

To His Worship the Mayor and Aldermen of the City Council.

Gentlemen: Your City Development Commission beg respectfully to submit their first report and, at outset desire to say that the need for and the objects of city planning may be briefly summarized as follows:

To so guide the development of the city that there will be no congested areas. To direct the development of business, residential and factory districts. To develop the means of communication between the different sections of the city along the most convenient and shortest lines.

To the end that sewer, water and other public utility systems may be adequately and economically planned with a view to future growth. That streets may be in harmony with the city plan and advantageously located as to the subdivisions of abutting properties. That all sections of the city and all subdivisions of property may become parts of the harmonious whole.

To provide parks, parkways and play-grounds where they will be most accessible and of the greatest benefit to the community. To make the city a place to live in and enjoy, instead of a place in which to exist.

Town Planning Adams

On November 7th, 1919, Mr. Thomas Adams, the Government Town Planning Advisor, on his second informal visit to the city, addressed members of the Council and Board of Trade at luncheon afterwards in conference met the Mayor City Engineer Parsons, City Clerk Armstrong and the Board of Trade Committee. He then advised as essential steps toward a city plan; first, the creation and appointment of a City Development Commission; second, the location of the railway station centre as the "hub" of the city's plan; and third the preparation of a topographical map by a general survey of the city suburbs.

On December 1st., by unanimous action of the council, the City Development Commission was constituted to consider and report upon (1) the physical improvement and expansion of the city's streets and highways, (2) parks and parkways, (3) water and water frontages and (4) other subjects that may originate with or be referred to it; (5) to cooperate with the Government Town Planning Advisor in elaborating and reporting upon a specific plan of city development and also () to report upon a permanent system under which the future development of the city may be furthered.

On January 1st. the strong support of the ratepayers, in favour of the proposal to purchase Riverside Park and the propertes immediately north and east to Burnham street for park purposes. was indicative of a growing and positive interest in park extension and improvement.

Our Natural Advantages

This city is fortunate in having unequalled natural advantages and few difficult conditons to overcome, in the systematic planning of its future By preliminary designing, we can ensure the wise development of the whole city physically and thus effect a result that must enhance its attractiveness, enrich material values individually and collectively and promote the general welfare.

Cooperate With Railways

The whole problem of town planning hinges, to a large extent, upon transportation conditions and facilities. In the opinion of your commission, the railway station is amenable to negotiation and your commission believe that the sympathetic and practical cooperation of the interested corporations can be secured. This should obviate the need of employing an expert railway engineer which would involve a considerable outlay. Under a plan of cooperation with the chief engineers of the railway companies we can have the position of all the sidings and lines of extension indicated and can then judge the effect of these upon the growth of the city.

A Topographical

Then too, comparatively little expense will be involved in the preparation of a complete topographical map of the city because the data has already been compiled by the City Engineer and will require only technical study and drafting; but the preparation of a general map adapted for the purpose of Mr. Adams the City Engineer and your commission [illegible] ative work is primarily necessary.

CROWN PRINCE AND OTHER SONS OF EX-KAISER TO BE EXTRADITED

Names of Eight Hundred Alleged Criminals Are on List of Those Whom the Allies Propose to Place on Trial For Violation of Rules of War.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 3.—The list of Germans accused by the Allies of war crimes, whose extradition is to be demanded, is headed by the former Crown Prince, Frederic William, and several other sons of the former German emperor. The list will be handed to Baron Kurt von Lersner, German representative here, this afternoon.

Paris, Feb. 3.—Included in the list are Dr. Theobald von Bethman-Hollwegg, who was the former German imperial chancellor; Field Marshal von Hindenburg, General Erich Ludendorff, former first quarter-master general. Field Marshal von Mackensen, Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, the Duke of Wurttemberg and a number of other princes and titled officers. The total number of names on the list is about eight hundred, and it is divided into eight sections. The first section is the common list of all accused. Then follow seven other lists, giving the names, rank and accusations of the persons whose names were supplied by Great Britain, France, Italy, Belgium, Roumania, Jugo-Slavia and Poland.

COUNCIL WILL APPLY FOR LOAN OF $200,000 FOR HOUSING SCHEME

City Will Expropriate Wilson's Land For Sewage Disposal Plant—Exhibition Board Asks $5,000 Grant.

The City Council's second regulad monthly meeting, last night, was of a business character from the drop of the hat. No time was lost in repetition of threat-worn arguments, and altogether, the council of 1920 promises to accomplish a miximum of work in a minimum amount of time.

He Would Resign

James Finnie wrote Council that it is his firm belief the Government Housng plan is impracticable in Peterborough owing to the high cost of labor and material, hence he tendered his resignation from the city's housing commission.

Ald. Gainey moved that Mr. Alex Morrison be appointed to fill the vacancy caused by Mr. Finnie's resignation.

Ald. Turner advised delay in this matter, as perhaps Mr. Finnie could be persuaded to remain in office should Council determine to go ahead with the housing scheme after securing information as to its operations in other nearby places.

Ald. Turner and Crowe moved that the Mayor, Commissioner Dobbin and Engineer Parsons, visit a few towns, and report on conditions under the Government Housing Scheme, as found therein. Also that application he made to the Legislature for a loan of $200,000.

Ald. Turner suggested that this loan need not be taken up should Council not feel warranted in adopting the Housing Scheme for Peterborough.

Ald. Gordon would like to be clear that Council would not be bound by an application for this money.

Ald. Crowe spoke strongly in favor of the Government Housing project, and declared quite a few citizens, are anxious to take advantage of it.

Ald. Jones thought Mr. Finnie could be induced to remain on the Housing Commission. He mainly objects, he said, to spending the city's money on a trip of investigation when he is in doubt if conditions in Peterborough would warrant adopting the scheme.

The motion here carried.

The Board of Education's demand from the City Council this year is for $157,700, $32,000 or $33,000 and more than last year.

For Nicholls Hospital

The Nicholls Hospital Trust notified Council that they will need from the city this year $450 each month, and hoped that next year will see normal conditions re-established and that in future the hospitals will be self-supporting.

This went to the Finance Committee.

Asks For $5,000.

President Roland Denne of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition Board asked for an increased grant over the $2,000 given last year. Mr. Denne pointed out that not only does this board furnish a progressive exhibition but also live attractions on public holidays. It is intended to build new cattle barns and other buildings Mr. Denne said; and he asked for a grant from the city of 5,000, which together with $5,000 from the manufacturers would make the $10,000 needed this year for this annual fair.

Mr. Reginald Turner strongly supported Mr. Denne's request. He said the Exhibition Board had spent $17,000 on improvements the past two years, but other urgent needs are still in sight. The county, he pointed out, had given the board a grant of $2,000 this year.

These gentlemen were supported by a strong deputation of representative citizens composed of Messrs. W. H. Bradburn, Thomas Barrie, W. G. Morrow, W. S. Merrell, S. D. Hall, W. E. Hodgens, V. Eastwood, R. G. Kingan, E. F. Mason.

This question was sent to the Finance Committee.

The Glorious Twelfth

W. J. Hancock was one of a strong Orange deputation and asked the Council for a grant of $400 toward the Orangemen's big demonstration to be held in Peterborough the coming twelfth of July. Mr. Hancock declared that unquestionably 15,000 people will visit Peterborough on that date. He also assured council that 10,000 programs of the day's doings are to be printed, the larger portion of which will be circulated out of town three months before July 12. These programs will contain illustrations of places of interest in this city and information as to Peterborough's advantages, which will prove a good advertising medium.

Mr. Hancock also asked for the use of the Central Park by the Orangemen on the Twelfth.

The Finance Committee will report on this request.

COMING SESSSION MAY SEE FINISH OF GOVERNMENT

HON. T. A. CRERAR'S STRENGTH AS FARMER LEADER MAY FORCE ELECTION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 3.— Three weeks from Thursday Parliament opens for what may prove to be the last session for the present Government. The air is agog with rumors and prophecies. There is considerable discussion of the sessional program but the talk is rather of sessional possibilities than of programs, whether or not session will end in a general election. In Government circles the situation is admitted to present its pitfalls. None the less there is confident expectation expressed that the Government will weather the storm and remain in power at any rate until after destribution which will folow the census of next year.

Apparently the outcome of the session will depend largely on the strength of Hon. T. A. Crerar, former Minister of Agriculture. The rapid growth of the Farmers' movement in the West and in Ontario, and indications that it is spreading into the maritime provinces and even to a certain extent in Quebec give to Mr. Crerar an unquestioned position of power.

How Strong is Crerar?

Last year an opposition tariff amendment was defeated by 31 votes but it had the support of fourteen Liberal-Unionists. A tariff amendment by Mr. Crerar's supporters along the lines of the Farmers' platform, might very conceivably attract a much larger measure of support from the rural members and the Government be defeated. On the other hand, it is questioned if Mr. Crerar could secure the measure of support from the Unionist members, necessary to defeat the Government. Parliament has still technically three years to run. It is improbable that the general elections would return more than a comparatively small proportion of the present rank and file of the House of Commons.

TO DEFINE POWER OF BOARD OF COMMERCE

SUPREME COURT DECIDES TO GRANT APPLICATION FOR A HEARING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—After private deliberation lasting about fifteen minutes the Supreme Court this morning decided to hear the application of the Board of Commerce for the determination of its powers and jurisdiction, immediately at the close of the Quebec list of cases, as the western and Maritime Province cases are heard before the Quebec list. It is considered likely by counsel that at least three weeks will elapse before the Board of Commerce case comes up.

IRISH PARLIAMENT IS NOT LIKELY TO OPPRESS ULSTER

MR. ASQUITH BELIEVES THE RACE IS TOO INTELLIGENT FOR COERCION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 3.— Mr. Asquith devoted himself last night to the Irish question. He declared that the only effectual means of getting at the root of the Irish trouble as a generous system of Irish Government. He was, he said, prepared to give the new Irish Parliament control over customs and excise in order that the Irish might be in this respect on the same footing as the self governed Dominions. He would not refuse to consider dispassionately any scheme of settlement for Ireland which the Government might bring forward, but it must be a permanent settlement.

It was not to be supposed that an Irish Parliament would make anything in the nature of a predatory system of fiscal injustice against Ulster. To credit them with that was to credit them with the intelligence of savages. The principle of self determination should be applied also to Scotland. It was common sense to free the Imperial Parliament from burdens which cannot adequately be discharged.

FIRE CHIEF GRANGE SUBMITS HIS ANNUAL REPORT TO CITY COUNCIL

Total Loss From Fires Last Year $35,977.88—Lowest Fire Loss in Peterborough Since 1915—Monthly Inspection a Fire Preventative.

Fire Chief Grange's third annual report to the City Council reads as follows:

Peterborough, January 17, 1920
To His Worship the Mayor and Gentlemen of the Council.

Gentlemen:—

I have the honor to submit herewith the twelvth annual report of the Peterborough Fire Department, being the third annual report since I assumed the duties of Chief of the Department.

During the year the department responded to 191 alarms of fire and in doing so the apparatus travelled 291 miles. The department laid 16, 150 feet of standard 2½ inch fire hose, used 1,079 gallons of chemical extinguisher fluid and raised 932 feet of ladders.

The total losses as nearly as can be estimated being $35,977.88, distributed as follows—$11,401.88 on buildings and $24,576.00 on contents. This is the lowest fire loss for Peterborough since 1915. The heaviest individual loss during 1919 was $10,000 at the plant of the Canadian General Electric Co. on October 8th.

Shortly after I was appointed to the position of Chief of the department I started a system of monthly inspection of the business section of the city. For this purpose the city is divided into four districts and an officer of the department detailed to look after each district. The officer is directly responsible to the Chief for the condition of the buildings and premises in the district over which he has charge. The duty of the officers conducting inspection work is to see that on each floor of the buildings (from the cellar to the attic) there is no combustible rubbish or conjested condition allowed to exist. Any unsafe condition is reported to the chief, who immediately takes the matter up with the owner or occupant of the premises. On inspection trips the officers are accompanied by one or more members of the brigade for the purpose of giving every man the opportunity of thoroughly acquainting himself with location of all openings, stairways etc., in each building and the method and material used in their construction. A record of all such information is filed in the office of the Chief.

During 1918 the chief advised that 37 buildings be equipped with fire escapes of the type approved of by the Government regulations. Several owners have complied with the recommendation, while others have been extremely dilatory respecting the matter.

I would advise that some legislation be enacted prohibiting the operation of large dry cleaning establishments in the congested portion of the city. Their presence prove a great menace to the safety of lives and property, especially to the lives of the firemen who would be compelled to fight fire in the vicinity of a building that contains gasoline to the extent of seventy-five gallons. Gasoline fumes travel for a great distance and are very penetrating. The presence in the vicinity (even in a nearby building) of any exposed fire or of one smoking might be sufficient to ignite the fumes. The fire would then travel back to the source of supply and an explosion result. The placing of the gasoline in tanks under the earth does not relieve the situation. The gasoline is being used on the surface.

All of the aparatus has been kept in a good state of repair. During the year we added one 45 ft. ladder, 1-25 ft. and 1-20 ft. to our ladder equipment, to replace others which

PRESENT COUNCIL ARE SATISFIED WITH CITY'S POLICE COMMISSION

Rescind Resolution of Last December to Petition That Office Be Elective by Popular Vote.

Stratford's City Council notified Peterborough Council last night that they have endorsed this city's resolution to petition the Legislature that members of the Police Commission be elected by the people.

Ald. Gordon and Turner moved that this resolution passed by Peterborough Council, December 1st, last year, be rescinded and sister municipalities so notified. This carried on a vote of 6 to 4.

Ald. Gordon said the whole object of the present method of naming the county judge, the police magistrate and the Mayor a police commission beyond the influence of either political or elective factions would be defeated were these offices made elective. It would, he declared, be a dangerous move to put the commissioners under the same public control as is the Council, in regard to election to office. The idea of the present system is that the integrity and independence of neither the commissioners nor the police shall be infringed on. Ald. Crowe's resolution of last December is along the American lines, a principle which not infrequently causes trouble with municipal governments and people. Many cities declared Ald. Gordon, have ignored last year's Council's request for endorsation of a petition for an elective commission. 'Tis true that Kitchener had endorsed the proposition, but he questioned that city's record for law and order; Sault Ste. Marie, another endorser was largely a city of foreigners, while Woodstock, being a city of retired farmers, needs no police, so to speak.

Ald. Crowe: "Don't you think, my honorable friend, you are out of order? This question was settled last December."

Ald. Gordon thought not.

Ald. Crowe contended that the Police Commission as it exists is unsatisfactory, especially so as Council has no voice in its expenditures, and the people object. The Mayor, elected to his office by popular vote, is a member of the commission; the other two, he concluded, are not elected to office, are one of the police family and we can expect nothing else but that they should stand in with the force.

Ald. Whitehouse differed with Ald. Crowe. He considered the commission composed of honorable gentlemen whp do their duty entirely to the satisfaction of the community. He did not know where Ald. Crowe gathered that the people want a change. "I have great pleasure, he said, in seconding Ald. Gordon's resolution."

AMBASSADORS STILL TALK OF EXTRADITION

REPLY TO HOLLAND'S NOTE OF REFUSAL TO BE CONSIDERED FRIDAY.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 3.—The Council of Ambassadors have decided that neither the list of persons whose extradition is to be demanded by the Allies nor the note to be addressed to Germany in this regard will be made public here. The draft of the note was decided upon by the Council this morning. The Council also discussed the reply to Holland regarding the surrender of Count Hohenzollern and terms of the allied response will be further taken up at a meeting of the Council on Friday. It is not expected that a decision will be reached on that day as different governments interested must be consulted.

PREMIER DRURY AND EDUCATION.

IT MUST BE ADMITTED by every fair-minded person who has read the Premier's speeches on this subject that his ideas on the educational needs of the Province are sound and practical. It is often the man of outstanding academic qualifications who makes blunders when he deals with this topic. The trouble with so many of this class is that they aim too high. They concern themselves chiefly with the higher branches of education with the university and the training schools, and leave the rural temples of learning to take their chances. The late G. W. Ross, when Minister of Education for Ontario, once said that the top rung of the ladder in the educational system was the university degree, which, by the way, the senator had never reached himself. With characteristic horse sense and as the result of some observation, Premier Drury remarks that the majority of the Canadian boys and girls tumble off the ladder of learning before they have made even half the distance to the top.

There is no use in attempting to erect even a temple of learning unless the structure is placed on a solid foundation. The rural schools must be improved, and Premier Drury and his Cabinet associates appear to have charged themselves with a duty which has in a great measure been neglected by their predecessors. The rural schools cannot achieve their highest standard of usefulness if they are used merely as institutions for the preparing of the pupils for the High school, which so large a percentage fail to reach.

Why spend thousands on the upkeep of a State university for the benefit of a small percentage of the population, if the rural schools are neglected? Why all this expenditure for teachers' training schools if the rural schools are to be denied the services of the best of these graduates who have been prepared for the profession largely at public expense, and when the only reason for this condition is the fact that the school section as at present constituted is so often unequal to the financial burden of an adequate salary to the teacher? The entire educational system is out of joint and has been since the beginning. The city schools, the Collegiate the Normal schools and the universities have been unduly favored by those in authority. The boy or girl resident in the country can enjoy equal educational advantages with those in the city only by removing to the urban centre. And in the face of these facts the wonder appears to continue that there is a falling off in the rural population.

If the Farmers' Government of Ontario builds up the rural school system, that alone should be sufficient justification for its existence. Let the education foundation be firmly laid and the superstructure will not be in constant danger of toppling over for lack of support.

SIR THOMAS WHITE FOR LEADER.

THE BOOM—it may almost be called a demand even at this early stage—for ex-Finance Minister White for the leader of the Conservative party in succession to Sir Robert Borden, whom every one believes will retire permanently from office as soon as the necessary arrangements have been made, has been renewed at Ottawa It is expected that Premier Borden will return to Ottawa at an early date, and that his intention is to relinquish the cares of office, a step rendered necessary by the state of his health.

If the Conservative party is to survive, if its principles are to be perpetuated, then it is necessary to find a man like Sir Thomas White to succeed to the leadership. He went into the Borden Cabinet, an untried man so far as public life was concerned, in 1911, and made good. Not one word of suspicion has ever been whispered against his integrity. He was too honest in his convictions to be even termed an opportunist. His chance came with the war to establish a reputation as a financier second to none of any of the financial experts in the countries engaged in the conflict. He is sound on the trade question as on every other tenet of the creed of the party. Sir Thomas White is the one man in sight to unite all the different elements, all the various sections of the Dominion in a common purpose.

From a financial standpoint, his acceptance of the leadership would mean a sacrifice, but his seven years of public service meant that from the beginning. Still, if the demand is insistent, as it seems to be, the hope is warranted that Sir Thomas may see that it is his duty to accept.

MR. ROWELL AND THE LEAGUE.

IN HIS ADDRESS at Ottawa, with the League of Nations as a text, Hon. N. W. Rowell appears to have betrayed unnecessary alarm when he dealt with the attitude of the United States with regard to that compact. The American Senate is not trying to lower the status of Canada or any other of the British dominions by refusing them representation in the League. What the Republicans in the Senate do object to is the possession of six votes by the British Empire while the United States is given only one. On all issues that would come before the League, the Americans would find themselves in a minority if they accepted membership in the League as the conditions now stand.

The United States has two objections to the terms of the agreement. The first is the article which provides that a majority of the League shall decide by vote whether the nations that are a party to it shall go to war to preserve the territorial integrity of any power that is a member. The constitution of the United States enacts that that nation shall go to war only by a majority vote of Congress, and the Americans have no desire to see that prerogative transferred to a body the majority of which is made up of European powers. Suppose in the not improbable event of a future attack by the Germans upon India, would it be fair to force the United States into a conflict opposed alike to the cherished traditions and the actual history of the American people?

Earl Grey rather than Mr. Rowell appears to have the solution of the problem that confronts the Allied Nations. He would increase the voting strength of the Americans. This could be done without detriment to the status of the dominions. The Americans cannot be expected to revise their constitution, and by so doing destroy one of their most highly prized democratic principles, the right of the people to make peace or declare war, to meet a situation for the existence of which they can in no sense be held responsible. Mr. Rowell's address rings with patriotism. He beyond question asserts the national dignity of Canada, but his case is built upon the shaky premises of a false alarm.

NATURAL VERSUS ARTIFICIAL BEAUTY.

THE RESIDENTS of Peterborough as a class are justly proud of the natural beauties of the location of their city, its undulating hills and winding river, the extensive view of the surrounding country that may be obtained at various points. But isn't it just possible that too much is made of these lavish gifts of Nature and that there has been a disposition to rely solely on these and to neglect anything like artificial adornment?

There is nothing that can eclipse the works of Nature. But where man builds a city these works are invariably marred. Jackson Park, for example, is pretty much as it came from the molds of Nature, and in this lies its chief attraction. It would present an entirely different picture if the trees were cut down, rubbish left indiscriminately in every quarter, or if it were built up with nondescript residences without any regard to arrangement. The destruction of Nature's works that is necessary wherever a city is established must to a great extent be repaired by the artifice of the same human hands that have wrought the ruin.

With its location and its natural advantages, Peterborough can easily be made one of the most attractive cities in America. To attain this objective requires the exercise of good taste rather than the heavy expenditure of money. The civic pride of the citizens must be aroused, every householder's co-operation must be enlisted.

To bring this about is one of the objects of the recently appointed City Development Commission, the members of which are well equipped and are enthusiastic in the duties which they have assumed. They ask the Council for a grant of $1500 to begin the work, and some way there seems to be a general confidence that the Council as at present constituted will not hesitate to help on this worthy work. The benefit of the assistance of the official town planning expert can be secured at a nominal outlay if the city will only make a move in the arrangement of preliminaries.

PATRONAGE AND THE CENSUS.

WITH A CHARACTERISTIC flare of trumpets, the Union Government proclaims another of its so-called political virtues. The enumerators who are to take the decennial census next year are to be appointed at Ottawa, and the recommendations of the members of Parliament in the various constituencies will not be taken into account. This is another alleged blow at the old-time patronage system, one of the reforms supposed to have been introduced by the present Government.

Again it is in order to claim that this new arrangement is simply a change in the interests of the various elements that constitute the present party in power at Ottawa. The census enumerators and other officials are men whose fitness will depend largely upon their familiarity with local conditions. A Peterborough man, for instance, would naturally, other things being equal be more efficient in the work than a stranger sent from outside, some man whose qualifications were purely academic as shown by the test of a written examination Any man who enjoys public confidence to the extent of being elected to represent a constituency in Parliament should be entrusted with the task of selecting men to take the census or to perform any other of the lesser duties in the public service.

ENGLAND, THE LAND OF LAW AND ORDER

At the moment, there is not one agitator, Labor Leader or Bolshevist in any English jail. There are no mobs—no bombs—no conspiracies.

There is plenty of wild talk. There has always been too much. But it goes no further than talk. Not even the maddest of the Red Flag Brotherhood is likely to advocate violence in England. Even if he did, it would be debited to eloquence and not taken seriously.

England is slow—true, but she is not gaseous. She is not explosive. She is the land of law and order. She was the first country to be governed by the principle of compromise and, if necessary, she will be the last.

This great fact is worthy of serious reflection in America, now that you have 5,000 reds in pail

As England plods stolidly forward into this New Year 1920 she has no revolutions on hand in her homeland. True, there is plenty of revolution in Ireland and Egypt and India; but as an Englishman would say—"that is different." There is none in Britain itself.

There is not even a strike in this first week of 1920. The moulders have gone back to work, having gained a third of their demands, and no new strike is pending in any trade. Even the local miners are working hard, and the railwaymen are doing their best to win back the lost favor of the public.

At least four great perils were safely passed in 1919—demobilization the police strike, the coal strike, and the railway strike. These three strikes were lost, and the trade unions were thereby pushed back into a state of comparative reasonableness.

There is very little crime in England. There were only 77 burglaries in the whole of London last year.

There are one-third as many paupers and one-quarter as many bankrupts as there were in 1914.

There is more sport—more fun —more lightheartedness, if you like, that there has ever been. Last week there were 628,000 people at 32 football games; and there was a queue of 1,000 at Drury Lane Theatre.

Exports are slowly going up. Expenditure is slowly going down. This year, says Churchill, the army will cost up two billion dollars less than it cost in 1919.

There is a flood of money that has submerged even the slums. The volume of money that passed through the British Clearing House last year was incredible—$140,000,000,000.

One hundred and forty billions. It is nearly four times the value of Great Britain's war debt. It is 12 per cent above the pre-war level.

But the most significant fact of the week was the overwhelming defeat of the government at a Yorkshire by-election. Tom Myers, the Labor candidate, was elected. Two votes out of every three were cast against the government.

This is the sixth defeat of the Coalition Government, since the election. On the two dominant issues of high prices and no houses, there is no excuse that the suffering public will accept.

The labor vote has grown rapidly. In the last three by-elections, Labor received 31,000 votes; the Coalition received 29,000; and the poor Liberals received 13,000 in round numbers.

It is now evident that the Labor Party is receiving the votes of the Liberals the women and the middle-class voters, to a large extent. As a Labor leader said recently—"the proletariat is being strenghthened by the salariate." The "New Poor" are voting for Labor.

All this goes to show that revolutionism is fairly nonexistent in England. Lenine and Trotsky have no influence here. In several years the Labor Party may be in power, but by that time there will be so many middle-class and professional people in it that it will be Liberal rather than Labor.

RULES GOVERNING SALE OF LIQUOR IN U. S.

Methods by which intoxicating liquors may be obtained for medicinal purposes and detailed regulations governing their sale were made public by the Bureau of Internal Revenue in the United States. Announcement also was made that the Bureau had completed a system of permits, providing a definite and fixed channel through which all intoxicating liquors must move and by which hereafter the government will know the location of every gallon of distilled liquor within the nation's boundaries, except that stored in private homes.

In setting forth the ways in which liquor may be procured, Commissioner Roper took occasion to issue a warning against profiteering in its sale. The Commissioner declared that exhorbitant charges for liquor for medicinal purposes "certainly places the dispensers thereof in the class with profiteers, and they will be investigated.'

Mr. Roper also announced that all liquor seized under federal law prior to last October 28, unless claimed under the city-day ruling, would be sold by order of the court under the jurisdiction of which it is held. It must be sold, however, to a holder of a permit to use it either for medicinal or non-beverage purposes.

Regulations for Physicians

Both the physician who prescribes and the pharmacist who sells liquor the regulations provide, must have a permit, which may be obtained from the federal prohibition director. Other details of the method by which liquor for medicinal purposes may be purchased follow:

"Any physician duly licensed to practice medicine and actively engaged in the practice of such profession may obtain a permit to prescribe intoxicating liquor and may then issue prescriptions for distilled spirits, wines of certain alcoholic medicinal preparations for medicinal purposes for persons upon who he is in attendance in cases where he believes that the use of liquor as a medicine is necessary. In no case may spirituous liquor be prescribed by one or more physicians in excess of one pint for the same person within any period of ten days.

"All prescriptions of intoxicating liquor are required to be written on prescription blanks provided by the bureau, except that in emergency cases where delay in procuring liquor on a prescription through a pharmacist might have serious consequence to the patient.

"Provision is also made in the regulations for issuing permits to hospitals and sanatoriums to enable them to procure intoxicating liquor to be administered for medicinal purposes to patients at such institutions and also or issuing permits to manufacturing, industrial and other establishments maintaining first aid stations authorizng them to procure such liquor for administration to their employees for medicinal purposes in emergency cases."

ENGINEER FRANK BARBER APPROVES OF PIER OF BRIDGE RESTING ON HARD PAN

Writes Council That He Will Change His Plans to Meet Conditions.

Chairman Ald. Hamilton reported to the special bridge committee of the City Council last evening that Engineer Barber had decided to alter his plans for the east pier of the new Hunter street bridge to allow of building the foundation for this pier on the hard pan found at the present depth of excavation There seems some doubt as to finding bed rock at a reasonable depth, hence the change in plans. The engineer guaranteed the hard pan (blue clay) of sufficient thickness to assure safety, hence his change in plans.

Subsequently in Council Ald. Phelan explained that Mr. Barber originally had declared he was satisfied he would strike bed rock for this pier at a reasonable depth, and had conveyed the impression that bed rock was essential for the foundation of this pier. Ald. Phelan also took up the question of inspectors on the bridge work, contending that the men Mr. Barber had and has classified under that head were and are his own engineers supervising the work in his (Engineer Barber's) absence. In such case, Mr. Barber would be responsible for their salaries, and not the city.

Ald. Gordon was not sure but that had Mr. Barber been wrong in his assurance of finding bed rock on which to rest the east pier, he is responsible for any extra expense entailed.

Ald. Hamilton replied that personally he did not think that any liability was attached to Mr. Barber except a moral one.

Ald. Gordon here explained that he had drawn up the original agreement with Mr. Barber and had inserted a clause that he (Mr. Barber) be held responsible financially for the satisfactory construction of the bridge. Council, however, had accepted Mr. Barber's contention that any engineer could not be held financially responsible any more than an architect, so that provision was eliminated. Ald. Gordon here read a clause of the agreement providing that the construction of the bridge should be supervised by Mr. Barber or in his absence by a substitute engineer acting for him (and of course at his expense, he, Ald. Gordon, understood). Ald. Gordon opined that the men classed by Mr. Barber as inspectors were really engineers supervising the work in his absence.

The foregoing questions will be taken up with Engineer Barber when he responds to Council's request for a conference.

Every Canadian soldier, or civilian will approve of the honor recently conferred upon Major-General Gwatkin, Chief of the General Staff of the Canadian Militia, who has been made a Knight Commander of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

Major-General Sir Willoughby Gwatkin is an Imperial officer of high ability and wide experience whose services it was the good fortune of Canada to enjoy during the years of the world-war. He is the fourth son of the late Frederick Gwatkin, of Twickenham, England. He received his military education at Sandhurst, and at the Staff College at Camberley, from which he graduated with honors. His service has been varied. He joined the Manchester Regiment in which he rose to the rank of major. Later he was on the military staff of Egypt. Returning home, he was placed on the Headquarters Staff of the British army and did excellent service in connection with the equipment and despatch of troops to South Africa during the war of twenty years ago.

He was secured for Canada by General Lake, and, becoming director of operations, he practically had charge of the organization of the Canadian Militia on the lines existing before the war. After a year's absence in England, he returned to Canada, and took charge of mobilization work.

Finally, he was appointed Chief of the General Staff of the Canadian Miltia and Major-General. In that capacity, it is recognized on all hands that his services to Canada and the Empire have been simply invaluable. He was created a Companion of the Bath in 1916, and later a Companion of the Order of St. Michael and St. George.

A Steam Shovelier

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, [illegible], by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"There is no accounting for the tastes of some women when it comes to men," Glenquist observed, flicking the ashes from his cigar. "Maybe it's their intuition," he added, drawing his lungs full of smoke and exhaling through his nose.

The lawyer appeared more than usually loquacious this evening. He had a reputation for being rather taciturn when he was not in court, but with me he always threw off the cloak of reserve and chatted freely.

During our after-dinner chats, which always took place in his office on the seventh floor of the Boltwood building, we had decided the fate of bolshevism, solved the problem of H. C. L., settled the railroad ownership issue and thoroughly threshed out theosophy, spiritualism and new thought. Yes, we were congenial souls, were Glenquist and I.

As yet we had never discussed the most perplexing problem of the ages - love. Maybe it was because we were both confirmed bachelors and did not feel in a position to talk authoritatively on the question. However, the marriage of a mutual friend had brought the matter before us this evening, and casually I had inquired why Glenquist had never selected a lifelong companion.

"Suppose you tell your story," he suggested when I broached the subject. "Then I'll burden you with mine."

"I'll burden you with no story," I replied. "There's no story to it. I just naturally didn't take to the fair sex, or rather they didn't take to me. I guess it was mutual. Have you a story?"

For a moment he did not reply, and when he broke the silence it was to utter the words that opened this tale.

"Furthermore," he went on, "it is strange that brains do not appear to be considered much of an asset to a man when he asks a woman to become his wife. At least that is the case with some women, and very good, bright and capable women, too, I mean. Perhaps, as I say, it is their intuition, or their ability to see far ahead.

"In my case, perhaps, I deluded myself into thinking I had brains. Maybe I mistook my education for gray matter. Yes, there is a difference. A man may be fairly well educated and still lack an adequate amount of brains. On the other hand, without being conceited, it seems that I may claim to having at least a normal supply of thinking machinery. I am what you would call a successful criminal lawyer.

"I was terribly fond of Cassie Weldon six years ago. This was my home town, and also hers. We were classmates in high school, and when we were graduated I went to the university and she became a typist in a real estate office. During our last year in high school we had become very closely associated in social work and before we realized it were keeping steady company.

"When I was at college we corresponded regularly, and it seemed to me that she cared almost as much for me as I for her. I pictured her presiding in a nice little home when I got started on the road to success in my chosen profession, and although I did not broach the subject, I felt convinced she would see it that way. Perhaps I was somewhat egotistical, but really I do not believe it was that. To be sure, I was proud of the showing I was making in my studies and very hopeful of the future.

"Whenever I came home she professed to be happy over being with me, and I really believe she was. Our favorite pastime was walks in the woods with a camera, and I must confess that, deep down in a trunk, I still have a number of those snaps. Just for fun, I think I'll dig down and take a squint at them tomorrow.

"Things went on like this for some time, and I am sure that she did not keep company with any other particular fellow, although she occasionally went to dances and other entertainments with some male acquaintance who happened along and needed a partner for some special social event. This was only to be expected, seeing that we were not engaged and it not being natural for a young girl to stay at home and spend her evenings reading 'Robinson Crusoe' and 'Red Riding Hood.'

"It finally dawned on me that I had better get busy. I was in the fourth year of my law course, but Cassie was growing more attractive each day, and as I was not home to look after my interests it behooved me to get an option on her hand.

"I had spent that summer working in an attorney's office in Clarksburg, and so had not seen Cassie any more during vacation than during the school term. It was in the fall, and I was home for a few days, when I felt that the opportune time had arrived.

"We were walking down one of the back streets on our way to the woods. A steam shovel was excavating for a skyscraper, and the noise seemed to give me nerve. 'Cassie,' I blurted out, 'don't you think that—er—er—it's about time we got—got—down to business and—well, become engaged?'

"She was looking intently at the steam shovel. The thing appeared to fascinate her, with its chuggy-chug-chugging and its snorting as it strained at its base and seemed several times on the point of overturning itself, thrusting the huge shovel against the dirt wall and forcing it upward, gradually filling it, the tremendous, vibrating power of the machine winning against great resistance from the bank of dirt, as well as the law of gravitation.

"She watched the big crane swing the shovel round and dump its contents into a waiting wagon. Then the hoisting apparatus was again set at work on the bank of dirt and the process repeated. A lapse came with a break in the chain of wagons which carried the dirt away. Then Cassie turned to me.

"'I knew this was coming—some time,' she said, 'and I dreaded the moment. Jim, I think a lot of you. You're very clever, but—there's one thing, a tremendous big thing, lacking in you. It's physical power, or the ability to control physical power. You may have a great mind, but you are puny physically. I admire strength, I admire power. If you were only like—like that steam shovel there, tearing away at the earth, crushing all resistance, I could be happy with you. Some day there'll be a mammoth building there where the machine is working.

"'I can't help it, Jim, and probably it seems foolish to you; but I must tell you, no matter how it hurts, that if you were the engineer on that steam shovel you would stand a much better chance with me than you would as a lawyer. At least, you would be earning money with your strength, for the man that operates the shovel must be strong.'

"I confess that little speech floored me. We started to walk away, but a wagon arrived, and the steam shovel started operations again, and Cassie had to watch it some more. I strangled, gulped and finally managed to say, weakly:

"'Yes, and some day I'll have an office in that mammoth building.'

"That was the last time I was ever with her. With mingled disgust, bitterness and sadness I went back to college and finished my course. I came home with my diploma and it was not long before I began to win success—success such as it is. I'm making good as a criminal lawyer. I'm winning victories right along in court, but when it comes to finances I admit I'm not overburdened. I have a few thousand in the bank and I'm making more every day, but I'll never be rich. Perhaps I would save more if I had an incentive—like that steam-shovel engineer has."

"You mean—" I broke in, my eyes popping with astonishment.

"Yes, I mean that Cassie somehow got acquainted with the engineer of the steam shovel and married him. She took that man, grimy and ignorant, who worked with his hands, instead of me, clean and educated, who worked with my brain."

Glenquist's cigar had gone out, and he rose and went across the room to a shelf where he kept matches. His cigar stand, at his elbow as he sat and talked, was never known to hold a match, although there was a place for a box of them. He took a few puffs and came back to the chair.

"Well, I made good on my boast that some day I would have an office in the skyscraper that was going up where the shovel was excavating," he observed.

He leaned back and looked dreamily into a nicotine cloud.

"It seems the engineer was rather clever in a way, at that," he continued. "At least he knew how to save coin, and somehow he managed to invest it advantageously."

He rose and went to the window, looking down on the traffic which slowly was being obliterated by gathering darkness.

"Come here," he said, and when I had obeyed, he pointed at a big yellow automobile just coming to a stop at the curb in front of the building.

"It's the owner of the building," he explained. "He usually collects my rent on this day of the month. He's coming at rather a late hour, but he's pretty sure he'll find me here."

We returned to our chairs, and Glenquist partook of a few puffs on his cigar.

"He'll be up here in minute," he said, "and I wish you'd observe him closely. He's the man I've been talking about—Cassie's husband."

RHEUMATISM FOR OVER 16 YEARS

No Return Of The Trouble Since Taking "Fruit-a-tives"

Real Tobacco in Prussia.

Real tobacco, good tobacco, was once grown in more than one Prussian province, an exchange says. In Brandenburg, particularly, so much tobacco was cultivated that Frederick II felt called upon in 1776 to regulate matters. First the quantity was cut down, and later it was allowed to be grown only in districts in which agriculture did not flourish. In one year alone, 1781-2, 168,000 hundredweight was grown. In 1780 Frederick ordered a Berlin chemist, Achard, to experiment with the object of improving the quality of the tobacco. Attempts were made at Lichtenberg, near Berlin, to introduce Virginia tobacco, and Achard was given a handsome pension for life for his "services in improving tobacco cultivation."

Jade From Burma.

Practically all the jade now mined comes from Burma, though New Zealand is a producer of some note. China takes practically the entire output. In Burma the privilege of mining it has been held by the same Indian or Shan tribe for many generations. The method employed is the crudest. The Chinese prefer jade which is of a dark green color, free from all mottles, and jade of this grade is worth its weight in gold.

Valuable Japanese Plant.

A plant grows in Japan which furnishes a sort of vegetable leather. It is a pretty shrub called the mitsumata, and its inner bark, after going through certain processes, is converted into a substance as tough as French kid, so transparent that one can almost see through it, and as pliable and soft as calfskin.

Intelligence.

"Do animals think?" asks a scientist. Well, a dog turns around three or four times before lying down to go to sleep, while a man, without giving the matter any thought, lies down, goes to sleep and then turns over several times, waking himself each time. —Louisville Courier-Journal.

Characteristic of Shaw.

A young New Zealander, who wrote to Bernard Shaw begging for his autograph to add to a collection, drew forth the characteristically genial advice from the dramatist, "to set fire to the collection of autographs and sit on the top."

Worthless Unless Properly Used.

"Some have many possessions and some have few possessions." But whether these possessions be knowledge or wealth, they might just as well be in a hole in the ground unless they are used that others may benefit.

FOOD FOR CREW OF AIRSHIP

Most Careful Consideration Had to Be Given to Proper Nourishment of Daring Navigators.

Yet this was only one of the tasks, and by no means the most important, which confronted the organizers of the R 34's trip to America and back, remarks London Tit-Bits. When it is remembered that the men had to conform to the rigid limitations of the accommodation, the task assumes even more formidable proportions.

While the provisioning of the crew takes a back place, relatively, when compared with the navigation and other scientific arrangements, diet was, nevertheless, a subject requiring the most careful consideration. The digestive organs, if impaired, react at once upon the nervous system, and in an enterprise of such a daring character as the flight nerves had to be tenderly nourished.

The medical department of the air ministry was early consulted and devised a menu consisting mainly of meat, bread, cheese, chocolate, tea, eggs, and potatoes.

Then came the problem of cooking and the R34 has surely the strangest kitchen existing. Instead of fixing an electrical or other usual type of stove, the hot exhaust gases from one of the motor engines were trapped, and led around a receptacle shaped for boiling or frying, the heat thus obtained being sufficient to meet all the requirements. There were three of these boilers provided altogether—one in the fore car to hold three pints, and one in each wing car to hold one and a half gallons. By means of these, soups and hot sustaining drinks were able to be made.

The type of flying clothing provided for the crew is another example of the attention paid to detail to give the flight every chance of success. Each member of the ship's complement was provided with two complete suits of silk underclothing. Over this, woolen gear, similar to that provided for submarine crews and divers, was worn.

The Bells of Michael's Mount.

The pealing of joy bells in the year 1919 has made up for many years of silence in the ancient belfries of Europe. Somebody deplores that on the occasion of the peace the one remaining bell of St. Michael's Mount on the Brittany coast, should not have been rung. There would have been a certain piquancy in hearing the clang of that bell, the gift in 1711 of the abbot from across the Rhine who, be it said, reigned at the Mount only by proxy. But St. Michael's Mount is without its bells; even the abbot's bell which used to warn and guide the fishermen out on the bay has ceased to ring. The old abbey's peal was busy indeed, during the Hundred Years' War, warning the countryside of the approach of the enemy. In the Revolution the order went forth that the bells should be melted down, but it was never carried out. In the intervening years all the bells have disappeared except the one given by the German dignitary.

THIS WOMAN SAVED FROM AN OPERATION

By taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, One of Thousands of Such Cases.

Black River Falls, Wis.—"As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound saved me from an operation I cannot say enough in praise of it. I suffered from organic troubles and my side hurt me so I could hardly be up from my bed, and I was unable to do my housework. I had the best doctors in Eau Claire and they wanted me to have an operation, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound cured me so I did not need the operation, and I am telling all my friends about it."—Mrs. A. W. BINZER, Black River Falls, Wis.

It is just such experiences as that of Mrs. Binzer that has made this famous root and herb remedy a household word from ocean to ocean. Any woman who suffers from inflammation, ulceration, displacements, backache, nervousness, irregularities or "the blues" should not rest until she has given it a trial, and for special advice write Lydia E. TURNED TO COMMERCIAL USE Historic Mansion in Mexico City Remodeled and Made Into Typical American Drug Store.

The conversion of the "House of Tiles" in the City of Mexico into a typical American drug store marks the passing of one of the most palatial and unique structures ever erected in that city of interesting buildings. Many persons in the United States remember the house as the "Jockey club," the most exclusive and aristocratic place of its kind in the republic, but for the past few years it has stood on a prominent downtown corner, a bleak, decrepit structure, whose shiny and gaudy exterior of tile gave evidence of its former glory. Soon it will open for business as a drug store.

The date when the building's foundations were laid is lost in obscurity, but it is thought that it was started about 1596. Later it came into the possession of Don Louis de Rivero, a man of varied career, who was responsible for its exterior coat of tiles. These latter are of blue, yellow and white, Moorish in design, and were made by artisans brought from Talavera, Spain, by the Dominican friars in the sixteenth century. They were modeled in a special ceramic factory at Puebla, about 75 miles distant, and the completion of this decoration was the occasion for a public celebration.

The family of Don Luis de Rivero, who later became the count of Orizaba, remained in possession of the house until the time of the ill-fated Emperor Maximilian. Its last occupant was a sister of the then Count de Orizaba, upon whom the emperor conferred the title of marquesa de Ciris.

Later the structure was taken over by the Jockey club and converted into a sumptuous club house. Stories of fabulous sums won and lost at its gaming tables persist to this day. Stirring revolutionary times caused its abandonment, and for several years the building was vacant until the present lessees secured it for a period of twenty years.

Indicative perhaps of an intention by the government to restore it later is the fact that before renovation started photographs were taken of all interesting portions of the building, including the huge carved door.

Freakish Costumes.

In the reign of Henry VIII of England the sleeve was generally a separate article of dress, and in Stubbes' time sleeves hung down to the skirts "trayling on the ground and cast over the shoulders like a cow's tayle." Viollet-le-Duc gave cuffs which hung down 14 inches longer than the hand, thus proving that the wearer never worked. In the time of James I sometimes three pairs of gloves were worn, one over another. A curious custom arose about 1794 of hat-wearing within doors. The Padnung young women put metal collars around their necks when they were young children till they numbered between 20 and 30 and the necks of the wearers were stretched out in the most grotesque and uncomfortable fashion. African belles wear great copper rings on their limbs, which get so hot in the sun that an attendant has to carry water with which occasionally to cool them down.

Thermos Bottle.

If you use a thermos bottle, you will notice, after using the first time, that the cork may smell musty or have the odor of coffee on it. To do away with this entirely, dip the cork in hot paraffin until all the pores are closed. Repeat whenever the paraffin is worn off.—Good Housekeeping.

Oh, These Darkies.

Upon being asked why he deserted, a negro replied: "Well suh, them shrapnell didn't scare me none, and I wasn't much afeared of them ginades, but when a white man says them is goin' to shoot a garage at me, ma feet just taken me away from there!"—Los Angeles Times.

Baseball's Beginning.

Abner Doubleday of Cooperstown, N. Y., in 1839, was the first to prepare a diagram of the baseball diamond. The Knickerbocker club, founded in New York city in 1845, is said to have been the first baseball organization.

Dreaded Sub-Tropical Spider.

The mygale is one of the best known of the large and heavy spiders. It is a native of tropical and sub-tropical America. It is said that it catches and kills small birds with its poisonous bite and then sucks the blood of its victims. The body of this spider is dead black and is covered with long reddish-brown hair. It possesses eight eyes, placed close together in the front of its head.

FIRE CHIEF GRANGE

had become unserviceable. One baker cellar pipe and two little giant ladder nozzles were added also.

The general health of the department has been good, with one exception. Death claimed Engineer Percy Pammett on September 7th. There were no serious accidents to firemen during the year.

The discipline of the department has been excellent. This has been more marked since the adoption of the double platoon system. It affords me much pleasure to inform you of the loyal support I receive from the officers and men of the department and the satisfactory manner in which both officers and men perform their duties. This is borne out by the favorable comment of the public press and the letters of thanks and donations to the Benefit Fund received from citizens whose property has been protected by the department. The police department have rendered valuable assistance where fire have occurred and I am very pleased to have their co-operation. The manufacturers and merchants have taken very kindly to any suggestions we had to offer relative to the safeguarding of either lives or property. The harmony and goodwill existing between the firemen and the public has, I am pleased to say, apparently extended to the Council Board. For all of which I am extremely thankful.

During the year we had six calls for the pulmotor. In only three of these was the pulmotor used. With its aid we are successful in resuscitating two of these but the third patient had been dead for some time before the pulmotor was called.

Recommendations.

I would strongly recommend the erection of two sub-stations, one in East City and one in the manufacturing district in the south. An additional sliding pole should be placed in the dormitory at the central station. We have been unable to successfully carry on ladder drill, owing to the fact that we would be holding up the heavy automobile traffic on the thoroughfares in the vicinity of the fire station. I would like to have a drill tower erected in the yard at the hall for this purpose. I would also recommend that a hydrant be placed in the back yard and a concrete block of pavement on which to wash the hose. This would have the effect of helping to preserve the hose, the men not being compelled to wash the hose in the front and then haul them through the building in order to hang them up in the tower to dry. I would also recommend that red lights be placed over all fire alarm street boxes. I have recommended this on several occasions without material result. I also suggest that another telephone be placed in the fire station. One phone would then be used for fire calls only and any other business could be transacted over the other. Some delay is apt to be occasioned in getting an alarm through because of a busy line. A tank for gasoline should be placed in the back yard to supply the pieces of motor apparatus in service on the department. In order the more successfully to carry on drill, the yard at the rear of the station should be enlarged by the securing of about 16 feet to the west of the present yard. Ample room would then be provided for the different drills in connection with the department.

You will find attached to this report a stock sheet, showing the amount and value of supplies and equipment on hand Dec. 31, 1919. There is also a table showing the number of alarms received, date of each fire, day of week, time of day or night, cause of the fire, names of owner and occupant of property, estimated damage occasioned by fire, distance apparatus travelled, number of feet of hose used, number of feet of ladders raised, number of gallons of chemical used, how alarms were received (box, phone or verbal), time alarm was received, time apparatus returned, name of firemen receiving alarm, type of buildings involved, number of telephone calls received at the fire station each month, number of inspections made by the department, number of reports made, number of official letters sent out and a comparative statement of former years.

In conclusion, I wish to express sincere thanks to the Mayor, the chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee and the members of the Council for the courteous treatment received at their hands and for the interest they have taken in the department during the year that is just passed.

Respectfully submitting all of the above, I have the honor to be, sirs,

Your obedient servant,
GEO. GRANGE,
Chief of Fire Dept.

HEAD STUFFED FROM CATARRH OR A COLD

Says Cream Applied in Nostrils Opens Air Passages Right Up.

Instant relief—no waiting. Your clogged nostrils open right up; the air passages of your head clear and you can breathe freely. No more hawking, snuffling, blowing, headache, dryness. No struggling for breath at night; your cold or catarrh disappears.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist now. Apply a little of this fragrant, antiseptic, healing cream in your nostrils. It penetrates through every air passage of the head, soothes the inflamed or swollen mucous membrane and relief comes instantly.

It's just fine. Don't stay stuffed-up with a cold or nasty catarrh.

WANTS ASQUITH ELECTED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 3.—Bonar Law, Government leader of the House of Commons, has written to the Unionist candidate in Paisley where ex-Premier Asquith is running on the Liberal ticket, commanding him to every elector who believes it in the national interest that the present Government should continue.

A commission to seek a remedy "for the excessive speculation in raw silk" will sail from San Francisco, Feb. 21, for Japan and China.

RECORD PRICES PAID TO ONTARIO TRAPPERS

BEAVER SELLS FOR $45 AND OTTER AS HIGH AS $60.

Cobalt, Feb. 3.—Reports from trappers who are out are that the fur catch in the north this year is proving an excellent one. Besides they are getting some high and fancy prices for their catch. One old time fur buyer says the first thing the trappers do is to find out how much money the buyer has and then consider if that is enough.

Fisher furs bring $75 to $150; muskrats cannot be legally sold in Ontario, but the Quebec variety bring $5; Beavers sell at from $15 to $45; Otter from $25 to $60.

There is hardly any fox in the country declares this trapper and the same might be said about lynx.

"Trappers never did receive such prices before," he declared.

RESERVATIONS OF U. S. WERE ACCEPTABLE

LLOYD GEORGE SAID TO HAVE CABLED EARL GREY TO THAT EFFECT

Washington, Feb. 3.—Mr. Lloyd George's cable message to Viscount Grey indicating that Great Britain would accept the Lodge reservations to the Covenant of the League of Nations, which was mentioned in a Washington despatch, is not obtainable here, but some of those to whom it was shown have a vivid recollection of what was said by the British Prime Minister for the information and guidance to the British Special Ambassador in Washington.

One Senator said that the message contained perhaps 15 words, according to his estimate, and was very much to the point. While he would not undertake to say that he could repeat the exact text from memory he believed he could give the approximate wording. As he recalled it, he said the message read, substantially, as follows:

"Lodge reservations are satisfactory. We want the United States to enter the League."

Viscount Grey showed this cablegram to several Senators.

NOW WONDERED HOW SHE STAYED ALIVE

ST. JOHN WOMAN COULD HARDLY EAT FOR LONG TIME BEFORE TAKING TANLAC—"IT'S WONDERFUL," SHE SAYS.

"No words can express how terribly I suffered for three long years of rheumatism and stomach trouble, but thanks to Tanlac I am now well and happy," said Mrs. Frank Farrar, of 89 Portland street, St. John, N. B., recently. Mr. Farrar stated that she felt ten years younger.

"My stomach was in such bad condition that everything I ate seemed to sour and bloat me up with gas until I could hardly get my breath. Sometimes at night I simply had to walk the floor to breathe at all. Nearly all the time I felt like I had swallowed a lump of lead, and at times for several months I couldn't bear the smell of anything cooking. I could eat so little it is a wonder to me how I kept alive. I also had the rheumatism in my whole body and especially in my legs and feet, which would sometimes swell so I could not get on my shoes. Sometimes the pain was so dreadful I could hardly bear it. I tried lots of different medicines and treatments, but nothing seemed to do me any good, and I had about given up hope of ever being my old self again, when one day a friend called to see how I was getting along. Seeing that my condition was getting worse instead of better she advised me to try Tanlac.

"I sent my little daughter to the store and got a bottle, but I could not see that it did me much good. I guess it was because my condition was so bad. I got another bottle and before it was gone I noticed a big improvement. I have taken six bottles now, and my stomach is in perfect condition. I eat three hearty meals a day, and never have the slightest trouble from indigestion. The rheumatism has disappeared, and, as I said before, I feel ten years younger than I did two months ago. Tanlac certainly is a wonderful medicine and I intend to recommend it every time I can."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

ONE PERSON, ONE VOTE.

Labor Party Will Ask for Legislative Changes.

London, Ont., Feb. 3.—The Independent Labor party, whose candidate, ex-Ald. Ashplant, was defeated for the mayoralty of London at the last election, allege that many property owners voted in as many as seven subdivisions, and the Labor men will ask the Legislature to have the Act changed so that there shall be but one vote for every man or woman. At present property owners have votes on certain questions in every ward, and in this way it is alleged the repeaters get in their work.

WOULD BUILD FIRST CLASS HIGHWAY THROUGH CITY TO KAWARTHA LAKES

R.R. Hall Suggests Peterboro Officials Interview Minister of Works Biggs and Urge Construction of Such a Road

(By R. R. Hall.)

It would be interesting now to hear the testimony of the grandfathers of those who are past middle age on the question of good roads in their time and ours.

Those hardy pioneers thought nothing of carrying a bag of flour from Port Hope to Peterborough on their shoulders.

They tramped over a trail through the woods with their heavy burden, seemingly increasing in weight as they toiled along their lonesome journey.

What a contrast between the highway of that generation and the one in which we live!

What safety, enjoyment and pleasure may the next generation have as compared with the ruts and bumps our own miserly habits impose upon us!

We honor our forefathers because they laid the foundation of Canadian nationality in a great unknown primeval forest, with little means at hand to improve their roads. The present generation, however, have the means at hand to improve their roads but apparently is handicapped by shortsightedness and parsimony and neglects to improve them.

Both urban and rural travellers use our highway to a greater extent than ever before and the better these highways are built and maintained the more profit and pleasure are derived out of their use.

The Romans upwards of 2,000 years ago appreciated the great advantage of good roads and profited by their Appian way and even by their good roads in Gaul and Britain and elsewhere.

Are we in these advanced days enjoying the use of modern motors, going to be content to bump from one hole to the other and to swing from one rut to the next?

The immediate advantage of a first-class highway would immediately assist in reducing the high cost of living by affording quicker and cheaper transportation for the carriage of milk, poultry, butter, cheese vegetables of all kinds and meats of all kinds and other farm products from the country to the city and farm supplies of all kinds from the city to the country.

It is highly important that we in this district should make a beginning. Let us build a first-class highway from the Kingston road through Peterborough to the Kawartha Lakes and more and more profitable roads in all directions will follow to the great profit and advantage of both this city and the surrounding country.

What is being done elsewhere? The various states of the American union have each constructed thousands of miles of good modern roads. Even the Province of Quebec, upon which the people of this Province so proudly look down upon, has ten miles of the best modern highway to every one mile that Ontario now enjoys.

But tell it not to the inhabitants of this county and city that the despised habitant of Quebec can and does travel over better highways, more modern, safer and more permanent than any of their inhabitants, for so it is.

The present minister, the Hon. Mr. Biggs, is most anxious to improve our Provincial highways and is willing to give liberal Provincial aid.

I, therefore, would suggest that our City and County Councils and our Township Councils should at once interview the Hon. Mr. Biggs and urge upon him the immediate construction of a modern highway from Port Hope through Peterborough to the Kawartha Lakes.

Dated February 3rd, 1920.

NO DUTY IMPOSED ON EXPORTED PULPWOOD

SIR HENRY DRAYTON DENIES REPORT PUBLISHED IN MONTREAL PAPER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Feb. 3.—The newsprint [illegible] in Canada has taken on a new phase, according to rumors that come from Ottawa, says The Herald. It is said that Sir Henry Drayton, in a search for a new source of revenue to take the place of the business tax that is to be removed, has decided to place a tax of ten dollars a ton on newsprint leaving the Dominion. Pulp and paper companies, continues The Herald, view the innovation with alarm.

Sir Henry Denies Rumor.

Sir Henry Drayton at noon denied the rumor that duty of ten dollars a ton is to be imposed on all newsprint paper leaving the Dominion. "There is no such duty in contemplation," he added.

It is stated that one of the first result of such a tax would be to stop all work on many pulp plants now being erected in the Dominion. These are in many cases being built with U. S. capital.

Now that the compositor has had his fun with the names of these journals which are molding the opinion of the 800,000 foreign-born of this country, will you count up the number of languages in which these unpronounceables are published?

It would be tiresome to list them all, but it should be remembered that some of them are tongues of the former German and Austro-Hungarian empires.

The Methodist National Campaign, which collected these title pages, does not claim that these are pernicious or dangerous newspapers. They are presented to show the eagerness of the newer Canadians for information and to suggest the diversity of peoples living among us.

The newspapers here pictured were bought at the news stands in Winnipeg and Toronto. All are sold freely in Canada, although many are published in the United States and uphold American ideals.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR

Not Increased in Price

NEARLY ALL OTHER CARS HAVE

And we are ready to accept orders for future delivery accordingly.

In the Opinion of the

Engineering Profession

There is no car in its class which so completely satisfies the popular demands of the Public as the Dodge.

Go where you will, you seldom see a Dodge Brothers car in the Repair Shop. It has become a bye-word that "the Dodge Car keeps the garage man poor."

The Gasoline Consumption is Unusually Low. The Tire Mileage is Unusually High.

Dodge Brothers have concentrated on one car and one car only in a determination to make it as good as a car can be made. For every part and every process that enters into it they have personally established a standard.

The work done and the materials used in each part and each process, in every car, must conform to that standard. Dodge Brothers will always give in their car that over-care which the public expects of them.

CITY DEVELOPMENT

A Photograph From the Air

Mr. Adams suggests that an aeroplane photographic map of the city and environs be made. Your commission believe that such a map would be a substantial and profitable investment for the city at this time when its future is to be critically studied and planned. The preparation of a general map, by means of the usual ground survey, would cost a vastly greater sum. This new method is a step far in advance, both in excellence and economy, over the old way of making such maps. The photographs are taken vertically from a distance of about 4,000 feet above the city and are joined together so as to form a perfect whole.

This map will be of great use to your several departments. The city has been without such a map since what was known as Cameron's map, made some twenty-five years ago. Goad's plan, made some forty years ago, has been periodically revised by the Canadian Board of Underwriters which owns it. The photographic map will be incomparably superior and will show the entire city exactly as it is—all the houses, buildings and sections and their relation to each other. Many of the city departments have urgent need of such a map and the one suggested would meet that need. It will be modern, up-to-date, and should advertise Peterborough in a unique way, since this city will be the first of its size on the continent to have an aeroplane photographic general map. In correspondence and negotiation with new industries and in their actual location in the city its value can hardly be estimated.

Will Cost $1,000.

Acting upon the suggestion of Mr. Adams and the request of your commission, Mr. Parsons has ascertained that the aeroplane company now engaged in making a similar map of Toronto, will undertake the work at Peterborough at a cost not to exceed ten hundred dollars and that the company can make the map in the early spring when conditions are ideal for the purpose.

In view of the fact that the city is assured the practical advice and direction of Mr. Thomas Adams, who stands at the head of his profession in the English-speaking world, practically without cost to the city it is not only important that his specific recommendations be favorably received and approved, but that we do all in our power to simplify his study and facilitate his work. Your commission believe that it will be a distinct advantage and a source of profit to the city to place the desired map under the eye of Mr. Adams, and those of his assistants, in his well equipped office in Ottawa; he will then have less occasion to visit the city in person and can consequently advance his work without delay.

The urgency of prompt action is obvious. The immediate negotiation of a contract with the aeroplane company is imperative if the work is to be done this spring. Mr. Adams promises to begin at once the preparation of the city's plan, which to comprehend the entire city's development for generations to come.

Your commission respectfully recommends: first, as the position of the transportation lines and the railway station centre form an essential part of city planning you may wish to concentrate attention to them and to refer all correspondence and negotiation touching these questions to your commision and, if this be your desire and order, such matters shall have earnest and immediate attention; second, that an appropriation be authorized, not to exceed fifteen hundred dollars, for the purpose of making an aeroplane photographic map of the city and suburbs and also for elaborating a topographical map, from data now in the hands of the City Engineer, to the scale of one inch to two hundred feet, for the special use of Mr. Adams, your commission and all other departments of the city.

This map will be the property of the city and may be placed in the custody of the City Engineer who can have prints made for every department requiring its use.

All of which is respectfully submitted by your City Development Commission.

President.

Pidgeon Creek Bridge

County Clerk and Treasurer E. M. Elliott, waited on council and asked that the city join the county council of Peterborough and Victoria. Messrs. Burnham and Sexsmith, M.P.'s for West and East Peterborough respectively, together with the member for Victoria, and form a deputation to Ottawa to press for the rebuilding of the Pidgeon Creek bridge by the Dominion Government.

Mr. Elliott asked that council interview Mr. Burnham, M. P., and arrange a date for meeting the Minister of Railways and Canals. Council agreed to this and on suggestion of Ald. Gordon his worship will name the city's deputation.

Mr. Elliott also asked that the city's arbitrator meet the county's arbitrator to adjust the amounts to be paid by the city and county respectively for administration of justice. The county's official will be ready April first. This was sent to the Legal Committee.

Garbage Rate.

The collection of garbage and its disposal this year will cost $12808.27. A by-law to fix the rate at 9-10 of a mill (the same as last year) to meet this cost, passed its several readings.

A by-law to aid the Canadian Aladdin Company passed its several readings, as also did a by-law to deed to this company the land on which to erect its building.

Civil Service Exams.

In reply to Ald. Whitehouse's resolution at last meeting, that civil service candidates be accepted in their turn of waiting, providing, of course, they pass the examinations, and that preference be given to men who have seen service overseas, if qualified the Civil Service Commission replied that they are already following that policy.

Crossing Protection

The C. P. R.'s assistant solicitor wrote that they have asked the railway board to direct that the flagman protection at their open lines crossing at Hunter street, rendered unnecessary by discontinuance of traffic over the old Hunter street bridge, be continued at Simcoe street, where a temporary bridge is now in use—this was referred to the Railways Committee.

David Spence Resigned.

David Spence resigned his membership on the local Board of Health, and on motion of Ald. Crowe and Morrison, Mr. E. F. Mason was appointed in his place.

E. A. Peck Reappointed

Mr. E. A. Peck was reappointed member of the Peterborough City Trust.

Asks More Salary

Dr. McPherson, M. O. H., wrote that last year's council had promised him an increase of salary to $1,200, dating from January 1st., 1920. The doctor claimed that $1,200 is about half what the position is worth. He asked for a salary of $2,000 the year and requested a reply in two weeks.

Bab's Lane.

Mr. Frank Merritt wrote asking that Babb's Lane (or street as now it is supposed to be called, although the term "Lane" still sticks) be renamed Leslie avenue.

Ald. Jones and Copping moved that this request be complied with, and that Cedar street be changed to Murray street.

Ald. Gordon suggested changing the name of Cedar street.

Will Expropriate

Ald. Phelan reported that he has been given to understand that the Wilson property across the river from the end of Park street, needed for a sewage disposal plant, might be acquired for $19,000 without recourse to arbitration.

On motion of Ald. Gordon and Phelan the City Solicitor was instructed to institute expropriation proceedings for this land.

To Sell Ashes

On motion of Ald. Jones and Whitehouse, the Property Committee was authorised to invite tenders for the ashes from the incinerator, and to sell same.

Canadian Goods

Sir John Willison, for the Canadian Re-construction Association, wrote re the desirability of developing the home market for Canadian made goods, which policy would stimulate agricultural and industrial activities and enhance Canada's prosperity generally. He asked that Council resolve to endorse the principle that public supplies be of Canadian production wherever available at a reasonable price.

On motion of Ald. Hamilton and Turner, council adopted a resolution in this direction as requested.

Parks By-law

Ald. Gainey fathered a bylaw to authorise the borrowing of $32,000 for park purposes. Ald. Turner advised leaving this measure stand until council knows how much money will be actually needed. The city will expropriate the properties needed, he said, and the arbitrators may award less than $33,000, or more.

City Clerk Armstrong here pointed out that unless this bylaw is passed within six weeks, after the people's voting on the proposition, the by-law carried by the electorate will become dead and ineffective.

The by-law was here given its three readings.

A Good Move

The City of London asked that Peterborough join with that corporation in petitioning the Legislature that a portion of the auto license fees — $1,500,000— be retained by municipalities for the upkeep of roads. This was sent to the Legal Committee.

Date of Elections

The City of London wrote that January first for municipal elections is not proving a satisfactory date. In that city last election not over fifty per cent of the electorate voted. Some municipalities are suggesting December first and others a date in November for elections. An expression of opinion from Peterborough was requested. The Legal Committee will report on this matter..

Who Were Present.

There were present Mayor A. A. McIntyre, Aldermen Morrison, Gordon, Crowe, J. J. Turner, Hamilton, Jones, Whitehouse, Copping, Phelan and Gainey.

MANY CASES OF RHEUMATISM NOW

SAYS WE MUST KEEP FEET DRY, AVOID EXPOSURE AND EAT LESS MEAT.

Stay off the damp ground, avoid exposure, keep feet dry, eat less meat, drink lots of water and above all take a spoonful of salts occasionally to keep down uric acid.

Rheumatism is caused by poisonous toxin, called uric acid, which is generated in the bowels and absorbed into the blood. It is the function of the kidneys to filter this acid from the blood and cast it out in the urine. The pores of the skin are also a means of freeing the blood of this impurity. In damp and chilly, cold weather the skin pores are closed, thus forcing the kidneys to do double work, they become weak and sluggish and fail to eliminate this uric acid which keeps accumulating and circulating through the system, eventually settling in the joints and muscles causing stiffness, soreness and pain called rheumatism.

At the first twinge of rheumatism get from any pharmacy about four ounces of Jad Salts; put a tablespoonful in a glass of water and drink before breakfast each morning for a week. This is said to eliminate uric acid by stimulating the kidneys to normal action, thus ridding the blood of these impurities.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and is used with excellent results by thousands of folks who are subject to rheumatism. Here you have a pleasant, effervescent lithia-water drink which overcomes uric acid and is beneficial to your kidneys as well.

A double marriage took place at Flint, Mich., in which mother and daughter each married a "Smith." The son-in-law is three years older than his newly acquired father-in-law.

BY-LAW TO DEED LAND LAID OVER

COUNCIL DOUBTS IF McDONALD LUMBER CO. NEEDS PORTION OF STREET

Alderman Phelan introduced in Council last night a bylaw to deed to the Alfred McDonald Lumber Co. a portion of the dead end of Crescent street running through the company's mill property. It was agreed late last year that the company pay $500 for the conveyance of this portion of the street needed for building purposes.

Alderman Hamilton thought this bylaw should be left in abeyance. The company claimed that they could not build elsewhere but in the street by reason of the nature of the surrounding land, and he understands the new building is already erected without recourse to the street property.

A motion to lay the bylaw over was carried on the following division:

Yeas: Aldermen Whitehouse, Gordon, Jones, Hamilton, Turner, Morrison and Crowe.

HUNGARIAN ASSEMBLY TO DESIGNATE KING

ARCHDUKE JOSEPH IS TO BE SELECTION FROM PRESENT INDICATIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Budapest, Feb. 3.—The designation of Archduke Joseph as King by the Hungarian National Assembly seems probable as the result of strong royalist tendency in this country. The movement persists despite the objections to the Hapsburgs on the part of the Allies and Hungarian Socialists.

: : AT THE GRAND : :

The large crowd of people who attended the Grand last night had the opportunity of seeing a picture, the very excellence of which would only be marred by description. In "Blind Husbands" there are all the fine things that you admire in a good photo-drama and more. All the laudatory things that have been said of it previous to its showing are true. It is a great picture.

That clever actor, "DeGrass," is known to have expressed the desire that he should make himself the most hated man on the screen, and the audience of last evening will unanimously agree that he has achieved his ambition in "Blind Husbands." Not only does this story teach a very apparent lesson, but also embodies in its undercurrent a mystery that is beyond solution. Showing the extent to which some natures depend on others for life—how susceptible to a powerful influence, good or otherwise, and how unresisting.

There are three vital characters around which the story is woven. A serious-minded husband, with a hobby for dabbling into science; a pretty and affectionate wife, with no personality to speak of, and a coaxing, scheeming foreign offirer who, while unquestionably lacking in physical charm, manages to make the situation decidedly awkward for a time. Just here is the mystery. How the woman could bring herself to think of this man as anything else than the huge joke he is. The story goes on to show that she was so sadly destitute of the manifested affection, she craved that his could be even tolerable.

The one scene that is beyond words—the death—defying climb is no doubt responsible for the fame of the production. It is stupendous. It goes to show how seriously the cinema—people take their art, when they will risk even life itself that it may be perfected.

In connection with this picture there was a splendid vaudeville act, "The Welsh Pit Boy," showing some beautiful natural scenery. Mr. Reese Williams, a whistler of remarkable ability, by his sweet and clear interpretation of the wild birds' songs, merited the unstinted applause which was accorded him as did Miss Elsie Addison with her beautiful rendition of "The Bells of St. Mary's."

The musical program by the Grand orchestra was a feature, which contributed in no small measure, to the enjoyment of the evening. By their effort was added a "finis" to this splendid entertainment.

The Mask of Blindness

By GERALD THORNE

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

She had never loved Anson Burdett in a true sense, and such a thing as becoming his wife had never entered her thoughts, yet, when misfortune came upon him, there was born in the nature of Leila Raleigh pity, mingled with mistaken duty, that amazed her mother and sisters.

"I shall make any sacrifice necessary as a friend," she told them. "If poor Anson is to go through life helpless, blind, and asks me to share his troubles I will marry him at his bidding."

"Leila, you talk wild!" scolded her sister, Adelaide. "You never really cared for Anson. He has no claim upon you. It is sheer folly."

"But I feel so sorry for him," said Leila. "He certainly paid me more attention than he did to other girls."

"And out of an impulse of sympathy you would tie yourself to a man unable to make even a living? Leila, this is all sentiment," declared her mother.

Nothing more was said at the time, but Mrs. Raleigh knew that Leila was a person who always acted upon her convictions, though neither romantic nor heroic. Intensely loyal to her friends, sympathetic and tender-hearted, Leila had exaggerated her sense of duty towards a man who had never spoken to her one word of love. A strange condition of affairs had come about. There was an athletic club in Rossmore to which nearly every young man in the town belonged. It had been started and mainly supported by Wilton Porter, who had been left quite a fortune. Burdett, too, was a member, and one day, while practicing with the Indian club, Porter lost his grasp on one of them, and it whirled through the air with terrific force. Burdett stood directly in the path of the flying missile. It landed squarely between his eyes, he went down like a shot and the shocked and horrified Porter went through twenty-four hours of crushing anxiety, remaining at the hospital whither Burdett was conveyed until the physician assured him that the patient would live. Porter's heart sank, however, as he was told that it looked as though the nerves of the eyes had been paralyzed and Anson Burdett might be blind for life.

A high caliber, sensitive young man, all the joy of life seemed to have departed for Porter. He gave up all of his time to the care of Burdett.

"Hopelessly blind, perhaps," reported an expert oculist, "although the case is of a variety that has seen some remarkable cures, but through time alone.

In the meantime Porter had become acquainted with Leila Raleigh. From the first he was attracted by her and, although he knew that she and Burdett were friendly, he never suspected that there was any mutual affection between them.

Leila kept secret even from her mother and sisters that, while she was not as yet engaged to Burdett, there was a tacit understanding between them that some day they would marry. She, however, had become disappointed in Burdett. A position had been offered by a manufacturing concern out of sympathy for his affliction, where he could answer calls at a telephone. "I don't have to drudge," he told Leila, audaciously. "Porter has plenty of money and is acting princely about it. He took away my sight—let him pay for it."

One day Burdett called upon Leila and asked her to marry him. He told her that he had an opportunity to secure a pretty little farm in Florida, where they could enjoy life without anxiety. He asked her to think it over and give her answer the next day. That same afternoon Wilbur Porter appeared and laid his heart at her feet.

"It is too late," said Leila simply, and after the disappointed suitor had gone away she hurried to her room and wept all the long night, though she scarcely kenw why. Burdett called upon her the next morning, irrationally eager and excited.

"We must get married at once, Leila," he said. "See," and he drew a packet of bank bills from his pocket. "There is five thousand dollars, and all ours. I am going to buy the farm at once and—"

"Why where did you get all that money?" inquired Leila.

"From Porter. I went to him last evening and told him what I wanted, and he said he would do anything to make me comfortable and happy with you."

"But you can't do any work on a farm," she said.

"Oh, yes, I can. Leila, I'm going to tell you a secret. I have been able to see for over a month. I just pretended not to since then, to work this scheme on Porter."

She stood facing him, trembling from head to foot. He fairly shriveled as she denounced his petty meanness, as she told him that if he did not at once return the money to Porter she would expose him to the world. Then she left him and he, even more despicable than she had dreamed, thinking more of the money than herself, disappeared that same day with his ill-gotten gains.

The truth came out, as it was bound to, and after a while Wilbur Porter renewed his appeal for Leila's love. It had already been his—longer before than he realized.

The wise man adroitly tries to conceal his ignorance, while the fool awkwardly attempts to display his knowledge.

AGAINST WAGES FOR WIVES

Gathering of Women Ridicule the Idea, Labeling It as "Commercializing the Home."

Wages for wives were turned down by an audience largely of women here the other night after a debate on whether husbands should be required to pay such wages, says the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin.

One speaker drew a dismal picture of the future of romance with wives working for wages.

"Imagine a scene like this," he said:

"Honey, do you love me?"

"Of course I love you."

"Then will you marry me?"

"Well, maybe. How much do you pay?"

"Suppose the wives were to join the soviet of waiters-up and charge triple wages for waiting up nights for husbands," he said.

"Imagine a wife going into society and being labeled a $15-a-week wife. A woman can take a last-year hat and make it look like new. But when she signed a contract for $15 a week there would be no hiding it from the neighbors."

Another speaker pleaded that "woman shall not be brought down from her pedestal as a queen and made a mere employee of man." In depicting the future of romance under the wage system he said the marriage ceremony would have to be revised to read:

"With this ring I hire thee, and will pay thee $15 a week by the aid of the world, the flesh and the devil."

Notices like the following he predicted would be published:

"Married—John Brown and Mary Smith, by Rev. Russell H. Conwell. They will live in Logan and the wife's wages will be $15 a week."

Scenes like the following in court were forecast:

"Judge, he hired me for $20 a week and he is now two weeks overdue in my pay. I'm going to get a new boss."

LOOKING AHEAD A FEW YEARS

Remarks That Will Be Merely Ordinary When the Blimp Has Been Finally Perfected.

Augustus Tolliver, the soap king, strode wrathfully out of his stateroom aboard the blimp and seized the arm of the porter.

"Idiot!" he roared. "why didn't you give me a call this morning? I told you I had to be in London for a directors' meeting at 9 a. m. sharp, and now London is Lord knows how many thousands of miles in our rear."

"Ah pounded on yo' door, boss, but yo' refuses to waken," replied the porter.

The soap king pulled out a watch.

"Eleven-thirty," he grunted disgustedly. "Where are we now?"

"Jest passed over St. Louis, boss; we'll be back in N'Yawk at 12:05."

"Oh! well," said Tolliver, "I can attend that 12:30 meeting of the soap powder people and catch the 1:30 blimp for London."

Rat Skins for Leather.

The suggestion has been made that the rat problem might be best solved by making use of the skins of the rodents for the purpose of leather.

Somebody with the gift of guessing computes that there are 10,000,000 in this country, and the damage they do would feed a good-sized army. It would take at least 5,000 skins a day to supply a small modern tannery.

Nobody wants the rats, they belong to anybody that can catch them. That is the problem—to catch them, and then deliver the goods. There is not enough leather to go around.

Fish skins are susceptible of tanning, and there are rat skins which make good leather, large enough for many purposes.

Cure for Poison Ivy.

Mrs. Evelyn S. Trenbath, wife of the Rev. Robert W. Trenbath, rector of St. James's Episcopal church of Montclair, N. J., has conferred a boon on sufferers from poison ivy by announcing a remedy which those who have tried it say is a most efficacious remedy. It is simply the green leaves of common catnip rubbed on the affected parts until the juice runs.

This never fails, Mrs. Trenbath says, no matter how advanced the case may be, and is simple to use, especially in the case of children. The plant grows usually in great abundance behind old barns, and is said to be so antagonistic to the ivy that if planted near it the ivy disappears.

Volcano That Emits Lava.

The following is reported by an observer in Hawaii: Tremendous changes are in progress at Kilauea, and there is no indication whatsoever of any cessation of the monumental rising of the entire vast lava column. Over the southwest brink a wide stream of glistening lava is sluggishly flowing in the direction of the Kau desert, not with the spectacular cascading torrents of the southeastern flows of last March, but with a steady, stealthy gliding, which gains ground slowly at its base, but which piles up into tremendous masses from its source forward.

Dry Lead for Batteries.

A dry battery utilizing red lead, instead of the usual manganese compound, has been patented by H. Canayt. It is claimed that the red lead battery lasts longer than the type now in vogue, may be kept inactive for months without any deterioration and may be recharged at least ten times, with each recharge as efficient as any present battery.

No matter how much good luck a man may have, he always manages to have enough of the other kind to break the monotony.

HAS WON PLACE OF HONOR

Salvation Army's Work for Fifty-Four Years Recognized as Worthy of the Highest Praise.

Except for the war the Salvation Army would have celebrated its fiftieth birthday four years ago, but there could hardly have been a better reminder of what the army had done and become in a half century than the recent award of the Victoria Cross to three Salvation Army soldiers for their service in France. Fifty-four years ago things were very different; the first appearances of the salvationists aroused opposition, rowdies tried to break up the meetings, and on at least one occasion members of the future army were arrested in England as "disturbers of the peace." Originally simply an attempt to make converts by outdoor preaching, the movement which William Booth started in July 1865, was put on a military basis and became the Salvation Army in 1878, since which time it has grown from 75 corps in England to about 9,000 corps and outposts in more than 60 countries. The army was officially recognized by King Edward VII when he received the founder at Buckingham palace in 1904; a different yet remarkable "official recognition" occurred quite recently when a tableau honoring the Salvation Army was made the climax of the current "Ziegfeld Follies" on Broadway.

SUFFERED FOR OTHER'S SIN

Pathetic Story Told as an Example of the Peril That Lies in Inefficiency.

A. R. Hawley, president of the Aero club, told in New York the other day an inefficiency story.

"Beware the inefficient man," he said, "for if you have dealings with him it is you, not he, that will suffer from his inefficiency.

"A foreigner in outlandish garb claiming to be an Armenian came here to solicit funds last year for his compatriots. It happened that another Armenian was arrested at the time, and the first chap was asked to go to court and act as his interpreter.

"Well, he reluctantly consented to act, though the truth was that he knew no Armenian whatever. Anyhow he stalked into the courtroom, listened in grave silence to the prisoner's passionate protestations of innocence, and then turned to the judge and said with a low bow.

"'Your honor, my compatriot has confessed all. He begs you, however, to be lenient for suffering Armenia's sake.'

"The judge thanked the interpreter warmly for his services, and then sentenced the innocent prisoner to five years' hard labor."

London Now Less Noisy.

Middle-aged Londoners who went to and fro in the capital in the sixties and seventies merely smile when we ask if London could possibly be noisier than it is at the present day.

For they say it was a far noisier place then, when nearly all the main streets were granite paved and all the wheels of the vehicles iron bound. There was a continuous roar then to which the present day sound is a mere whisper.

One such Londoner says he often heard in the old days the roar of London's traffic from as far away a spot as the Crystal Palace parade. The sound was like that of continual very distant thunder. He has many times in recent years listened for the sound from the same spot, but has never heard it.—London Chronicle.

Desire for Friends Universal.

Whether we confess it or not, we all desire to be loved; however we may scoff at friendship, we secretly long for friends. But like every other good thing on earth, being liked by others must in some way be earned; it has its price, and must be bought. He who will take no trouble to make himself worthy of the liking and regard of his fellows must in the end find himself lonely.—Exchange.

Star Tuberculosis Patient.

James, age seven, is a patient at Sunnyside and came into the city for tonsillotomy. While in one of the hospitals overnight James could not sleep because he missed his sleeping porch, so he called the nurse and pleaded his case (for air).

The weather was zero and the nurse explained as much to James and thinking she had satisfied his mind she left him, but no sooner had she gone than James became restless for his old haunts and called her. Again she refused to open the window and James, who is a "star care taker," proved his mettle; he threw his shoe through the window pane.—Indianapolis News.

The transforming of Chinatown that has been in progress for a decade has finally thrust its Americanizing influences into the Chinese temple in Mott street with the result that the joss and lesser idols have been relegated to a dusty closet. It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

PETERBOROUGH AND LINDSAY BREAK EVEN IN FIRST GAME OF PLAY-OFF

Score Was 5 to 5 After a Game That Was Listless Except For a Few Flashes of Speed—Both Goal Tenders Starred Again—Coombs Best Man on Ice.

The Brock Street Rink was again comfortably filled last night when the Peterborough and Lindsay Intermediates met in the first game of the play off for the district championship. The score when the final gong rang stood 5—5, so the winner of the game in Lindsay tomorrow night will meet Oshawa in the second round.

Although the score was close last night's game was much less interesting than the last time these two teams met. At times the play grew very slow and neither team appeared to be putting forth any real efforts to add to their scoring column.

Coombs was the star of last night's contest, the big wing man working every minute. Whenever everyone else began to feel like lying down on the soft ice for a rest, Coombs would break away at his terrific speed and would come back just as hard back-checking.

The best for the local squad was Halpin, who has improved wonderfully in the last few games. His playing last night was of the spectacular order and he used excellent judgment in "playing the boards."

The first period was a poor exhibition of hockey. For the first fifteen minutes the play see-sawed back and forth with both goal tenders being called on to make some difficult plays. The work of O'Loughlin in the nets last night was wonderful. Murray stopped a host of hard ones but a couple found the nets that don't usually escape the vigilance of the local goalie.

With the first period more than half spent, Coombs let fly one of his bullet shots and it beat Murray for the first goal. Coombs was benched for trippin.

Then Harry Thornton who had been hanging away for a goal stickhandled his way through and evened up the count. Carew came right back and put his team in the lead and before the period ended, Flavell made it 3 to 1.

A Flash of Speed

In spite of the increasing stickiness of the ice, the second period grew fast for the first time during the night and the crowd began to cheer and shout encouragement to their favorites.

Carew and McElroy served penalties after which Halpin rushed the whole length of the rink and tallied on a very pretty play. McElroy was again chased although anyone could see his trip was acidental and Evans made a very pretty rush passing to P. Thornton, who scored.

Loney Rose put his team in the lead a few minutes later when he checked Flavelle near the Lindsay net and quickly found the corner. McElroy tied the score once more and all that happened after was a string of penalties.

The ice grew soft and the players grew tired and the result was that with a few exceptional flashes the final period was rather ragged. L. Rose drew a penalty immediately after they started. Then Jackson who was doing the brunt of the work on the forward line at this stage broke lose and scored. Peterborough pressed and were very unfortunate in not scoring on a dozen occasions. P. Thornton was banished and Coombs not to be outdone tied the score with the last goal of the game on a beautiful individual play.

The line-up:

Summary

First period—
Lindsay: Coombs.
Peterborough: H. Thornton.
Lindsay: Carew.
Lindsay: Flavelle.
Second Period —
Peterborough: Halpin.
Peterborough: P. Thornton.
Peterborough: L. Rose.
Lindsay: McElroy.
Third Period—
Peterborough: Jackson.
Lindsay: Coombs.

Recently one of the current magazines contained a picture called, "His Place Usurped." It showed the usual village crowd of youngsters listening to a returned soldier tell stories of his life "over there." Sitting at one side of the picture, entirely deserted by every one, was a Civil war veteran. His face was full of sorrow over his desertion by his usual audience.

"We wondered whether that was really the way people were doing—forgetting the old soldiers—also whether the old soldiers were feeling as this old man in the picture seemed to feel," said an Indiana man. "So we took the picture and showed it to an old man who is a very familiar figure in our streets—on account of his faded army uniform. He looked at the picture and then he chuckled:

"'Why, bless your soul. I don't feel that way,' he told us. 'I want to listen to 'em myself,' he continued. 'I want to know how they fought at Ypres and see if it was like we did at Antietam. And then, too,' he smiled more, 'it's just this way. I've been honored for more than 50 years now, and during that time one gets just a little hungry for a chance to do a little honorin' himself. So now it's my chance to honor the young fellers. I'm glad the tables are turned for a little while, and I bet most of the other old comrades are, too.'"

DISCOVERED VAST DEAD CITY

Photographs Taken by Airman Over Mesopotamia Reveal Site of Once Vast Metropolis.

Lieut. Col. J. A. Beazeley gives in Geographical Journal (London) an interesting example of how photography from an airship can extend our knowledge. When making an aerial reconnaissance in Mesopotamia over territory occupied by the Turks he took a series of photographs near Samarra which shows distinctly the ruins of an ancient city extending 20 miles along the Tigris river and two miles and a half wide, large enough to shelter easily 4,000,000 inhabitants.

This city would never have been noticed on earth, since it is not marked by anything but scattered hillocks, although pottery and medals had been discovered on the site. But the photographs show clearly its whole plan, with its fortifications, canals for irrigation, and streets.

The fall of the airplane within the enemy lines and the capture of its passengers did not permit Colonel Beazeley to pursue his researches, but since the British occupied the territory an archeological expedition, guided by the photographs, has begun to explore the dead city.

Conquered Desert Sand.

The British adopted a giant "snowshoe" to conquer the sands of the Egyptian desert, according to Maj. John Bain of the British army, who served in the near East. The scheme, which was based on the same theory that caused the Indian to adopt the snowshoe, was discovered while the army was marching to Palestine. The fine sands impeded both the infantry and horses, so that a day's march never resulted in much more than a two or three mile advance.

"Finally some inventive genius tried laying rather close-meshed chicken wire on the sands," said Major Bain. "The Tommies were thus given something that didn't yield so readily as the soft sands, and the horses got a better footing. Immediately we found that much greater progress was made, and our advances soon amounted to nine and ten miles a day."

Matter of Priority.

While the people of Denmark are glorying in the antiquity of their national flag, the "Dannebrog," which claims the honor of seniority among all the national flags, and are commemorating its origin in the thirteenth century, Belgian and German patriots are scouring the Middle Ages on a mission of vital import to their respective flags. The new German state has given indications of adopting for its colors black, yellow and red, disposed horizontally. This has aroused protests in Belgium, which claims priority in precisely the same colors, similarly disposed, and patriotic societies are said to be forming to take action to prevent Germany's adoption of them. The Belgian claims are based on the colors of the princes of Flanders and Brabant in the thirteenth century, while the German case is said to rest on the use of the colors in question by the ancient Germanic empire.

THEIR GLORY GONE

Helgoland to Join Louisbourg as a Memory.

Famous French Fortress in Canada Has Long Been Demolished and Soon the German Stronghold Is to Be Razed.

Announcement that the German forts on the island of Helgoland are to be demolished recalls the similar fate of a glorious landmark on Canadian soil. This is Louisbourg, Nova Scotia, once the pride of New France, and now a pile of ruins, with but a faint echo of its original splendor.

Louisbourg was the remnant of French power on the Atlantic coast when the treaty of Utrecht was signed in 1713, reducing the fortunes of Louis XIV to a low ebb. From 1720 to 1760 it led a precarious but spectacular existence, its magnificence as a defense guaranteed by the expenditure of millions of dollars by the French government, though millions were stolen and wasted by dishonest officials and unhappy officers, whose only ambition was to get rich and go home.

The fortress was imposing, despite the thievery and mismanagement, and it required a seven weeks' siege by Colonel Pepperell and his New Englanders in 1745 to take it from the French.

By one of those diplomatic incidents too plentiful in the history of the new world, Louisbourg was handed back to France in 1748 by the treaty of Aix-la-Chapelle. The New Englanders were furious, but ten years later the British army and navy, with such rising strategists as Amherst and Wolfe taking part, again laid siege by land and sea, and in another campaign of seven weeks recaptured the stronghold.

The days of the great fortress were now numbered. The home of discontent, the abode of smugglers, the den of thieving officialdom received its death warrant in 1760 at the hand of George II and Pitt in London. So well was the warrant executed that for months sailors, sappers and miners worked until they laid Louisbourg level with the dust.

And there it remains. Memorials recording its history raise their modest heads above the chaos of stones and mortar. The site on a point three miles from the railway and the town of the same name is remote and forbidding. Should the visitor follow the shore road by the lonely Atlantic in summer he will hear tinkling sheep bells from the pasture where once stood the French town, now completely obliterated. The great area of the ruins of the fort gives some hint of the vain preparation to hold a last grip against the advancing British and Colonials.

What will be the thoughts of the tourist as he drops by airplane on Helgoland a century hence, witnesses its ruined forts, and contemplates the futile ambitions of a race that drew the sword and fought a losing battle for world domination?

Married by Order.

A document suggesting that the holders of certain lands in Scotland are bound under heavy monetary penalties to marry at the royal pleasure has been brought to light during a Scottish appeal case in the house of lords. The document is said to have been prepared by the king and queen of Scotland in 1550 and it refers to a tenure known as a "ward." The heir or possessors of land held in this manner cannot obtain possession until they are twenty-one years of age if males and fourteen years of age if females. If such heirs on taking possession are not married they are bound to marry at the pleasure and will of the king with persons of good reputation and similar rank. The penalty payable to the king for refusing such a proposed marriage is double the pecuniary benefit of the marriage. "Which marriage," adds the order, "is esteemed much too dear in this country and almost at the value of the lands."

Frugality.

Frugality has ever been esteemed a virtue as well among pagans as Christians; there have been even heroes who practiced it. However, we must acknowledge that it is too modest a virtue, or, if you will, too obscure a one to be essential to heroism; few heroes have been able to attain to such a height. Frugality agrees much better with politics; it seems to be the base, the support, and, in a word, the inseparable companion of a just administration.—Oliver Goldsmith.

YOUTH HAS MUSICAL GENIUS

Willy Ferrero, 13 Years Old, and American Born, Is Capable Leader of Orchestra.

Willy Ferrero, 13, who leads 100-piece orchestras in selections of Wagner, Beethoven, Rossini, Grieg and others, is an American and was born in Portland, Me. The child has attracted the attention of Europe since he was 4 years old, but it was only recently that his American birth was revealed by his parents, who are Italians.

The lad was taken to Italy whither his parents were returning to take up their residence in their old home in Turin. When Willy was 4 he began his musical career, leading an orchestra in the Folies Bergere in Paris. A year later he appeared in the Costanza theater, Rome, where for the first time he led an orchestra of 100 pieces.

The child took his orchestra before Emperor Nicholas in 1913 and conducted two concerts for the monarch. In the same year his orchestra was filling an engagement in London, and he was commanded to appear before Queen Alexandra at Marlborough house. He appeared before Pope Benedict XV in 1916. In April, 1915, just before Italy's declaration of war, Willy was presented with the gold medal by the Italian minister of education after he had made a successful appearance in the Augusteum, where he had conducted an orchestra and chorus aggregating 500 participants.

NATIONAL HEROES OF FRANCE

Lazare Hoche and Ferdinand Foch Are Names to Be Forever Held in Grateful Memory.

Marshal Foch is taking a particular satisfaction at this time of the consummation of a great victory to pay homage to the fame of Lazare Hoche, the famous young general who escaped the Revolutionary guillotine eventually to command that army of the Sambre-et-Meuse which, though at first disorganized, badly fed and badly equipped, performed the brilliant seven months' campaign which established the reputation of French arms on both sides of the Rhine. To this day at Weissenthurm stands a monument to its memory and that of its brilliant young chief. No wonder Marshal Foch takes pleasure in recalling Lazare Hoche to his countrymen. Of Hoche it is said that he once proudly wrote to the minister for war of his day, "Je suis la patrie." The French of the present century would throw up their hats at such a sentiment as enthusiastically as the contemporaries of Hoche and Rouget de Lisle. With the great mass of them, though they do not perhaps express it so tersely, Foch is "la patrie" in the sense that he certainly stands for them as "la Victoire" personified.

High Heels Lessen Vitality.

High heels prevail in spite of the promise of something wiser in build coming into popular favor. Yet, to quote a well-known doctor: "No woman pretends that she is comfortable when wearing high heels nor can she hope to be graceful when wearing them, for the body is thrown out of poise and the action of the feet is restricted. More serious than her awkwardness is the eventual injury to her health. For in the effort to preserve her equilibrium the shoulders are thrown forward, depressing the chest; breathing is interfered with, and that means poorer blood and a final decrease in vitality. This comes gradually, but it is inevitable when a woman persists in wearing very high heels. Her heels should conform to the arch of her instep."—Exchange.

Cryptic Cable.

For smartness the following will be hard to beat: A well-known personage in Devonshire, England, received a cable from his soldier son in Mesopotamia containing only three words: "Two John twelve." After much puzzling the meaning dawned upon him. Taking down his Bible he turned up the Second Epistle of St. John and read the twelfth verse, which runs as follows: "Having many things to write unto you, I would not write with paper and ink, but I trust to come unto you and speak face to face, that our joy may be full." His son was on his way home to England.

Bridegroom Grows in Importance.

The war has given the bridegroom a significance he never before possessed. Formerly wedding notices were devoted to the bride, her trousseau, her bridesmaids and her family. The bridegroom was mentioned only incidentally, if at all. By reason of his rank, he has become one of the most important persons in the alliance.—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

PURPLE AND GOLD

Adorned Armies Which Persian Kings Led to War.

Spectacular Indeed Must Have Been the March of Mighty Hosts Before the Days of Business-like Fighting.

Warfare was a spectacular, as well as a bloody enterprise, in the days of antiquity. Plain khaki and simple business-like accoutrements would never have suited the ancient Persian soldiers.

Silver altars, surrounded by priests, chanting sacred songs, were first in line of march. They were followed by 365 youths dressed in purple garments. A chariot dedicated to the sun was drawn by snow-white horses, led by grooms wearing white garments and carrying golden wands.

Ten chariots, embossed with gold and silver preceded the cavalry of 12 nations, dressed in their various costumes and carrying their peculiar arms.

Then came the Persian Immortals, 10,000 in number, wearing golden chains and robes embroidered with gold and glittering with precious stones. Following at a short distance came 15,000 nobles, relatives of the king, dressed in garments wonderfully wrought.

A company of spearmen preceded the king. He rode in an imposing chariot, and wore robes of surpassing magnificence, and a costly miter on his head. By his side walked 200 of his most noble kinsmen. Ten thousand warriors, bearing spears with staffs of silver tipped by heads of gold, followed the royal chariot of Xerxes. The king's horses, 40 in number, with 30,000 footmen, ended the procession.

At some distance followed the mother and wife of the king in chariots, accompanied by their ladies on horseback. Fifteen cars carried the king's children, their tutors and nurses, and 600 camels, guarded by archers, bore the royal treasury. The friends and relatives of the ladies followed with the cooks and servants. Light-armed troops brought up the rear.

When a king in those days looked upon his troops and saw their strength and splendor, it is no wonder he felt proud and wished to lead them to battle. Such an army was not meant to stay at home, where only their countrymen could see them. Other nations would know how powerful a king he was. So he and his followers marched away, and wars for conquest began.

Peoples were forced to give themselves up to a life of war, either for conquest or defense, and the great highways, which peace would have dedicated to commerce and prosperity, became military roads over which war took its cruel way.

Details Carried to Absurdity.

Trivial details not infrequently become the pivot of momentous decisions, in which cases an element of absurdity is supplied by the breadth of the contrast. A case in point arises in the discussion among English litterateurs concerning Shakespeare's alleged "hand" in the play of "Sir Thomas More," in which one expert occupies almost a column of small type in the literary supplement of the Times of London in describing the construction of the letter B as found in one of Shakespeare's autographic documents. The imposing array of warlike and nautical terms in the modest letter, such as keel, baseline, ram, forelimb and boundary line, may astonish many who have been accustomed to form it with comparative ease, while the division of the letter into sections and subsections by this savant for purposes of discussion endows the old scrivener's art with unexpected dignity.

MAY COMPEL HOLLAND TO GIVE UP EX-KAISER

ALLIES THREATEN, IN EVENT OF NEW REFUSAL TO BLOCKADE PORTS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 3.—The Entente rejoinder to the refusal of Holland to accede to the allied demand for the extradition of former Emperor William is imminent according to the Petit Parisien. The newspaper says that while the note will be generally conciliatory, it will consider in the case of a new refusal by Holland, measures going as far as the breaking of diplomatic relations on a naval blockade of Dutch ports.

YOUNG GIRL SIXTEEN STOLE FIVE DOLLARS

DOES NOT EARN ENOUGH TO LIVE ON — PROMISES RESTITUTION

A sixteen-year-old girl was charged at the police court this morning with the theft of five dollars from a young woman.

Accused admitted the theft, and pleaded temptation owing to being dependent for a livelihood on her own resources and only earning $7 a week, not enough to live on. The young girl does not belong to town, and she said her brother had promised her assistance. She agreed to make restitution and to resist any such temptation in future.

Crown Attorney Hatton expressed sympathy with the girl and thought she should be given an opportunity to make restitution. He said $7 a week is hardly sufficient for a girl to exist on.

Magistrate Dumble had known girls live on less.

Mr. Hatton—"Not these days, with boots at $10 the pair."

To his Worship the accused replied she knew nothing of domestic work and could not cook.

Mr. Hatton—"No one can cook these times."

The magistrate admonished the girl to live a good clean, moral life, and to get in touch with those in authority in the church to which she belongs.

She had not $5 on her person to replace that she had stolen, and was remanded for two weeks, ostensibly, it seems, to get the money and convince the court that she has secured acceptable protection. Accused is at liberty and in good care for the time being.

DR. HELEN McMURCHY TO BE HERE TOMORROW

WILL ADDRESS THE WOMEN'S CANADIAN CLUB AT 3:30 p.m.

The Woman's Canadian Club is to be congratulated on securing for tomorrow, Wednesday, Feb. 4th, the services of such an able and indefatigable worker as Dr. Helen McMurchy, of Toronto. Dr. McMurchy needs no introduction to a Canadian audience. Her work has proved to be of the highest value to the province and state through the result of the whole souled interest and study she has devoted to it. The meeting opens on Wednesday afternoon at 3.30 as Dr. McMurchy has to leave the city on the 5.40 Grand Trunk train. Miss Helen McLaren will be the soloist for the afternoon. An opportunity will be given before the meeting for any women to join the club who have not already done so.

SOCIAL AT ST. ANDREW'S BY YOUNG MEN'S GUILD

EVERYONE ENJOYED THE SPLENDID PROGRAM, INCLUDING WAR.

The Young Men's Guild at St. Andrew's Church held a social in the lecture room last night which was a great success. Every one was happy, the young men were attentive to their guests, the refreshments were all that could be desired, the program, consisting of vocal and musical selections, and lantern slides of the fourth year of the war, pleased and interested the audience ,and the half hour before and after the program in which everybody got better acquainted, robbed the evening of all stiffness and formality. All visited the exhibit of souvenirs of the war provided by the members of the guild who had been overseas.

The young men appreciated very much the assistance given toward making the evening a success, by Mrs. Wm. Stevens, Mrs. C. McFarlane, Miss Pilling, Miss Eastwood, Mr. Hartshorn, Mr. J. John, Mr. F. Clark, Mr. John Crane, the Heintzman Co., and those who contributed to the refreshments.

Mr. Norman Brand occupied the chair and explained the war views.

CAMPERS' CONCERT.

Will Be Held at Y. W. C. A. on February 17.

The campers of the Young Women's Christian Association expect to put on a concert in the Y.W.C.A. gymnasium on the night of February 17th to raise funds for the purchase of a Victrola for use at the camp. Girls who attended the camp last summer are all agreed that they had a great time, but they are also agreed that everybody will have a still better time next summer if they can have music. Keep February 17th free.

HOLLAND MAY CONSENT TO GIVE UP REFUGEES

PROVIDED THEIR EXTRADITION IS ASKED ON CRIMINAL, NOT POITICAL GROUNDS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Amsterdam, Feb. 3.—According to Handelsblad, it is quite probable that Holland would consent to the extradition of the German war criminals who are within her borders if extradition were asked on the grounds that they actually are vicious or criminal. In the event that the request were based on some act in the ordinary course of the war or reprisal ordered by superiors. The case would be different, the newspaper assert, unless the allied list includes former Crown Prince William. The newspaper says it has been unable thus far to ascertain which, if any, of the desired persons are now in Holland. Handelsblad says further that if the extradition of former Emperor William had been demanded on actual criminal grounds instead of political grounds, Holland's reply might have been different.

FINED $1,000 FOR BREACH OF O.T.A.

OFFENCE OCCURRED AT LAKEFIELD—MUST BE PAID IN FIVE DAYS

Before Police Magistrate Dumble yesterday evening, a Lakefield man pleaded guilty to a breach of the Ontario Temperance Act.

Information was laid by Inspector Stewart that accused did on Tuesday, December 2, give to several persons at Lakefield liquor contrary to the Act.

His Worship imposed a fine of $1,000 and $13.65 with five days in which to pay, or an alternative of six months' imprisonment with hard labor.

RAISED $51.25 FOR ARMENIANS.

St. James Church Sunday school took up a splendid collection for the benefit of the Armenians and succeeded in raising $51.25.

NOT WHAT YOU EXPECTED

You thought I was going to tell you the Havelock man came back this week with all of Havelock, but while it would be exciting reading, it would not be true. But listen! Last summer a friend suffered agony for two weeks with acute indigestion. She was induced with difficulty to try Gallagher's Blood Purifier—was soon cured and now it is a family remedy. The other night I met a young Douro farmer who told me he had doctored for years for acidity of the stomach and indigestion, getting no relief until he took our Blood Purifier. Now he is not troubled with it. Is it any wonder I am enthusiastic about it when almost every day someone tells me a similar story. This Herbal Remedy is manufactured by the Gallagher Remedy Co., 332 Water street, Peterborough. If you are similarly troubled it will do the same for you. I thought you would like to know.

Your friend.

COST $28.32 TO EDUCATE EACH P. S. PUPIL IN PETERBORO LAST YEAR

Inspector Mowat's Annual Report on School Conditions is Full of Interest—Organization and Equipment—Several Encouraging Features.

Public School Inspector A. Mowat submitted to the Board of Education last night his annual report on the general condition of Peterborough Public schools as follows:

The year 1919 was marked by a general and world-wide interest in education.

The world has entered the era of re-construction and its aims—universal peace, democracy, and improved social conditions—can be secured and maintained only by an intelligent and educated people. Never before has the importance of education been so universally recognised, nor has such sympathetic interest ever before been taken in the teacher and his work.

The task entrusted to the school calls for wise leadership on the part of those in authority, and a real devotion to duty on the part of all who have any share in the work.

The nature of the teacher's work and the almost universal recognition of its importance should attract increasing numbers of the brightest minds to make this their life work.

The work in the Peterborough Public schools throughout the year was marked by several encouraging features.

1.—Attendance.

The regularity in attendance of pupils was good. In no month of the year did the attendance fall below 90 per cent., and in the month of September it reached [illegible] per cent.

The total number of pupils enrolled during the year was 3374 being distributed as follows:

King Edward	672
Central	627
South Central	578
Queen Alexandra	471
King George	418

2.—The Staff.

There was little sickness on the staff during 1919, in marked contrast with the year 1918. The changes on the staff were few. Misses Jenkins, Greaves and Butler resigned at the end of June, and Misses MacKenzie and Mason, together with Mr. Gould resigned at the end of the year.

3.—Accommodation.

Accommodation was provided for all Public school children by transferring a considerable number of pupils from the South Central school to the Central and Queen Mary schools, and by using the basement of the St. James' Sunday school hall as a class-room.

The pupils of the King Edward and South Central schools are yet unable to pursue the courses in household science and manual training,

MINISTER OF AGRICULTURE WRITES TO PRESIDENT ROGERS OF FARMERS CLUB

Peterborough's Claims Will be Considered if it is Decided to Establish Experimental Farm in Eastern Ontario.

Mr. Richard B. Rogers, president of the Peterborough Farmers' Club, received the following letter from Hon. Manning Doherty, Provincial Minister of Agriculture yesterday.

"I beg to acknowledge yours of the 23rd. inst, in regard to the report that the Government intends establishing several demonstration farms and urging that any decision in regard to location in your section be left until after my suggested visit to Peterborough. I am unaware as to what reports have appeared in the press on this matter, but I beg to assure you that the Government has not arived at any decision to establish demonstration farms in the province The matter of course is one which has been suggested among several others, but no decision whatever has been arrived at. I can assure you that should any such decision be arrived at in the future, the claims of your section will receive full investigation and consideration.

The Club's Resolution

The resolutions which led to the recent appointment of a committee to urge upon the Ontario Department of Agriculture the consideration of Peterborough for one of the experimental farms, were adopted by the Peterborough branch U. F. O. of which Mr. Rogers is president, and sent to Minister Doherty and read as follows:

We, your humble petitioners, pray that, whereas you have expressed a desire to establish additional experimental or demonstration farms in the portion of Ontario which is not at present served by experimental farm or station; therefore, we pray that an experimental farm or demonstration farm be established in close proximity to the city of Peterborough.

Peterborough being the most important city between Toronto and Ottawa, situated in the chief centre of the Midland counties, is easy of access, is surrounded by a fertile agricultural area occupied by aggressive and practical farmers who are desirous of increasing production by applying the most modern methods. The need of applied science in dairy farming, thereby insuring the greatest results by the minimum of costs for benefit of producer and consumer, also the need of propogating and growing of seed for farm and garden.

It was moved by Mr. F. E. Wilson, seconded by Mr. Torence Lillico, and resolved that we, the members of the United Farmers' Club, request the cooperation and assistance of the following gentlemen and public organizations: Mr. Thomas Tooms, M.P.P., E. N. McDonald, M. P. P. of East Peterborough, Mr Sandy, M.P.P., of Omemee., Mr. Samuel Staples, M.P.P., of Ida, The Warden of the County, the County Council, the Mayor and City Council, Board of Trade, Principal of the Normal School, Principal of the Collegiate Institute, Peterborough branch, Ontario Vegetable Growers' Association, Horticultural Siciety, Peterboro Industrial Exhibition, the Fair Board of Lakefield, Norwood, and Bobcaygeon, the Municipal Councils of Emily, Cavan, Verulum, the Board of Education.

MAY LEVY NEW INCOME TAX

Hon. Arthur Meighen Says Impost Likely on Leisure Class

Ottawa, Ont., Feb. 4.—Hon Arthur Meighen, Minister of Interior, in speaking at the annual meeting of the Board of Trade last night said:

"A country, however, which strives first and foremost to gain trade to expand its production, and, thus, to increase its wealth by an excess of sales over purchases, is likely to be the country which has most general prosperity at home. The expansion of industries enlarges the opportunities of labor, and improves the position of labor. A country, on the contrary, which derives a large share of its revenue from foreign investments is utilizing its capital for foreign labor other than its own. The leisure class under such conditions would have no complaint unless indeed, their incomes were taxed. Such taxation is very likely to be necessary to provide for the necessities of the treasury for unemployment insurance and other purposes.

"I submit to the business people of Ottawa that the sounder line of policy is to seek to secure revenue earned at home, rather than revenue earned abroad. Experience teaches that this course results in a wider diffusion of wealth and in the strengthening of the economic fibre of [illegible] nation."

PETROGRAD TODAY IS A CITY OF FAMINE, COLD, DISEASE, AND DEATH

What is Left of Population Living in Want and Squalor, Even Water Supply Has Been Cut off Owing to Lack of Fuel.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 4.—Petrograd is described as a city suffering from famine, cold, disease and robbery, in a report just made by Professor Zeidler, president of the Russian Red Cross Society, who was investigating conditions in the capital

"Owing to want of fuel, the capital is becoming a desert," he says. "In a few houses only there are still some inhabitants and these generally live in their kitchens. Famine conditons in this city are terrible. If the population had not already accustomed itself to feeding on wheat, which people in normal circumstances never eat at all, they would have no food whatever. The water supply has stopped owing to want of fuel and the inhabitants draw their supplies from Neva or the canals, or use melted snow.

Spotted Typus and Spanish Influenza, with various complications have put an end to the sufferings of many unfortunate people. There are no medicines to be had at all. Only four hospitals are still open.

Electric lights are permitted from 5 to 8 p.m only, tramcars run at certain hours, and then merely on routes needed by the Bolsheviki. The authorities are powerless to guard public safety. Gangs of robbers are at work in deserted quarters of the city, carrying off all that may have been left after the search made by the Red army."

POLAND TO MAKE PEACE WITH SOVIET-RUSSIA

ON CONDITION THERE BE NO PREACHING OF BOLSHEVISM IN FORMER COUNTRY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Feb. 4.—The Polish Diet will sign the peace treaty profferred by the Russian Soviet government if guarantees are given that propaganda will not be carried on in Poland and other European countries, it is said by Prince Casimir Lubomirski, Polish minister to the United States. The Soviet peace proposal, the minister said, is proof that the Polish policy of maintaining a strategic military frontier against the Bolsheviki has been the right one. The Poles have at all times been on the defensive and have no imperialistic intentions, he added.

"Poland will be glad now to serve as a peaceful and moral bulwark against Bolshevism just as it has been until now the military bulwark. But for this purpose Poland must get enough food to enable the demobilized army and labor classes to work energetically, and must have raw material, such as cotton and wool, to give them an opportunity to work," said the prince.

BANKERS CONSIDERING EXCHANGE SITUATION

SIR HENRY DRAYTON IN CONFERENCE WITH LEADING FINANCIERS OF DOMINION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—Sir Henry Drayton was in conference this morning with leading bankers of the Dominion, when the serious exchange situation was under considertaion. The conference was a continuation of previous meetings, in the course of which causes and possible remedies have been under review. The bankers were headed by C. A. Bogart, general manager of the Dominion Bank and president of the Canadian Bankers' Association.

There is every desire in official circles to do anything which might tend to improve the unprecedented heavy discount on Canadian currency. The view is taken by the authorities here that the present condition is so dependent on international causes that it is doubtful if anything the Dominion Government could do would greatly affect the situation. However, close study is being given the matter with a view to taking any action thought feasible.

GERMANY, NOT ALLIES MUST MAKE DEMAND

FOR EXTRADITION OF CROWN PRINCE, ACCORDING TO HOLLAND DESPATCH

(Canadian Press Despatch)

The Hague, Feb. 4.—The Associated Press is informed that any demand upon Holland for the surrender of the former crown prince as a war criminal would be treated by the Dutch Government probably according to the Dutch extradition treaty with Germany, and it would be a question for the courts to decide, rather than for the government. As in the case of the former German emperor, it was stated that if the ex-crown prince is demanded it is then up to Germany to ask Holland for him.

LONDON INDUSTRIES ARE FORCED TO CLOSE

ICE CONDITIONS AT NIAGARA FALLS HAVE DECREASED SUPPLY OF POWER

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London Ont., Feb. 4—A fifty per cent reduction today in London's allottment on Hydro Power resulted in the closing down of nearly all this city's industries for the day. Ice conditions at Niagara Falls was given as a reason for the decreased power supply.

STERLING EXCHANGE DROPS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 4.—Demand bills on the English pound sterling, which dropped yesterday to $3.22, declined further to $3.19 on the market this morning. Canadian exchange followed. By noon the discount rate had advanced to 16 per cent.

ALLIANCE PEOPLE WILL NOT ASK FOR ANOTHER VOTE

TEMPERANCE FORCES BELIEVE LEGISLATURE CAN MAKE ONTARIO BONE DRY

Toronto, Feb. 4.—A largely attended meeting of the Provincial Executive of the Dominion Alliance was held in the Alliance offices, Lumsden Building, Toronto, yesterday. Representatives were present from many districts throughout the Province. The president, Mr. Chas. E. Steele, presided.

The principal business before the meeting was the consideration of the report of the special committee appointed at a previous meeting of the executive to consider the question of legislation. This committee has secured from Mr. John S. Ewart, K.C., of Ottawa, an opinion upon "stated questions," regarding the use by the Province of the legislation recently passed by the Dominion Parliament regarding the importation of liquor and the whole matter has been carefully considered and a number of legal friends of the cause consulted.

The committee reported against asking for another vote as provided by Bill No. 26, on the ground of doubt as to its applicability to the Province of Ontario; the expense involved in taking of a vote; the faultiness of the Bill, outstanding features being, that it did not deal with the manufacture; would not stop direct deliveries from breweries and distilleries to private houses of liquor ordered through a Montreal agent; did not safeguard the bringing in of liquor for medicinal, commercial, and manufacturing purposes.

Power of Legislature.

The committee further stated its opinion that the Provincial Legislature had power to enact legislation, a practical result of which would be to make the province "bone dry."

On resolution, this part of the report from the committee was sent on to the annual convention for consideration, at which time, the whole matter will be decided by the temperance people themselves in convention assembled.

NO PART OF CANADA TO ESCAPE INFLUENZA

HEALTH OFFICIALS REPORT SHOWS EPIDEMIC ON ALL SIDES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb 4—Based on information received from all parts of the country the Federal Department of Health gives the information that influenza is undoubtedly epidemic in a considerable number of centres in Canada. Up to the present places east of Montreal have not been affected but from the progress of the disease in every direction from its point of origin in the United States, there is little doubt that the whole of Canada will be affected. The disease is spreading rapidly along the lines of traffic.

TWO TOWNS ARE CAPTURED

By Bolsheviki Forces, According to Report From Moscow.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 4.—The Bolsheviki after the capture of Nikalaiev and Kherson to the northeast of Odessa continued their advance and capturer a number of villages according to an official statement sent out by the Soviet Government at Moscow. Bolshevik troops are making forced marches the statement says.

GEN. DENIKINE IN BULGARIA

Going to Bucharest for Conference Report Says.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Geneva, Feb. 4.—General Denekine, former anti-Bolshevik leader in southwestern Russia, landed at the Bulgarian port of Varna on Monday with a few of his officers, according to a Belgrade despatch. It is reported that Denekine is going to Bucharest to hold a conference concerning the danger of a Bolshevik invasion of Bessarabia, the despatch says.

PLAN FOR BUILDING TECHNICAL SCHOOL IN PETERBOROUGH CITY

Board of Education Looking Ahead to Opportune Time For This Work—Ask Advisory Industrial Committee to Gather Information From Other Cities.

Mr. E. G. Patterson, at the meeting of the Board of Education, last night expressed his opinion that the time is opportune for the Advisory Industrial Committee to meet on the question of technical schools. They might get together and visit, say, the technical schools in London, Hamilton, Ottawa, and see what is done therein, prepare plans and conclude all necessary arrangements for the erection of a technical school in Peterborough, following completion of the new public school now under way, should this board decide on such a course for next year.

Mr. J. W. Worth was in full accord with Mr. Patterson's suggestion, and was sorry such had not been put in the shape of a resolution. It would be good business, he said, for the Board to know just exactly what technical subjects would be suitable for conditions in Peterborough, what kind of a building would be needed, all in readiness for action when the Board is prepared to undertake the project.

Mr Patterson did not approve of "instructing" the Industrial Committee, (which is composed of some members outside the Board, to act by passing a resolution to that effect. If they were asked to take the matter up, as suggested, in preparation for the Board of Education's action at the proper moment, that would be all that is necessary in this connection.

Mr. A. A. Fowler, contended that and addition to the Collegiate Institute is needed before a technical school is built.

Principal H. R. H. Kenner, in reply to Mr Fowler, said the Institute will be overcrowded this fall.

Chairman Roland Denne did not approve of saddling the citizens of Peterborough with the cost of additions to the Collegiate Institute just now; the burden would be too much. Should additional room be imperative he suggested converting the Institute's recreation hall into class rooms.

Reverting to the technical school question, Mr. G. O. Cameron said Mr. Patterson's idea was that the Board and the Industrial Committee confer and prepare plans in readiness for building, when the time is opportune. He was quite in accord with the proposition that this matter be gone into thoroughly without delay. "I have been here ten years now, Mr. Cameron said, and at each election some new candidate for the Board of Education comes forward in favor of technical schools and that's all there is to it. Nothing has yet been accomplished."

The Chairman: "Mr. Sangster has on hand enough information on this subject to keep the committee busy six weeks digesting it."

Mr. Worth did not agree with Mr. Fowler's contention that additions to

GERMAN REPRESENTATIVE IN PARIS RESIGNS OFFICE AND RETURNS HOME

Refuses to Have Anything to do With Extradition of Fellow Countrymen Whose Surrender is Demanded by the Allies.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 4.—Kurt von Lersner, German Charge d'Affaires here, has returned to Premier Millerand the list containing the names of Germans whose extradition is demanded by the Allies, which was handed to him last night, and has informed the Premier that he has resigned and is leaving for Berlin by the first train.

Baron von Lersner said today that his decision was in line with the attitude he maintained throughout regarding the question of extradition. He declared he had held that no German officials could be instrumental in carrying out the extradition clauses of the treaty, and consequently there was nothing left for him to do but to resign and go home.

The Allied council of ambassadors was called into extraordinary session this morning to discuss the situation and it was subsequently made known that an official statement will be issued some time tonight. The extradition of 896 Germans is demanded in the note. England demands 97, France and Belgium 334 each, Italy 29, Poland 57, Roumania 41, and Serbia four.

ASKING FOR MORE VOTES

United States Senate After Same Status as British Empire

Washington, Feb. 4.—The Johnson amendment to the League of Nations covenant, giving the United States as many votes in the assembly as the British Empire, is to be revived as soon as the treaty comes to the floor of the Senate. This action will be taken as the direct result of Viscount Grey's letter. The amendment last session failed of adoption by only three votes.

Senator Reed, Missouri, in a speech on the Grey letter, said if Senators vote against balloting equality, the Senate ought to pass a resolution declaring a couple of vacancies "so we could get Lord Grey over here, for he is a better American than such Senators."

Preparations went forward today for calling up the treaty next Monday. At the same time, a small group of "indefatigibles," as they are being called, continued efforts to take up the pact in the open Senate. The mild reservation group to-day announced they will stand by Lodge when the treaty comes up. They said they wish to be known no longer as "mild reservationists." They are "Lodge reservationists" from now on. The return of the mild group to the Lodge fold leaves the irreconcilables alone away from the family hearth.

Damage which is estimated at between $10,000 and $15,000 was caused by fire to the factory of the Quebec Heel Company, Quebec City.

REDUCE STOCKS OF LIQUOR

Saskatchewan Legislature Cuts Supply of Druggists Fifty Per Cent.

Regina, Sask., Feb. 4.—The Saskatchewan Assembly in committee of the whole, is caulking the leaks in the bill to regulate the sale of liquor.

The committee decided to reduce by 50 per cent. the amount of stocks which a druggist may keep and a further provision was added giving the commission the power to still further reduce the amounts should it be desirable. The maximum stocks are now five gallons of alcohol or hard drinks; five gallons of wine, or five gallons of malt liquor. All prescriptions are reduced to the 8-ounce basis without any exceptions.

While the penalty against an illegal purchaser was cut in half being reduced to $100 or 30 days' imprisonment, the alternative prison sentence against the illegal vendor was raised from 30 to 60 days. The committee have not completed their task.

CARPENTERS WANT $1 AN HOUR

Ottawa Men Will Seek 40 Per Cent. Increase.

Ottawa, Feb. 4.—One dollar an hour is the wage which the Carpenters' Union of Ottawa will demand this year. The rate will not be decided upon, however, until the entire scale of wages in the building trades is considered by representatives of the Building Trades Council and contractors. Carpenters are at present getting sixty cents an hour.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

WEDNESDAY, FEBRUARY 4, 1920.

AND SOME WONDER WHY!

TWO EX-MAYORS, speaking at a public function the other night declared that more good citizens must volunteer for the public service.

Many men have a natural objection to putting themselves up like so many ten pins only to be ruthlessly bowled down by the electors. Recent events have clearly demonstrated that such is often the fate of the public-spirited citizen, even though he has a public record that measures one hundred per cent. It is nothing unusual for such men to be passed over for some one who as far as experience goes is a veritable novice.

And, come to think of it, who can wonder at this distaste for public office displayed by so many worthy citizens when even the men elected, unwittingly perhaps, cast reflections on the very system under which the civic government is operated? Why should an elected alderman, for example, take the ground that no man attaining position through such a channel is unable to keep his service free from the bias of party politics? Why should it be apparently taken for granted that a man elected by the people cannot act in everything as conscientiously as the man who is appointed under a legislative statute? Such an assumption is nothing less than an implication that city employes appointed by elected boards owe their positions to some special favor, and that party politics is really supreme. Few, if any, believe such is the case in Peterborough, and the belief is the best argument in favor of a change which the old Council recommended and the new aldermen have just rescinded. Still, the City Council, great as it is, does not control the policy of the party which really holds the balance of power in Ontario.

PIGS IS STILL PIGS.

THE SWINEBREEDERS' Association of Ontario, in convention in Toronto, made a common cause with the consumers of the province in predicting mutual disaster. Not for years to come, not until the countries of Europe increase their production of live stock, can the consumer of Canada hope for lower prices for pork. The householders of this country will help share in the penalties that follow in the wake of five years of war. The farmer will not benefit by these conditions, as the price of feed has been raised to such an extent that anything like a fair profit in the raising of pigs and other live stock threatens to disappear. If the farmer is forced out of the business, the situation to the consumer will be all the more serious.

It was not always thus. A well-known farmer not one hundred miles from Peterborough openly boasted that his taxes are no higher today, no harder to pay than they were ten years ago. His neighbors at once suspected favoritism on the part of the assessor, but an investigation convinced them that the assessed value of the property of the boaster had been increased in about the same proportion as their own. What, then, was the secret, the answer?

The farmer in question made answer in a few words. Ten years ago he provided for the payment of his taxes by raising a pig for market. He follows the same course now and attains the same object. If his taxes have increased, so has the value of the hog. The problem is of the same dimensions whether the measure is applied lengthwise or crossways. In the meantime the consumer giving the matter thought will have no difficulty in deciding who really pays the taxes.

ASQUITH AND THE IRISH.

EX-PREMIER ASQUITH is the outstanding advocate of Home Rule for Ireland. He made that the chief plank in his platform when he was elected years ago, and the implementing of his pledge became the task of his administration. From the beginning he never wavered in his duty as he saw it, and his first triumph was the success he met with when he had the British Constitution revised in order to overcome the implacable opposition of the House of Lords.

Twice the Home Rule bill that Asquith carried through the House of Commons was vetoed by the Peers. For the third time he introduced a measure and carried it through, a measure more drastic in its provisions than any of its predecessors. The Lords under the changed Constitution were deprived of the right to veto a bill three times sustained by the elected representatives of the people.

The measure was acceptable to the majority of the British Commons, the Irish members included. When its passage was assured, the late John Redmond, Irish leader, steered his historic blessing upon the English people. The war broke out, and by consent of all parties concerned the putting into effect of the Home Rule Act was delayed for a year. When that time was up the matter was again postponed, and the agitation for Irish autonomy became more active than ever.

The delay in the settlement of the Irish question must always be regarded as one of the evil consequences of the late war. But for that conflict Asquith would, so far as it is humanly posible to discern, still be Premier of Great Britain. The Act would have been given effect in the beginning of 1915, and by this time its success or failure would have been demonstrated and by that success or failure Premier Asquith would have survived or fallen.

Why should any faction in Canada, or in any other country in the world, oppose the gift of autonomy for the Irish race, when a majority of people in the British Isles, the people most directly interested, are overwhelmingly in favor of it as shown by its passage three times in the House of Commons? It is really a matter which concerns the British people most directly, and they should not be denied the right to manage their own domestic affairs. How would the Canadian people, for example, be inclined to accept dictation from Westminster as to relations between Ontario and Quebec or any other section of the Dominion?

Standing as a candidate for re-election in a Scottish constituency, ex-Premier Asquith is as outspoken an advocate of Home Rule as he was the day he scored his triumph as the leader of the Liberal party. He would not attempt a compromise by giving the Irish a measure of autonomy that would certainly fail to please any faction. He would give the Parliament at Dublin control over the customs and excise duties just as the Parliaments in any of the British dominions enjoy that right. He refuses to assume that the Irish Parliament would abuse its authority by fiscal discrimination against either the Mother Country itself or against the Province of Ulster, which under his Act was to remain outside of the new Irish regime. Mr. Asquith, who can reasonably be supposed to know something of the subject, concedes that the Irish race possess a degree of intelligence superior to that of ordinary savages.

Mr. Asquith also favors self-determination for Scotland, but the case of the latter country and that of Ireland are by no means parallel. The terms of the union of each with England were vastly different. The one was the result of coercion, the other of mutual agreement, the way for which was paved by the ascension of a Scottish sovereign to the united throne. The consent of the governed was secured in one instance and was lacking in the other, and without such consent the history of the ages shows that anything approaching a stable government is impossible.

SIR GEORGE AND THE LEAGUE.

(New York Sun.)

COMING HERE in behalf of the bankrupt governments and destitute nations, the dismantled industries and waste fields, the fireless homes and famished bodies of a war-wrecked continent, Sir George Paish knocks the last shaking prop from under the tottering, ramshackle, crazy structure of the League of Nations.

Nobody, he says—nobody where races freeze for want of fuel and die for want of bread, demands from the United States Mr. Wilson's League of Nations. Nobody where civilization hangs on the brink cares what American reservations go into the covenant. Nobody where chaos rocks God's footstool asks anything of America except what the American people will give and do in their own American way. This is the message Sir George brings from sanity in Europe to sanity in America.

SOLDIER SETTLERS IN LITERATURE

The Edmonton Journal recently offered cash prizes for the best stories written by soldier settlers in Northern Alberta on their experiences on the land.

The ensuing "copy" constitutes an inspiring chapter of incidents connected with the development of the rich new country of the Northwest and furnishes evidence of the splendid spirit and determination of most of the men who are answering the call for increased development of the agricultural resources of the country.

First prize was awarded to Colin McKenzie, of Elbridge, Alta. He served in the Army and the Navy. He was in Mesopotamia, near the Garden of Eden, when a pal "put him wise" to a quarter-section in the Edmonton District. He longed to be back in Canada, he says, and his wish was gratified finally on June 7, 1918, when he arrived in the capital of Alberta.

Burnt Out But Undaunted

The quarter-section he visioned from the purlieus of the Garden of Eden was not available, but there were many other quarter-sections in that part of the country and he got a locator who picked one out for him. He put in for a loan on July 2, 1918, and accompanied by a land inspector (a war hero with one arm) this sailor boy (with one arm in a sling) started out, reaching his location in two days. After putting up hay, he spent the winter hauling out logs for a barn and fence posts; but in the Spring he lost his home by fire. With the help of neighbors he hauled logs and rebuilt. Last summer he fenced along the road allowance and with two horses broke three acres and stumped five. Then he had the misfortune to be kicked by a horse and was laid up for three weeks.

His wife arrived from the Old Country in August. Her first experience as a farm worker was rather trying but, says MacKenzie, "she is a dandy farmer now, drives a team, holds a brush breaker, gets the cows home, gets the mail and thinks the homestead is the only place."

McKenzie went into Edmonton during the past winter to make a grub stake. Summing up his experiences he advises soldier settlers not to buy cattle until they have their places fenced. The Soldier Settlement Board inspectors proved to be real friends with interests of the men at heart. McKenzie is now back on the homestead building a barn and ice house. "I have had some bad luck but I have wanted to be a farmer since 1909 and, believe me, I am going to stick now. Next year, with ten acres of green feed and an additional loan for stock I can see my way clear to pay off by loan soon, leaving me with with one of the best farms in the province of Alberta."

More Optimistic Than Ever

Another prize winner was Percy O. Miller, of the 138th Battalion, who is located at Lunnford, Alta. He was one of the first to get "back to the land" with the tide of the Soldier Settlement Board having taken up free Dominion Lands and received financial assistance under thet old act. "I may say that I am still as optimistic as at first if not more so," says Miller. "With two successful seasons to put me on my feet I can now consider myself a farmer'" When he took up his land he found the weeds and brush had grown up to such an extent that he was only able to crop twelve acres the first year He summer fallowed another twelved and broke twelve more. Last year he cropped thirty and broke fifteen, part of which he put in green feed and had a most wonderful crop. He has filled on another quarter which has 32 acres broken. He has built barns, henhouse and pighouse, fenced about 300 rods and has enough logs to build a new house and another barn. He has 400 bushels of oats left and enough of barley and wheat for next years feed, after finishing five hogs ready for shipment. He also has two pure bred Durocs, 150 chickens and geese, four horses, one colt, four cows, two calves and other livestock.

Miller concludes: "My experience is that with optimism, hard work and good judgment any man should come out on top with money at five per cent."

Getting in The Hardest Part.

Getting on the farm was the hardest part with Private S H. Scott, 194th Edmonton Highlanders, who located at Pine Creek. With his war bride he arrived in Edmonton in March last year. After making two selections which the Soldier Settlement Board would not agree to assist in financing, he finally made a choice which was approved by the Board. He got a farm with 45 acres of oats in crop with four horses and ten pigs; a going concern. Leaving Edmonton with his wife and a carload of settler's effects it was not altogether an easy proposition to get in, but they arrived at their new home at five o'clock in the morning. During the summer he put up 14 tons of hay and had a bumper crop of grain. He says: "We are perfectly happy and satisfied with our venture in farming. I have since bought with my savings two cows, one horse and a pure bread boar and raised enough meat for home consumption for a year" Further, he says: "We had a Merry Christmas with lots of turkey, home raised. The cattle wintered well and I have all my seed ready for Spring. With great expectations of another fine crop I am glad I came on a farm but without the asistance of the Soldier Settlement Board I could not be where I am today."

A fourth contribution is by George McLean Munro. While in France he executed a power of attorney authorizing his father to file on a homestead. "Thereafter,' he remarks, "a feeling of proud possession was mine, for somewhere in that new Bonanza called Grande Prairie district I was the holder of 160 acres of virgin land of wonderful fertility."

On discharge he was granted free transportation to Spirit River and passing through Edmonton was qualified by the Soldier Settlement Board to receive the loan benefits of the Act. He reached what he calls "God's Country," after a long ride by train and a tramp through the woods. "Never have I seen such healthy children, fatter cattle, greener or more bountiful crops Here was the land of plenty. Those people were not worried at the high cost of living and their thriving gardens and busy chickens bore evidence of the fact.'

Evicted German Squatter

It did not smite the conscience of Munro very hard to evict a German squatter, who had built a cabin and sunk a well on the property he selected. After some delay, he received his loan and was able to procure farm machinery, four horses and five cows A neighbor gave him twenty loads of straw for services rendered. He put up 14 tons of hay and cut his oat crop for green feed. Building a shack 16'x14' he was ready for winter. During the winter he got out logs and will have his livestock warmly housed next winter.

This is the testimony of hardy pioneers who saw the opportunity of becoming independent land owners and are grateful to the Soldier Settlement Board for the financial assistance which smoothed their paths and made it easy for them to get through the first two seasons. With men of such stern qualities none should fear the final result of the Government's experiment on behalf of returned men.

Mrs. Cynthia Beebe of Vicksburg, 90 years old, has lived through three wars. The Mexican, the Civil and the Spanish, and as she claims to be still young, she may eventually add the World War to her list.

Another thing that perplexes the untrained mind a good deal in these days is the circumstance that while a dollar is worth only 50 cents, you occasionaly run across a man who, in a practical transaction, will not admit that 50 cents is worth a dollar.

Some surprise is expressed that for nearly three weeks we have not mentioned the escape of a prisoner from the Flint jail. We confess the fault, for we should have explained long ago, of course, that we were waiting for another one to be put in.

The agricultural college has undertaken to provide a traveling expert on fruit tree troubles, who will respond to the call of farmers all over the state, and we wonder what disease he will be looking for in the old apple tree when a farmer wires him to come with all possible haste and bring a bulldog or a paddle.

Members of the Cadillac Woman's Club have pledged themselves to reduce the cost of living, by refusing to buy when the selling price of a comodity reaches a certain figure. They are thus falling into line with the rest of us, who some time ago did that very thing, when the price reached a figure where we could neither pay nor obtain credit.

WIT AND WISDOM

After the Guest Had Gone.

"That Miss Chatters is as bad as a parrot."

"Worse, my dear. A parrot doesn't hunt you up and compel you to listen."

Preparing Him

"Hub— "My dear, isn't that dress a trifle extreme,"

Wife— This dress, darling Why, I put this on merely that you may become accustomed to the one I am having made."

Why, Indeed

"Are you for a vacation for every worker?" No. Why should vacations be limited to the few?"

Poor Peck.

Friend——Is your brother still the level-headed, sensible fellow he used to be?

Peck—Yes, he's still a bachelor.

Too Possible

"That was an awful break the parson made at Rounder's funeral."

"What did he say?"

"Said that the dear departed had gone to that undiscovered country from whose burn no traveller returns."

Saved Time.

A rich old fellow refused a friend the loan of $50.

"I did not expect that of you," said the friend bitterly, "and I will never forgive you for the refusal."

"Of course, you won't my dear fellow," said the other; "but if I lent you the $50 you wouldn't have repaid me, and we should have quarrelled about that— so it's as well to get the row over at once, Good morning!"

Extravagance

Buying what you do not need is an easy road to needing what you cannot buy.

POINTED PARAGRAPHS.

Falling in love is often a serious accident.

Girls are true friends when they cry together in sympathy.

It isn't difficult to pose as a financier if you have sufficient money.

It is better to patch up a quarrel today than your face tomorrow.

Unless a woman is capable of earning $1 a day she has no business marrying a man to reform him.

An idle rumor only awaits the chance to get busy.

Fortunate is the man who is able to bear misfortune

When everybody else admits that he is wrong and that you are right the millennium will be in full bloom.

The wings of riches enable some men to fly from their poor relatives.

WIFE DIES BEFORE ARRIVAL

William Newcombe Returns to Mourn After Long Absence.

Ottawa, Feb. 3.—When Mr. William Newcombe, who has been absent twelve years, serving in the British Navy, arrives in Canada, he will receive the news of the death of his wife, which occurred two days before he sailed for Canada. Newcombe had been away for twelve years, and during that time he and his wife never met.

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

BAYER
BAYER

For Colds, Pain, Headache, Neuralgia, Toothache, Earache, and for Rheumatism, Lumbago, Sciatica, Neuritis, take Aspirin marked with the name "Bayer" or you are not taking Aspirin at all.

Accept only "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in an unbroken "Bayer" package which contains complete directions. Then you are getting real Aspirin—the genuine Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years. Now made in Canada.

Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

STRAIGHT TALK REFUTES COMPETITORS' CLAIMS

John J. Smith, of Troy, N.Y., has learned, after many years of newspaper advertising, that just listing meats and giving prices is not all there is in advertising. There was so much that he wanted to tell the public about the way he conducted his business.

One day a customer—this was months ago—said to smith: "Why don't you put in your advertisements the sort of stuff you tell your customers when they come into the store? That would surely bring an increase of trade."

Smith thought it over for a while.

Then he adopted the idea and has been using it ever since. One-half of his advertising space is given over to straight merchandising facts. The other half belongs to his series of "Smith's Gossip." He numbers these talks and they have reached 199 or over up to date.

Unfair competition got after the shop and this "Smith Gossip" shows how the situation was met:

Dear Madam:

> If you have any relatives or close friends who are in the wholesale business, ask them if they know of any retail dealers who can or do retail at wholesale prices. Don't you think it silly and close to an impossibility for a marketman to tell the truth when he says he is offering meats to you at wholesale prices?
>
> Can you figure any possible way that a wholesaler could cover every nook and corner of a city with his deliveries? Can you conceive of any man with an ounce of brains in his head doing business without making a profit on everything to pay his expenses—a fair margin of profit?
>
> I am making a profit on everything I sell and that's why I am in business, and I do not give you crockery with your purchases to cover up any deficiencies in the quality because I'm not built that way.
>

WHITE CATCHES TRADE WITH FISHING TACKLE

If you should come across an old fisherman on a busy corner in your business district, expertly casting an artificial bait to all parts of the compass with almost composure, your curiosity would surely require satisfying before you passed on.

This novel stunt was recently used by the White Hardware Co., of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., to attract attention to its window display of fishing tackle and other seasonable goods.

Large crowds gathered on the corner to watch the casting expert hit various targets a half block or more distant, and interest ran so high that several wagers were made regarding his ability to accomplish some unusually difficult shots.

Salesmen just inside the door "tied up" with the active display by distributing gratis printed copies up-to-the-minute game laws, with the firm's advertisement prominently displayed therein.

That the stunt succeeded was evidenced by the steady stream of visitors, many of whom, on their departure, bore packages of various shapes and sizes, not all fishing tackle, by any means.

A RESERVE SALES FORCE COMES IN VERY HANDY

"Customers do not like to wait They like to be waited on," says a West Philadelphia grocer. "And this is particularly true in hot weather.

"But every merchant knows there are times of the day when many people come in, and other times when comparatively few do. The problem, of course, is to have enough clerks in the store to handle the rush, when it occurs, and not have them standing around idle, eating up wages during the dull periods.

"It's easy for the big stores, with hundreds of employes, to solve the problem by dividing the clerks up into different 'watches,' which overlap, some of the clerks getting lunch hours and others working straight through shorter hours without any

"For my own store, not a very big one, I've worked it out in a different way. A few years ago a girl who worked for me got married. But her household duties, she found, did not take up all her time, so we arranged that she should come into the store a couple of hours just before noon, when the big rush was on. The scheme suited both of us.

"Then, in the afternoon, I have several bright boys available after school hours."

A good many retail stores do their biggest business in the evenings, and there are several instances on record where such stores recruit their extra evening help from the clerks of neighboring shops which close.

CLERKS PAY FOR ADS AND SHARE THE PROFITS

The salespeople of Atwater's store in Atwater, Calif., are now fully convinced that advertising pays.

The manager of the store has arranged with his clerks to use a quarter page in local newspapers as "Our Salespeople's Corner." For example, one clerk will ask to have a certain amount of the space and he prepares copy for the space and pays for the space he uses. Suppose he works in the hardware department and the buyer has marked down a stock of knives can be had at his counter. On the day of the insertion of the advertisement and the day following he is given 10 per cent. commission on all the knives he sells.

The advertisements are so novel and as a rule "different" that few people skip them, the clerks show their copy to all their acquaintances and thus add to their sales, and advertising brings new customers and increased sales in all departments—so every one is satisfied.

A DRUG STORE THAT SELLS SECOND-HAND PIANOS

Some time ago the Woolworth Drug Store in Albany, Ore., took over a music room next door, closing the entrance of that room so that patrons of it have to pass through the drug store. Through this room the store is doing a great phonograph business.

Many of them are sold through the taking in of second-hand pianos. There is for the store a quick sale and good margin in second-hand pianos. Really there are two profits; one when the sale of the phonograph is made and one later when the piano is sold. Many are bought for cash—and they move promptly.

Twice a month the store advertises in the classified columns under the heading, "Pianos Wanted," and thus gets in touch with those who wish to sell. Four instruments were handled in November.

IF BACK HURTS BEGIN ON SALTS

Flush your kidneys occasionally if you eat meat regularly.

No man or woman who eats meat regularly can make a mistake by flushing the kidneys occasionally, says a well-known authority. Meat forms uric acid which clogs the kidney pores so they sluggishly filter or strain only part of the waste and poisons from the blood, then you get sick. Nearly all rheumatism, headaches, liver trouble, nervousness, constipation, dizziness, sleeplessness, bladder disorders come from sluggish kidneys.

The moment you feel a dull ache in the kidneys or your back hurts, or if the urine is cloudy, offensive, full of sediment, irregular of passage or attended by a sensation of scalding, get about four ounces of Jad Salts from any reliable pharmacy and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast for a few days and your kidneys will then act fine. This famous salts is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia and has been used for generations to flush clogged kidneys and stimulate them to activity, also to neutralize the acids in urine so it no longer causes irritation, thus ending bladder disorders.

Jad Salts is inexpensive and cannot injure; makes a delightful effervescent lithia-water drink which all regular meat eaters should take now and then to keep the kidneys clean and the blood pure, thereby avoiding serious kidney complications

HANDICAP IN LOSS OF EYE

Said to Depend Largely on Time of Life at Which the Accident Occurred.

What actual disability is involved in the loss of one eye? Accident insurance companies usually estimate it at 50 per cent, but Sir Arthur Pearson told the British committee on the administration of soldiers' and sailors' pensions that this was absolutely absurd, and suggested 25 per cent as a more reasonable estimate.

It depends largely upon the time of life at which the eye is lost. By binocular vision, says the Lancet, we fuse two slightly dissimilar images of an object, which are focussed upon the two retinas, and this enables us to estimate correctly the relative position or distance of objects. This power, however, is not confined to those of us who possess two good eyes. The man who has been blind in one eye from infancy possesses it in almost equal perfection with the possessor of two eyes. For many other factors unite to compensate for the absence of stereoscopic vision. These are atmospheric and shadow effects, parallax and, above all, memory of what the shape of objects really is, according to knowledge which has been acquired in early years, largely by the sense of touch.

On the other hand, if one who possesses this faculty is suddenly deprived of it he will be considerably handicapped, especially at first. A woman may find she cannot pour from a teapot into a cup without spilling the tea. A hammerman may take some time before he can hit the nail on the head with his former accuracy; indeed, whether or not he can ever attain it again is doubtful.

Electrical Undertakings in Japan.

There are 715 electrical undertakings in Japan, including 625 power plants, 42 electric railways, and 48 companies operating both power plants and tramways. This is an increase of 40 companies over last year. The total amount of invested capital in these enterprises is about $388,000,000, including $193,000,000 for power plants, $22,000,000 for railways, and $173,000,000 for those rendering combined service—an increase of about $8,000,000 over last year.

What of the Sons? They Serve a Church

E. H. GURNEY
H. C. COX
C V. MASSEY

These names (Massey-Cox-Gurney) long stood for strength and aggressiveness and originality in industry and finance in Canada.

But the fathers and grandfathers—founders of the houses—are gone. What of their sons? Mr. C. Vincent Massey, grandson of Hart A. Massey and Bishop Vincent; Herbert C. Cox, son of Senator George A. Cox; and E. Holt Gurney, son of Edward Gurney, are young men who are achieving prominence first in religious, educational and philanthropic activity.

A man of keenness and devotion, Holt Gurney is one of the leaders of the Methodist National Campaign. In addition to taking up energetically his father's work in the insurance field and in the Superannuation Fund treasurership of the Methodist Church, Mr. Cox is treasurer of the Methodist National Campaign.

Although inclined by nature to a scholastic life, Mr. Massey has become vice-chairman of the national executive of the present campaign. He is also the creator of Hart House, the social centre of the University of Toronto, and is directing welfare work in a great manufacturing industry.

The Gift of Fate

By ALVAH JORDAN GARTH

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"It's too bad!" said Lena Dawes to her husband. "Everything looks so alive except the bare floors."

"Won't they be just the thing for the dancing features of our housewarming?" questioned Norman Dawes.

"You see, I've got a good deal of pride," added Lena, "and I want to appear as cosy and comfy as possible, with so many of my old school chums coming."

"Now, don't you get worrying," consoled Norman. "If any remarks are made, just bluntly inform the critics that the high cost of living wouldn't permit new furniture and rugs at the same time."

"Well, we two are happy and contented, anyway, so what does it matter if some ill-natured critic like Mrs. Parmly inspects our belongings with a magnifying glass, and says mean things about our being threadbare and shoddy, and all that? She called me that once, Norman—but I'm not shoddy, am I, dear?"

"You? Why, you're solid pure gold, my pet," cried Norman fervently, and Lena tried philosophically to subdue her vain longings. Their little new home was her idol, and she wanted to have it as perfect as possible during the coming house-warming function.

Fate seemed to enforce a reminder of that coveted parlor rug. It was about noon when footsteps sounded in the hall, and there stood a thin, black-eyed man, dark-skinned and wearing a fez and a gaudy sash. He carried a thick, folded fabric over his arm, and suggested the foreigner and traveling peddler.

"Omar Kluva it is, lady," he said in melodiously appealing accents. They tell you at the Persian consulate that what Omar says is always true. Rugs immaculate, lady—only the best, perhaps high in price, but they last for generations, and for good, honest people like you, payments as you please. Your parlor? Wonderful lady, but my sample exactly fits."

"No, no!" demurred Lena, lifting a detaining hand as her visitor made a movement as if to unroll and display the rug he carried, but with a deft, magicianlike movement, he gave his burden a twirling fling, and it settled down over the parlor floor without a wrinkle.

"Oh, the beauty!" irrepressibly enthused Lena, and her sparkling eyes rested with delight upon the marvel of beauty.

The exquisite colors, the unique pattern blendings, the perfect harmony of the costly rug with draperies and wall decoration seemed suddenly to transform the room into a kingly apartment. Omar Kluva was about to dilate upon its excellencies when, chancing to glance out into the garden, through the open window, he gave a vivid start and his eyes dilated. Lena suspected some play-acting, but with an earnestness that was positively agitated, Omar Kluva gasped out:

"Lady, the flower! The sacred sun rose of Lathay! Here, so far from home, in an alien soil! Oh, lady, can I see nearer? Can I purchase one of the blooms at any price? It is not for myself, though I am overjoyed, but for my sick brother who, wearied and ill in an unfriendly land, is pining for something of his native country."

The quivering finger indicated a high-flowering stalk, a rarity, indeed, which had grown from some seeds given to Norman by a foreign traveling salesman, who had told him that it was an Asiatic novelty. The blossoms were large as a sunflower and, growing in towerlike profusion, resembled a cluster of rich red roses.

The impetuous visitor hurried from the room into the garden. Somewhat puzzled, Lena followed him. He reached the plant and regarded it with eyes of ecstasy.

"Oh, lady!" he said, tremulously fondling one of the blooms, "it will bring home to poor Azif, and its seeds will cure his distemper."

"I will get scissors, and you shall have all the flowers you like," said free-hearted Lena. But when she returned, Omar Kluva and one of the blooms had vanished. Norman came home, to hear the strange story. He was lost in admiration of the rug. Then on a card attached to its underside he traced the words, "Omar Kluva and Brother, 22 River Street."

"We must hunt up this strange visitor of ours, Lena," he said, and after supper they sought the living place of Omar Kluva. He occupied two rooms in a large tenement building, and he salaamed to the ground as Lena appeared.

"See," he said, pointing to a couch on which a man, his prototype, lay, holding in his hand the sun rose bloom. "He sleeps peacefully and with a smile on his face. A sight of the flower alone made him better."

"You forgot to take away your rug—" began Lena, when Omar Kluva made a gesture of extravagant dissent.

"Ah, lady! Like in a fairy story, fate sent you the gift. It is yours, with the love and gratitude of Omar Kluva and his brother."

Witchcraft in History.

The idea of witchcraft is world-old and appeared among primitive peoples. In Europe woman was considered the almost exclusive possessor of magical powers, but in India and Africa witchcraft had been known for years.

Rose to Fame Unaided.

On the 23rd of October in 1825, Pliny Fisk, a zealous American missionary, died at Beyrout in Syria. Born in extreme poverty, Fisk managed to educate himself by his own labors. He was a remarkable linguist and preached in Italian, French, modern Greek, and Arabic. For two years, while he was working to get his education, Fisk subsisted entirely on bread and milk.

Feebleness.

There is nothing which tries our patience and good temper more than feebleness; the timidity, the vacillation, the conventionality, the fretfulness, the prejudices of the weak; the fact that the people can be so well-meaning and so disappointing. It has been truly said that there is no strain so continuous as that of helping a weak friend to climb.—Exchange.

Use for Surplus Munitions.

An interesting suggestion has been made by a prominent Swiss meteorologist and physicist, M. de Quervain of Zurich, to the effect that the vast stores of munitions collected in the belligerent countries during the last four years be utilized to advance the cause of science instead of being merely fired off to make a Roman holiday, or else sunk in deep waters to avoid the latent dangers which reside in them. By detoning these explosives in definite quantities, at definite places, and at definite times whose dates are announced in advance, a possibility would be presented for the solution of many interesting problems in physics and meteorology. The project might advantageously be carried out in this country.

Development of Army Searchlight.

A review of the work of the army engineer corps in the war, first issued by the war department, says that the corps produced a new form of searchlight more powerful than any that had preceded it in any army, with which the Second field army had been partially equipped. "It weighed," the report says, "one-eighth as much as lamps of former design, cost only one-third as much, was about one-fourth as large in bulk, and threw a light 10 per cent stronger than any other portable projector in existence." Still further to perfect the searchlight, our engineers were at work on a remote control when hostilities ceased.—Scientific American.

Honey 92.1 Per Cent of Normal.

The honey crop of the United States was 92.1 per cent of normal on July 1, according to the estimates of the United States department of agriculture. Reports to the bureau of crop estimates warrant the estimate that the yield of surplus honey per colony was 25.8 pounds and that about one-half of the annual product per colony was realized by July 1. The high condition of 92.1 per cent of normal on July 1 this year compares with 66.7 in 1918 and 86.3 in 1917.

CHURCH MERGER IS ARRANGED FOR IN THE UNITED STATES

TWENTY-TWO PROTESTANT DENOMINATIONS TO BE UNITED UNDER COUNCIL

New York, Feb. 3.— As outline of the plan for a merger of approximately 22 evangelical Protestant Church bodies, under the name of the United Church of Christ in America, which is to be acted upon by the Interchurch Council on Organic Union at a three-day conference beginning in Philadelphia tomorrow, was made public here today at the headquarters of the Presbyterian church, the orginators of the movement.

The plan approved by an ad interim committee of 50 Protestant clergymen of various denominations appointed last December carries a preamble declaring faith in God and other fundamentals of Christianity as "a common heritage of the evangelical churches.' It provides (1) complete autonomy in purely denominational affairs; (2) formation of a council, a representative body, meeting biennially, through which the united church will act; (3) representation to be on the basis of two ministers and two laymen for the first 100,000 communicants, and two ministers and two laymen for each additional 200,000, or major fraction thereof; (4) that constituent churches, except as limited by the plan, "shall continue the exercise of their several powers and functions as the same exist under the denominational constitution"; (5) that the council shall harmonize and unify the work of the churches, including missionary activities, evangelism, social service and religiouseducation.

and will apparently have to wait for these until the new Memorial school is completed.

Should the Government raise the compulsory attendance age to 16, it would necessitate the continued use of the old South Central as well as the new school.

4.—Organization and Equipment.

Several changes in organization were effected during the year.

Greater responsibility and authority were placed upon the principals. This should enable them with the cooperation of their staffs to develop in each school a spirit that should mean much for the progress and happiness of the pupils. A good atmosphere, I believe, pervades our schools, yet much can be done to promote still further a spirit of courtesy, uprightness, respect, kindness, and a desire to excell in all they do.

A change was made in the organization of the classes of form II., so that the work in this form may be covered in one year instead of in two as heretofore. Greater attention is being paid to reading and writing in the primer grade and somewhat less to arithmetic in this grade. By these means the average age of our entrance pupils should soon be cut down by one year which is very necessary as educationists generally agree that the best time for pupils to begin the secondary course of study is about 12 or 13 years of age and not 14 which is the average age throughout Ontario.

More suitable reading material should be placed in each school. Children should have abundance of reading matter so that they may form the "reading habit" in school, and that this habit may be directed along right lines.

5.—Examinations

Examinations are receiving much adverse criticism. Their importance has no doubt been over-emphasized in the past but there is a danger of going too far in the opposite direction.

Examinations judiciously used have their advantages. They set a standard for pupils and teacher; they train the pupils to express themselves clearly and to the point, and they are very necessary in grading pupils.

In our schools, examinations have not been unduly emphasized. Promotions are made upon the classwork and examination results of the whole half-year and not upon one final examination. This plan has been followed in the Peterborough Public schools for more than fifteen years.

For a number of years, the Peterborough Entrance Board has passed from 50 to 75 per cent. of all entrance candidates on the recommendations of their principals so that these pupils entered High school without passing any final tests.

6.—Cost of Education.

No uniform system of estimating the cost education per pupil has yet been adopted by the cities or Education Department of Ontario.

Most cities take the total cost of maintenance (not including interest on debentures and expenditures on capital account) and divide this by the total number of pupils enrolled during the year, which gives the cost per pupil, enrolled entrance. By this method the cost per pupil in the Peterborough schools for the year 1919 was $28.32 as the total cost of maintenance was $95,549.97 and the number of pupils was 3374.

The cost per pupil based on the average attendance for the whole year was $39.62. These figures compare favorably with other cities reporting on the same bases.

In a recent report on the cost of education in American cities, it is stated that in these cities the tax for educational purposes amounts to from 1-3 to 2-5 of the total tax rate, and of the expenditures on education from 70 to 85 per cent. of the total went for teachers' salaries.

The United States Federal Government and the State Legislatures are giving liberal grants to further the work of education in all departments. In Ontario the Legislative grants to urban municipalities have been discouragingly small.

Speaking of the cost of education, Sir Robert Falconer in a recent address, among other things, said: "It is the duty of all classes of people to develop themselves intelligently, and there is no safer investment than money spent for the minds of the rising generation, in order that the leisure hours that are going to be part of their lives may be used profitably and wisely."

7.—Medical Inspection.

A real forward step was taken in introducing medical inspection into our Public schools.

The school has been so long identified with the mental, and, in a less degree, with the moral development of children that it is difficult for the general public and even for the teachers to realize that first consideration should be given to the physical welfare of the children.

I am pleased to be able to report that the health of our school children is being safe-guarded and the parents are receiving most valuable reports on the physical condition of their children which must prove of great value and should result in great good to the children.

Through the efforts of the school nurse and the school medical officer our schools were free from infectious and contagious diseases during 1919.

8.—Special Departments.

A.—ART.

The art and drawing work continues both attractive and useful to the pupils. Its educational value is not neglected. This study is valuable because among other things it demands:

(a) Neatness and carefulness on the part of the pupils.

(b) Hand and eye must work in union with the brain.

It also develops a love and appreciation of the beautiful, and stimulates the creative faculty.

B.—MUSIC.

The study of music is growing in interest from years to year. There are abundant evidences of an increased love for singing on the part of the pupils.

The successful concert given in May by the Women Teachers' Guild and the singing at the Exhibition by the childrens' choir give some indication of the work being done in this department.

C.—MANUAL TRAINING.

Interest in the manual training department continues to grow and the only regrettable feature is that the work cannot be expanded until the new school is completed when accommodation for all the classes will be available.

D.—HOUSEHOLD SCIENCE.

The work being done in this department is most satisfactory. One forward step was taken during the year by introducing sewing into all the schools.

Further expansion of this work will have to wait the completion of the new school.

9.—Associated Activities.

The work of the Playground Association, while not coming under my supervision, was most successfully conducted during the summer vacation of 1919. I am pleased to know that it is receiving the sympathy and support of the Board.

The Home and School Associations are doing a useful work. The socialized school is the school of the near future and any organization that will bring parents and teachers more closely together and will tend to make of our school social centres, should receive every possible encouragement.

10.—The Teacher's Task.

The chief educational factors of any community are the home, the school, the church and the press.

On the teacher, however, largely depends the training of the child, and the nature of this training depends very largely upon the personality of the teacher. The good teachers give themselves to their work. This makes great demands upon their nervous energy and they cannot teach well if they are in low spirits.

The liberal encouragement extended by the Board to the Public school staff should mean much for the progress of education in our schools. The public recognition of the importance of their work will increase their teaching power.

The good work done in our schools during the past should lead to better work in the future. This work should not be formal or narrow or limited. It should include the physical welfare of the children, the cultivation of their minds, the inculcation of patriotic and moral ideals, and in some degree, preparation for their life work.

11.—Some Educational Problems.

Some of the most pressing educational problems in urban centres that are demanding attention are:

(1) That still greater care be given to the physical well-being of the boys and girls.

(p) That the present Public school course of study be reduced in content in several of the subjects. The present course is too wide for thorough mastery, and a superficial knowledge is all that can be gained by the average pupil. Greater emphasis must be placed upon thoroughness so that there may be developed in the pupils more power of thought, initiative and self-effort.

(3) That the compulsory attendance age be raised to 16 years.

(4) That a suitable secondary course of study be provided for those boys and girls who purpose entering industrial life.

(5) That provision be made for the proper training of mentally deficient children.

With influenza on the increase in the Peterboro district, 13 members of one family are reported ill.

Peace Incomes and War Prices

TEN years ago a Canadian clergyman was forced by illness to retire from active work. The largest salary he had received in the forty years of his ministry was $1000 and a furnished house. The average did not exceed $800.

On this sum he had maintained and educated his family. He and his wife were given to frequent hospitality. They supported every good cause, and even contributed to the maintenance charges of the Church they served.

A Minister's Budget

By good management and economy they were able to carry an endowment insurance policy, pay an assessment to their Church Superannuation Fund, and accumulate some small savings. When that clergyman was superannuated in 1909, he bought a house. His income during the first year of retirement was as follows:—

The retiring allowance from the Church (being $10 for each year of active work)	$400.00
Interest from investments	100.00
Wedding fees and sundries	75.00
Summer supply work	100.00

Against this total of $675 stood the charge for taxes, insurance and maintenance of the house; say, $75, leaving a net annual income of $600.

The Shrinkage in Values

Before the war, the rise in the cost of living had necessitated careful management of this income. Today, the pressure is too great to be borne. If the statisticians are correct, the dollar of 1913 is worth now in purchasing power about 47c.

Therefore, the real income available to maintain these people of refinement and culture is $282 a year.

Do you say that this is an exceptional case? On the contrary, scores of retired clergymen are not so well situated as this one. Some are tasting the bitterness of destitution, since in a few instances no retiring allowances are provided for.

Veterans of the Cross

These men gave a lifetime of unselfish service for their Church, their country, their neighbors; visiting the sick, burying the dead, comforting the bereaved, preaching Christ crucified, and doing their part in making Canada "God's country." In a time when the payment of pensions to old employes is accepted as a reasonable thing by industrial firms, these veterans deserve more consideration than they have been getting from the Christian people of this Dominion.

The Forward Movements

The Superannuation, Beneficiary or pension funds of the five Communions co-operating in the United National Campaign must be largely increased to yield a reasonable and an adequate income for these old heroes of the pulpit.

They ARE heroes. They make no complaint. They still are found doing all that their strength will permit for the great and noble Cause to which they devoted their lives. They still are enduring hardness as good soldiers of Jesus Christ.

CIVILIANS ASK FOR HELP FOR VETERANS

In addition to the petition which is being signed by those who took part in the Great War, another petition is being circulated amongst civilians for their co-operation. We publish below a copy of this petition. Civilians everywhere are signing it, and if you are a civilian you are asked to add your name to the list and to get others to do the same. If you wish further particulars write to the Grand Army of Canada, 1 Elm Street, Toronto, Ontario.

The Civilian Petition.

To the Honorable the House of Commons, in Parliament Assembled:

The petition of the undersigned Electors of the Dominion of Canada humbly showeth:

That the Dominion of Canada owes a great debt of gratitude to all those who enlisted in the Canadian Services during the Great War.

That those who enlisted in these services were not inspired by mercenary motives to join a mercenary army hired to serve an arbitrary power of the State, but were called forth by the declarations of Parliament to defend their own, and the liberties of the British people, and to maintain those just and equitable laws and constitutions under which peace and happiness have been assured to them by the wisdom and valor of their ancestors.

That those who so enlisted, whenever called upon, have in a true spirit of sacrifice, acquitted themselves to the honor and glory of their country with the result that the exceptional discipline and valor of the Canadian Forces has been recognized as not inferior to that of any other units that served in the war. They never abandoned nor lost any position gained, or entrusted to them; they never failed to gain or carry an objective assigned to them. They were the leading shock or storm troops of the Allies, and during the whole course of the war they never lost a single gun.

That it is recognized that such services cannot be measured in terms of money, and it is not the wish of those who served that it should, still they suffered certain disabilities during their terms of service, which Parliament, as representing the whole people, is in duty bound to remove.

That it is desirable that nothing should be left undone to re-establish those who have served, and to place them in a position equal to that which they might have been expected to attain had they refrained from Active Service and remained at home, pursuing their customary vocations.

That in view of the abundance of wealth and revenues of the country, it is considered that the most effective way in which satisfactory re-establishment can be accomplished will be to grant a cash bonus on the following basis:

Your Petitioners therefore humbly pray:

That in order to re-establish these officers, non-commissioned officers, men and women who have enlisted and served in the Canadian Expeditionary Forces at home or abroad, or who having been resident in Canada before or during the Great War of 1914-1919, served in any branch of the Allied Forces, and to place them in a post-war position to which their services justly entitle them, a cash bonus be given on the following scale, viz.:

$2,000—To officers, N.C.O.'s, men and women who served in France or any other zone of active warfare

$1,500—To officers, N.C.O.'s, men and women who served in Canada.

$2,000—To officers, petty officers and ratings in the Naval Service who were engaged within the official war zone.

$1,500—To officers, petty officers and ratings in the Naval Service who were engaged on lightships and patrol duties.

$1,000—To officers, petty officers and ratings in the Naval Service on duty in Canada only.

That a cash bonus based on the same rating as the above be paid to the parents, wives, children or proven dependents of deceased sailors and soldiers.

And as in duty bound your petitioners will ever pray.

A similar petition is being circulated on behalf of the sailors who took part in the war.

PLAN FOR BUILDING

the Institute should come first. He said a great many class rooms in the Institute would be absorbed by a technical school, and many students are attending the Collegiate because we have no technical school.

Change in Personnel

On motion of Mr. G O. Cemron, Mr. R. W. Cormack of the Quaker Oats, was added to the Advisory Industrial Committee and Mr. J. A. McKone substituted for Mr. Cameron, the latter to retire.

Social Evening

Mrs. W R. Morris invited the members to attend the social evening at the Queen Mary School, Friday. She assured the gentlemen that these gatherings of pupils, parents and teachers in social intercourse are very entertaining, and a splendid program is always provided.

Increases Appreciated

The Collegiate Institute teaching staff wrote, thanking the Board for their generous treatment in increased salaries, coupled with the assurance of best efforts on the teachers' part to produce the maximum of results.

Inspector Mowat also tendered his appreciation of an increase in his salary.

The principals and viceprincipals of the public schools wrote that they felt that the Board had done generously by them in the way of salaries increase, and that all ground for dissatisfaction has been removed.

A similar letter of thanks was to hand from the Women Teachers' Guild.

Withdrew Notice of Motion N

Mr. J. W Worth withdrew his notice of motion that teachers should be allowed leave of absence at time of death among their own or their wive's relatives.

While fully in sympathy with the principles conveyed in the notice of motion, Mr. Worth felt the present time inopportune to bring forward the question of action.

The notice of motion is only withdrawn temporarily.

School Attendance

Public school attendance last month was below the average, due mainly, Inspector Mowat said to the weather being too severere for the younger children to attend school.

SWITCH OFF!

Put aside the Salts, Oil, Calomel, or Pills and take "Cascarets."

Are you keeping your bowels, liver, and stomach clean, pure, and fresh with Cascarets or merely whipping them into action every few days with Salts, Cathartic Pills, Oil, or Purgative Waters?

Stop having a bowel wash-day. Let Cascarets gently cleanse and regulate the stomach, remove the sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver, and carry out of the colon and bowels all the constipated waste matter and poisons so you can straighten up.

Cascarets tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, or cause any inconvenience, and cost so little too.

KEENE

(Special Correspondence.)

Keene, Feb. 4.—Mr. Archie Kempt, who has been quite ill during the past week with pneumonia, is recovering nicely.

The medical health officer has ordered the Mathers' Corners school closed on the account of the epidemic of the Spanish influenza.

OMEMEE MAN VICTIM OF SERIOUS ACCIDENT

FRED BENT STRUCK ON HEAD BY FLYING FRAGMENT FROM SAW

(Special Correspondence.)

Omemee, Feb. 4.—A very serious accident happened in this village on Saturday afternoon, when a sawing bee was in progress at the residence of Mr. William Rehill, a stick flew from the saw and struck Mr. Fred Bent, one of the workers, in the head, crushing in a portion of the skull. The injured man was carried into the house and Dr. Earl was soon on the scene. For a time grave fears were entertained. Dr. McCullough, of Lindsay, who has had a wonderful experience in France, was called in consultation, also a nurse, and an operation was underway before three hours had passed. A small silver plate was put in, and although Mr. Bent is still in a very critical condition and it will be impossible to move him to his home for three weeks yet, bright hopes are now entertained for his recovery.

Personal Mention.

Mrs. Murphy was a visitor to Peterborough on Saturday.

Miss Susie Clarke, who is nursing in Millbrook, paid a brief visit to her home here on Saturday.

Mr. Mills, inspector of Continuation schools, inspected the local institution last week.

Sporting Notes.

The curling games are becoming more exciting than ever. A very thrilling match was played Tuesday afternoon between the U.F.O. rink and the Business Men. The rinks were as follows:

U. F. O.	Business Men
R. J. Jory	J. B. Jarrell
B. Q. Dench	C. S. Tanner
T. Braden	J. W. Ridpath
L. Payne	F. X. Fortier
Skip......14	Skip.....11

As both skips have won a game each the deciding game will likely be played this week, for which a suitable prize will be given the winners.

A close and exciting game was played between Langley's and Crawford's rinks. The rinks were as follows:

Geo. Hilliard	J. B. Jarrell
R. J. Jory	N. A. Moore
T. Braden	J. M. Simpson
O. A. Langley	T. Crawford
Skip......13	Skip......15

The standing of the rinks in the club is as follows:

	Won	Lost

Hockey League Formed.

A hockey league was formed last week composed of the following teams: High School, Grove School, Oddfellows and Tigers. The first game will be played Tuesday evening when the Grove team will play the High School, followed by a battle between the Oddfellows and Tigers. The first game will begin at 7:30.

Worked for Lakefield.

Rev. J. C. Strickland was in Peterborough last week attending the January session of the County Council, when he secured the following grants for the village: $300 for the Agricultural Society, $200 for roads, $100 for the Lakefield G.W.V.A., and $50 for medical officer at the House of Refuge.

Veterans' Entertainment.

On Thursday, February 5th, Mr. Walter McRaye, the soldier lecturer, will give an entertainment under the auspices of the local branch of the G. W. V. A. The subject of the lecture will be "With the Ambulance." Mr. McRaye was sergeant in charge of recruiting in No. 2 Military District, went overseas in charge of a draft, and proceeded immediately to France, and was with the 2nd Canadian Field Ambulance at Vimy Ridge, Hill 70, Passchendaele, Fresnoy, Alleiux, Lens and Arras. He was attached to No. 1 Canadian General Hospital during the many air raids of May, 1918.

The Soldiers' News Club will hold entertainments in the village this week at the Queen street theatre on February 10 and 11 in aid of the Armenian Relief Fund.

SAGE TEA TURNS GRAY HAIR DARK

It's Grandmother's Recipe to Bring Back Color and Lustre to Hair.

That beautiful, even shade of dark, glossy hair can only be had by brewing a mixture of Sage Tea and Sulphur. Your hair is your charm. It makes or mars the face. When it fades, turns gray or streaked, just an application or two of Sage and Sulphur enhances its appearance a hundredfold.

Don't bother to prepare the mixture; you can get this famous old recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients for a small cost, all ready for use. It is called Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound. This can always be depended upon to bring back the natural color and lustre of your hair.

Everybody uses "Wyeth's" Sage and Sulphur Compound now because it darkens so naturally and evenly that nobody can tell it has been applied. You simply dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through the hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair has disappeared, and after another application it becomes beautifully dark and appears glossy and lustrous.

GOOD-BYE DYSPEPSIA

No More Gurgly Brash, "Lump of Lead," Bad Digestion, Heartburn or Such Troubles.

The man who can't help making faces at his stomach, the man or woman with a grouchy digestion, or with downright dyspepsia need fret no more.

The heaviest, richest dinners, the most unspeakable quick lunches, all can be taken care of without imposing on the stomach. A scientific digestive can do the digesting where the stomach either did not do it before or did it very imperfectly.

This is why the use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets has become so universal among those who suffer from indigestion and dyspepsia.

Take one of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets after your next meal and if you are given to belching, sour risings, fermentation, heavy lumpy feeling in the stomach, indigestion, dyspepsia, loss of appetite or other such digestive derangement, you will find at once a remarkable improvement.

They arouse the gastric juices and give the stomach the rest it needs before it can again be healthy and strong.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets are for sale at all druggists at 50c a box.

INGENIOUS TRAP FOR WOLVES

Device Employed by Eskimos Results Frequently in Practical Wiping Out of Entire Pack.

Wolves are a plague in Alaska, where the natives are commonly obliged to store their food supplies on platforms erected seven or eight feet above the ground, thus putting them beyond the animals' reach.

Most ingenious of all wolf traps is one of extreme simplicity used by the Eskimo. It consists merely of an iron spearhead—or a suitably shaped blade of chipped flint will serve—which is set point upward in the ice, so as to be frozen securely in position. A chunk of seal blubber is wrapped about the spearhead or flint blade and tied fast.

Alaskan wolves are marvelously keen of scent. It does not take them long to find the attractive bait, about which a snarling pack of them will gather, licking and chewing at the blubber. Presently one and another of them cut their tongues on the sharp edges of the flint or iron. Blood runs. They do not know that it is their own blood, and the taste of it drives them crazy.

Presently they begin to attack each other, the weaker being overcome by the stronger. Blood flows in streams over the ice, and soon all are killed or badly wounded. The pack is nearly destroyed, only a few perhaps being able to limp away and nurse their hurts.

Christening Customs.

The rural English people have some curious superstitions regarding the christening of infants. The manner in which a child is carried into the church is supposed to affect the character and disposition in after-life. The nurse, or whoever carries the baby, should enter the church with the right foot, stepping briskly and dancing the baby in her arms, so that the little one shall grow up cheerful and light-hearted.

Another old-fashioned theory is that if a boy is baptized in the water previously used for a girl he will grow up feeble and effeminate; while if the case is reversed the baby girl will grow up lacking in womanly attributes. In every country white is employed for all baby garments, but where a little color is introduced the superstitious mother takes care that it is a lucky shade. Red is said to be a lucky color, pink and blue are also favorable, but green, the color of jealousy, and yellow symbolise strife.

Newspaper Men "Struck."

Probably the first "strike" ever called at a convention of the American Federation of Labor, and against that body, was called by the newswriters assigned to cover the sessions. During the course of the convention one of the delegates made criticisms of the way in which the convention news was handled. The newspaper men immediately filed out of the hall and sent word to the convention that they had gone on strike. While certain delegates were branding the newswriters as "Bolsheviki," others insisted that they form a committee and present their demands. The demands were formulated and presented. The convention granted them by acclamation, and the reporters were given an ovation when they filed back to their desks. So it was settled.

He Saw Very Well.

I had employed a piano tuner for several years who was blind, writes a correspondent. One day he brought another man when he came to tune the piano, asking my permission to teach him some things about piano tuning. I left them in the parlor by themselves and when they had finished, I was dressing to go out.

Knowing they were blind and rather than keep them waiting, I went in to pay the tuner in rather scant attire. I remarked to the stranger, "It is nice for you blind people that there is work like this for you to do."

"Oh, madam," he replied, "I'm not blind; in fact, I see very well."

I nearly died and fled from the room.

From a One-Armed Man.

The triumph over the disability of a lost limb is not only exemplified in the case of the one-legged cricketer. "There is no need to be downhearted, about a lost leg or arm," writes a correspondent. "I have lost my left arm and can do practically everything that a man with two arms can.

"I can tie my tie as neatly and quickly as I ever did, lace my boots, ride a horse and bicycle, drive a horse and trap, drive a motor, play billiards (using a block of weighted wood with three groves in it as a rest), golf, hockey, tennis and swim quite easily."—London Chronicle.

Practical Sympathy.

James Shaffer of Uniontown, Pa., struck a foreigner who made disloyal remarks and was fined $10, but the money was paid by ten members of the local Christian church, who on their way home happened to step in the burgess' office. Each of the ten planked $1 down on the desk of the official and the case was ended.

The House of Eddy

A Factor in Canadian Life

IT is probable that not a day goes by in which the House of Eddy does not make life more comfortable and convenient for you. Eddy Products—Eddy Conveniences—are woven into the very fabric of Canadian life. FAMOUS PHOTOPLAY BILLED FOR THAT POPULAR PLAYHOUSE THURSDAY

Small town life was too dull and uninteresting for Betty Standish when she attained her twenty first birthday and came into possession of her father's fortune. The big city called to her and she answered its summons. But in the same large city dwelt a young man who was surfeited with the gay life and the endless grind of social obligations to which he was forced by his position. So while Jerome Kent left his sumptuous bachelor quarters in New York to seek solace in the mountains, Betty moved into his apartments, the transaction being accomplished by a valet who saw a chance to earn an "honest dollar. Circumstances cause Kent to return home unexpectedly, and he is perplexed to find evidence of feminine habitation all over his bachelor chambers. The plot thickens a few moments later, when Betty and her aunt return from the theatre, find a strange man in the apartment, and mistake him for a burglar. And thus begins an almost endless chain of amusing complications and thrilling adventures involving society matrons and debutantes, crooks, real and imaginary, and all the rest of the motley array of characters that appear in "Under Suspicion," the Universal photoplay, announced for Thursday at the Empire Theatre.

"Under Suspicion," features Ora Carew, supported by Forrest Stanley, Charles Clary, Frank MacQuarrie, Blanche Rose, Frank Thompson, Burwell Hamrick, Andrew Waldron and Cora Drew. It was written by Mildred Considine and produced by William C. Dowlan.

RAILWAY RATES GOING UP.

C.P.R. President Intimates as Much to Canadian Club.

Winnipeg, Man., Feb. 4.—Addressing the Canadian Club here, E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co., gave a plain intimation of a coming increase in rates. He declared that Canadian railways were now operating under vastly increased expenses owing to the existing conditoins, and that in order to meet this heavy operation cost, more would have to be obtained for service.

In Dubious Garb

By RALPH HAMILTON

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

"Dear, dear!" mourned and pitied Alvin Prince, and stood looking down at a human form lying prone upon the straw-littered floor of an abandoned shelter shed at a remote corner of his farm.

He was a genial old soul, this pleasant-faced, kind-hearted deacon, selectman and the prop and stay of sterling uprightness and dignity in the community. He had been passing the shed, when he fancied that a groan proceeded from within. He stepped across the threshold and, startled and puzzled, gazed down at the recumbent figure. It was that of a young man with a refined cast of features, his eyes closed in sleep. Two further discoveries of the farmer brought a serious expression to his face. One hand was abrased and bleeding, and a cut in the head showed a second recent injury.

"A convict—an escaped convict," soliloquized Prince. "Poor fellow! And he's badly hurt. What is my duty in the case? He looks likely, and perhaps a mother, a sister is worrying about him. There isn't anything of the criminal in that face. Shall I protect him?"

The decision was quickly made. Prince proceeded across the farm, got to the house, made up a bundle and, hitching up a horse to the old family carryall, started back the route he had come.

"Mother and Zelda away," he soliloquized, "and I don't see Zeph anywhere around. That just suits me."

Zeph Barnes was the handy man about the farm. At that moment he was making his way past the old shed. His coarse lips puckered as he discovered its inmate. He scented a mystery as he saw Prince returning. He wondered if there was any reward offered for the apprehension of convicts and, climbing to the shallow loft in the structure, waited for developments.

These materialized with the arrival of Prince. The latter proceeded to disrobe the stranger. He made a bundle of the incriminating convict garb and thrust it into an old manger, attired him in a suit of his own, lifted him into the wagon and drove to the house. He got his involuntary guest to bed, applied lotions to his wounds, and wondered what his story would be. When consciousness was restored, Alvin Prince gently inquired if the injuries were painful.

"I think only a stumbling fall," replied his guest. "Let me see, I was—Where was I? What was I doing? I'm all dazed. My name is Wilbur Thorne. I have a home, but I left it for wandering a long time ago. I've kept going with all kinds of jobs. You must be a pretty kind sort of a man to take in a stranger this way."

"Oh, that is all right," declared Prince lightly, and felt a certain delicacy about referring to his convict suspicions.

Mrs. Prince and her daughter Zelda came home two days later from a week's visit to a relative, to find the interesting-looking stranger insisting upon doing some light work about the farm. They were so used to the charitable impulses of the husband and father, that they did not question him when he told them that he was taking care of his visitor until he got on his feet again.

His frank, engaging ways won the favorable opinion of Zelda and her mother, and as the weeks drifted on Wilbur Thorne became so useful and so happy that Prince had not the heart to either question him or turn him away.

He had not noticed that a bond of mutual liking was being cemented between the two young people, but Zeph Barnes, himself secretly in love with Zelda, though the latter detested him, was witness to an interview between Thorne and herself when the latter confessed his deep affection for the farmer's daughter. Just before dusk that evening, just as the family were seated on the lawn, Mr. Prince reading, Mrs. Prince at her knitting and Zelda and Thorne looking over a pictorial magazine, there appeared Zeph Barnes and a man whom the farmer at once recognized as the town marshal.

"There's the man," spoke Zeph, pointing to Thorne. "He's an escaped convict, and here—" and he tore open a bundle under his arm, revealing the convict's garb in which Prince had first seen Thorne.

"Why! you give me a link in the past always a mystery to me," exclaimed Thorne abruptly, arising to his feet with an animated expression on his face. "I wore that suit the day I got hurt. Where did you ever get it, Zeph? You see, Mr. Prince, my last job was playing the convict for some movie people over beyond the village. I took a casual stroll in it while waiting for my part in the scenario, had a bad fall, and—and I guess you can tell how you found me."

Zeph drew back crestfallen. The marshal, however, insisted on some close questioning, and Wilbur Thorne was forced to tell that he was the son of a wealthy man with whom he had quarreled to become a wanderer. A repentant truant, now that he had won Zelda's love, he was willing to ask parental forgiveness, and a week later Alvin Prince was glad to accept Wilbur Thorne as his son-in-law.

The herring fisheries near Cape Breton for the latter part of the year 1919 were almost a total failure.

ILL-FITTING COLLARS

The Cause of Sore Shoulders in Farm Horses.

The Skin Scalds and the Hair Falls Out — Abscesses or Tumors May Form — Treatment Suggested — Planting Field Beans.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

WHEN a horse has been properly fitted for hard work, the collar fits properly and the driver observes reasonable precautions to avoid trouble, it is seldom that shoulder trouble occurs, but where the horse has not been prepared for work, or the collar does not fit properly, or the driver is careless, trouble is very liable to occur. When the horse has a long coat of hair in the spring it is good practice to clip the parts with which the collar comes in contact, as a preventive measure. In fact, in many cases it is wise to clip the whole horse.

Shoulder troubles are usually caused by ill-fitting collars, but in horses not accustomed to work, may occur even when the collar fits properly.

The most common shoulder trouble is practically a form of scalding. The skin becomes inflamed and tender, the hair drops out, and if work be continued the parts become raw. This is often due to neglect in cleaning the face of the collar regularly, also thoroughly cleaning the shoulders regularly, and failure to remove the collar at meal times to allow the shoulders and collar face to become dry, and then clean them before putting the collar on again. For treatment, a lotion made of one ounce each of acetate of lead and sulphate of zinc in a pint of cold water, is probably the best application. This should be applied three or four times daily, and, if possible, the animal should be given rest or worked in a breast collar.

Abscesses or tumors may form on the shoulder as a result of pressure of the collar. One form of this trouble appears suddenly. A swelling of considerable size is noticed. It is not very tender or sore to pressure, and is found to be soft and fluctuating when handled. This is called a "serous" abscess. It contains a thin fluid, about the consistency of water called "serum" which is situated just beneath the skin.

Another form appears more slowly. The horse evinces pain when pressure is put upon the shoulder, and examination reveals a swelling. The animal can work and evinces little pain, except for a short time after he is put to work, until after he is allowed to stand for a few minutes. The soreness and enlargement gradually increase, and while the swelling may not appeal to the touch, as solid and hard as at first, it has not the fluctuating condition of the serous abscess. The walls are thicker. This contains pus or matter, and is called a purulent abscess. Treatment in either case consists in making a free incision through the walls of the abscess at the lowest part, to allow free escape of the contents, and then flushing out well three or four times daily until healed, with a five per cent. solution in water, of one of the coal tar antiseptics or carbolic acid. In this case the patient must have rest, or be worked in a breast collar.

Another condition from like causes is a fibrous tumor. This forms slowly, is more or less sore, in fact acts much the same as a purulent abscess. In some cases it is not possible to diagnose definitely between a tumor and a purulent abscess with very thick walls, without exploring. A small incision is made right into the centre of the enlargement. If even a very little pus be present it will yield to the treatment for an abscess, but if no pus be present the only treatment is dissection. The whole fibrous growth must be carefully dissected out, the wound stitched, except a portion at the bottom to allow escape of pus which forms during the healing process, and treated as an abscess. — Dr. J. H. Reed, O. A. College, Guelph.

Planting Field Beans.

Of the various kinds of field beans the greatest demand is for the Common White, of which there are several named varieties such as Early Wonder, Scholfield, Elliott, etc. It is important to secure an early strain, to test the germination, and to plant early in the month of June.

Field beans are grown successfully on a great variety of soils. They do particularly well on fertile land which may be classed as loam, sandy loam, gravelly loam, or gravelly clay. All soils for bean production should be well underdrained either naturally or artificially. With proper drainage even clay soils have produced beans satisfactorily in regard to both yield and quality. Beans do particularly well after clover or grass sod and are frequently followed by winter wheat in some localities and by spring grains in other sections. It is of great importance to have the land thoroughly cultivated and a seed bed which is both moist and mellow.

In those sections where field beans are grown extensively, bean planters are sometimes employed. On the majority of farms, however, the beans are planted with an ordinary grain drill by using every fourth tube. Three pecks per acre of the pea beans are usually planted on average soil. If the soil is particularly rich, however, the quantity might be reduced slightly. When the tops of the growing crop are dry the beans should be cultivated occasionally throughout the season to destroy the weeds and to form a fine surface mulch.—Dr. C. A. Zavitz, O. A. College, Guelph.

Roots, cabbage, fine alfalfa hay, or even a little silage, will be relished very much by sows, and will keep them in good health.

Dressed Beef.

Some soldiers at camp spied a cow in a nearby field and after capturing her with the intention of having a drink of milk on the owner they discovered to their disgust that she was dry.

A disappointed doughboy leveled his gun at her, saying: "She'd look better to me as dressed beef."

"Give you $5 if you turn the trick." said another. "It's a go," said the first one. "I'll turn her into dressed beef before morning and claim that $5."

None of us thought he meant it, but in the morning he claimed the money, saying the cow was now dressed beef. We had to be shown, so were taken to the field, and there, sure enough, the cow was dressed. She was careering about the field in a complete outfit of the kitchen police.—Exchange.

Avenues of Communication.

Still a new means of communication has been devised. No longer is man to be dependent on the air for the rapid transmission of messages; for, a new invention—modeled afloat a barge in San Diego bay, California—has made possible the sending of messages through air and water. And, appropriately enough, the test of proof came when the United States Navy department sent a message from Annapolis, Maryland, to the British Admiralty, telling, in this manner, of the arrival of the R-34 in America. Bold adventurer had conquered the air, indeed, but not long before another group, less spectacular, harnessed the sea and land to their own particular requirements.

Keep Children in School.

"Children should stay in school as long as possible because education means better jobs," the federal children's bureau urges. "Boys and girls who go to work at the end of grammar school rarely get good jobs. The work they find to do is usually unskilled; it offers little training or chance for advancement. When they are older they find they are still untrained for skilled work that offers a future. Education means higher wages. Many boys and girls when they leave school find work that offers a high wage for a beginner. But these wages seldom grow because the work requires no training. A position with a future and steadily increasing wages requires school training."

WASTE COUNTRY MADE RICH

Enormous Rubber Plantation in Sumatra Developed by American Industry in Ten Years.

Perhaps the most surprising thing about the enormous rubber plantation that covers nearly 100,000 acres in Sumatra, recently described by a writer in Commerce and Finance, is that less than ten years ago one could have traveled these acres without seeing a rubber tree. The land was acquired by an American company, and the rubber trees followed. Today they count up to something like 5,000,000, tended by an army of about 16,000 laborers, most of whom come from the neighboring island of Java. The land rises to a slight eminence overlooking the sea of rubber trees which stretches for miles in every direction, with here and there glimpses of the fine roads over which motor cars travel the plantation on business or carry passengers between the bungalows of the estate managers. Sixty-five miles of narrow-gauge railway run through this remarkable rubber forest, with every tree raised in response to the twentieth century commercial demand for rubber.

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.
Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.
National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.
Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

Born to Fighting.

Mons began fighting. Caesar founded it as a camp and a short time later Cicero's brother sustained a siege by Ambiorix. Its most famous siege was in 1572, delivered by Frederic of Toledo, one of the distinguished generals of Alba. The siege lasted from the end of June to the middle of September; sorties and relief were vain; the town capitulated under the most honorable conditions. In 1691 the Marechal de Luxembourg attacked the town, inflicted great damage and forced surrender. In 1709 Marlborough and Prince Eugene attacked and carried the town after a siege of 126 days. In 1746 the Prince de Conti laid successful siege. In 1792 Mons was the first fruit of the republican victory at Jemappes and in 1794 the Austrians were subjected to a crushing defeat.—New York Sun.

The Rose of Sharon.

In Asia the rose of Sharon is considered the emblem of resurrection. Throughout Syria, Judea and Arabia it is regarded with the profoundest reverence. The leaves that encircle the blossoms dry and close together when the season of blooming is over, and the stalk, withering completely and drying in the shape of a ball, is carried by the breeze to great distances. In this way it is borne over the sandy deserts until, touching some moist place, it clings to the soil, where it immediately takes fresh root and springs to life and beauty again.—London Mail.

That Explained It.

"I say, I have just come from my landlord's, and—would you believe it?—I had the greatest difficulty in the world to get him to accept a little money from me."

"Nonsense! And why, pray?"

"Well, because he wanted a lot!"—Liverpool Mercury.

VICTORY TO SUPERIOR RACE

Teuton Hosts at the Marne Overwhelmed by Men Possessed of Love of Liberty.

The following passage is from an article entitled "The New Men and the Old World," in Inter-American. The writer, Jesus Semprum, is a noted Venezuelan man of letters, the author of many biographical, historical and literary works. He employs the allegorical style of writing.

"Therefore, men died by the thousand, from Nieuport to the black Vosges," writes Mr. Semprum. "An advance here, another there, thousands of prisoners, hundreds of cannon; but the channel ports continued to be denied them; Amiens and Chalons and Paris unattainable in the distance. The tired chargers went so far as to drink the fateful waters of the Marne.

"Suddenly the wind of wrath blows against the monarch's hosts. In the front rank fight with skillful daring the new men, like veterans seasoned in long campaigns. Without knowing the whips of the sergeants, the destroyers of free will, without having lived cowered by the yoke of minute and iron discipline, without calling themselves the favorites of the Most High, Pershing's men pursue the veteran conquerors of the world and throw them back upon the Moselle, astound them with their numbers, their strength, their simple and serene valor. They went forward at a quick and measured pace, and under their feet the soil of France quivered in the joy of liberation.

"The new men had arrived in time!"

YOUNG WIFE'S FIRST LESSON

Mrs. Newlywed Evidently Beginning to Learn Her Household Duties From the Ground Up.

The newly married man came home from his office happy. He was greeted as newly married men are greeted, with a kiss, and this, in fashion of his kind, he returned with interest.

"Of course we shall go out to dinner, darling," he remarked.

"Yes, dearest," replied the happy young woman.

"But one of these days we shall have a dinner here, darling, shall we not, of your own cooking?"

"Of course, dearest," she replied, "I am getting along famously with my cooking lessons."

"And it will be such a change," he continued, "from the monotonous fare of the restaurants."

There were more kisses.

"Did you take cooking lessons today, darling," he asked.

"Yes, dearest."

"And what did you learn?"

There was pride in her tone as she replied. "Today, dearest, I learned how to boil water."—Ohio Observer.

How the Mint Buys Gold.

The mint buys gold in any form, whether coined or not, when presented in sums to the value of $50 or more. The face value of coins is not considered, only their weight and purity. An equivalent amount of lawful money is given in exchange. Theoretically, the gold is coined and handed back to the owner without charge. In practice, as a matter of convenience and to save time, the mint simply buys the gold and pays its full coinage value—that is what it will be when coined.

The Cinnamon Creek Trick

By E. E. CROWELL

(Copyright.)

Biggs was the greenest-looking man that ever faced old Bill Williams, and did not flinch. On the occasion when he floated into the stuffy little Rock Gulch station and draped his spirituelle form across one end of Bill's desk, that gentleman removed his visual hardware and snorted in his wrath.

"And who in Tophet may you be?" howled old Bill, his whiskers twitching like an angry cat's.

Biggs smiled a cherubic smile and picked up one of Bill's letters with a casual air of interest.

"You don't know me, grandpa?" he remarked quizzically, as if in doubt.

"Pht! Pht! You—darn you—who—say, are you Biggs?" exploded the wrathy Bill.

"Biggs and me are the same gent, sir," responded the smiling visitor.

Williams surveyed the elongated figure with contempt rampant on his features.

"Well, you are a lociee, ain't you? You don't look able to sling hash—let alone lightning. Know what you're up against, don't you?"

"No, and what's more, I don't give a dang."

"Well, my ducky—my little insult to civilized society—you are billed to handle that Cinnamon Creek trick, and if you're not scalped by them blood-drinkin' dagoes inside of a week you can draw your pay. You hear?"

"I ain't at all hard of hearing, pa!" said Biggs.

Williams grew red, then purple and looked about to explode. At last he dashed fiercely from the room and slammed the door with a bang.

For a month Biggs had kept strict tab on the goings and comings of six sand trains and six hundred Italians. His office, a dismantled box car, was by no means prepossessing, but small defects were lost on Biggs.

Back of him stretched the huge pit, down into whose shifting depths locomotives jerked long strings of flats, which, passing beneath the magic of a row of furious steam shovels, emerged freighted with sand. Two hundred yards to the west was the Cinnamon trestle and beyond that the track melted away upward toward Peak City, a dozen miles as the crow flies, up the shoulder of the divide.

Biggs regarded the swarthy sons of the South with distrust, but he was too wise to tell them of the fact.

One cheerful incident had broken his monotony mercifully. That was when a lengthy and fervent reprimand, direct from a real roll-top desk, and covering the Williams incident, arrived. Biggs sighed, folded the sheet neatly, and stored it away in a secret pocket aft. Then he picked up the "Sleuth Library," opened to the chapter headed "The Plot Thickens" and got down to business.

It was now the third day that he had abstracted the reprimand and carefully perused its contents. Biggs was enjoying it to the full. He sat in the car, heels cocked up, holding the missive at arm's length before his eyes. Then he started up, listening. He heard a sound like the vigorous puffing of a locomotive, but yet unlike it.

Dropping down from the car, Biggs set off toward the trestle and presently came in sight of an engine, three cars, and a steam driver calmly settling down to work on a big pile as though dropped from fairyland.

Biggs recalled wiring down concerning the condition of that east end, but had never expected more than a visit from a red-shirted Irishman with sledge and wedges. Here was a pile driver in full blast.

Biggs strolled back to his car, sat down and resumed reading the thriller. He had made stirring progress and was within a lap or two of the bloody handed villain when a piercing yell arose from the direction of the trestle.

Biggs dropped the book and leaped to the car door.

As he rushed around the curve that hid the trestle from view he saw a strange sight.

Running, crawling, scrambling across the trestle were the Italians, each armed with pick or shovel and making desperate efforts to close the distance that intervened between them and a group of seven men in blue jumpers who fled for dear life up the sinuous grade toward Peak City.

Wholly unable to grasp the meaning of it all Biggs' instinct turned him about and he sped for his instrument. He flung himself inside the car and reached for the key. But someone was calling him. He stabbed at the lever and answered.

"Runaway—sixteen loaded flats—clear away!"

That came from Peak City. Biggs jumped up and glanced at his watch by habit. The next he knew he was racing up the track toward the deserted driver train.

"Fools! Cowards! Knaves!" he groaned.

With a fierce pounding at his neck he mounted the locomotive at a bound and glanced back at the towering derrick. At sight of it came his first feeling of fear. If he only knew how to take it down, he thought! Then, with a shiver of intense anguish, he saw that the train was trapped by a half-driven pile!

With a cry that was half a whine he seized an ax that entered his range of vision and the next instant was blindly clambering among the brace timbers of the bridge.

"Chuck! Chuck!"

The ax, swung by fear-nerved arms, ate into the wiry spruce.

The eighteen-hundred pound hammer resting on its crest was exerting its power. Biggs paused a brief instant in suspense—then the ax circled viciously and bit the wood.

"Crack-k!" Biggs shifted his foot to the angle of a brace and swung a last desperate stroke square at the bending fiber. Then he leaped away as pile and hammer plunged resistlessly down the clayey slope.

The next moment he was staring stiffly at the crumpled body of an Italian lying among the tools at the foot of the derrick and he knew the reason for the mutiny.

Then he observed his box-car station slide by and awoke to realization. A faint roar from far up the mountain spurred him on and he rushed forward.

He was scrambling over the coal pile to the engine cab when he felt the sudden interruption in flight that told of the application of air brakes. He glanced up and beheld a man handling the levers in the cab, not ten feet distant.

"Open 'er up! Let 'er out!" yelled Biggs, excitedly waving his arms toward the mountain behind.

"Guess not! She's running away—or was!"

"Sixteen loose flat cars back of us—sixteen!" screamed Biggs, as he slid bodily into the cab and struggled to his feet.

"Hell!" ejaculated the stranger. Then he pulled a lever way over.

"Who're you?" shouted Biggs.

"Goff, fireman, fresh from the water tank!"

His dripping garments corroborated his statement amply and forced a smile to Biggs' face.

Behind them the driver waved and swung in smoky circles.

"We're doing all she'll stand!" the fireman called.

"Guess we're tagged, all right!"

"What?"

"They're going to catch us!"

"We'll win by about six car lengths! Poke the fire!" he called.

"Hurrah! Man at switch!" shouted the fireman an instant later.

"That's Bill, bless his heart!"

"Homestretch!" called Goff, as he threw down the shovel.

The roar of the two catapults was now one thunderous roll. The tension grew almost overpowering and the men gripped their breath in expectation of a disastrous finish.

Four—six—eight long seconds ticked by and then the stiff figure of old Bill Williams flashed by. The fireman's face broke into a smile as he seized the lever.

Sizz-zz! went the brakes on the huge wheels and then, in a cloud of sand and dust, the fast-flying flat cars careened by—on the siding.

Another moment and the pile-up at the bump end of the dead switch occurred. Biggs and Goff dashed through a hail of sand and brought the train to a standstill a bare hundred yards beyond.

"Fine man, Bill!" he remarked earnestly, and the recipient grunted with grim pleasure.

Biggs was sent for and left on the first train. Confronting the roll-top desk, he exhibited the blisters on his palms, shook the sand from his shoes, and stood up bravely under the friendly pats from the rich and powerful.

Then they sent him back to the sand pit—just to get his grip.

Education in China.

China is still in the transition period in education. The modern school has not entirely replaced the ancient methods, with large emphasis on the classics, verbal memorizing and the writing of the essay. The conception of the need of practical education is on the increase. The minister of agriculture in Peking said when calling men for the forestry division, "I want men who can grow trees, not essays."

BELLS MAKE SPLENDID MUSIC

Sweet Sounds Have Moved Many Great Writers to Record Their Tribute of Delight.

The lovely carillons of bells in Belgian towers have inspired many a poet, many an author. Rosetti, Stevenson, Thackeray, Thomas Hardy, Victor Hugo, Longfellow, Macdonald, Henry VanDyke and others have written of the music of the carillon. The 45 bells in the tower of St. Rombold at Mechlin, or Malines, which were heard by Victor Hugo in 1845, gave birth to a poem which tradition says he wrote with his ring upon the window pane of a little inn in the middle of the night. The theme is a description of the wonderful carillon music at Malines. Another writer, William Gorham Rice, who heard the great master of bells, Josef Denyn, play on the carillon of St. Rombold, has given a splendid description of the effect of this music upon him. He says:

"Sometimes in winter, after icicles have formed, there comes a thaw, and one by one they tumble down gently at first, then bolder in a mass they come till, like an avalanche they crash down with a mighty roar. All of this the music suggested. It was low, it was loud, it was from one bell, it was from chords of bells, it was majestic, it was simple. And every note seemed to fall from above, from such heights that the whole land heard its beauty."

Seven Wonders of the World.

Three lists are given of seven wonders. What are known as the seven wonders of the ancient world were: Pyramids of Egypt, Pharos of Egypt, hanging gardens of Babylon, temple of Diana at Ephesus, statue of Jupiter by Phideas, mausoleum of Artemisia, Colossus of Rhodes. Those of the middle ages were: Coliseum of Rome, catacombs of Alexandria, great wall of China, Stonehenge, leaning tower of Pisa, porcelain tower of Nankin, mosque of St. Sophia in Constantinople. One list of the seven wonders of the new world are: Wireless telephone, airplane, radium, antiseptics and antitoxins, spectrum analysis, X-ray.

Work Involved in Making Rifle.

Nine hundred and ninety-seven cutting tools alone are required in manufacturing a modern rifle. The twist drill is one of the busiest of these. To supply 1,000,000 rifles, 94,000,000 holes must be drilled.

Wisdom in New Course.

Jud Tunkins has quit letting his cows stray on to the tracks, owing to the fact that the packers pay as much for beef as a railroad company, and with less argument.—Washington Star.

Never Touched Him!

A bullet, traveling straight for the heart of a Toledo policeman hit the officer's badge, shattered it, ripped his coat and went off at an angle without touching his body.

Uncle Eben.

"A man dat keeps talkin' 'bout hisself," said Uncle Eben, "sometimes surprises you by de way he manages to make a purty good speech on a mighty slim subject."

Harnessing the Torrents.

In Switzerland almost every mountain torrent has its electric plant, the current often being carried for many miles for lighting and power purposes.

OBITUARY

OSCAR WILLIAM BENNETT

The death occurred last evening at the Guelph General Hospital of Oscar William Bennett, B.S.A., son of Mr. J. J. Bennett, 191 Perry street city, and nephew of the late Major Bennett. Deceased had been on the staff of the O. A. College, Guelph, since his return from overseas, having spent two years in active service during which time he was wounded at Arras in August, 1918.

He leaves to mourn his loss, besides his father, one sister, Mrs. B. E. Clark, Perry street, city.

The funeral will be private and will take place from the family residence, 191 Perry street, on Thursday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock.

ROBTRT FREEBURN

The death occurred Tuesday morning, at the family residence, 104 Dublin street, at 10:30 o'clock of Robert Freeburn, aged [illegible]9 years. The deceased had been in failing health for some time but during the last few days his condition has become rapidly worse and in spite of all that could be done for him he passed away.

Mr. Freeburn had only resided in this city since last fall, he and his wife and daughter moving here from Hall's Bridge, where the deceased was born and where he had lived until his removal here and his many friends in the village and through the district will regret to hear of his death.

He leaves to mourn his loss his wife and one daughter, Zetta of this city and his mother and two brothers Richard and Frank all of Smith Township, and one sister, Mrs. Dubay of this city.

OFFICERS COUNTY ORANGE LODGE

ELECTION LAST NIGHT — GEO. WILLIAMSON COUNTY MASTER

The County Orange Lodge of West Peterborough met last night and elected the following officers for the current year:

W. Co. M.—Bro. Geo. Williamson, L.O.L. 1175.

Dep. Co. M.—Bro. George Porter, L.O.L. 80.

Chap.—Bro. [illegible] Clarke, No. 80.

Co. Rec.-Sec.—Bro. Bartley, re-elected, No. 32.

Co. Fin.-Sec.—Bro. McCullough, No. 50.

Co. Treas.—Bro. W. Kirk, re-elected, No. 457.

Co. Lecturer—Bro. S. Anderson, No. 56.

Dir. of Ceremonies—Bro. R. Ritchie, No. 221.

1st Lecturer—Bro. R. Darling, No. 122.

The newly elected officers were duly installed by Past Co. Master Bro. John Edgar.

Flourishing Condition.

The retiring County Master and the County Recording Secretary delivered short addresses, and the County Treasurer gave his report showing the county lodge to be in a flourishing condition.

One man held up the clerks in the mail car on a Union Pacific train between Omaha and Fremont, Neb., and escaped with valuable registered mail.

London Chamber of Commerce officials have received $160,000 in their drive for a $500,000 Hotel.

EXPERTS WILL DISCUSS HEALTH QUESTION

At the special meeting of the Board of Trade on Thursday at 8 o'clock the guests of the evening will be Dr. J. W. McCullough, of Toronto, chief officer and secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, and Dr. A. W. McPherson, Medical Health Officer of Peterborough. Both gentlemen will speak on the "Good Health of the City."

President Turner looks for a large attendance of members complimentary to their guests on this occasion. The problems of health are becoming increasingly important and Peterborough must effect an improvement in its ability to maintain a low death rate which is possible only by a high rate of good health in the city.

The Thursday evening meetings are limited in attendance to members of the Board and guests especially invited by them. Admission is by ticket.

SEVEN GRAND TRUNK OFFICIALS LUNCHED TODAY BY REPRESENTATIVE CITIZENS

An Informal Social Gathering of Railway Magnates and Leading Citizens.

Seven Grand Trunk officials are in the city today on business connected with the railway. They reached town at eight this morning, coming from the east.

The party is composed of the following gentlemen:

A. C. Martin, freight and traffic manager.

W. R. Davidson, general superintendent, Montreal.

M. P. Fitzsimons, industrial commissioner.

J. D. Millan, divisional superintendent, Belleville.

R. W. Long, divisional freight agent, Toronto.

R. E. Orr, trainmaster, Lindsay.

F. Gould, travelling freight agent, Toronto.

Mr. A. MacNab, station agent, this city, is looking after the visitors' needs.

Lunched at the Empress.

His Worship Mayor McIntyre and members of the Council's Reception Committee and of the council of the Board of Trade entertained the visitors at luncheon in the Empress Hotel at one o'clock.

The city's civic administration was represented in the persons of Mayor A. A. McIntyre, Aldermen G. N. Gordon, Copping, Phelan, J. J. Turner and James Hamilton.

In the unavoidable absence of Ald. Crowe, Ald. Gordon officiated as chairman.

The local Board of Trade was represented in the following members of the Board's council: President J. J. Turner, Messrs. Ryerson Ritchie, Frank (Ald.) Whitehouse, Thomas Barrie, W. R. Breyfogle, J. J. Duffus, V. Eastwood, E. G. Patterson, E. F. Mason, Geo. H. Duncan, J. W. Fraser.

Appreciates G.T.R.

Ald. Gordon, in a few well-chosen words, extended warm welcome to the visitors. In referring to Mr. M. P. Fitzsimons, the G.T.R.'s industrial commissioner, Mr. Gordon said it was always a pleasure for this city's authorities to work with him on questions affecting new industries for Peterborough. For the benefit of the visitors, Mr. Gordon eulogized the local Board of Trade as a good, live and growing organization, and Peterborough as a whole, he said, might be characterized as a good city in which to live, a city fortunate in its textile plants and other industries. Ald. Gordon here took the opportunity of inviting the co-operation of the Grand Trunk Railway in extending traffic to the Kawartha Lakes district and to other points north. The G.T.R. and Peterborough, he said, has grown and is growing up together, and Peterborough citizens always entertain a kindly disposition toward this railway system, which is feeding the city from so many different angles, and thus fostering Peterborough's growth.

Every Advantage.

Mr. M. P. Fitzsimmons, G.T.R. industrial commissioner, speaking of Peterborough's industrial expansion, said, apart from deep water this city, has every other inducement for industries. During the next two or three years, with the services of Mr. Ryerson Ritchie, of the Board of Trade, whose splendid work in big American centres in the interests of trade, commerce and industry, is well known, and the energetic co-operation of Peterborough's capable industrial commissioner, Mr. S. R. Armstrong, Mr. Fitzsimmons looks for substantial industrial growth here.

Large Railway Traffic.

M. A. C. Martin, freight and traffic manager, was favorably impressed with Peterborough from what he had seen so far during this his first visit. As to traffic conditions for the future, conditions were so conflicting and complex that hardly any concrete plans could be formulated by the railways. But so far as he is able to ascertain there is going to be no let up in Canadian railway traffic. For some time, at any rate, the demand for Canadian products is going to be maintained at a high level both at home and abroad, "and the transit facilities of the old Grand Trunk are always at the people's service."

A Friendly Feeling.

Mr. W. R. Davidson, general superintendent, in the course of a neat after-luncheon speech, said he had always retained a friendly feeling for Peterborough, as has all officials of the Grand Trunk Railway system.

Visit Industries.

The visitors this afternoon were driven around the city and to some of Peterborough's most important industries.

The luncheon was a subscription one, all paying their own expense excepting, of course, the guests.

HASTINGS.

(Special Correspondence.)

Hastings, Feb. 4.—At the election held here on Monday for one councillor to take the place of Mr. L. Kelley who resigned, Mr. J. McGrail was elected. His opponents were Mr. F. Tyler and Dr. W. E. Wilson.

Mr. H. R. Hutchinson, of Peterborough, was in town on Monday.

Miss [illegible] Blue, of Campbellford spent the week-end with friends.

Mrs. Robinson, of Foxboro, has been a guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. Prentice.

The regular monthly meeting of the I.O.D.E. was held in their rooms on Monday afternoon.

Mr. Lloyd Hess has purchased the residence of Mr. Ed. Lynch.

Mr. W. F. Runnels, of Lindsay, was in town on Monday.

The Quarterly Board meeting of the Methodist Church was held on Monday afternoon.

Mr. and Mrs. H. B. Wilson visited friends in Warkworth on Thursday

A dance under the auspices of the I.O.D.E. will be held in the Town Hall on Wednesday evening.

Miss Mae Huycke entertained a number of her friends at her home on Thursday evening. All report an enjoyable time.

The Royal Humane Society Medal, which was procured by the Daughters of the Empire for Dr. DeLaMatter, who at the risk of his own life saved the two Blue children from drowning last summer, was presented to him at the reception held in the Town Hall on Friday evening.

WANTED.

At the Collegiate Institute, an office assistant to do general office work. Preference will be given to one who is expert in stenography and typewriting and has at least Matriculation standing. Apply, G. H. Thompson, Secretary of the Board of Education.

Two Montreal Workmen Perish in Shop Fire

LIQUID VENEER IGNITES AND VICTIMS ARE UNABLE TO ESCAPE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Montreal, Feb. 4.—Two men were burned to death and a third badly injured in a fire which this afternoon destroyed the paint shop of the Blain carriage works. Fifteen men were working in the plant when the fire started. It is believed by the accidental ignition of liquid veneer. Twelve of them barely escaped with their lives. One was rescued from the blazing place and two were cut off.

WALTER McRAYE AT G.W.V. HALL

Famous Entertainer Will Appear Before Peterborough Audience.

The entertainment by Walter McRaye in the G.W.V.A. hall tonight should be a treat for all, to judge from what has been said about him as an entertainer by the press of the country. "Kit" in the Mail and Empire says: "Walter McRaye is richly armed for the platform. Humor, rare goddess, is his and his also is romance. He is par excellence—the best I have ever seen or heard."

McRaye is a lecturer and entertainer second to none. For years he was associated with the late Pauline Johnson and appeared on the same programmes as she did. His entertainment tonight will be one worth while.

With the second increase in two weeks, bread in Stratford went up from 12 to 13 cents a loaf.

KEENE PRESBYTERIANS HAD SUCCESSFUL YEAR

SALARY OF PASTOR INCREASED BY $300 AT ANNUAL CONGREGATIONAL MEETING

(Special to The Review.)

Keene, Feb. 4.—The Presbyterian congregation at Keene had very satisfactory reports presented at their annual business meeting held recently. The 120 families contributed the total sum of $4305.00, of which $1465.00 was for missions and education. An increase of $300.00 in salary was granted to the minister, Rev. Ronald McEachern.

During the past year extensive repairs have been made to the church building. The auditorium now presents a delightful appearance, having been very beautifully decorated.

The business meeting was followed by a banquet, furnished by the ladies of the congregation, at the close of which complimentary addresses were given by prominent members of the church.

The allocation of the Forward Movement thank-offering for Keene church is $2500.00. It is generally expected that the congregation will exceed this amount.

Mr. James McNeil is the honored secretary of this congregation, and Mr. John Lang the efficient treasurer.

TRADES COUNCIL PASSES VOTE OF CENSURE ON THE CITY ALDERMEN

Condemn Action of Majority in Rescinding Resolution Providing for the Election of Board of Police Commissioners Will Ask for a $250 Grant for Labor Day.

At the meeting of the Trades and Labor Council last night a vote of censure was unanimously passed upon the members of the City Council who at the last meeting voted in favor of rescinding the resolution adopted by the Council of 1919, which resolution requested the Legislature to amend the law so as to provide for a Police Commission elected by the people. Thomas Tooms, M.P.P., who was present, and who will father such a bill in the Legislature, declared that he would persevere with his measure in spite of what the City Council had done.

"I must," said Mr. Tooms, "respect the intelligence of the 1919 Council equally with that of the wisdom of the present body. As the decisions of the Councils of 1919 and 1920 were by small majorites, indicating much diversity of opinion, Peterborough, after stirring up other municipalities to adopt the same resolution, it immediately became a provincial question and has been much discussed throughout Ontario. Therefore I think it very right to transfer this matter from the Council of 11 in Peterborough to the Council of 111 at Toronto. It will either be accepted or turned down by the will of the Province, not by that of a single locality, which is the more democratic attitude.

"I deplore the Hartley Dewart methods of the Examiner in stating that my action is ruled by the fact that this matter was fathered by Labor. Labor did not have a majority in the Council last year when this resolution was adopted. Am I to be continually informing the Examiner that my decision in any action taken will be for the greatest good for the greatest number, and not for Labor alone? In consideration of the opposition of the 1920 Council, there will be a clause inserted in the bill making it optional with any municipality to adopt the change by passing a bylaw or continuing as they do at present."

Shortage of Newsprint.

A communication was received from the Typographical Union of Winnipeg complaining that the newspapers there had been obliged to close down owing to a scarcity of newsprint, and asking the local Council to join in a memorial to the Dominion Government requiring that the export of paper be prohibited for the present and that the State assume control of the paper manufacturing plant at Fort Frances. The request was concurred in.

Salary Increased.

The salary of the secretary, Wm. Stevens, was increased by $10 a year. B. M. Frederick resigned his place on the board of hall trustees and the vacancy was filled by the election of Ald. Gainey, who will act as secretary-treasurer, a position which he has held for the past twelve years.

Ald. Crowe was requested to bring up in the City Council the matter of operating the street gates at the Grand Trunk crossings. It was claimed by one delegate that there is no one on duty at these gates from 11 o'clock Saturday night for the following twenty-four hours and that only recently a serious accident was narrowly averted.

Object to Group Insurance.

Secretary Stevens was instructed to write President Moore of the Dominion Trades Congress for a ruling as to Labor's attitude with regard to shop insurance which is being introduced in this city. It was claimed last night that this innovation is really a hardship to the wage earner. It prevents him from accepting another job at a higher rate of wages or of taking part in a strike, as he will forfeit his insurance if he does either.

Delegates Sharpe, McMurray, Darrah, Frost, Cairnes, McArthur and President Bolwell will act as a committee to arrange for a series of public meetings to promote organization of the workingmen of the city.

It was decided to ask the City Council for a grant of $250 to help in the celebration of Labor Day. This is $100 more than the amount received for this purpose a year ago.

Complaint was received of the overcrowding of street cars on the Charlotte street line every evening, but Ald. Crowe, who has had some experience with the Hydro Commission, held out little hope of relief.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Feb. 5.—Included in the list of persons demanded for extradition were the following names not already published: Count von Bernstorff, ambassador to the United States; Count von Boesm, Count Bismarck, the Duke of Mecklenburg, General Groener, Evenver Pasha, Prince Ernest of Saxony, Prince Frederick of Prussia, the Grand Duke of Hesse, Field Marshral von Hindenburg, demanded by France and Belgium; Prince August of Hohenzollern, Prince Eitel Friederich of Hohenzollern, Prince Oscar of Hohenzollern, General von Hutier, General Ludendorff, General von Dermarwitz, Talat Pasha, Prince Wittgenstein, and Alfred Zemmerman, former Secretary of Foreign Affairs.

SENATE WILL ADOPT TREATY NEXT WEEK

UNITED STATES ANNOUNCES CONDITIONS ON WHICH IT WILL TAKE PART.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Casper, Wyoming, Feb. 5. — President Wilson is ready to accept any reasonable reservations to the peace treaty, Senator J. B. Keldrick today told the Democratic State General Committee meeting here. He predicted the adoption of the treaty and the League of Nations covenant by the Senate next week.

It is reported that Japan has notified Germany, that Dr. Solf, proposed Ambassador to Tokio, will be persona non grata.

MUST LIVE OUTSIDE EUROPE

Allies Will Not Tolerate Ex-Kaiser as Dutch Citizen

London, Feb. 5.—Sir Auckland Geddes, Minister of National Service and Reconstruction, speaking at Andover, said the Government intended to put the former German Emperor on trial and carry out whatever penalty was provided. But, he added, if Holland definitely declared her intention, on the basis of international law, to provide asylum for him within Dutch territory, then he must say the former ruler could not reside on Dutch territory in Europe, and Holland must put him on some island belonging to her outside of Europe.

ATLANTIC COAST SWEPT BY SIXTY MILE GALE

WORST BLIZZARD IN YEARS TIES UP STREET CARS IN NEW YORK

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 5. — The worst gale and blizzard in years today wrought enormous damage to seashore property along the middle and north Atlantic coast, practically tied up shipping from Cape Hatteras northward, and seriously hampered railroad traffic for miles inland. The street railway service in many instances was suspended. Snow and sleet driven by a gale that blew as high as sixty miles an hour were expected to continue into the evening.

New York and New Jersey beaches were particularly affected. Thousands of dollars damage was done at Coney Island, Atlantic City and Rockaway Beach alone by the washing away of hotels, bath houses, bungalows and amusement property.

TWO CHILDREN SAVED FROM BURNING HOUSE

SERGT. REID AND FIREMAN HATLEY RESCUED THEM LAS TNIGHT.

The fire department received a call at 11:42 o'clock last night to the residence of Mr. G. Hutton at 65 McDonnel street. As ther ewas some delay in sending in the alarm the flames had gained considerable headway before the firemen arrived on the scene, and the situation they had to cope with was serious. Were it not for the splendid efforts of the men, who finally succeeded in getting the fire under control, the damage, considerable as it was, would have been much greater. The fire was caused by an accumulation of soot, of about two years standing, in the chimney, which, becoming heated, set fire to the partition on either side. Luckily there was no loss of life, as the two little children who were sleeping at the time and in great danger were rescued by Sergt. Reid and Mr. Hatley of the fire department. The fire was extinguished in about fifteen minutes with forty-five gallons of chemical and one hundred feet of hose.

The total estimate of damage is so far unknown.

URGES MORE ATTENTION TO UPKEEP OF ROADS

SOME BUILT LAST YEAR ARE ALREADY GOING TO PIECES.

Lindsay, Feb. 5.—F. G. Sandy, M.P.P. for South Victoria, addressed the County Council on good roads, and advocated that more attention be paid to their upkeep, claiming that some of the roads built last year are already going to pieces. He also advocated strongly the use of the old-fashioned split log drag, and suggested that the county superintendent of roads take a special trip to Wentworth County and interview Hon. Mr. Biggs on the question of construction and maintenance of roads.

In the matter of experimental farms, Mr. Sandy stated that Hon. Mr. Doherty had informed him that he did not look upon the question of experimental farms as serious, and Mr. Sandy personally expressed the opinion that it would be too great an expenditure for the Government to undertake. He would sooner see the Government expend money on drainage machines, and advocated securing one for Victoria County. Should experimental farms be decided on, Victoria County would surely have a priority claim on account of its rich, fertile agricultural land.

FRENCH WILL FLOAT LOAN IN UNITED STATES

THOUGHT THAT IN THIS WAY EXCHANGE SITUATION MAY BE RELIEVED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 5.—A portion of the new French loan will be floated in the United States through the consortium of bankers and will be placed in dollars with a view to easing the exchange situation, it is learned here. It is understood the amount of bonds to be placed in United States have not yet been fixed. Subscriptions will also be received at London in pounds sterling on the same terms as those given the United States.

MAY FIRST WAS SET FOR BIG OFFENSIVE

BOLSHEVISTS IN BULGARIA HAD PLANNED TO OUST GOVERNMENT

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Salonikl, Feb. 5.—The Bulgarian Bolsheviki have fixed May 1st as the date of the coup detat by which the present regime in that country is to be ousted by violence, according to Sofia despatches, which tell of seisure of Bolshevik documents there. Many arrests of Communists are reported.

Field Marshal von Hindenburg is to publish his memoirs in March.

RELATIONS OF ALLIES WITH HUNS HAVE REACHED CRITICAL STAGE

Refusal of German Representatives to Forward List of War Culprits to Berlin Has Complicated Situation—Cabinet Refuses to Consider Extradition.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 5.— The relations between the Allied powers and Germany seem to have arrived at a crisis as a result of the refusal of Baron Von Lersner to forward to Berlin a list of Germans whose extradition is demanded by the Entente. The incident apparently finds an echo in the attitude of the Berlin cabinet which is reported in London despatches to have expressed through Gustav Noske seeming defiance of the powers. Baron Von Lersner left for the German capital last night.

Another German Note

London.—The German Cabinet has decided to send another note to the Allies calling attention to the fatal consequences which would ensue upon the extradition of the Germans demanded for trial, according to a despatch to the Exchange Telegraph's Company.

No Surrender

Berlin, Feb. 5 — At the conclusion of last night's session of the Cabinet, members of the Government informed the correspondent of the Associated Press that the ministers were unanimous in declaring that the surrender of the men demanded by the Allies on an unofficial or any other extradition list was an utter physical impossibility.

GEORGE COPPEN TO HANG FOR MURDER

FOUND RESPONSIBLE IN COURT AT TORONTO FOR DEATH OF HIS WIFE.

Toronto, Feb. 5.—After an hour and a half's deliberation a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree was returned against George Coppen at 6:20 yesterday afternoon by the jury in his trial in the Assizes before Mr. Justice Latchford, for the murder of his wife, Fannie Maud Coppen, on the night of November 28 last.

Coppen will suffer the death penalty on May 5 by the sentence imposed by Mr. Justice Latchford.

Following the pronouncement of the verdict, the prisoner, who accepted the whole proceedings with an almost expressionless face, was asked if he had anything to say. He rose from his seat in the dock, but did not hear, and the question was repeated. "Not guilty," was his answer.

Evidence Circumstantial.

The crime which Coppen has been ordered to expiate on the scaffold took place at 573 Merton street. On the morning of November 28, following a fire in a cottage adjoining the Coppen home, and in which Mrs. Fanny Maud Coppen had lived apart from her husband for some time, her body with the head badly charred was found. The evidence at the trial which was purely circumstantial went to suggest that Coppen killed his wife with an iron pump crank and then set fire to the cottage in order to conceal his crime. The next day the prisoner was to have answered a summons for non-support of his wife.

The trial came to a conclusion sooner than was expected owing to no defence being put in. Coppen himself was not put into the witness box nor were any witnesses called on his behalf. Mr. George Waldron, K.C., crown counsel, did not address the jury, but contented himself with making a reply to the address by Mr. T. A. Gibson, counsel for defence. The latter raised a formal objection to the procedure, and just before the death sentence was passed reiterated his objection, which his Lordship put aside, and told counsel that it was not necessary that he should there enter a new appeal. The summing up of his Lordship was not favorable to the prisoner.

SENT FOR ATTORNTY GENERAL

East Wellington U. F. O. Decide to Open that Constituency

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Fergus, Feb. 5.—At a representative meeting of the United Farmers of East Wellington held in the Carnegie Library here yesterday, the resignation of Albert E. Hellyer, the sitting U. F. O. member, was submitted and unanimously accepted, the delegates subsequently going on record in favor of opening the riding for Hon. Mr. Raney, attroney-general.

About 40 members representative of the various U. F. O. clubs were present and the situation was thoroughly discussed at a gathering which was closed to all outsiders.

EUROPE MUST SEND MORE EXPORTS TO UNITED STATES

THAT IS ONE OF ESSENTIALS TO RESTORATION OF EXCHANGE TO NORMAL

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 5.—The foreign exchange position was eagerly discussed in all quarters here today, and, pending official action, the market for continental exchange remained feverish. Exchange on Paris and Brussels was a shade worse than yesterday. New York exchange, however, was steadier, improving to $3.28½, at which business was smaller.

The opinion in financial circles seems to be that an international conference may decide upon the granting of credits for European countries to set the wheels of commerce in motion, a guarantee agreeing to abstain from unnecessary exchanges and to carry out drastic reforms themselves. One of the principal objectives counted as necessary is undoubtedly the expansion of exports to America. This aim is being fostered officially. It is necessary also to attract gold from the United States, and this will only be possible when the balance of trade is in favor of this country.

A report from New York that some of the banks there had discounted the discount of dollar bills against the export of merchandise was viewed with satisfaction here, as it would mean that fewer goods would be sold to Great Britain.

WILL REDUCE NOTES NOW IN CIRCULATION

GOVERNMENT IS FORMING PLAN TO IMPROVE PRESENT FINANCIAL SITUATION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 5.—The gradual reduction of Dominion notes in circulation, it is understood, is planned by the Government as a means of improving the financial situation. The last return issued by the Finance Department shows that on January 19 there were notes in circulation amounting to $318,690,089. They were secured in gold to the extent of $114,821,602, and in approved securities under the terms of the Finance Act of 1914 to the amount of $154,237,000. Gold is, therefore, about 35.9 of the total issue. The ratio of gold reserve to the note circulation, it is suggested, might be improved in two ways. On the one hand, gold might be bought, and on the other hand, outstanding notes might be received from time to time from the proceeds of loans or from the revenue.

RISE IT STERLING EXCHANGE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 5.—The rates on demand bills for the English pound sterling, which dropped yesterday to a record low of $3.19, rebounded this morning to $3.25¼ at end of the first hour's trading. Discount rate on Canadian money in New York opened at 17½ [illegible]

JUGO-SLAVS MAKE A FIERCE ATTACK UPON ITALIANS

SITUATION IN DALMATIA GROWS SERIOUS AS RESULT OF OUTBREAK.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Rome, Feb. 5. — Details of the alleged Jugo-Slav attacks upon the Italians at Spalato and Trau are published here and cause further excitement over the Dalmatian situation. It is reported that on January 27 a manifesto was posted on the walls at Spalato calling a meeting to protest against "Italian imperialism." When the meeting ended the mob rushed throughout the city, sacking and destroying all Italian shops and offices of the Italian organization. Later an Italian flag was torn to pieces. The only arrests made were two Italians who dared to comment on the occurrence.

OUTLINES ATTITUDE ON PROPOSED CONFERENCE

PRESIDENT WILSON SAID TO BE WILLING TO ACCEPT REASONABLE RESERVATIONS.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Feb. 5—While agreeing to the limitations proposed by former Secretary Glass as to the proposed international conference, the Chamber of Commerce of the United States announces that it is prepared under certain conditions to name representatives to attend such a meeting.

One condition is that the letter of former Secretary Glass be brought to the notice of European governments and the signatories of the European memorial asking for the conference, if they think it advisable to go on with the conference, then the activities and the discussions of the conference shall be kept within the Glass limitations. American representatives, if any are named, are to act merely in an informal capacity.

BOLSHEVISTS LAY PLANS FOR ATTACK UPON PERSIANS

TROOPS BEING MOVED AGAINST THAT COUNTRY IN A STEADY STREAM.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 5.—The attitude of both the Bolsheviki and the Arghans towards the Persians is becoming increasingly hostile, according to the British War Office advices. Unverified reports from the trans-Caspian area say that the transpor tof Bolshevik troops thence is continuing at the rate of about two thousand a week. These troops are said to be well equipped and led by officers of the old Russian army. Their morale and training are believed to be good. A number of high military and civil officials, including some Germans, are reported as having arrived at Tashkent in a special train from Moscow.

FIVE ASPIRANTS FOR THRONE OF HUNGARY

NATIONAL ASSEMBLY IS ALMOST CERTAIN TO RESTORE MONARCHIAL GOVERNMENT.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vienna, Feb. 5—There is no doubt, according to newspapers here, that the National Assembly, at its meeting to be held on March 1 will declare itself in favor of a monarchy in Hungary. There are five pretenders to the throne. They are Prince Louis - Windisch Grats, who is supported by Premier Huscar and several members of the Frederick government; former Emperor Charles, who never abdicated as the king of Hungary, and who is supported by the party which calls itself "Legitimist"; Count Andrassy, who is urged by Admiral Horthy, head of the new Hungarian army, and the Hungarian delegates to the peace conference; Archduke Joseph, the Clerical candidate, and Prince Cyril of Bulgaria, who, if chosen, will, it is said, marry one of Archduke Joseph's daughters.

EX-REEVE TUCKER, BURLEIGH, APPROVES POLICY OF COUNTY CLERK ELLIOTT

Has Letter in the Farmers' Sun Discussing the Question of Improved Highways.

Ex-Reeve William Tucker of Burleigh and Anstruther, has the following article in the current issue of the Farmers' Sun:

I notice in your issue of January 7 a piece written by Mr. E. M. Elliott of Peterborough re Return of Auto Fees as a Solution of Road Problem. I might just say that I have been interested to some extent in this county road system, and have read everything that I could get hold of in respect of good roads and the building and the maintaining of the same, and I think that what Mr. Elliott has written and pointed out in the way of financing and building county roads is one of the soundest and most reasonable propositions that I have yet seen in respect of justice for all classes. In consideration of the trunk or highway road running in parallel with the railroads running east and west, and for such highway to get the lion's share would, I think, be absurd, as such highway would be running along the southern part of most of the counties of the province. Therefore, the northern portion of the province would derive no benefit whatever.

I firmly agree with Mr. Elliott in paying more attention to the north and south roads, as railway communication is not so great running north and south as it is east and west, and some parts of the province even have none at all running in any direction, not even a good wagon road. We will take, for example, the northern part of Peterborough County, which I know well. We have three leading roads which run north and south from the city of Peterborough and the town of Havelock, which roads — to the extent of from forty to sixty miles, which were in the first place just lumbermen's tote roads, that is, a good portion of them, and they have since just been maintained by small colonization grants from our past Provincial Government with very little improvement.

For the last sixty years or so the Provincial Government has had millions of dollars of timber revenue taken out of the northern part of the province for which we have not had much return, not even a good road, as the timber industry is about at an end here now, that is, the floatable part of it; still, we have millions of feet of valuable timber here yet, such as maple, birch and so forth, that will not float, and here we are—cannot do anything with it, as we have no road communication. Millions of cords of wood within forty to fifty miles of the city of Peterborough, and the poor people paying exorbitant prices for coal just for want of transportation facilities. When settlers want to clear up a piece of land they have just to cut down, pile up and burn just such valuable timber as I have mentioned above. I have done it myself. Now, about our mineral and mining industry—we have our share in this part, some of the best showings in the province, as I have had to some minor extent some experience in prospecting.

Now, Mr. Editor, I hope with all the sane people we have in our province today, you will agree with me in what I have outlined above, and that our Provincial Government will at least open one eye to such matters, and take steps of finding ways and means towards the development of such sections of the northern part of the province, which will always find labor for the unemployed, [illegible] revenue for the provincial [illegible] which means greater [illegible] easier ways of meeting the [illegible] problem that we are faced [illegible] day—the war debt.

"FOR A GREATER PETERBOROUGH."

THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 5, 1920.

A CIVIC GRANT FOR THE EXHIBITION.

PROBABLY THERE never was a time in the history of Peterborough that the citizens had so many irons in the fire or when there were so many plans in the formative stages. A variety of applications for grants for one purpose or another are before the Council. Every idea suggested has its partisans and its opponents. Public opinion is divided on every issue raised.

The Housing Commission has its program. The directors of the Industrial Exhibition ask for a grant of $5000. The members of a secret society apply to the Council for a bonus of $400 to aid them in the celebration of their annual holiday. The City Development Commission believe that public necessity warrants the preparation of a map from photographs taken from an airship at an altitude of four thousand feet. Among the members of the Board of Education there is a diversity of opinion. Some of the members believe that an addition to the Collegiate Institute should be built, while others would first provide a school for the technical training of the boys and girls in the city.

It is a matter of regret that every one of the above suggestions cannot be given immediate effect. The need for every one of them is apparent, and if the dreams of the various promoters could be realized, Peterborough would indeed become the ideal city as a place of residence. But the question of expense always asserts itself and it is on this issue that public opinion divides rather than on the merits of the various propositions.

Just now the big question before the people is the matter of a $5000 grant to the Exhibition. The County Council has donated $2000 to promote this enterprise and, wealth and population considered, the amount asked from the city is not out of proportion to the other. There are taxpayers who would not hesitate in granting the full amount asked for. There are others who contend that the Exhibition is a private enterprise, that as such it should be self-sustaining, hence not one dollar of the city's money should be voted for any such purpose.

If the Exhibition is a private enterprise—a claim by no means conceded—then it is certainly one that has so far not been anything but a source of financial worry to its promoters. The men behind it are public spirited citizens whose sole ambition in this matter is to advance the general welfare and to give the city an Exhibition in keeping with its importance. They are in the enterprise for the love of the game rather than for the hope of any financial reward. One of the interested parties has been working since the last Exhibition, and will continue to work until the next Fair is held, preparing an amusement program, and for this service he will not receive one cent of financial return.

Some of the opponents of the proposed grant say that the City Council has no right to vote the public money for such a purpose, at least not without first receiving authority by a reference of the question to the ratepayers. There is nothing in this contention. By Act of the Legislature the aldermen have the right to vote a grant to the Exhibition up to $5000 without a referendum.

One of the strongest arguments that can be used in support of the application for a grant is that the Legislature will extend financial assistance to the Fair in proportion to the local support which it receives. At present the State grant is merely nominal. It will increase as the Exhibition grows. When the Fairs at London and Windsor had attained certain stipulated dimensions the Legislature increased its grant to each city to $25,000 a year.

The ambition of the active directors of the local Exhibition is to develop it further by holding a Winter Fair. This would be a boon to the community, especially to the farmers, encouraging as it would the live stock industry. To establish such an adjunct, legislative sanction and assistance is essential. This cannot be secured until the equipment on the grounds is brought up to a certain standard. To accomplish this money is necessary, and it is for the erection of up-to-date buildings that the directors now seek financial assistance from the city.

TECHNICAL SCHOOL FOR PETERBOROUGH.

TRUSTEE G. O. CAMERON, at the recent meeting of the Board of Education, remarked with good-natured sarcasm that the question of building a technical school for Peterborough had been brought up previous to every election for the past ten years, to his certain knowledge, and that it had carried more than one candidate to victory at the polls. The question has been revived again, not before but subsequent to the election, and with every indication that the members of the Board are thoroughly in earnest. Trustee E. G. Patterson, as the head of one of the city's largest industries—and it is the manufacturer who most of all realizes the necessity of technical education—called up the question with a recommendation that it be considered by the industrial advisory committee.

Naturally there is a difference of opinion right from the start, but the policy suggested by Trustee Patterson does not in any sense commit the Board to a line of action. Ways and means are to be considered. The question of expense does not enter into the calculation at least for the present.

The Collegiate Institute is already crowded to such an extent that pupils from the rural districts are no longer admitted. In a year or two at the outside it will be necessary to increase the accommodation at the Collegiate to take care of the city's own public school graduates who desire to follow up the higher branches. Some of the members of the School Board contend that the Collegiate should be enlarged before a technical school is considered. Others take an exactly opposite view.

Chairman Denne made a practical suggestion when he recommended that if accommodation is required at the Collegiate, the assembly hall be converted into a class room. Mr. Denne has always been a consistent advocate of a technical school, and is now found among those who would give precedence to the establishing of such an institution. Two rooms could be fitted up in the assembly hall at a nominal expense, and this would be sufficient to relieve the congestion for some time to come.

There are over three thousand children of school age in Peterborough. Of these, fully ninety per cent. never enter the High school, but a great number of whom go to work before they are sixteen years old. They are not equipped for any line of work as the graduate of a technical school is. Few of them have any idea as to the choice of a calling, and they have been given no idea as to their natural vocational gifts while they were at school. Numbers of boys lose the best years of their youth drifting aimlessly from one calling to another. The men who employ them are also losers by this vacillation. These men help support the educational system of the city and are entitled to some return for their money in the service rendered by the school graduates.

Not all the boys in the city enter the Collegiate, but all of them are required to turn out to earn their own living. Better for the majority of these a course in technical training than time spent in acquiring a smattering of classical knowledge or mathematical skill in the Collegiate. [redacted]

When the school building, work on which has already been begun, is completed, the South Central building may be available as a technical school. The building could be renovated to serve the purpose for some years at least. One advantage in establishing such an institution is that the legislative aid is more liberal for these schools than for any other class of educational effort. All the city would have to do at the outset would be to provide the building. The Legislature furnishes the equipment, paying forty per cent. of the amount at once and the balance in three equal annual instalments. The Government will also pay half the cost of instruction. Peterborough could engage a teaching staff in such a school at $10,000 a year, and of this amount only $5000 would have to be borne by the municipality. The taxpayers would defray the cost of operation, such as the lighting and heating of the building.

Peterborough is now an industrial city, and its future depends upon the growth of its manufactories. Factories cannot be maintained at a profit without efficient staffs. The graduates of the technical schools established in other cities are given the preference by the employers. They start at a higher rate of wages than the young man who has all to learn, and the advantage is mutual.

AS THE LANGUAGE IS SPOKEN.

A NEW YORK magistrate told an alien brought before him for trial that the day is coming when inability to speak the English language will be an offence punishable by a term in jail.

Perhaps. Then, again, the day may come when to speak the English language as it is spoken by some native-born New Yorkers will also be so regarded and punished. The language which has a prospect of becoming universal has been the silent victim of violence at the hands of writers all these countless generations, but the number of these is happily limited. But for the man or woman who, in a spirit of social exclusiveness, devises an accent barbarous as to sound, even though the grammatical construction may be above suspicion, some punishment other than popular ridicule of the masses should be available.

FAVORS CONSOLIDATED SCHOOLS.

(Farmers' Sun.)

COUNTY COUNCILS throughout Ontario are now holding their inaugural meetings for 1920. It is somewhat significant that one of the matters up for discussion has to do with consolidated schools.

In two counties, Oxford and Elgin, reports favoring the establishment of consolidated schools were presented. In making their reports at the Oxford County Council, the two public school inspectors, Messrs. J. M. Cole and R. A. Patterson, recommended very strongly the adoption of consolidated schools in that county. At the meeting of the County Council of Elgin, held at St. Thomas, Warden W. H. Mills in his inaugural address recommended the adoption of consolidated schools. He pointed out that the present scarcity of teachers favored that type of school, while the advantages to be derived from an economic and educational nature, were all in favor of consolidated schools.

It is significant to find County Councils and public school inspectors giving expression to the sentiments mentioned above. These men are in touch with actual conditions, and are thoroughly aware of what Rural Ontario requires.

Conservative Paper on Ontario Politics

(Ottawa Journal

The attitude of the Conservative party in Ontario toward the Farmers' Government in the present political situation has already been indicated. The Journal has referred to it more than once. Speaking before the Ward Four Liberal-Conservative Associtaion of Toronto last night, Hon. Mr. Ferguson, temporary leader of the party, elaborated the reasons for and the wisdom of the party's attitude. The position taken by the Conservative party is such as to merit the approval not only of its adherents but of the public of the Province generally.

It would not be difficult to embarrass the Drury Government, with its bare majority in the Legislature. But it would be neither good politics to do so nor in the interests of the province. As Mr. Ferguson points out, the people voted the Farmer's Party into office, and the will of the people therefore, is that it have an opportunity to carry on the Government if it can. Mr. Ferguson fairly presents the situation when he says that "to unduly harass the new Government before they have had an opportunity of really getting into office, familiarizing themselves with procedure, of elaborating and enunciating their policies and demonstrating a capacity for carrying those policies into effect would be unfair, unsportsmanlike, not in accordance with British traditions, and, therefore, would not be aprpoved by the people at large" Neither do the people want another election forced on them within a few months.

And for a weightier reason it is best, both from the party standpoint and the standpoint of the public interest, that the Farmers' Government be given a fair trial. Group or class administration, aiming at sectional advantage is, as Mr. Ferguson declares, fundamentally unsound. It is certain to fail. But the people who have voted for it would not be convinced of its impossibility if it were prevented by political tactics from having a chance to succeed. Better that it should have the chance; it will itself demonstrate that the people of Ontario were in error in turning to class administration. The cure will be all the more permanent.

To refrain from harassing the Government, however, does not mean that it should be permitted to escape its responsibilities. Referring to the intimation of Mr. Drury that the Government does not intend to initiate legislation, Mr. Ferguson quite properly declares that the Conservative party in the Legislature will not permit any invasion of the principle of responsible government. The ministry must, as the Journal declared upon the enunciation of Premier Drury's peculiar doctrine, accept full responsibility for its measures and policies.

From one end of Canada to the other the news of the accident that recently befell, Sir James Grant of Ottawa, was received with deep regret. He is widely known and held in high esteem, not only by the members of the medical profession to which he belongs, but by all interested in the lives of men who have done something towards the upbuilding of the country.

Sir James belongs to the "Old Guard," and is in fact one of its few survivors. He was born on August 11, 1831, in Inverness-shire, Scotland, his father having been a physician, too; but he attended school in Martintown, Ont., passing to Queen's University and after completing his Arts course, took the medical course at McGill where he graduated in 1854 He has served the medical profession in many ways— as teacher, writer, and as executive officer in Councils, and representative at Medical and Surgical Congresses abroad.

His services in the field of public life began in 1865, when Russell County, Ont., near the City of Ottawa returned him to the Assembly of United Canada. He supported the scheme of Confederation, and after it was put into operation, he continued to sit for Russell until 1873.

Always a fluent speaker, he was capable of rising to a style of great strength and eloquence when his theme was Canada and the possibilities of her future. He gave a wholehearted support to the policy of Sir John Macdonald, and took a deep interest in the opening up and development of the West. In 1892 he returned to the House of Commons, being elected by the City of Ottawa and held the seat until the dissolution of Parliament in April 1896.

He was physician to H. R. H. Princess Louise during her residence in Ottawa with her husband, the Marquis of Lorne (the late Duke of Argyll), when he was Governor-General. When visiting London, several years later, Sir James was received in private audience by Her late Majesty Queen Victoria, and Sir James and Lady Grant were present by invitation at the coronation of the late King Edward and Queen Alexandra.

If tombstone epitaphs were reliable his Satanic majesty would have to look for another job.

Some people worry because they are unable to find out things that would worry them still more.

If there is anything in a man, prosperity will bring it out—and adversity, will soon knock it out.

Family Matters

"I shall complain to the floorwalker about you," said the irate shopper.

"I have no doubt he will agree with everything you say," answered the saleslady wearily.

"Ah! Then he is acquainted with your shortcomings?"

"He thinks he is. He's my husband."

The Reason.

"What's his reputation?"

"Rather good. He never lived in a small town."

His Elastic Limbs.

"He got up and stretched his long legs to the water cooler and thence to the back platform."

Pat's Viewpoint.

Postoffice Clerk (in the country office in the west of Ireland)—"Here your letter is overweight."

Pat—"Over what weight?"

Clerk—"It's too heavy: you'll have to put another stamp on it."

Pat—"Yerra, get out wid you foolin'. Sure, if I put another stamp on it won't it be heavier still?"

A Boy of Method.

It was the week before little Willie's birthday and he was on his knees at his bedside petitioning Divine Providence for presents in a very loud voice.

"Please send me," he shouted, "a bicycle, a tool chest, a—"

"What are you praying so loud for?" his younger brother interrupted. "God ain't deaf."

"I know he ain't," said little Willie, winking towards the next room, "but grandma is."

HUNTER STREET BRIDGE.

Editor Review: In your edition of the 2nd inst., the newly created Development Commission starts off by asking the City Council for a grant of fifteen hundred dollars $1500) for a topographical map of the city. I am much surprised indeed to see a man like ex-Mayor George Duncan lending his name to any such wild dream. Fifteen hundred dollars ($1500) today would not purchase the instruments required to do this work. Someone will say I am trying to knock this commission. I am not trying to do anything of the kind. I know what I am speaking about. I have been making surveys, plans and maps for over thirty-five years, and I would not undertake to make an accurate topographical map of this city for fifteen thousand dollars $15,000).

What a lot of accurate topographical information can be obtained at an altitude of four thousand feet. What a beautiful picture the Hunter street bridge will take in the early spring "when conditions are ideal."

Where is this orgy of expenditure going to stop? What is the tax rate going to be in Peterborough? Who will want to own a home here ten years hence at the present rate of civic expenditure?

At the very inception of this Hunter street bridge construction I did my very best, through your valuable paper, to warn the Mayor and Council of that day what they were up against. How does this bridge construction stand today? They bring an engineer down from Toronto (of course, there are no engineers in Peterborough competent to undertake this work); he gets the Mayor and the City Council of that day to sign a cast iron agreement with him. What do the ratepayers of Peterborough think of clause six of this agreement, which reads:

"The city shall pay all inspectors and the persons required for inspection purposes by the engineer, and the engineer shall not be called upon to pay any wages or remuneration to such inspectors, but he shall nevertheless have the right to employ such inspectors and to dismiss them as he sees fit."

This engineer then goes ahead like a bull at a haystack, prepares plans and has the contract let to outsiders (of course, there are no contractors in Peterborough competent to undertake this work); and now this engineer is trying to find a foundation on which to erect this immense 235-foot experimental reinforced concrete span, information that should have been ascertained beyond peradventure before any plans were prepared or any contract let.

Mr. Barber, at the very inception of this work, in reply to one of my letters, called me to task, and asked me if I thought the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board would sanction his plans for the bridge if they were not properly and scientifically prepared. Will Mr. Barber now be man enough to admit that my contention was right and that no engineer that ever was born could properly or scientifically prepare plans on the information he then possessed? Let me tell Mr. Barber that the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board passed his plans on the information given to them by Mr. Barber, and that the abutments for this immense span would rest on solid rock at a depth stated by Mr. Barber. Will the Ontario Railway and Manicpal Board now pass the plans for this immense span as altered by Mr. Barber to cover up his past mistakes? Let our worthy Mayor and aldermen be sure they have the sanction of the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board to build this span on the foundation as it really exists, before they pour any more of the people's good money into this sink hole. I want to again tell Mr. Barber that no one can tell him at what depth he will strike solid rock—he may strike what is apparently solid rock at a depth of 90 or 100 feet, but the most eminent geologist in Canada cannot say when solid rock is reached. The limestone foundation which underlies this city is not a solid formation, but is made up of layers or shelves with clay intervening.

If our present worthy Mayor and aldermen cannot tear themselves away from this present one-span fetish of Mr. Barber's, if they will not like sensible men make a three, or at least two, span graceful steel structure capped with concrete, there is but one course Mr. Barber can pursue. Nothing short of a caisson to be filled with concrete or steel shelled concrete piles will suffice for anything like the foundation required to bear the weight and pressure of such an immense span.

Again, I respectfully ask our worthy Mayor and aldermen to halt. You are bound hand and foot to pay this engineer "four per cent. of the cost of the said high level bridge." What amount will this four per cent. be on two hundred and forty thousand, or four or five million dollars?

Respectfully yours,
J. W. FITZGERALD.

Judge Huyske Will Deliver Lecture Friday Night

The third of Judge Huycke's lectures at the Young Women's Christian Association will be given Friday evening, at eight o'clock, on the subject: "Legal Procedure." For Better or Worse

By HENRY KIRK

(Copyright.)

Marion Story sat in the midst of her wedding gifts. They were spread about upon tables that lined three sides of the room.

There were little round boxes, and large square ones piled with glittering things—in one a rope of pearls, in another a collar of diamonds.

The girl to whom these things belonged sat very still and stared at them. There was no light of triumph in her eyes, no joy of possession that one might think should be there. She showed no satisfaction, no supreme elation. She was almost a thing of stone.

She looked over them all as if they did not exist, as if they were not even thought of, and the shining collar in its velvet box threw no light into her eyes.

A man who had been standing by the window turned carelessly.

"You'll have to send them back, won't you?" he said. The girl did not look at him. "Miserable business, but it's the thing to do. Wonder what they'll say!" He took up a sapphire brooch. "Mrs. Olin Winthrop! Mrs. Olin will say, 'Thank heaven, I can use this again.'" The girl did not move. "For heaven's sake, old girl, why don't you look up!"

"My dear Fred, you will be good enough to remember that this is not your wedding!"

"Nor yours, either," the man laughed.

"I don't see anything funny in that!"

"You know why you're going to do it?"

"Yes, I know that."

"Well!"

"And I'm going to do it!"

"What's all the fuss about, then?" A man with iron gray hair and gray eyes came into the room.

"Father, I wish you would insist upon Fred being a little more decent!" She got up and went to the window. The young fellow started after her.

"Marion, I'm not doing anything. What's up? I think we're all concerned in this little strategy upon an equal footing."

"What is it?"

"Nothing, dad. I was only—trying to—cheer Marion up a little."

"You don't seem to have gone about it in the right way, Marion?"

"Yes?"

"Come here." The girl went to her father.

"Bayliss is repeating his father's game. All day he has been at it—pushing me to the wall—and when he has me there, making me go upon my knees to him. Well, have you nothing to say?"

The girl looked at her father with cold eyes. "What may I say? I am going to do this thing tomorrow. I am going to deny him at the altar in the presence of my friends and his friends—of the whole world, as far as that goes!"

"It is your duty."

"Yes, father, and I shall not shirk it. For you—but what will become of me! What man would care to ask me to marry him after I had done such a thing!"

"I say, Marion!"

"Well, Fred Story, would you? Would you go to a girl who had refused a man at the altar, shamed him, humiliated him in the most horrible manner possible?"

"His father almost ruined your father—nearly disgraced him! Is that something to forget? And the hate of that man is in his son. I hate him as much as he hated me. The whole Bayliss tribe—for fifty years they have been in my way, and this boy is doing the same thing his father did—no, only trying to do it, for I shall have him where I wish him!"

"Don't get melodramatic, dad; you know very well Billy Bayliss isn't that bad, although it's crude enough as it is. Marion will turn him down tomorrow—then we will call it square. 'Do you take this man?'—Not on your life!—Bing!—Wedding ring thrown upon floor—Exit haughty Marion Story amid the applause of the gallery and the hisses of the opposing faction!"

Four girls came gaily into the room.

"Marion," said one of them, "I've brought the girls to see the things. You've met my father; my brother Fred? Aren't they simply glorious? Just look at this collar!"

Miss Story waited in her father's drawing-room for the man she had promised to marry.

He would come to her in a moment, with violets or some other delicate offering.

Her romance with Will Bayliss had begun six years before, when they were little more than children.

The opposition of their parents had made little difference.

She had loved this man with all her thought, but now it seemed to have given way to quite another feeling. It was anything but the old tenderness. Regret was there, and it was the regret that a woman might give to a dead child.

The opposition of her father had made little difference at first, but like water dripping upon a stone, it finally made its impression.

It would never have done so until she felt that he was becoming somewhat indifferent, a sort of dignified distance that she could not understand.

She learned that her father had been forced to the wall, and his influence, his very credit threatened. This roused her father's blood in her, and she felt that she hated the man's son.

Whatever it was that had separated them, she knew that they were no longer as they had been.

She stood very still, waiting for him to come in.

Then he came into the room, a very tall, clear-eyed young fellow. He came directly toward her, carrying half a dozen orchids and a mass of violets. She took them silently and sat down. Then she covered her face with the flowers.

The man looked at her a moment without a word, then he said slowly:

"Marion, I am afraid we have——" He hesitated. "I am afraid we have not—you have not been happy. I do not know how to say it, but——"

The girl looked at him quietly. "But what?"

"If you do not wish to—to—have this—thing go on——"

"You mean, you mean you do not wish to—to—oh, I cannot say it!"

"Marion! Marion! That I do not wish to—that I——"

"Yes, that you do not wish to marry me! I know! I know!"

The man's lips twitched, but he never took his eyes from hers. "I mean that, if—you did not——"

"Have I said so?"

"No."

"Well!"

"I wish you—to be happy!"

"That is the greatest wish that one could have for another, isn't it?" She laughed a little hysterically.

"I have never wished you to be anything else. There's only one thing that we should understand before—and that is——"

"I know, that you will be the master!"

"There must be some one to say what shall be done, although master is an ugly word."

"Yes, men never like it in that way, but it is true! What do you mean by saying this?"

"I mean only that our home shall be our own, and that we shall live in it alone."

"I know—you do not wish my father——" She laughed bitterly.

"I wish only your happiness, and my own. It has been a trying winter. You do not know it, but my father's affairs were not in the best way when he died——"

"Are you intimating that my father was at all responsible?"

"The Street is a strange place, Marion, and many odd things happen there—old friends become enemies, and—well—what is the use in reviving unpleasant memories? It is all dead——"

"Revive them? They are not dead with me, but you have been busy in the Street, and I know what you are doing there!"

"It has been for you. That is all that I may say about it, Marion, won't you believe in me? I may have neglected you, but I was thinking of you all the while, down there. Won't you trust me?"

The girl rose. "Will you pardon me if I say good night?" she said. "I am tired!"

The next day at noon, Miss Story went up the aisle of the church upon the arm of her father. Her friends filled the seats about her. There seemed so many of them, they almost hung from the arched roof.

The triumphal music crashed from the organ and flooded her entire being, but with a mockery that almost choked her.

If they had only run away, as they had planned so many times when they first began to know their love!

The long aisle seemed interminable. With every step it seemed to stretch on and never end, and her agony with it. Then in a moment it did end, and the organ ceased. He was there waiting for her, and he took her hand.

The old minister who had baptized her stood there with open book, and faintly she heard his droning chant.

She heard him say "I will," knew her time had come, and raised her eyes.

Her father was behind her, and all he meant—the opposition of her family, the fearful strength of which oppressed her senses. She was one of them.

It was her hour, and she rejoiced in her heart, so loudly that she hoped no sound of regret would be heard above it.

The words of the clergyman came to her as from another world, through another consciousness for which she could not account, but she was impatient for them to be over, that the whole thing might be ended.

Faintly she heard them—love, honor and obey! She felt his fingers press her own, and the touch of him instantly roused her against her father and her family, who were awaiting her denial.

Suddenly she became conscious that her hour had come indeed.

The minister was awaiting her answer to the great question. The man beside her was waiting.

She felt the strength of the hand holding her own, she felt the strength of the arm above it. She looked up into his eyes. They were the eyes of a man who did not knock at the heart of every woman.

As if afraid that he would not knock at her own again, and that she might lose him, she said, faintly but quickly:

"I will!"

How a Hero Died.

A dramatic incident in which a heroic young officer faced death in soldierly manner is the climax of a true story that recently appeared in Stars and Stripes, the official newspaper of the American expeditionary forces.

He was Francis M. Leahy of Lawrence, Massachusetts, and he had served in the ranks before he won his commission. He used to tell of the days when he was orderly to Captain Pershing in the Philippines. One day while he was resting with his men by the wayside a German shell came whizzing out of space just as the order arrived that the regiment fall in and move on.

The shell plowed up the earth and stretched on the ground several men who were just getting to their feet. It hit the tree against which Captain Leahy was leaning and snapped it off like a stalk of asparagus. A piece of shell struck him in the back and tore its way through his chest.

"Good-by, boys!" he said, and his head sagged forward.

Then it was as if, somewhere in the universe, an invisible commander had called, "Attention!" Captain Leahy raised his head. With clearing voice he called the name of the officer next in command.

"Lieutenant Hansen," he said, "the command is 'Forward!' See the boys through!"

Then he died.

Temperament and Watch.

That particular kinds of temperament exercise a baleful influence on watches seems to be a common experience.

"I once carried four in three months," writes a correspondent, "and all stopped. A watchmaker told me that they behaved as watches do when the spring of the balance gets magnetized, though why they should have done so he could not say."

The fact when mentioned to Prof. Sylvanus Thompson, distinguished electrician, noticed that the clock-stopper fidgeted a good deal, and ventured to suggest that such movements probably generated a small amount of frictional electricity at high tension, which might at times magnetize the spring.

One Frenchman's Sacrifice.

Thirteen sons dead, that represents part of the war's cost to a French farmer who lived at Reninghe, near Ypres—surely a record. He had 36 children, and 20 of his 22 sons fought on the various fronts. In 1917 the widow of one of the sons was killed by a German shell at Dunkirk. The farmer himself and one of his daughters met a tragic end. In October, 1914, they went to Lille to take part in celebrating the hundredth birthday of a relative. They were met on their return by a German patrol and were shot.

Making Mother-of-Pearl.

The secret of another German key industry has been discovered, the manufacture of artificial mother-of-pearl. J. W. H. Dew, a fellow of the British Royal Society of Arts, found the process after much patient experimenting.

Doctor Dew was engaged during the whole period of the war in reconstructing, step by step, the method of manufacture.

Artificial mother-of-pearl is used for making fancy buttons, dress trimmings and many other articles. Before the war most of it came from Germany.

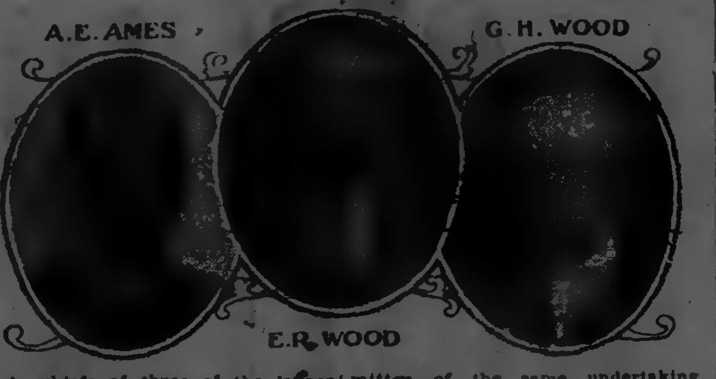
Rivals in Business Partners in Service



As chiefs of three of the larger brokerage houses of Canada the three men whose photographs are linked above have competed for the purchase of hundreds of millions of dollars' worth of municipal and Government bonds. G. Herbert Wood, once an employe, is now a rival of E. R. Wood; while Mr. Ames has for many years been a competitor of both.

But when it comes to Victory Loan or church campaigns they put their feet under the same committee table like brothers. Mr. Ames is chairman of the Methodist National Campaign, Mr. E. R. Wood is chairman of the special subscriptions committee of the same undertaking, while Mr. G. H. Wood is chairman of the Inter-Church Forward Movement with which the Methodist $4,000,000 effort is associated.

The trio are wealthy Methodist laymen who do not believe that their duty to religious or philanthropic work consists only in signing a cheque. Although they are public speakers they prefer to "grind" in committee, and it is due to them and to men of like spirit that the Methodist campaign, which reaches its climax early in February, has set specific and difficult programmes of work for every congregation of their denomination.

SIX MILLION JEWS ARE FACING DEATH

Starvation and Disease Cause Indescribable Suffering in Eastern Europe.

The hardships of this winter will mean death to thousands of Jews in Poland, unless outside aid intervenes at once according to Lieutenant Shelton Wright of the American Red Cross Commission to Poland, recently returned to the United States after months of relief work in eastern Europe.

He painted a vivid picture of this half-starved people, clad in rags, who are now creeping back toward their devastated homes after months of refugee wandering, and dying of starvation and typhus along the roads, as they go.

"Outside starvation, numerous diseases, attributed to malnutrition and typhus have killed men and women and children like flies," he said. "I remember a family trying to live under an over-turned waggon by the roadside. The mother was dead under a tree a few yards away—she had been dead for days. The father was stretched upon the ground dying of typhus. He died that day. Under the waggon were two little children, both under five, sick with typhus. An older child sat stupidly beside them—a girl driven out of [illegible]."

Many of the people are driven to making "bread" out of leaves and bark, and "soup" out of grass and water, Lieutenant Wright reported. There was unspeakable joy among them when the American ships, loaded with relief supplies purchased with the funds raised by the American Jewish Relief Committee and other American Jewish agencies, and American and Canadian Red Cross supplies were unloaded at Danzig and other ports. In spite of the fact that the American Jewish Relief agencies are spending almost $2,000,000 a month now on their relief work in Poland, and that the Red Cross is doing its work on so vast a scale, hundreds of thousands of Jews and Poles will die during the winter unless more aid comes.

"Every box-car full of refugees returning to their homes has in it those who die along the way, and those who have contracted typhus," Lieutenant Wright said. "The people try to avoid disease by keeping clean, but it is impossible to do so, under existing conditions. Even our nurses and doctors fall ill of typhus, a disease caused by filth and lice."

The Red Cross and the American Jewish Relief agencies are doing their utmost to keep both the Jews and the Gentiles in these stricken lands alive. Six million Jews in eastern Europe face death unless immediate shipments of food, clothing, and bedding from Canada and the United States reach them before the cold weather sets in.

An appeal for funds is to be made in Ontario and a generous response from this district is confidently expected.

Things You Simply Cannot Do.

You can't stand for five minutes without moving, if you are blindfolded.

You can't stand at the side of a room with both your feet lengthwise touching the wainscoting.

You can't get out of a chair without bending your body forward, or putting your feet under it; that is, if you are sitting squarely on the chair, and not on the edge of it.

You can't break a match if the match is laid across the nail of the middle finger of either hand, and passed under the first and third fingers of that hand, despite its seeming so easy at first sight.

You can't stand with your heels against the wall and pick up something from the floor.

You can't, unless you are quite a clever person, return to an upright position when placed two feet from a wall with your hands behind your back and your head against the wall.

Use for Distilleries.

Recently a distillery at Rome, Pa. was sold and is to be turned into an ice-making plant. Now announcement is made that a distillery on the outskirts of Lancaster has been purchased by a chemical company of Delaware county dye manufacturers, who will remove their entire plant to the Lancaster location. This dye manufacturing company is a war development. It has been proved that America can manufacture just as good dyestuffs as the Germans made.

COAST OVER COBBLE STONES

Sport in Madeira Has Many Advantages Over That to Which Northerners Are Accustomed.

Cobble stones may not appeal to the uninitiated as ideal for coasting purposes, but they admirably serve the purpose. It all depends on how steep is the hill the cobbles pave. In other words, it isn't the material that makes the "slide," but the pitch of the slope.

Those of us who are accustomed to sliding down snow-clad hills, or tiny ascents made slippery by ice know little of the thrill a slide may possess. For some measure of the delight in the sport is frequently minimized by the frigid air that rushes past our tingling ears and some measure of the enjoyment is entirely lost by the chills that grip our shivering bodies.

Imagine—if you can—the thrill of coasting down a hill so steep that your "sled" flies over the cobbles much as it would speed over crusted snow or an ice glare. Instead of icy air that almost chills you to the marrow at the thought, picture yourself in springtime garments and fanned by summer breezes.

If you can imagine such a picture you will have enjoyed at least some part of the sport of coasting in an island where there is no snow or ice. Down the cobble-paved road the "sled" flies. For ten minutes you flash along in breath-taking rush, then you begin to grow accustomed to the speed and the novelty of the sport and you take time to look about you. But—like most other enjoyments—just as you're beginning really to enjoy it to the utmost your coasting ends.

Where is this extraordinary slide? On the island of Madeira, which belongs to Portugal, and lies in the Atlantic ocean, off the coast of Morocco.

What's in A Name.

Naming a plant or flower after a celebrity is a delicate compliment, and one that no doubt at times adds something to the market value. But there are exceptions. That beautiful variety of the lobelia, for instance, known as "Emperor William," would perhaps hold up its imperial head a little more proudly just now if it had had a more fortunate christening.

Stray thoughts on these lines may have been flickering in the mind of a vendor in a London market-place as a likely looking buyer, while examining a box of the old favorite, asked what variety it was. Without deranging the muscle of an eyelid the coster (and she was a "lydy," too) replied: "Douglas Aig! Four-and-a-tanner a box."

To Keep Suffrage Mementoes.

A portrait of Susan B. Anthony, together with the table upon which was written the call for the Seneca Falls convention of 1848—the first active movement in America to give women the vote—has been presented to the Natural History museum, in Washington, by the National American Woman Suffrage association. The portrait was painted by Sarah J. Eddy, and for the last two years it has hung in the headquarters of the national association. It represents Miss Anthony not as an inflexible leader of a great cause, but as a smiling, gray-haired woman, upon whose knee children are laying roses. The table was presented to Miss Anthony by Elizabeth Cady Stanton, one of the convenors of the first convention.

Finnish Agriculture.

In spite of its northern position and its poor soil, agriculture is still the chief occupation of Finland, even though the cultivated area covers only 8.5 per cent of the land. The co-operative movement, the introduction and use of modern agricultural machinery and improved methods of cultivation have greatly helped in the development, but there is ample opportunity for further development. Cattle raising and dairying also have grown considerably the last decades. The lumber industry ranks second in importance, with about 61 per cent of the area of the country forest lands.

HOCKEY AT LAKEFIELD

High School Boys Win From Grove School; Oddfellows Beat Tigers

Lakefield, Feb. 5.— The first game of the series of matches in the town league was held in the skating rink on Tuesday evening at 7:30. The first game between the Lakefield High School and the Grove School, was a lively affair from the first ring of the bell. The final score was 12-11, giving the Lakefield High School a victory of one goal. Both teams were in excellent form, but no doubt the L. H. S. looked for an easier victory than they got. At the end of the first period the score was 7-5, but as soon as they were on the ice again, the Grove scored a goal, causing much applause.

Oddfellows Beat Tigers.

In the second game the Oddfellows beat the Tigers to the tune of 10-8. The game was close and some fast hockey was pulled off. The Tigers fought royally

At the end of the first period the score was 44 in the last half the score was up to 10-8.

There was great excitement amongst the youngsters. One little lad was heard to say when the game started "you don't want the United Farmers to win, do you?" Which did he mean?

The lineup was as follows:

The Golden Horseshoe

By VICTOR REDCLIFFE

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

There was a memory of the most tragic hour of young Bertram Wynn's life that he never forgot. He had left his home ten miles distant with a dark cloud hovering over past and present, and had sat down at the edge of a bluff lining a waterway to think, to cast up accounts socially, financially and morally. The outlook was desolate. As in an evil dream he summed up the disastrous climax to advice he had given his father as to investments that had brought John Wynn to the verge of bankruptcy. He had sought solitude to analyze the shock, to withstand its crushing weight if that seemed possible.

Darker and more forbidding grew his scowling brow as he faced the facts. Gloomier and more repelling seemed the future. His eyes fixed on vacancy, his lips grimly compressed, he drew a revolver from his pocket, turned it over speculatively in his hand and then hastily thrust it upon the ground behind him as the sound of approaching voices reached him.

A picture in vivid contrast to the dismal visions wrought by his desponding mentality was presented. Framed in the golden sunshine was a group of little children led by, or clinging to a lovely girl of about eighteen. She seemed to be their teacher and they just let out of school or returning to it. As she passed the spot where Bertram sat she seemed momentarily startled, and then as if impressed with the sadness and desperation depicted in his face half wavered, and passed on. Somehow that glance to Bertram seemed full of human sympathy and encouragement and as the group vanished the circumstance left an impress of joy and innocence that recalled his own bright youthful days. He was glad as, reaching behind him, he found that the revolver had slipped over the edge of bluff into the water beneath, and he arose shuddering at the spasm of despair, which had so nearly led him to take his own life.

Bertram Wynn went to a large city and chanced to secure board with an Italian family whose head had been a man of considerable means in his own country. This man took a fancy to Bertram and finally asked him to join him in an export business he had started. He had influence abroad and had secured some orders of magnitude. Bertram worked hard. At the end of the European war they secured a contract for a large consignment of machinery, duplicated it later on, made enormous profits, and, one year after leaving Chesterton, Bertram returned a rich man.

His experience had made him human and considerate, and his past dark days actuated him towards making brighter those of the unfortunate and unlucky whom he met. He first recouped his father's lost fortune and enabled him to complete some philanthropic plans his ill fortune had hindered. Bertram was kindly and friendly with all his old associates and had ever an open, helpful hand for the poor and lowly. One noon time, passing a group of workmen whom he knew near the plant where they labored, he was invited to engage in a game at quoits. In lieu of the usual metal discs ordinarily employed in the sport, horseshoes were used. Bertram entered into the game with zest. He was pitching one of the horseshoes when a child ran across between the stakes. The flying missile struck her directly on the head and the little girl fell bleeding and insensible.

Bertram at once picked up the victim of her own venturesomeness and hastened with her to the nearest physician. The latter was gravely concerned and stated that he feared bad results.

"Poor little creature!" he said. "She is a homeless orphan whom Mary Valle adopted. About two months since Miss Valle went to the city to try a position there in a seminary and has since been paying the board of her protege here."

"If you will give me the address of the young lady I will communicate with her," suggested Bertram.

"No, don't do that, until the crisis is past," advised the doctor. "It would only distress Miss Valle and probably cause her to give up a lucrative position."

"Meantime, then, let the little one be removed to our home," insisted Bertram.

Little Corinne passed the crisis safely and Bertram told the doctor he would go to Miss Valle and tell her of the accident and its outcome. He had heard so much of the kindly deeds of the young lady that he considered her deserving of an assurance that he and his father would gladly take from her shoulders the expense and responsibility she had so nobly assumed.

The glory of life seemed to open up for him with new sentiment as Mary Valle came into the room where he was awaiting her at the seminary, for in a flash he recognized her as the sympathetic girl of the day when death grazed him so closely.

But not until their double chance acquaintanceship had ended in mutual love did Bertram Wynn tell Mary Valle of how much he owed to her, and when they took little Corinne to their new home over the doorway of its living room they affixed a golden horseshoe.

Her Part.

The physician had diagnosed the young women's case and was compounding for her a bottle of medicine. He put two or three drugs into the bottle and then took up a jar of pepsin. The jar was almost empty and there was not enough pepsin to finish filling the patient's bottle. The physician looked around for another jar. He didn't find one, however. For a minute he was frankly perplexed, and then came sudden relief. He turned to the faucet and finished filling the bottle with water.

"Oh," the young woman's voice was very cool, "you needn't have done that. I can put in the water myself."

NICKEL BY NICKEL

Newspaper Man Dribbled His Profit to Beggar.

Little Transaction by Which Scribe Thought He Was to Make $2.65 Didn't End in Just That Desired Way.

"A newspaper friend of mine," said Mr. Goslington, "tells me of an unusual experience he has had, in fact is still having, with a beggar.

"He met this beggar first about a year ago. The circumstances attending this first meeting were novel and interesting and my friend wrote a little piece about it which was printed in his newspaper and for which he received $3. As he had given the beggar a nickel he figured that his net profit on this was $2.95. But:

"A couple of weeks later he again met this beggar, who again asked for a nickel, a request that my friend did not feel warranted in refusing. I don't think he would have refused anyway, my friend being an easy mark for beggars; but having profited by his original transaction with this beggar, he felt impelled to hand over this second nickel promptly, thus reducing his net on this little piece to $2.90.

"It wasn't long before my friend discovered that this beggar lived somewhere in his neighborhood and made that part of the town his quarry; for now he used to meet him here and there by intervals. Not always, by any means, when they met did the beggar approach him; commonly they passed each other as any other two might do, with no sign of recognition; but once in a while the beggar would ask for a nickel, which always my friend gave. In this way in the course of three months he gave up 35 cents, thus reducing the net of that $3 to $2.65. Then my friend had an idea.

"He foresaw that if this went on indefinitely, as there seemed every indication it would do, the beggar would get all of the $3, which to my friend seemed scarcely reasonable. But he did think that an even division would be no more than right to the beggar, and so when the $3 got down to $2.65 he set aside, in his mind, $1.15 as a drawing account to the beggar's credit, and he said to himself that when thus the original fund had been evenly divided he would stop giving and consider that he had done the square thing.

"Well, my friend tells me that, counting a nickel that the beggar drew yesterday, he has now drawn $1.40, so that now it is a question of a very few weeks only, three or four at the utmost, when the beggar will have drawn his full share.

"Then, my friend says, he is going to shut down and keep the rest himself; but what I think he will do will be to keep on paying till the whole three dollars is gone, his original profit being thus wiped out completely. I don't know what he can do then, unless he should write, covering all his experiences with this unusual beggar, another and longer story; moving then to another part of the city."

VISCOUNTESS RHONDDA.

She Is the World's Premier Business Woman.

Viscountess Rhondda (pronounced Rontha) is deemed not only England's premier big business woman but probably at the present time the most prominent business woman in the world. Bertha Krupp, in pre-war times, was regarded as a world industrial figure of great prominence. Lady Rhondda, however, is actively engaged in more business enterprises than was the well-known German woman. It has been asserted that she will be associated with a $30,000,000 deal for iron, steel, colliery and shipbuilding interests in the north of England.

Lady Rhondda is the only child and heiress of Lord Rhondda, and long was his trusted lieutenant. When he became Food Controller during the menacing days of the submarine campaign his place on the directorates of many great enterprises was taken by her.

Lord Rhondda's death would have made his viscounty extinct, as he had no male heirs, but by Act of "Special Remainder" King George perpetrated it by creating his daughter, Margaret Haig Thomas, a viscountess. She is the wife of Sir Humphrey Mackworth.

Viscountess Rhondda was appointed Controller of Women's Recruiting in 1918.

Aside from all her great business interests she is one of the most energetic of women-welfare workers in England. Her trip to America this year will give her an opportunity to study public health methods, in which she is greatly concerned. She will visit Canada in connection with business enterprises here, such as the trading and passenger boat services on the Peace River, which belonged to her father.

Lady Rhondda recently became deputy chairman of two large South Wales mining companies. She is chairman of Benatosan, Ltd., Cambrian Artificial Limb Co., Ltd., Lysberg, Ltd., Plisson & Lysberg (insurance), Ltd., Rhondda Engineering & Mining Co., Ltd., Sheppard & Sons, Ltd., the South Wales Printing & Publishing Co., Ltd., and is on the boards of 24 other commercial concerns.

Frog's Anatomy.

If size of skull were an index of brain-power, the frog would be an intellectual prodigy. Its cranium is huge, but, alas! its brain is very small.

The frog has only nine vertebrae—fewer than any other animal with a backbone possesses. Lacking ribs, it is obliged to swallow by gulps the air it breathes, instead of projecting its chest as we do and creating a vacuum for air to pour into.

Its pelvis hinges on to its backbone so as to give it a joint in the middle of its back, and it has another hinge in each foot. These extra joints are a great help in leaping.

Froggy is in his way the most wonderful animal we know, inasmuch as he begins life as a vegetable-eating fish (or the equivalent), and later on turns into a carnivorous air-breathing land quadruped.

A Good Citizen.

Mrs. Joseph Gates, who lives in the township of Amaranth, near Grand Valley, Ont., voted in the forenoon at the municipal elections at her own home, where No. 6 polling division was held. In the afternoon she gave birth to triplets—two girls and one boy.

The Gates of Gladness

By GEORGE ELMER COBB

(Copyright, 1917 by the Western Newspaper Union.)

It was the longing hope of Frances Hollings that she would be able to change the gates of gloom—as she considered the portals to the fenced-in little red country schoolhouse at Appleton—into the gates of gladness. She had just arranged for board and lodging with a widow lady at the scattered settlement.

"You'll have your crosses, dear," Mrs. Potter declared, "and the principal one will be the Royston boys."

"Who are the Royston boys?" questioned Frances apprehensively.

"Four—Jem, fourteen; Ned, his twin; Bob, twelve; Dick, ten. Did you notice the large house just beyond the depot surrounded by fir trees?"

"Why, yes, I did," announced Frances, "and I noticed, too, a tall, grave-faced, scholarly looking young man at the gate."

"That is Mr. Noel Burton," recited her talkative landlady, "and he is the adopted father of those four young torments. I fancy they have about worn him out with their pranks. They lead a rebellion at the school about once a month and your predecessor gave up his task in despair. There are other scholars who are troublesome, but the Roystons are simply unreachable.

"But does not Mr. Burton try to curb them?"

"He can't. About all he thinks about is his books, for he is a great student. The boys overrun him and he is too much occupied with what he calls a sense of duty to resist them. You see, when his sister, a widow, died, he promised to be a father to the little orphans, and a nice handful he has had!"

All this rather discouraged Frances, but by the time the school opened she had gathered up complete information as to the history and traits of all of the scholars and had decided upon a definite policy. She stood in the open doorway as the odd-twenty children trooped in. To each she extended a welcoming hand.

"I hope we are all going to be like a happy, helpful family this term," she said.

Jem Royston grunted ungraciously and slipped past the extended hand, but each of his brothers returned the greeting cheerily.

"Oh, I'm late again! I'm always late!" panted a girl of twelve, dashing breathlessly into the study room after the last stroke of the bell had sounded.

"This is Mercy Lisle, is it not?" queried Frances kindly.

"Yes'm. And I have to help with the dishes."

"I know all about it," interrupted Frances graciously, "and we are going to excuse you always, if you are a little behind time. You mustn't run this way, though, and get all warm and flustered. Now, children!"

All hands fixed their eyes on the new teacher. Miss Hollings took from the hook the ragged discolored fool's cap her predecessor had used. She walked to the stove and thrust it out of view. Then she picked up the ruler on the desk and beckoned to the elder Royston lad.

"You are stout and strong, Jem," she spoke. "Won't you please break the ruler in two and throw it out of the window? We won't need that kind of thing any more, will we?" and Jem swelled up with importance at this compliment to his strength and smartly showed off in reducing the ruler to splinters.

A strange spell of calm brooded over the little schoolroom that morning. Jem Royston alone exhibited some restlessness. At recess Miss Hollings called him up to her desk.

"You like to be outside, Jem, do you not?" she intimated.

"Should say I did! Huh! If I had my way I'd be in the woods half the time."

"That is a good trait. It shows that you must love nature, and the birds, and the flowers. I have an errand for you to do, if you will be so kind. It is to go down to the general store and get some crayons for blackboard service. You needn't come back here till afternoon school."

It was a strenuous week for the novice, though at times fearsome teacher-diplomat, but at its end she burst in upon Mrs. Porter with a radiant face.

"Oh, I am so happy!" she cried. "These Royston boys have become my most loyal champions."

"And Mr. Burton was over here an hour ago," said Mrs. Porter, "wondering what new mischief the lads were breeding, for they had changed so in a week he had got suspicious."

Mr. Burton told the same story over again to Frances in person a week later, and he seemed to entertain so favorable and grateful an opinion of the charming, friendly school teacher, that his delight was to stroll over to the little red schoolhouse and walk home with her.

"The town trustees are dreadfully anxious to have you sign for another year," Mrs. Porter said to Frances at the end of the school term.

"I—I have changed my plans," stammered Frances, in an embarrassed way.

"For the better, dear?" smiled the wise old widow. "And you deserve it. You managed those unruly boys as their teacher, and as their adopted mother you will certainly make perfect angels of them!"

More Pay for Song Writers.

The value of words is going up, at least in Rouen. There the courts have decided that the artistic values of the words and music of a poem are equal. At present in Canada the writer of the words of a song gets only a pittance of the royalties or a small sum outright at the start. In England many of the most popular ballads have brought their writers no more than two or three guineas, while the composer goes on cashing his royalty checks for years.

MILLBROOK

(Special Correspondence.)

Millbrook, Feb. 5.—Mrs. A. A. Birchard and daughter, May, have returned home after a few weeks' visit with Oakwood friends.

Some of the members of the Millbrook Methodist choir with their friends gave a surprise party at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Offa Williamson on Friday, Jan. 30th. Mr. and Mrs. Williamson gave them a hearty welcome and an enjoyable time was spent in music, contests, etc., after which a dainty lunch was served by the hostess.

The annual meeting of the W. A. of St. Thomas' Church was held on Tuesday, Jan. 17th, at the home of Mrs. Wood. After the devotional exercises the annual reports of the officers were read.

Mr. W. H. Coombe returned this week from Newark, New Jersey.

Mr. J. H. Wilson, of Port Hope, was in town on Tuesday attending a meeting of the County Orange Lodge.

Mr. T. H. McQuade of Omemee, was in town Friday on business.

Mrs. H. Taylor, of Garden Hill, and Mrs. Peck, of Sidney, Man., were guests of Mr. James and Miss May Hales last week.

Mr. J. M. Greene, of Peterborough, was a guest of Rev. and Mrs. Tucker on Monday.

Miss Alice Stewart is a guest of Peterborough friends.

Mrs. T. J. Lang was in Peterborough on Saturday.

Mr. H. Lush, switchboard inspector of this district for the Bell Telephone Co., was in town last week.

Mrs. M. B. J. McBean was a visitor to Peterborough on Saturday.

Mr. Geo. Mills, High school inspector of Toronto, was in town last week.

Mr. Geo. Johnston, of Toronto, was a guest of Millbrook friends last week.

The annual winter horse show will be held in Millbrook on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week. It is expected that it will be even a greater success than previous years.

A Mock Parliament.

A unique and instructive entertainment was given last Monday night in the Mt. Pleasant hall by members of Millbrook and Farmount Farmers' Clubs. For some weeks it had been known that young men and women of the community were preparing a bill which they intended to debate in public, for their own amusement and the delectation of their friends. Accordingly on the appointed night, a crowd which filled the hall, assembled to hear and see what was going to take place. Rumors floating around led them to expect something worth while. Nor were they disappointed. Upon the platform they found a regularly constituted legislative body assembled on the model of the Provincial Parliament, the speaker sitting enthroned and in his gown, the clerk at his desk, the government (seven strong) at his right, and the opposition (five strong) at his left.

A bill, entitled, "The Farmers' Pension Act," was introduced by the government, and given its three readings. Upon its second reading it was vigorously debated, and so powerful were the arguments of the opposition that for a time the fate of the bill hung in the balance. However, when a vote was taken party feeling overcame individual conviction and the measure was carried by a majority of two.

An amusing feature of the evening was the forcible election by the sergent-at-arms of a member of the opposition for the use of unparliamentary language upon the floor of the house.

The excellence of the debate and the faithfulness with which it followed the rules of regular parliamentary procedure reflect great credit upon the educative work being carried on by the clubs. Of the twelve speeches delivered at least three were of outstanding quality, if, indeed, none could be pronounced anything but splendid. From beginning to end a wealth of humor came cropping up, which kept the audience rocking with laughter. The aim of the clubs was not to debate a matter seriously, but rather to entertain and to instruct. In this they succeeded admirably. Selections by a male quartette brightened the evening also.

So pleased were some visiting members of the Millbrook community with the program that they suggested that it be put on in the Millbrook hall some time soon. Should this suggestion materialize, no one should miss this opportunity of having a good laugh and seeing a Provincial parliament at work.

Rebekah Installation.

On Tuesday evening, Jan. 27, the officers of Golden Sheaf Rebekah Lodge, No. 176, were installed by D. D. President Sister Murduff, of Peterborough, assisted by her regular staff, viz., Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Watt, of Peterborough; Mrs. Mark and Miss Way, of Lindsay; Mrs. P. I. Bentley and Mrs. J. W. Hamilton, of Millbrook.

The following are the officers installed:

Noble Grand— Sister Mabel Fallis

Vice-Grand—Sister Reneto Taggart.

Vice-Grand—Sister Gertrude Hambridge.

Recording Secretary—Sister Zella Bentley.

Financial Secretary—Sister Jane Henderson.

The degree team put on the initiatory degree as a class of candidates, after which a banquet was served followed by dancing.

Oddfellows' Dance.

The members of Millbrook Lodge, No. 308, I.O.O.F., held a very successful dance in the town hall Monday evening, February 2. Tucker's orchestra of Peterborough was present and furnished choice music, which was greatly enjoyed by all who attended. This is the first time the Oddfellows have given a dance in aid of the members of the subordinate and Rebekah lodges, and, it being such a success, it is hoped that another will be held in the near future.

Busy Burglars.

Saturday night or Sunday morning persons who have had a long "dry" spell broke into the station house and took French leave of a case of liquor and a few extra bottles from another case. It is reported that there were about fifteen cases at the station. It does not look as though everyone was going to continue on the "dry" list in Millbrook.

About the same time or thereabouts, someone passed through an opening made in a window in the rear of Mr. Jess Bryan's downtown store and rifled the till, which contained about six or seven dollars, but apparently the thief only wanted money, as nothing else was missing except the glass from the window. This recalls the similar experience that Mr. R. T. Adams had when he owned the store. The thief made his entrance in the same way by breaking the glass of the same window.

The short courses in agriculture and domestic science, which, during the past month have been conducted at Bethany by the Department of Agriculture, have been concluded. Both courses were well attended. During the course the regular lectures on agricultural subjects were supplemented by visits to the farms of prominent stock breeders, among whom were the following: E. O'Brien, F. Hatchett, Mr. Ward, Mr. McKinley and others, where practice in the judging of livestock was given.

The concluding exercises of the classes took the form of a banquet which was held on Thursday evening January 30, at which nearly one hundred guests were served. Toasts were proposed and replied to by the following, Rev. Mr. Weir, acting as toastmaster:

The Ladies; by Harry Lee and replied to by Miss M. McGill.

Modern Agriculture; by S. Staples, M. P. P., and replied to by D. Lowes.

Our Guests; by Arthur Jemison and replied to by Rev. Mr. Beckel and H. Earle.

The Ladies Class, by Frank Bigelow, replied to by Miss Lowes.

The Instructors, by Charles Reynolds, replied to by Miss Reek, Mr Murdock and E. K. Hampson.

The Bethany J. F. I. A.; by Wilfred Wilson, replied to by John Payne.

At the conclusion of the class the members of the Agricultural class organized into a Junior Farmers Improvement Association, of which the following are the officers:

President— Frank Bigelow.

Vice-President— Leslie Laing.

Secretary-Treasurer— Arthur Jemison.

Board of Management— Oswald Lowes, Harry Lee, Bernard Preston.

Auditors— Percy Preston, Earl McGill.

The objects of the Association are to encourage agricultural investigation, cooperative movement and social activity in their district.

St. Thomas' Church S. S.

The town hall, Millbrook was packed with an enthusiastic audience on Tuesday evening, February 3rd. The event that called forth such enthusiasm was the annual entertainment of St. Thomas' Church S. S.

The program was one of the best ever given by the members of the school. The novel and original comic operetta "The Bogus School Inspector," was splendidly given by the senior scholars as also was the amusing playette "Christmas with the Ruggles," and a Holly Drill. The Juniors were just as clever in rendering the following dialogues: "A Rag Doll," "A Sermon to the Grown-ups," "The Sick Doll," and "The Sandman.'

The hearty singing of the national anthem closed a real enjoyable entertainment. Much credit is due Mr. R. Stone for his valuable assistance in connection with the getting up of such a delightful program.

Men's Banquet.

On Monday evening in the basement of the Methodist Church, about seventy men assembled, and partook of an excellent supper provided by the ladies, and served in excellent style by the young men of the teen age. The tables were nicely set and decorated.

Mr. J. M. Greene, of Peterborough was the principal speaker. His address was in connection with the Forward Movement scheme, and in a most intelligent manner showed the great need of more men for missionaries in foreign fields, and for greater financial support to the church's work. Mr Greene is a clear and forceful speaker and no doubt much good will result from his visit to town.

Rev. Jos. Wilks and the pastor, Rev. S. T. Tucker, also gave brief addresses, and added their plea for increased activity among the men of the Church.

Mr. Percy Stinson, G. T. R agent, was chairman and his address was also greatly appreciated.

Mr. T. H. Sickler also made a few brief remarks.

There was singing, and during the supper Miss Stella Hetherington played several selections which were much enjoyed.

A vote of thanks to Mr. Greene was moved by Mr. G. E. Burnham, seconded by Mr. W. F. Fallis and a vote of thanks to the ladies was moved by Mr. T.H. Sickler, seconded by Mr. J. W. Hamilton.

Both were unanimously carried. Altogether the evening was enjoyable and profitable.

The national anthem was sung and Rev. S. T. Tucker closed the proceedings with prayer

"WAS A BLESSING" SAYS ROBT. O'NEILL

DARTMOUTH COUPLE ARE RESTORED TO HEALTH AFTER TAKING TANLAC.

"When I saw what Tanlac did for my wife I began taking it and now both of us are in the very best of health and I have gone back to my work after I had to give it up," was the unusual statement made just the other day by Robert O'Neil who lives in Woodside, Dartmouth, Nova Scotia.

"My wife," continued Mr. O'Neil, "had been troubled with a bad case of indigestion for over fifteen years. She had practically no appetite at all and what she did eat disagreed with her and caused her to be belching up gas and undigested food for hours afterwards. She would bloat up terribly with gas and would have awful cramping pains, and sometimes at night she would be so bad off she could hardly get a wink of sleep. She was troubled with constipation and was subject to sick headaches. She lost fifteen pounds in weight and was so nervous and miserable she would have to go to bed almost every day and rest awhile.

"Every medicine she tried failed to do her a particle of good until she began taking Tanlac and the way it went after her troubles made it look like Tanlac was made specially for her. She never has a touch of indigestion now and can eat anything she wants without being troubled in the least. The headaches and nervousness have all left her and she is no longer constipated. She sleeps sound at night, is built up in every way and is gaining in weight and strength right along.

"I was in a general run-down condition, felt tired and worn out all the time and just seemed to be giving out all at once. I had no appetite and finally got so weak I had to quit work. Tanlac had helped my wife so much that I made up my mind to try it and it has certainly done the work for me just like it did for her. I have taken two bottles and my appetite has come back. I am sleeping better and just feeling so fine that I have gone back to work. Tanlac has certainly been a blessing to my wife and myself and it is a real pleasure for us to tell others about it."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

PETES TRIUMPH OVER LINDSAY BY 8 TO 3; TIE FIRST PERIOD AND LEAD NEXT TWO NOW PLAY OSHAWA FRIDAY AND MONDAY

Wonderful Work by Peterbcro Goaler Stopped Lindsay Early in Game and Home Team Fell Before Hard Checking and Speed of Visitors—Petes Scored Three in Twice as Many Minutes in Second Period—Team Supported by Four Hundred Followers.

After holding Lindsay to a solitary tally and getting a counter themselves in the first twenty minutes of the second game in the Intermediate O.H.A. play-off at Lindsay last night, the Petes beat the home crowd three to nil in the second period and four to two in the third and last period, making the final score eight to three, and thirteen to eight on the round. Thus Lindsay was eliminated from the race, and Peterborough will now go up against Oshawa, playing the first game in Oshawa tomorrow night, and the second game here next Monday night. The winners last night displayed great possibilities and with proper handling should give a good account of themselves against the Lakeshore team.

The score in the case of last night's battle indicates pretty well, the merits of the two teams. At the same time Lindsay might have scored oftener in the initial session, had it not been for the sterling work of "Mickey" Murray between the flags. The Peterborough goaler was almost unbeatable last night, three shots getting through him—a scoop shot, the first score of the game; a slider from well out, and the third and last, one banged in after a scrimmage. Murray was well supported by Pete Thornton and Halpin, who saw to it that the opposition did not get close in for their shots. Coombs, the much discussed marksman on the Lindsay team, got through once but Murray blocked the rubber.

Three in a Row.

And when Lindsay failed to gather a lead in the first period, they lost their only chance to land the game. The Petes' speed and combination plays in the second session left the other fellows far behind and they didn't look very good. The Petes' hard checking, too, played havoc and when they continued it into the third period, Lindsay cracked under the strain. So fast were the Petes travelling that they scored three in a row in twice as many minutes.

Team Well Supported.

The gate receipts received a boost from the Petes' following, who were there four hundred strong. Upwards of a hundred went from Peterborough on the regular train and Louis Yeotes' special carried three hundred more. Economy sales had nothing on the wild scramble outside the Lindsay rink. Everybody wanted to get in at once, fearing lack of accommodation. But all got through and the more enthusiastic congregated in the south bleachers. The reception they gave the Peterborough team when the players reached the ice was a feature of the night. It was one long roar, and was not exceeded in strength even when Lornie Rose notched the first tally for his team and tied the score.

Lou Marsh handled the bell and held the players well in hand. He ruled against the Petes in the second period when a high shot from Halpin dropped into the nets and bounced out. The Lindsay goal umpire wasn't quite certain for he unfurled his flag and then as quickly changed his mind. Marsh decided not to allow a score, and nobody from the Petes' camp cared very much as at that time the Lindsay lads were hopelessly at sea before the dizzy pace set and kept up by their opponents.

The teams were:

Lindsay Scores First.

The first score of the night came after two minutes of play, and Lindsay was having the better of the battle, Murray being called upon to move lively. Carew did the trick after gaining the puck on a pass out from the corner. He was unguarded at the time. Carew drew the first penalty for upsetting Thornton and Lipsett was the next victim. Lindsay continued to set the pace and kept the Petes well on the defensive, giving Murray plenty to do. Finally after ten minutes, Lornie Rose getting the rubber, sent a hard one from the boards and O'Loughlin was beaten. The game was fast and furious for the remainder of the session.

Shortly after the rest, George Evans put the Petes in the lead with a beautiful side shot that followed some nice stick-handling. Flavelle rushed with Coombs and the latter taking the shot missed an open chance, and gave Murray an opportunity to add to his already splendid performance. He repeated when Carew got a shot dead on. Halpin took the puck and shot high, the rubber landing in the nets and bounding out, no score being allowed. The Petes' defence man tried again with the Rose brothers, completing a pretty combined play, on which Ray Rose shot and tallied, giving the Petes a two goal lead. With an offside called out from the Lindsay nets, Lornie Rose took a pass from Ray Rose and made it 4 to 1 for the visitors.

Some Fast Work.

Lindsay tried hard to come back in the last period, and when Coombs slid one along the ice, beating Murray, the team tried all the harder. But the spurt was short-lived. Pete Thornton broke it up by scoring on a pass from Lornie Rose. Two minutes later Thornton combined with Halpin, the latter scoring and Lornie Rose followed it up with an individual score. Flavelle scooped one in after a scrimmage in front of Murray but Pete Thornton got it back by duplicating Rose's performance and scoring lone-handed, making it eight to three just before the last bell sounded.

Transform Historic Westminster.

Prominent citizens of London are planning to rebuild the district around Westminster abbey as a memorial to those who distinguished themselves in the world war. The improvements include the construction of a great avenue, 120 feet wide, and a new Lambeth bridge. The design for the bridge will be chosen from plans submitted by architects from all over the world. Splendid buildings are projected for the University of London, for a Shakespearean theater, and for arts and science exhibits. The new avenue will contain groups of statuary commemorating the heroic deeds of the British, Canadian, New Zealand and Australian forces, as well as those of Britain's allies. It is intended to make this the finest and most impressive monumental avenue in the British empire.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Big Game Now Extinct

SPEAKING of the brontosaurus, if anyone ever did, one might paraphrase:

"I never saw a dinosaur.

"I never hoped to see one."

Yet, according to reports accredited to M. Capell, Belgian explorer, a live dinosaur, a brontosaurus, has been found in Africa.

Now that the dinosaur is with us, potentially, big game enthusiasts will be interested in this description of prehistoric big game, quoted from a communication to the National Geographic Society by Barnum Brown:

"To-day we must go to Africa for the biggest game, but there was a time in the dim distant past when America produced animals larger than any now living. That was so long ago that nothing remains of these creatures except their bones, any they are turned to stone.

"The animals are dinosaurs; for the moment we will call them lizards—not the creeping, crawling kind, but huge reptiles that stalked upright through the jungles, rivaling in size the elephant, the hippopotamus and the rhinoceros.

"The place is Alberta, Canada, and the time of their existence 3,000,000 years ago.

"In these marshes of prehistoric times dwelt a host of reptiles, some large, some small, and of various forms, flesh-eaters and herb-eaters, but all sharing certain characters in common and known as dinosaurs. Not any were closely related to any living reptile, yet they had some characters common to the lizards, crocodiles and birds.

"Of the kinds characteristic of the period one species, an herb-eater named Trachodon, was more than 30 feet long and about 16 feet high when standing erect. Its head, with broadly expanded mouth, resembles that of a duck, but back of the beak there are more than 2,000 small teeth, disposed in many vertical rows, each containing several individual teeth, the new ones coming up from below as the old ones wore out.

"The long hind legs terminated in three large hoofed toes, and the shorter slender front feet were partly webbed. A long, thin, slender tail acted as a powerful swimming organ, and the body was covered with rough tuberculate skin. Having no means of defence, it lived chiefly in the water, where is was free from attacks of the flesh-eaters.

"Along the shores lived Ornithomimus, bird mimic, as the name implies, one of the most remarkable of the dinosaurs. A skeleton found in 1913 shows it to have been a toothless creature, the jaws sheathed like the beak of a bird.

"The bones were light and pneumatic like those of birds, but the skeleton closely resembles that of the flesh-eating dinosaurs. It was about 12 feet in length, with long, slender hind legs and shorter front legs. This was an agile creature, different from the typical flesh-eaters in feeding habits and doubtless a shore-living type that may have fed on crustaceans.

"On land, there were hoofed quadrupedal herbivorous kinds, some, like Monoclonius, having an immense skull, six feet in length, with three horns, a short one over each eye and a longer one above the nose. The jaws terminated in a sharp clipping beak, like that of a turtle, and further back in the mouth there were rows of double-rooted teeth. The back of the skull was developed into a broad shield, with scalloped border, extending over the neck. It was ancestral to the later Triceratops.

"Strangest of all was the herbivorous Ankylosaurus, a stocky, short-legged, big-bodied creature, completely encased in armor. Dermal plates covered the skull, followed by rings of plates over the neck and rows of flat plates over the back and hips. Its tail terminated in a huge club, and the belly was covered by a pliable mosaic of small, close-set plates. It was further protected by a movable plate that could be dropped down like a shutter over each eye, thus completing its protection from insects and formidable foes."

The Horror in the Car

By J. E. HUNGERFORD

(Copyright.)

Bananas! Bananas everywhere! Dozens of 'em! Hundreds of 'em! I leaned against the wall of the car and sighed contentedly. I pinched myself to see if it was me—me in a car of bananas. It was me, and there were the bananas, sack upon sack of them, piled three-fourths of the way to the ceiling.

It was kind of close quarters for solid comfort, but as long as I could eat—eat bountifully, luxuriously, unstintedly, I sure didn't have any kick coming. Then I thought of the seal clerk with the spectacles, and I laughed as I reflected how I'd crawled under the car from the off side, with him not ten feet away. Well, I had beat him to it. I was sealed in, and hoboing had its soft spots after all.

Everything was so comfortable that I began to cast around for objections. I found one. It was cold in that car, darned cold, and I proceeded to turn up my coat collar and snuggle cosily between two sacks. I must have laid there at least three minutes before it occurred to me that I was hungry.

Think of it, three whole minutes in a car of bananas, and not realize you're hungry! Well, anyhow, I got my knife to work and ripped open a sack in a jiffy. I was a pirate all right. Who wouldn't have been a pirate?

It was hours later, and I'd transferred my attention to another bunch. No, I hadn't finished the first sack—it was mostly green, but I'd made a pretty good-sized aperture in the second when my knife slipped from my fingers.

I fished around in my pockets and dug up a match. It was the last match I had. I lit it with some reluctance and held it far down, but the knife had clean vanished.

As I was transferring the burnt end to my left hand to prolong its life, I happened to glance at the rent I had made in the gunny sack, and, as I did so, I sat bolt upright, nearly butting a hole through the roof. There—not two feet from my face—was a big, hideous, hairy creature, about the size of a silver dollar.

For a second I sat staring at it, transfixed. The match seared my fingers, flickered, and went out, and then suddenly I came to my senses and began to crawl. I fled, terror-stricken, to the doors and threw my weight against them. I beat and pounded them frantically. I bumped and tore around over those sacks like a man bereft of reason, and then, as the full realization of my position forced itself upon me, I screamed at the top of my voice.

I thought of all the stories I had heard and read of tarantulas, and as they stood out vividly, every miserable, soul-racking detail of them, I was wild with horror. I didn't have a chance against that thing there in the dark. It might even now be making its way stealthily toward me.

I pulled myself together and rolled over into a corner, weak and shivering. Then the thought that there might be others—others right where I was lying, brought me to my knees again with a groan of despair. There must be others! There were others! A cold sweat stood out on my body, and I knelt there bereft of every atom of manhood, quaking and cowering in the dark.

Through the vortex of my emotions there came suddenly a new impression—the sensation as of something crawling. It was nothing definite, but it was intensely real. Something was crawling! Crawling slowly and methodically up my left leg! No, it was my right leg! Again it was my left leg! I started to reach for it, then suddenly stopped, my arm poised rigidly. If I did reach—it touched it, it would sting—sting quicker!

I sat there in an agony of suspense, waiting for it to strike. Waiting—waiting—waiting, for an eternity, but it didn't strike! It had even ceased crawling.

I chuckled softly, then I laughed. I was going insane. I reached down suddenly and clapped my hand over the spot where the crawling had ceased, but there was nothing. I ran my hand over my entire body, still there was nothing.

I felt sick and faint, and leaned wearily against the car wall. As I did so, my face touched something cold—cold and clammy and soft. I started back screaming, then I laughed again—I was insane—I had leaned against my own hand.

To assure myself of this, for I was sure of nothing, I ran my palm slowly along the splintered surface of the wall, and then with a howl of terror I rolled over on the sacks.

I had touched something hairy—something soft—something— I sat up with an impelling desire to reach out again. I could stand the torture no longer. I wanted to know where I stood. I wanted a fighting chance.

I had suddenly lost all sense of fear. My nerves were strung to the snapping point. I groped my hand along the wall, up and down and sideways. There was nothing—nothing!

It was another prank of the imagination—it was— My fingers tightened! My blood seemed to congeal! I felt it! I had hold of it! It gave easily under my fingers! Why didn't it sting? Why didn't it even hiss? I couldn't let go—I was riveted to the spot—

I must have fainted and rolled over against the doors. I remember vaguely my head striking something, then I knew no more.

How long I laid there I don't know. When I regained consciousness I was stretched out on a pile of sawdust in the shadow of an icehouse, and a man was bending over me with a bucket. There was a circle of curious faces leaning close about me.

The seal clerk had found me when he opened the car for inspection and ventilation. I told him my story, and even climbed back in the car and pointed out the sack where had lurked the venomous horror.

While they were prodding about with sticks and clubs, my eyes swept the walls. Then I started for the door.

"There it is!" I yelled hoarsely. "Over there! See?" Somebody swung a lantern around so that the light fell directly on the spot.

"Huh!" shouted a voice. "The bo's dippy."

I looked closer, then swore. For there in the exact spot where I had run my hand—where I had suffered momentarily the tortures of hades, was a good-sized bunch of sack ravelings, held securely by the splintered surface of the wood.

I didn't wait for any more. I climbed out of that refrigerator and made a quick getaway, for there had come to me the sudden realization of what might happen if they failed to locate the tarantula and found the slashed banana sack instead.

But it was in there—heaven knows it was there, and here's hoping they found it.

There is said to be little likelihood of an arrest for the murder at Chelsea, England, of Frances Buxton, nee Poole, formerly of Toronto.

COULDN'T MATCH THAT STORY

Senator Set Altogether Too Fast a Pace for Even Veteran Bore to Follow.

A senator was entertaining some friends with stories about the Arizona desert, when a bore joined the party.

This bore was the kind of a chap that always laughs in the wrong place and spoils a story by trying to guess its climax. The senator undertook to silence him.

"Poor Ferguson!" he said. "That was a close shave he had in the desert last August."

"Sunstroke, of course," said the bore.

"No, not exactly," said the senator. "You see, Ferguson stumbled accidentally on the Cauldron—our famous spring, you know, that gushes out of the rock at freezing point and immediately begins to boil from the fierce heat of the sun."

"Of course, of course," said the bore. "And what happened to Ferguson? Did he fall in the cauldron, and boil to death? Get on with your story, man."

"Ferguson fell in," said the senator, "but he managed to scramble out again. The peril, however, was not yet over for him. Our Arizona air, you see, is so dry that it absorbs moisture with astonishing rapidity. Well, the boiling water in Ferguson's clothes evaporated so fast that the poor fellow instantly froze stiff."

"I see," said the bore. "He died of cold. Well, that reminds me—"

"No, he didn't die," said the senator. "He almost died, but he had a miraculous escape. In his stiff-frozen state, you understand, he began to shiver with chill, and he shivered so hard that in a few moments he became overheated and would have succumbed to sunstroke if he hadn't providentially broken into a cold sweat."

Recipient of Old Honor.

Prince Ferdinand Radziwill, who recently presided at the opening of the new Polish parliament, is a distant relative of the Hohenzollerns and one of the pillars of the old Polish nobility. The honor accorded Prince Radziwill was declared to be absolutely without political significance, but entirely a matter of custom. The prince came into the temporary presidency by reason of seniority only. He is eighty-five years old and is the oldest member on the floor of parliament. By virtue of a similar custom the youngest two members of the house, a socialist and a Catholic priest, neither of them more than twenty-five years old, acted as vice presidents and sat to left and right of the old nobleman all through the first session, assisting him in the carrying on of his duties.

Ships and Their Names.

Peace has brought with it the incidental discussion in a section of the English press of the meaning of and reason for the names of certain ships in the British navy. Truly my lords of the admiralty, acting as sponsors, have gone to some strange sources for the nomenclature. Not merely countries and cities have been drawn upon, but many of the creatures figuring in a menagerie have been freely utilized. Then there are the vessels named after the public schools and institutions of England, such as Uppingham, Tonbridge, Westminster, Rugby, Cheltenham, Epsom and so on. If Eton should feel jealous over the matter of its neglect it can take a kind of reflected comfort in the fact that there is a destroyer called Windsor.

Weights a Locomotive Hauls.

"How much more weight does the average passenger locomotive have to haul than in the days before the advent of the steel car?" I asked an expert Philadelphia locomotive builder.

"The old wooden passenger car weighed 40,000 to 60,000 pounds," he answered.

"The steel suburban car weighs 90,000 pounds.

"The larger steel car weighs 110,000 pounds.

"A parlor car weighs 115,000 pounds and the sleeping car 140,000.

"As for the locomotive itself, the heavy Pacific type for passenger traffic weighs 280,000 to 300,000 pounds. The freight locomotives, of course, go far beyond this figure, to more than 800,000 pounds."—Philadelphia Ledger.

HAVE REAL CHARM

Old South Carolina Churches Well Worth Visit.

St. Andrew's, Built in 1702, Once Notable Aristocratic House of Worship—Goose Creek Edifice Also Interesting.

The charm to some places is that the changes to them come slowly, and this is the atmosphere that envelopes Charleston, S. C., a town of quaint old streets, musty churches, lovely old trees, and hand-wrought iron doors and gates that first opened to admit subjects of a British king.

One leaves all this behind and rides out over 12 miles of the roughest of country roads under trees decorated with long ghostlike strands of Spanish moss to enter a church whose doors swing open but once a year. It is St. Andrew's church, in St. Andrew's parish, and it opens once annually because this was the condition stipulated in the original crown grant. St. Andrew's church was built in 1702. For a century or more it was the regular Sunday meeting place of rich and aristocratic Southerners who lived on adjoining plantations, and it is not difficult on a warm spring day to stand under the moss-hung trees near the church and visualize the past. The men and women dressed in gay silks and satins for church-going in those days, and they rode to service in grand style with a pair of handsome horses drawing a commodious carriage, with a negro slave on the box, and the negroes riding or walking behind.

St. Andrew's is not the only church that is opened but once a year. Goose Creek church, some ten miles away, and built in 1706, was also built under a crown grant with the same provision. With the growth of the city, known then as "Charleston by the Sea," and with better roads, the attendance at the small parish churches diminished. When the last of these plantations was reduced in grandeur and wealth by the Civil war, and the slaves were scattered all over the globe, those in whom was embodied the spirit of the past had gone to their fathers.

A love of tradition, a reverence for the past that makes Charleston charming, sees to it that the order of the royal grant is obeyed, and a rusty key is turned in a rusty lock once a year; in St. Andrew's on Easter Sunday, and in Goose Creek the Sunday after. And Charleston fills up its gasoline tanks on these days and rides out; and those who haven't automobiles or other personal means of conveyance, go out by special train, for so far has the present dared to intrude on the past that special excursions are run by the railroad for these occasions.

Woman As a Bull Fighter.

One would have thought that to enter into combat with a bull demanded more courage than any member of the gentler sex possesses. But even this dangerous calling has had its female follower, London Tit-Bits states. "Johanna Maestrick was the name of the lady in question. At an early age she was taken to see a bull fight in Portugal. Her feminine susceptibilities, far from revolting at the spectacle, were aroused to a keen desire and determination to emulate the prowess of the toreador. A teacher of the art was so struck with her keenness, physique, and beauty that he offered to become her instructor and to train her as a torera. She made her first appearance in the arena at Oporto. The trial proved that her agility and skill were equal to her courage, for she quickly laid out two ferocious bulls and rode off in triumph amid thunders of applause.

Antarctic "Shelf Ice."

From the work of recent explorations, Sir Douglas Mawson concludes that the rock foundation on which the Antarctic ice cap rests is very irregular, partly above sea level and partly below, and that its thickness, which is very variable, may reach a maximum of several thousand feet. Under the thickest portions the static pressure at the base may be as great as one ton per square inch. Under such a covering there may be a considerable accumulation of ground heat, and it is assumed that the under portion of the ice mass is undoubtedly soft and plastic. Where the sea breaks up the ice at a rate faster than the flow, the sea front is substantially the coast line. But elsewhere, as in the Great Ross barrier and the Shackleton shelf, the supply of ice exceeds the rate of erosion at the sea front, and the overflow from the land maintains a thick sheet of "shelf ice" extending far out to sea. The sea front of the ice cap, at the present rate of advance or flowing out, is estimated to have left the center in the seventh century of our era.

Fireproofing Concrete Columns.

We have been wont to look upon concrete as capable of resisting a great deal of heat, and it may seem strange to think of coating it with a fireproof material. However, there are conditions under which this is necessary. The bureau of standards has been investigating the condition of concrete which has passed through conflagrations, and has found that if the concrete is made with gravel, particularly siliceous gravel, there is a tendency for the stones to burst in extreme heat, which disintegrates the concrete. Accordingly it is recommended that gravel be avoided wherever possible, but if impossible the gravel concrete may be protected from extreme heat by coating it with an inch of cement held in place by a wire mesh. Plasters may also be used in which asbestos is the principal constituent.—Scientific American.

Deadly Spiders.

We have in this country a small spider, commonly known as the "black widow," which is very deadly. It has red spots on its abdomen. There is no question of the fact that its bite is often fatal.

Rather odd is the fact that this species of spider is found in most parts of the world. In New Zealand it is called the "katipo;" in Santo Domingo the "red rump." Not only does it kill, but the death it inflicts is inconceivably frightful. The brain is affected, and a dropsy of the skin may distort the victim's features to such an extent as to render him unrecognizable.

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

Sounds a Flier Hears.

Gliding in an airplane with engine switched off, the shout of a man can be heard distinctly at the height of 1,600 feet, the sharp note of a mole cricket at 2,500 feet, and the croakings of frogs at 3,000 feet.

At 3,225 feet a man's voice and the rolling of a cart can be distinguished; at 4,550 feet the roll of a drum and the music of an orchestra; at 5,000, the crowing of a cock, the sound of a church bell, and sometimes the shouting of men and women; at 900 feet higher still, the report of a musket and the barking of a dog.

The noise of a railway train penetrates to a height of 8,200 feet, and the whistle of a locomotive to nearly 10,000 feet.

English as We Speak It.

The other day a Toronto city school superintendent promoted a teacher to the English department in the High School. He was discussing the work with her when she suddenly said, "Oh, Mr. ——, it's going to be so hard for me. You see I've always used so much slang and now when I teach English I won't dare use any more."

"Slang," ejaculated that superintendent. "Well, believe me, Alice, you'll have to cut that out now."

Conan Doyle's "Familiar."

Sir Arthur Conan Doyle's "familiar" proved of very practical assistance to him the other day.

The creator of "Sherlock Holmes" walked into his study, and after some indecision drifted over to the wastepaper basket, plunged his arm into the litter, and—extracted a valuable war office document relating to the history of the war! It had blown from the table into the basket.

"I've never done such a thing before," said Sir Arthur, in narrating the circumstances, and the unusual course of action which he followed with such good results he attributes wholly to the promptings of his "familiar."—London Chronicle.

Closed Chapter of History.

The French newspaper L'Eclair, which, in one of its recent issues, published a note on the seal used by Jules Favre at Versailles in 1871, has received a letter bearing the signature "Louis, prince de Bourbon." The writer protests against the expression, used by L'Eclair, "faux Louis XVII," as applied to his father, Naundorff; and the writer incloses a certificate in which Naundorff is described as duke of Normandy, Louis XVII. It has not sufficed of over 100 years completely to silence that particular chapter of French history. As L'Eclair remarks, "Ever since the 8th of June, 1795, the case was settled for us."

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Do Women Read Newspaper Advertising

¶ Since Women do over 80 per cent of the Retail buying that is done, Advertisers are constantly investigating the Appeal which Advertising mediums exert upon Women. This fact is continually before manufactures in every line, and recently the Bureau of Investigation was asked to conduct an investigation to show how much Underwear for Men was bought by Women, so that the manufacturer who made the request could write his advertisements accordingly.

¶ Many investigations have been made by Women's Clubs, Merchants' Organizations, Statistical Bureaus, and the like, but while these inquiries invariably show that Women are more influenced by Newspaper Advertising that by any other kind, they are inconclusive because of the high percentage of non-commital or unsatisfactory replies.

¶ The question broadly answers itself in that Women do most of the buying, and Newspapers carry far more Advertising than all other mediums combined.

HIS PATH ONE OF BLESSINGS

Beautiful Legend of "Holy Shadow" Might Well Serve as an Inspiration to All.

It is a French legend, so old that we do not know when it was written, or rather when it grew. We may not believe in the miracle giving, but in the heart of the story lies an exquisite pearl of truth. And thus runs the old legend.

A very long time ago there dwelt upon the earth a saint so good that the angels themselves came down from heaven to see how any mortal could live so holy and beautiful a life. They found a man going about his daily duty in simple faithfulness, diffusing an atmosphere of love as the star diffuses light, and the flower fragrance without being aware of it. Watching with eager interest, they saw that two words summed up his day. He gave and forgave.

Not that these words fell from his lips, but they were expressed in his pleasant smile, in his kindness, forbearance and charity.

Then the angels prayed to God, asking, "O Lord, grant him the gift of miracles!" The answer quickly came, "I will; ask him what gift it shall be."

So the angels asked the holy man, "Would you like to have the touch of your hands heal the sick?" But he answered, "No; that is God's work." Again they asked, "Would you like to convert guilty souls, and bring back wandering hearts to the right path?"

"No," he replied, "that is also the work of God. I pray; I do not convert."

"Would you like to become a model of patience, attracting men by the luster of your virtues, thus glorifying God?"

Still he answered, "No; if men should become attached to me they would be further from God and estranged from him. The Lord has other means of glorifying himself."

Filled with astonishment, they cried: "What, then, do you desire?"

The saint smiled, and asked in turn, "What can I wish for? That God give me his grace; with that shall I not have everything?"

But the angels insisted that he must choose a miracle, or have one chosen for him.

"Very well," he said at length, weary of their importunity. "I wish that I may do a great deal of good without ever knowing it."

How were they to carry out such a wish? Finally they hit upon the following plan: Every time the saint's shadow should fall behind him or on either side where he could not see it, this shadow would have the power to cure disease, soothe pain, and comfort the sorrowing.

And so the wish was fulfilled. When the dear old man walked abroad, his shadow, thrown on the ground on either side or behind him, made arid paths moist, gave fresh greenness to withered vegetation, brought back music to the parched, dried-up brooks, and roses to the pale cheeks of suffering little children, and diffused joy everywhere.

The saint went simply about his daily duties, knowing nothing of the blessedness of his falling shadow. At last his very name was forgotten and he was reverently called "The Holy Shadow."—Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Ukrainians in Canada.

There are about 220,000 Ukrainians in the Canadian Northwest. They began to emigrate from their native land in the '90s. Most of them were farmers, and today they occupy whole counties in Alberta and Saskatchewan. They were not illiterate when they came to America and they have been busily educating themselves during the last 20 years.

There is a Ukrainian publishing house in Winnipeg. This concern does not merely issue a foreign language newspaper. It is gradually bringing out reprints of all that is best in Ukrainian literature. The Ukrainian farmer in Canada has a row of well-filled bookshelves such as the average American farmer might not be able to show.

English Lenses Superior.

When aero-photography commenced to play its great part in the war, it was found that the German-made lenses would do the work of picturing from above far better than British-made lenses. But the English opticians set to work, and in a short time they produced lenses that beat the German product fair and square. Captured aero-photographic apparatus during the latter part of the war showed that the lenses were inferior in quality to those made in Britain. No German-made lens has yet been found that would picture a barbed wire entanglement from a height of three miles, but the British product would, and very often did.

DARING DUKE OF JASSY

STRANGE WAR-TIME ADVENTURES OF KLONDYKE BOYLE.

Among the Romances of the Great War Is the Career of the Canadian Who Could Have Saved the Russian Royal Family, If They Had Trusted His Skill.

If the Duke of Jassy were to come over from Roumania and walk down Yonge street, Toronto, many a man would stop him on the street and call him "Joe." Before he became a Roumanian duke he was known as Col. Joe Boyle or "Klondyke" Boyle. He made money in the mining boom, and early in the war went to England at the head of two hundred seekers after adventure. He, at least, encountered plenty of it.

Many a Canadian met with great adventures during the five years of war, but it is difficult to imagine that anyone went through so many stirring scenes or played so forceful a part as Col. Boyle did in Russia and Roumania.

He operated most of the time as a sort of free lance, going it alone, and even in his boldest moments was handicapped by the difficulty of having to speak through an interpreter. Yet he took up the cause of Roumania against the Bolshevists of Russia, and his exploits surpass anything the mind of the dime novelist has invented. References have been made from time to time to the sensational performances of Col. Boyle, how he rescued fifty of the most prominent Bolshevists, saved them from being shot, became a prisoner with them, and finally got them away, first from the Russians, and then sailed with them from under the guns of the Austrian fleet. The audacity of his proceedings on all occasions ensured their success. In Chambers' Journal the story of Col. Boyle's adventures is told by Douglas Watson, and a sample of his quality in action and his method of riding a storm is shown in the following incident which occurred once on his arrival at Sebastopol:

As his train arrived it was surrounded by a Bolshevik leader named Speiro and a committee of sailors.

"What does this mean?" demanded Col. Boyle.

Speiro explained that a local newspaper had just announced that Britain had made peace with Turkey; the British fleet had entered Constantinople, and was about to invade the Black Sea for the purpose of crushing the Black Sea fleet, as a punishment for the Bolsheviki making war on Roumania. Therefore a resolution had been passed to arrest all allied subjects, so that for every sailor of theirs killed they might execute ten allied prisoners. They implied that Boyle would make a pleasant addition to their list.

Summoning his interpreter, Boyle addressed them in a very few words, but with plenty of emphasis. He explained that the whole thing was untrue, that the newspaper was owned by German propagandists, and he called for volunteers to go and demolish the said newspaper.

This appealed to the mob as an idea of considerable originality, so they adjourned to the newspaper office, arrested nineteen members of the staff, and then wrecked the place.

It was with such audacity and resourcefulness as this that Col. Boyle acted, over and over again extricating himself and others from tight corners and turning the tables on those who sought his undoing. Col. Boyle was asked by the King of Roumania to rescue the Russian royal family, overcame all obstacles, and "nothing but the unwillingness of the ill-fated royalties to venture from their prison-palace in the Crimea stood in the way of their freedom." No doubt some day the complete story of Col. Boyle's adventures will be published.

Boy and the Boss.

A boy's employer can be a valuable friend, says Forbes Magazine. The average boy craves good, strong friendships, and particularly does he appreciate the friendly interest of a man whom he admires and respects. Boys like to be noticed. Naturally affable and warm-hearted, they are quick to sense the lack of friendly feeling on the part of anyone with whom they come in contact. Too often a boy and his boss are perfect strangers. The boss is too busy to take notice of the boy. He issues orders in a cold-blooded manner and expects perfect obedience. He does not try to encourage the boy; he does not try to gain his confidence.

There is no excuse for such a relationship. The employer is not only failing to do his duty, but he is showing poor business judgment. Only when he becomes the friend and counsellor of the boy does he really get the boy's best efforts. Not until the boy looks upon his employer as a friend will he work with that abandon and enthusiasm which is always prompted by love and respect.

SEEKING NEW BANKERS.

Canadians Make Fewer Deposits in Postal Department.

There is at least one money-saving institution in the Dominion which is waning and not waxing. It is the post office savings bank, and while the amount of money deposited in this institution is not rapidly declining, it has, however, during the last few years steadily diminished, the total now being $35,810,419, compared with $42,728,942 six years ago—a decline of $6,918,523.

The explanation of this decrease is, of course, the increasing tendency on the part of the Canadian people to deposit their savings with the chartered banks of the country. And there is more than one reason for this tendency. In the first place, the chartered banks afford easier facilities for both opening accounts and withdrawing deposits. In the second place, banks are more numerous than post offices, there being, in addition to the head offices, something like 2,500 branches scattered throughout the country. As a matter of fact, a branch bank is to be found within a few minutes' walk of most city and town homes. Still another factor that is helping to turn deposits from the post office to the chartered banks is the newspaper advertising which the latter employ for the purpose of attracting savings.

While during the six-year period there was a decline of 16 per cent. in the savings deposits with the post office, there was, on the other hand, an increase of over 100 per cent. in those with the chartered banks, the latter amounting to $1,262,746,984, compared with $626,199,470 at the close of 1913.

The post office savings banks have, however, well served their time and generation, having come into existence 52 years ago, when there was great need of them. Great Britain, the mother of the postal savings bank system, only preceded Canada in their establishment by about seven years. As a matter of fact, Canada is one of the pioneers in respect to the postal savings bank system, none of the other countries of Europe having adopted it until some years after she had made her first venture.

Power In Venice.

The generation of electrical energy by means of water power is a rapidly expanding industry in Venice. The difficulty in which Italy found itself as a result of war in obtaining sufficient supplies of coal has emphasized the necessity for a maximum utilization of hydraulic resources. Steps are now being taken to extend the use of electricity in agriculture, drainage, irrigation, traction and canal excavation.

Hiding a King's Statue.

The fine equestrian statue of King Charles I, which was hidden in London for protection during the war, has been brought to light again. The statue, which was cast during the reign of the monarch, according to reports has not enjoyed the uneventful career permitted to most works of its kind. It was executed for Sir Richard Weston, afterward earl of Portland, who intended to place it as an ornament in his garden at Roehampton. But this function it never fulfilled, for it was seized by parliament during the Civil war and sold to one John Rivett, a brazier, to be broken up. John, however, being a royalist, hid the statue, and, by selling hundreds of bronze knife handles purporting to be made from it, disarmed any parliamentary suspicions in the matter. On the restoration of Charles II in 1660 Rivett produced the statue, which was claimed by Sir Richard's son. The brazier refused to yield it, and after years of dispute it was eventually presented to King Charles II and erected on the spot formerly covered by the original Charing cross.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

WATKINS—RENWICK

The Manse, Keene, was the scene of a happy event, on Wednesday, February 4th, at six p.m., when Mr. Allie E. Watkins, of Peterborough, and Miss Ellie C. Renwick, of Keene were united in marriage. The young couple were unattended. After their honeymoon they will open their home in Peterborough.

Their many friends join in congratulations and good wishes.

The beautiful new home of Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Yelland at 539 George street presented a charming spectacle yesterday afternoon and evening when Mrs. Yelland received for the first time since coming to Peterborough. Dr. Yelland received with her in the evening. The spacious rooms were most artistically decorated for the occasion with spring flowers and smilax. Mrs (Dr.) Moir and Mrs. Yelland's sister, Mrs. Furry, of Buffalo, assisted the hostess in receiving the guests.

Mrs. (Rev.) A. J. Thomas had charge of the tea room. Mrs. George Lang poured tea, while Mrs. (Dr.) Scott cut the ices.

The assistants in the tea room were Miss F. Scott, Miss Walsh, Miss Routley and Miss Yelland.

Miss Florence Scott sang in her usual delightful manner for the entertainment of the large number of guests who called during the afternoon and evening.

On Tuesday evening the members of the S. O. N. G. Club were entertained by Mrs. Jarrell at her residence on Queen street, Lakefield where Mrs. H. Beavis received the prize for having the highest number of points at progressive euchre. The next meeting will be held at the home of Miss M. Alford on Tuesday, Feb. 10th.

Mr. Fred Kiff and Master George Kiff are in Toronto, having gone there to attend the funeral of the late Mrs. Annie Henderson, sister of Mrs. Fred. Kiff, of this city.

Mrs. William Stone and little daughter, of Toronto, are visiting friends in the city.

Mrs. Cronk and Miss Maloney of Ennismore spent the past two days with friends in the city.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Preston of Toronto are visiting friends in the city today.

OBITUARY

MRS. ROY ROBINSON

After a sudden attack of heart trouble Edna Alice, wife of Mr. Roy Robinson and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Payne, of Lakefield, passed away at her home in Lakefield on Saturday. Deceased was twenty-three years and five months old. Besides her sorrowing husband five-month-old babe, she leaves to mourn her loss her parents, a sister, Myrtle, and Brother, Warren.

The funeral service was held on Monday afternoon at two o'clock at the home of her parents. The service was conducted by Rev. Mr. Barrett, of Fenelon Falls, former minister of the Methodist Church. The remains were intered in the vault at the Lakefield cemetery.

Deceased was a member of the Methodist Church and a devoted worker in all the societies connected with the church, and her loss will be deeply felt.

REFUTE STORY OF BIG WAGES

Ottawa, Feb. 5.—Some days ago a report was circulated from Toronto to the effect that 500 machinists were needed at Baltimore in the river port industries and that these men could earn $100 a week. Senator Robertson wired Secretary of Labor Wilson at Washington asking for information of the situation.

Senator Robertson has received a reply in which the secretary of labor stated that while there was a demand for men, the wages received at the Delaware river ports was 80 cents an hour and time and a half for overtime.

Officers Elected at Annual Meeting Yesterday

Lindsay, Feb. 5.— Victoria County Orange Lodge in annual convention elected W. Bro. Isaac Bowins, of Coboconk as county master. Excellent reports were received and the order is flourishing in the county, the membership increasing 50 per cent in the last year. Other officials are: Joseph Beatty, Omemee; deputy county master; Robert Spence, Hartley, chaplain; Harry Brown, Lindsay, county clerk; J. Smith, Omemee, financial secretary; William Thornbury Lindsay, treasurer; William McGee, Omemee, director of ceremonies.

CRIMINALS ARE MADE, NOT BORN, SAYS DOCTOR HELEN McMURCHY

Eminent Social Worker Delivers an Interesting Lecture on Feeble Minded and Other Unfortunates at Meeting of the Women's Canadian Club—So-Called Reformatories Often Breed Crime.

The members of the Women's Canadian Club had the rare pleasure of listening to an inspiring address by Dr Helen McMurchy, of the Provincial Secretary's Department, Toronto, in their Assembly Room at the public library yesterday afternoon. Dr. McMurchy brought to the women of his city a message for better living—a message born of the convictions formed by her wide experience and for this reason carrying all the more weight.

An interesting personality, radiating energy and initiative, this speaker threw a new light on a number of the most vital issues of today. Mrs. Kendry, president of the club, who occupied the chair, in her introductory remarks, said that she was not in a position to say what was the subject of the afternoon's address but naturally supposed that it would be along the lines of the speaker's special interests, namely, the welfare of infants, and the feeble-minded. "She will give us Dr. Frank F. Hodgins annual report, which embodies her own experiences."

Continuing, Mrs. Kendry said that Dr. McMurchy was one of the few who, among the workers in social service could only be classified as a "pathfinder" One who was sincere and practical in her efforts to promote Christian sympathy and it should me our endeavor to follow the path she has blazed for us.

Mrs. Kendry also informed the members that in future, such meetings would take place at 4 p.m. This in order to give the teachers, of whom we have a splendid band in Peterborough, the benefit of the lecture.

As a prelude, Miss Helen MacLaren sang in the own sweet way a solo of such tuneful melody as to win a burst of genuine applause.

Dr. McMurchy, in her address was brief and convincing, and did not lack eloquence. It was interspersed with facts, which, in themselves were eloquent of splendid things accomplished. We are, she said, the actors on the stage of this new era, made so by a new spirit; the spirit that could rise superior to difficulties by confidence in Almighty God. "I to the hills would lift my eyes," was the motto of this after-war period. Democracy discovers duty, not only in war but in peace.

As an illustration of this, the speaker pointed out how, in the darkest days of the war the Fisher bill which was a new charter to democracy, passed through the British House of Commons. We knew it was not for the good of the younger element that they should be taken from their studies and with intellects still immature, thrust into occupations which would yield immediate returns. So "democracy discovers duty," and democracy with the ballot in its hand is indeed a powerful factor. Our first minister of Health, Dr. Christopher Addison, was appointed in 1919, which goes to show that we are forging toward a better existence.

Speaking of citizenship, Dr. McMurchy said that we should view this issue in a personal light asking ourselves how much do we carry and are we doing our bit? Our real difficulties here in Canada are with people and people should be a strength to the Government. But, there are as nearly as can be estimated 28,000 people who are a hindrance to the growth of the community in which they live if not a distinct burden. There are consequently ten out of every hundred who come under this category, and these ten fall into three groups: First, the insane, second, the mentally deficient; and third, that complex group composed of so-called criminals, incorrigibles, unemployed, ne'er-do-wells and such like. The speaker went on to say that while poets are born, not made, criminals are made not born, made in so-called reformatories—jails.

In the treating of mental disease, as well as physical, our specialists of today are reporting more than ever to preventive measures. Mental disease is not incurable and it is hoped that we may see the day when there will be great campaign to bring people to realize this. A person so afflicted is simply a sick man or woman.

But the clock has struck and we are entering upon a new era. Intelligent thinking along this line began in 1894, when Dr. A. M. Roseborough, a philanthropist, who took a great interest in inebriates, requested that the National Council of Women take this matter up. In November, 1917, the Government appointed Hon. Frank A. Hodgins as Royal Commissioner to report on this subject, and in this report is gathered together a valuable body of information. Touching on the speedy and efficient manner in which this was compiled, The speaker pointed out that the Royal Commission in Great Britain, appointed by King Edward, took four year in which to prepare such a report. Dwelling at length upon the general excellence of this report, 3,000 copies of which have already been sent far and wide, the speaker said that it contained a collection of most modern papers on subjects in connection with the feeble-minded, juvenile courts and such issues. In the case of a degenerate it was only reasonable that the cause of the downfall should be ascertained; that the reason for degeneracy should be divulged. And just as doctors make it their business to make themselves unnecessary, so should judges and lawyers do the same by turning their attention to preventative measures.

Continuing, the speaker classified mentally-defectives as persons who are unable to make or help to make a home. Among the urgent propositions with which we have to wrestle is the formation and proper equipment of auxiliary classes in school the removal and proper classifying of those affected, the building of hospitals for the insane and the erection of temporary quarters until final quarters can be possible.

The speaker was accorded a hearty vote of thanks on the motion of Miss Archer, seconded by Mrs. R. Harstone.

TAXES IN WINNIPEG.

Winnipeg, Feb. 5.—Tax receipts for the civic fiscal year passed the seven million mark, the total collections being reported at $7,014,433.

CANADA'S POPULATION NEARLY NINE MILLION

THAT IS ESTIMATE OF CENSUS BRANCH OF THE TRADE DEPARTMENT.

Ottawa, Feb. 5.—Canada's population is estimated by the census branch of the trade and commerce department at 8,835,102. The census branch has based its estimate for the year 1919 on the known increases in population, as shown by the census of 1901 and 1911. Such calculations have in the past proved to be approximately correct.

ADVISES SALE OF ROAD TO THE GOVERNMENT

GRAND TRUNK DIRECTORS SAY PRICE AND TERMS ARE SATISFACTORY.

London, Feb. 5.—Sir Alfred Smithers, chairman of the Grand Trunk Railway, is convening a meeting of shareholders for the 19th instant, to ratify the agreement between his company and the Canadian government. He has issued a circular stating that the board of directors after long and anxious consideration, unhesitatingly advise acceptance of the agreement. The circular says:

"The state of railway finance and working brought about by the war shows features common to the United States, Great Britain and Canada, but the United States saved shareholders from loss by guaranteeing the companies an average income for three years. The British government at the beginning of the war saved the British shareholders by guaranteeing the income for 1914, but no such assistance was given by the Canadian government to Canadian railways. All through the negotiations the Canadian government persistently pressed the liabilities of the Grand Trunk for the Grand Trunk Pacific as the chief reason for acquiring the Grand Trunk on very moderate terms. It can be at once stated that, leaving out all other considerations, the enormous increase of expenses without an adequate increase in rates has greatly aggravated the Grand Trunk Pacific position in relation to the Grand Trunk. When the government of Canada becomes the owner of the great system that it will have when it acquires the Grand Trunk system, it can speedily bring such readjustment rates into being as will permit of a fair return on the capital invested. The whole cause of the present difficulties of the Grand Trunk is its being required to carry on an ever-increasing business under the present phenomenal operating costs without a corresponding increase in its rates and that condition cannot be altered until the railway commission will allow an adequate increase."

MR. McRAYE LECTURES SUNDAY AFTERNOON

ADDRESS WAS POSTPONED LAST NIGHT OWING TO COUNTER ATTRACTIONS.

The lecture to have been given at the G.W.V.A. Hall last night by Mr. Walter McRaye was postponed owing to the fact that there were so many other counter attractions, and will be given Sunday afternoon at three o'clock. Mr. McRaye has a message for all, old and young, his theme being "Reconstruction." This subject is one which has been discussed at considerable length in the press of late, but treated as Mr. McRaye handles it, the subject is one of more than ordinary interest. As a student of human nature, Mr. McRaye stands second to none, and his lecture on "Reconstruction" is well worth hearing. There will be no admission charge, a silver collection being taken to help defray the expense of bringing him here.

Mr. McRaye is lecturing in Lakefield tonight under the auspices of the G.W.V.A., and great interest has been evinced in his appearance.

"BUY IN CANADA"

That is the Slogan of Business Leaders in London.

London, Ont., Feb. 5.—The battle cry "Buy in Canada," was renewed with unanimous voice by London financial and business leaders upon receipt of advices from New York that exchange rates have forced further serious depreciation of Canadian money. "We are in the hands of a financial clique in New York" declared W. M. Spencer, an ex-Mayor of London. "The only remedy is to stop buying United States made goods. Unless we give all possible support to the "buy in Canada" nothing can prevent the discount going still further."

GOVERNMENT MUST INCREASE RATES ON RAILWAYS

LOSS ON STATE OWNED ROADS LAST YEAR RUNS INTO MILLIONS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—Faced with the loss of approximately thirty million dollars during the present financial year, it is regarded here as inevitable that the rates of the Government railway lines will have to be increased if the roads are to pay. Already there have been hints of probable action in this direction. The whole situation, it is stated, is now being closely investigated.

The increased rates authorised some time ago, do not, it is claimed, meet the ever-increasing cost of materials and operation. While final figures will not be available for some weeks, it is estimated that the loss on the Canadian National Railways system as a whole will be about nineteen million dollars. To that has been added an estimated loss of nine million dollars on the Grand Trunk Pacific of a total of twenty-eight millions.

MANUFACTURERS WILL ERECT FAIR BUILDING

DEFINITE ACTION WAS TAKEN AT MEETING OF ASSOCIATION YESTERDAY

The Manufacturers' Association met at 5:30 p.m. yesterday at the Board of Trade with the Chairman, W. R. Breyfogle presiding.

The Association took up the suggestion recently made by the chairman to make an exhibit this year at the Industrial Fair of all manufactured products of Peterborough. This will be done by joint action so that everything made in the manufactories of the city will be placed on exhibition.

The advantage of a building for this special purpose, to be known as the Manufacturers' Association building, was advocated and unanimously approved.

The Fair Board will be asked to get estimates on such a building and select a site for it. When the information is received the Association will pass on it.

The subject of employment in Peterborough was taken up. The fact was brought out that business is growing so fast there are not enough skilled mechanics available. Steps are to be taken to correct this state of affairs.

Wages paid by the manufacturers of Peterborough are as high and in some cases higher than those of any Ontario city while conditions of living are much better than in other cities.

Beside the business of the meeting the members took time to heartily approve the idea, which originated with the men in the shops, to make Peterborough a better sport centre—an effort will be made to get better facilities for athletics, aquatics and general out-door recreation.

DAIRYMEN ASK FOR CHANGE IN THE ACT

WOULD HAVE MILK PAID FOR BY FACTORIES ON DIFFERENT BASIS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 6.— A deputation of dairymen waited on Premier Drury and Hon. Manning Doherty this morning asking that the Dairy Standard Act be made operative. It was passed in 1916 and calls for payment for milk on the basis of the amount of butter fat it contains instead of by the gallon. It was to apply to milk sold to creameries, cheese factories, and condensers, not to that for human consumption. Mr. Doherty said this would entail the testing system in every district. He said it was very likely the act would be put into force as soon as such a system could be arranged.

MEMBERS BOARD OF TRADE HEAR TIMELY ADDRESSES ON HEALTH

Provincial Health Officer McCullough and Dr. A.W. McPherson M.O.H. Discuss Topics Relative to Physical Well Being of Humanity.

Provincial Health Officer McCullough and Medical Office of Health A. W. McPherson, were the speakers last night at the weekly meeting of the Board of Trade. These meetings are held as a new feature of the work for the hearing of addresses on subjects of current interest and the growing attendance shows that the sessions are increasing in popularity. The addresses of both medical gentlemen last night were replete with timely interest and that of Dr. McPherson will be published in full in tomorrow's issue. It should be printed in pamphlet form by the Board of Health, making as it would a handy and useful text book on sundry matters and useful to every mother in reaching the best methods for caring for children. Dr. McCullough praised the attainments of Peterborough's H. O., attainments that have been benefited by his experience in war work, and with this part of the visiting speaker's address, the people of Peterborough will heartily concur.

Dr. McCullough's address was an interesting exposition of the laws of health. He dealt with all the essentials to physical well being. A pure water supply is necessary, but even in Peterborough, with its excellent source of supply, the water cannot be saved from contamination without the use of artificial means such as chlorination or filtration.

The milk supply of a city is a constant source of danger to the public health, that of children especially impure milk is a breeder of tuberculosis, and this is a matter which requires constant supervision. Premises where milk is produced should be inspected regularly and no milk is safe to use unless it is pasteurized

Ice cream parlors and barber shops should be inspected from time to time by the sanitary official and the utmost cleanliness rigidly insisted upon. Disease is often transmitted by the use of a common hair brush.

Diptheria, said Dr. McCullough, can be prevented by the use of antitoxin which is furnished free by the Government. Medical inspection in schools he regards as one of the best guarantees of the public health.

Dr. McCullough closed his address with a reference to the question of veneral diseases. The Government has set aside a fund of $250,000 to be distributed among the provinces for the treatment of these diseases, the only condition being that the various provinces shall grant similar amounts. Ontario has $115,000 for this purpose. If Peterborough health officials care to establish a clinic a portion of this fund is available

The speaker said that one year ago the "flu" was a new malady. If it returns this year it is not likely to be so serious as the doctors will be better able to deal with it. The person who had the "flu" last winter is not likely to have it again.

In reply to a question from Mr. J. J. Hartley, Dr. McCullough said there was really no danger in vaccination. A sore or swollen arm was only the natural result and was an indication of the success of the operation. Foreign substances sometimes got into the wound and caused lock-jaw but there was no fatalities from the effects of vaccination alone. And vaccination is the one specific for smallpox

On motion of Mr. Hartley a hearty vote of thanks was tendered the speakers of the evening.

In introducing Dr. McCullough, President Turner said he did not approve of the doctor's attitude with regard to the outfall sewer. Referring to this subject the doctor said that if the city adopted the plan of sewage disposal recommended by the provincial health officers the course would never be regretted.

The doctor had no recommendations to make with regard to the best system of filtration to be employed here. The Utilities Commission have this matter under advisement. When they decide on plans these will be submitted to the Provincial Health Officer for his approval, but until this is done, he has no suggestion to make.

NEUTRAL COURT IS INSISTED UPON BY GERMANS

ONLY CONDITION ON WHICH THEY WILL GIVE UP ALLEGED CULPRITS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 6.—Final consideration of the new note to be sent to Germany as a result of the failure of her representatives here to transmit the list of the accused Germans demanded for extradition and a letter prepared to accompany it was deferred by the Council of Ambassadors at its session this morning. The postponment was caused by the non-arrival in Paris of Lord Birkenhead and Sir Geordon Hewart, who are delayed in their journey from London by fog in the English Channel. The question will be taken up this evening after the arrival of British representatives.

A Test of the Treaty.

The settlement of present conflict between allied powers and Germany relative to the surrender of Germans may determine the value of the Versailles Treaty, according to the views of the French journals. Several declare that the Allies must call for the execution of the guarantees provided in the treaty.

Want Neutral Tribunal.

Berlin, Feb. 6.—The German Government will probably be willing to surrender its subjects charged with war crimes to be tried by a neutral tribunal if Entente will agree, says the National Zeitung. The Swiss Government, the newspaper declares, has signified its readiness to arrange such a tribunal.

Operation on the Chatham Wallaceburg and Lake Erie railway have been temporarily suspended owing to lack of coal.

COMMANDS AT TORONTO

Inspector Beytes Appointed Head of R. C. M. P. There.

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—Inspector J. F. Beytes has been placed in charge of the Toronto detachment of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, and will take over his duties forthwith. Other appointments to the staffs of the detachments to be located at Windsor, Niagara Falls, Bridgeburg and Sarnia, will be announced shortly.

Inspector C. D. Lanauze will be in charge of a large detachment at Halifax, which is likely to take over the guarding of the docks and other Government property.

It is stated that a detachment to be formed shortly will be stationed at Lacolle, Que.

Oscar Wilbur Bennett, lecturer at the Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph, died of pneumonia after nearly two weeks' illness.

GERMANY'S STAND IS REGARDED AS SERIOUS ISSUE

LONDON PAPERS REGARD PRESENT SITUATION AS ONE OF DIFFICULTIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 6.—The action of Baron Kurt Von Lersner in refusing to transmit a list of the Germans demanded by the Allies for trial to his government, if supported by his government, has placed the Allies in somewhat of a dilema, is the belief of the Moderate Liberal press here. No event since the armistice has created such a sensation or aroused so much curiosity as to how the crisis will be surmounted. The number and character of the names included in the list of persons demanded, proved a surprise, and while the newspapers of reactionary tendencies loudly demand the employment of the strongest measures to enforce the surrender of the men, more the moderate exponents of Liberal opinion do not hesitate to point to the serious difficulties facing the Allies.

FRENCH OFFICERS ARE ATTACKED BY CROWD

SILESIAN MOB RUN RIOT WHEN STRANGERS ARRIVE AT GLEIWITZ

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Feb. 6.— Disturbances followed the arrival of French troops at Gleiwitz, Silesia, on Wednesday. An excited crowd attacked several French officers with sticks and stones and some officers were injured. General Gracer was struck in the face with a bottle and slightly hurt. Earlier in the day an anti-French demonstration took place in the streets of Gleiwitz and a crowd attacked a deputation of Poles awaiting the arrival of French troops at the railway station. The Poles were badly beaten, their flags were destroyed and flowers which they intended to give to the French troops were torn to pieces by the mob.

SEEK TO SAFEGUARD HEALTH OF NATION

CANADIAN RED CROSS TO ADAPT WORK TO PEACE CONDITIONS

Toronto, Feb. 6.—Plans for the organization of the work of the Red Cross in Canada adapted to peace conditions, which it is hoped will make it the power for national welfare that it was during the war, were outlined at the annual meeting of the Canadian Red Cross held in the King Edward Hotel yesterday afternoon, when a resolution was agreed to providing for the formation of a Red Cross Advisory and Consultative Committee, designed to co-ordinate and further the work of all existing organizations now interested in the health of the nation. The meeting, at which their Excellencies the Duke and Duchess of Devonshire were present, was well attended with members from all parts of the Dominion present, and the opportunity was taken by their excellencies of expressing a tribute to the splendid work of Lieut.-Col. Noel Marshall and Mrs. H. P. Plumptree in particular, both of whom, after their five and a half years' of active work in the executive are finding it impossible to continue in their former offices, and to whom resolutions of thanks were moved at the meeting. Lieut.-Col. Marshall, the retiring chairman of the executive, in presenting the report, recalled that it was just five and a half years since the Red Cross had come into existence in Canada and there had since been established some 1,400 ordinary and 10,000 auxiliary branches, while every Province was organized for the work. There had been 190 meetings in Toronto of the executive since the war, and there had never been the lack of a quorum, while twenty-two meetings of the council with representatives from every Province had been held

COUNCIL OF AMBASSADORS DISCUSS QUESTION OF TRADE WITH RUSSIANS

Raising of Blockade it is Feared, Would Give Bolsheviki an Advantage.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 6.— Doubt as to the practical working of a plan for the partial resumption of trade with Russian co-operative societies was developed at today's session of the Council of Ambassadors. The discussion came up through examination of the possibilty of the Bolsheviki finding an outlet from Russia through Revai, under a partial raising of the blockade. During this discussion it was declared that the Soviet Government, after saying it would consent to proposed restricted trading with the outside world through these co-operative societies, had shown a disposition to tie up the societies with the official administration in such a way as to make even partial trading impossible.

During the session the attention of the Council was called by Ambassador Wallace to the fact that representatives of the United States on the expert commissions to supervise the distribution of railway rolling stock on the lines running from Germany into territories detached from the Empire, had been designated under article 371 of the peace treaty to preside over such commissions. The absence of American representation on the commissions required the taking of some action in this respect. The Council decided that provisional presidents should be chosen.

PASSENGER STEAMER SIGNALS FOR HELP

"PRINCESS ANNA," WITH 104 ON BOARD, RUNS AGROUND THIS MORNING

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 6.—The steamship Princess Anna of the old Dominion Line, carrying thirty-two passengers and a crew of seventy-two from Norfolk, Va., to New York, ran aground one mile off the coast of Rockaway Point, on Long Island, early today, and sent out S.O.S. calls for assistance. Tugs have been despatched. The wireless reports added that Captan Seay of the vessel had been seriously injured but no details were given.

Passengers in Peril

The latest reports from the stranded ship were that she was taking water rapidly and the captain sent a message asking that the passengers and crew be taken off before night. Heavy seas have so far prevented the tugs getting in close touch with the vessel.

CIVIC FLAG RESTORED.

MORE EARTHQUAKE IN VERA CRUZ REGION

RESIDENTS OF THAT PROVINCE ARE NOW THREATENED WITH PLAGUE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Mexico City, Feb. 6.— Earthshocks were felt at 12:50 o'clock this morning in the Vera Cruz region, according to reports. Travellers coming to this city from the earthquake district in the State of Vera Cruz, report an outbreak of smallpox and other diseases among the survivors of the cataclysm of January 5th. The Government is endeavoring to forestall a disastrous plague there.

LITTLE CHANGES IN OPENING CEREMONY

THERE MAY BE DISPLAY OF FASHIONABLE ATTIRE WHEN LEGISLATURE MEETS

Toronto, Feb. 6.—The action of the U. F. O. gathering at Fergus in endorsing the resignation of their member, Albert Hellyer, in order to open East Wellington for Hon. W. E. Raney, cleared the way for the issuing of writs for the bye election. The necessary action was taken yesterday and nominations will be held on February 23, with polling a week later if there should be a contest.

The clearing up of the difficulty over the seating of Mr. Raney also made it possible to definitely fix the date for calling the Legislature. As was intimated on Wednesday last, the House will meet on Tuesday, March 9 an announcement to that effect being made by Hon. Mr. Raney yesterday. The formal notice to the members will be sent out shortly.

Despite declarations that all the "fuss and feathers" is to be eliminated from the opening of the Legislature this year, it is probable that the ceremony will differ little from that of previous years. A good deal has been said about display at the opening of the Legislature, but as a matter of fact the "display" is outside the corresponding reach of the Government. The formalities over which the Government has control have always been limited to simple customs, the reading of the Speech from the Throne, and the introduction of formal bills, etc. If the opening is less brilliant than in the past, it will be because the "Sunday best" of the wives and daughters of the members of the new House fall short of the affects achieved by their predecessors. "Society" at the opening has always meant the relatives of members.

It is pointed out that the honor will be retained or dispensed with, according to the view of the Lieutenant-Governor. The Government has nothing to do with them.

The amount of Government business is problematical, but the sessional program seems to be shaping into a big one, with a certainty of a session after Easter, unless the Drury Government can accomplish something in disposing of business no other Government ever did. Already over two dozen private bills are on the list of the Clerk of the House.

Ald. J. J. McLellan, Hamilton, who purchased the Gray property, expects to start planing mill operations by April 1st.

DISCOUNT RATES ON CANADIAN MONEY IMPROVES TODAY

TWO POINTS BETTER IN NEW YORK THAN WAS QUOTED YESTERDAY

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 6. — The prices of stocks tumbled today under heavy selling, despite improvement in the foreign exchange. Leading issues dropped from six to fifteen points below the opening, and made new low records for the current movement. Losses of two to five points were numerous, and United States steel fell to 98⅜, its lowest quotation for months. Prices opened one to seven points up, but reacted after the first hour, and so on there was heavy liquidation. The break was accelerated by 17 per cent. call money.

Demand sterling dropped back to $3.35½, where it held steady up to noon.

Canadian Rates Improve.

Rates on demand bills for the English pound sterling opened this morning at $3.34 and soon advanced to $3.39. Rating of Canadian money, improved in sympathy, the discount rate being quoted as 14 to 14⅛ as against 16⅛ at yesterday's closing.

TWENTY THOUSAND CASES OF FLU IN TORONTO.

TWENTY-SIX DEATHS FROM EPIDEMIC REPORTED IN THAT CITY YESTERDAY

Toronto, February 6.—Twenty-six deaths from influenza and pneumonia were reported to the Medical Health Department yesterday, and there is now, according to the estimate of Dr. Hastings, M.O.H., whose figures are from an inquiry at the offices of many industries, about 20,000 suffering from influenza in the city.

The Burnside Hospital, Gerrard street east, was opened last night, with Dr. R. P. Cromarty as medical supervisor, who is assisted by two house surgeons and a nursing staff. Only the most severe cases will be admitted to the hospital and these patients will be on the recommendation of Public Health nurses, who will have regard for social conditions. The patients, if they can afford it, will pay for the treatment, and if not the bill will be met by the city.

Fifteen professors of University College, University of Toronto, are off duty ill with influenza. There have been no lectures in the Department of Social Service for the past three days because of the absence of students, who are acting as volunteer nurses.

HOLDS THE REMEDY IN HER OWN HANDS

BRITAIN MUST NOT SEEK GREAT LOANS IN UNITED STATES SAYS EXPERT

London, Feb. 6. — Walter Leaf, noted financial authority and deputy chairman of the committee of London clearing banks in 1917, speaking with reference to the exchange situation said:

"On the question of credits the American attitude is distinctly critical and suspicious of our expenditure on luxuries—all the more because they have imposed on themselves the severe restriction of a prohibition law. I disclaim the idea that the fall in American exchange is favorably regarded here as an incentive to our export trade.

"I found during a recent visit to the United States that the attitude generally taken there was that the remedies of our troubles are in our own hands, in our resolution to work and save and it is neither prudent nor consistent with the dignity of a great nation that we come to the United States with petitions for great loans.

"I recognize the well-meaning, but mistaken, appeals recently made for amounts which could only defeat [illegible] operation by their very magnitude. The [illegible] of the policy of [illegible] English financiers [illegible] Government."

DEATH RATE AMONG CHILDREN.

IT IS ESTIMATED that of the children born in Canada, about twenty thousand die in infancy every year, and of these half the number are in Ontario, according to the statistics. This loss to the country cannot be regarded as other than a national calamity. The population of Canada is increasing slowly. The natural growth is below the standard of other nations, and an explanation is to be found in the records of the death of children. The places of these—think of it for a moment!—are taken by the unlettered alien from Europe whose control in so many cases becomes one of the responsibilities of the authorities.

There must be something amiss with conditions that show such an alarming death rate among Canadian infants. There is surely a remedy. Dr. A. W. McPherson, in his address before the Board of Trade last night, made it clear that the appalling loss of infantile life was due to the ignorance of the parents. Education is what is required.

Right here it may be suggested that the Board of Health would be well advised to have the address of Dr. McPherson printed in pamphlet form for free circulation among the parents of the city. It would make a convenient and admirable text-book on the laws of health and is so written as to be easily understood.

For all the duties of life something in the way of qualification is insisted upon on the part of those who are ambitious to assume them. The teacher must be fitted for his calling by expert training. The office worker must show some aptitude for his duties. The lawyer and doctor are trained. But to all those who aspire to the performance of the greatest of all tasks, the care of human life, the doors are thrown wide open. The owner of prize live stock will not entrust his animals to the care of the ignorant or inexperienced. It is only the unfortunate children who have to take their chances. The young girl who, without the slightest idea of what is required of her, is called upon to discharge the duties of motherhood, fails in her task, not through any lack of maternal devotion, but simply because of inexperience and utter ignorance of what the situation demands.

The anomaly of the situation lies chiefly in the fact that it is during the most critical period of his existence that the Canadian child is neglected, from the day of his birth until he reaches school age. When he goes to school he is at once made a subject of the supervision of the school nurse or medical adviser. If there is anything wrong with his physical condition, a remedy is available. The teacher who looks after his interests at the opening of his academic career, knows more about his physical requirements, nine times out of ten, than does the boy's own mother. The boy who survives the ailments of infancy and attains school age has the problem of existence practically solved. It is in infancy that he requires the care now denied him in so many cases.

The child is a valuable national asset. The economists never weary of parading this fact. He is the cornerstone upon which is erected the hope of the future generations of the country. To permit the loss of such assets through sheer neglect is a policy for which no possible excuse can be found.

WHY BE SICK!

PROVINCIAL HEALTH Officer McCullough, who addressed the Board of Trade last night, made it appear that a large percentage of the ills to which humanity is prone can be easily prevented by attention to the rule of sanitation and by the use of the discoveries that have been made by medical science. There have been five deaths from diphtheria in this city recently. Dr. McCullough says that there should not be a single fatal case of this once dreaded scourge. The Government of the Province provides free anti-toxin, which if used according to directions, is a sure preventative. All that is required is timely application of a remedy which costs nothing.

Toronto, with its large percentage of alien population, the chief characteristic of which is ignorance of modern methods, when threatened with an epidemic of smallpox, set its face against the old remedy, vaccination. As a result, Toronto became the breeding place of a disease that swept the Province and is still rampant. Ontario pays the penalty of Toronto's perversity.

Dr. McCullough showed last night that there was no real danger in vaccination. It was natural for the subject to have a sore arm as a result of the treatment, but this was only an evidence of effectiveness. And beyond all question, vaccination is a sovereign remedy against the disease.

The flu, however, is another matter, one harder to deal with. But there is always a ray of hope. The disease was a new one in the profession last year. It is not likely to be so serious this season, and the doctors will understand better how to deal with it. Then, again, any person who had the flu last winter is not likely to be afflicted again.

Why cannot the citizens profit by the information furnished by Dr. McCullough last night? Smallpox is spreading through the Province. Peterborough cannot hope to escape, but Peterborough can learn from the experience of Toronto. Free vaccination is offered to the citizens, and so far very few have availed themselves of the opportunity to guard against an attack of this malady.

DAYLIGHT SAVING.

(Ottawa Journal.)

AT THE LAST municipal elections, the people of Ottawa expressed themselves by a large majority in favor of the continued adoption of daylight saving in the summer time. The city council has given effect to that expression of opinion by authorising the mayor to take all the steps open to him to have the clocks put forward one hour on May 1st next. The Journal favors daylight saving, urges the electors to support it, and approves of the action of the city council. We believe that most of the opposition to new time comes as the result of prejudice, even in the rural districts.

There seems, however, little likelihood of Parliament enacting daylight saving legislation for the whole of Canada, and the Congress of the United States is likewise opposed to it. Last summer Canada was not officially under daylight saving, but the Canadian railways adopted daylight saving time and resisted all efforts to make them adopt any other time because they were able to prove that the operation of Canadian railways on a time basis different to that in use on the United States railways would be not only inconvenient, but dangerous. As the result, we had the situation in Canada of most of the cities and larger towns observing daylight saving time to conform with railway time, and most of the rural municipalities working on normal time, despite a different railway time. The thing worked out quite satisfactorily, and each set of municipalities had what it desired.

It is probable that this summer the United States railways will have to obey the will of Congress, and if that is the case, it is equally probable that Canadian railways will be forced to obey the will of Parliament. Whether the cities and larger towns can satisfactorily adopt daylight saving time with the railways operating on normal time remains to be seen. to depends to a considerable extent on whether the cities are of one mind—whether Montreal, Ottawa and Toronto decide in favor of daylight saving in the face of a different railway time.

The Journal hopes there will be unanimity among the cities, because we feel strongly that daylight saving is a splendid thing for the people of the cities, enabling them as it does to spend more time in the open air and in recreational enjoyment of healthful sunlight. The only way to secure unanimity is for these cities to declare at once through their councils that daylight saving will be put into effect. Ottawa has done this. It may have to change its decision if the other cities with which Ottawa is intimately associated do not follow suit. Because, after all, the city council of a municipality has only limited powers, and a proclamation for daylight saving can be only of a recommendatory character, and a recommendation that does not appeal will not be carried out.

The Ottawa civic authorities might go a step further now by urging upon other cities the adoption of a resolution authorizing daylight saving. If Ottawa, Montreal and Toronto act together, the inconvenience arising from dual time will be considerably minimized.

However desirous the Supreme Council is of placing upon the former kaiser the official condemnation of the nations, however deserving of punishment he may be, the Dutch refusal may after all be the best solution. WHY FAVOR THE HOLD-UPS?

(Edmonton Bulletin.)

The law permits revolvers to be made and sold, but forbids people to carry them. Result: law-keeping people do not carry revolvers, while crooks do, and hold-upmen are therefore able to operate with security and profit. Is it not about time the law—which forbids honest people to protect themselves by carrying revolvers—undertook to protect them by prohibiting the sale of revolvers?

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson VI (XIX). Feb. 8, 1920.

PETER AT LYDDA AND JOPPA.

The Golden Text—"The prayer of faith shall save him that is sick, and the Lord shall raise him up."—James 5:15.

The Lesson Text, Acts 9:32-43.

The Time — Uncertain —probably shortly before A.D. 40.

The Places—Lydda and Joppa.

Lesson Text Illumined.

32. And it came to pass. After the "forward movement" of the Church described in v. 31. Saul had joined the Church, and the arch persecutor being conquered, the Church had peace. As Peter went throughout all parts. This brief reference gives a substantial hint of Peter's activity assumed wide missionary and supervisory activity throughout Palestine, "all parts"! To the saints. The early Christians are frequently spoken of in the New Testament as "saints." Sainthood meant separation from the world, to Jesus Christ. There is need today of a more conscious and obvious separation of the same sort: not isolation, or Pharisaical conceit which segregates men because some feel holier than others, but a real difference in purpose and character, so that Christians are distinguishable from the ordinary people of the world and from unbelievers. Jehovah's exhortation to Israel should still be heeded: "Ye shall be unto me a kingdom of priests, and a holy nation." Ex. 19:6. Lydda. The ancient God of 1 Chron. 8:12, "a village not less than a city" (Josephus); about eleven miles from Joppa and twenty-four miles from Jerusalem, on the eastern edge of the plain of Sharon; a place of refuge and a seat of learning after the destruction of Jerusalem. Here Pelagius, a British monk, was acquitted of heresy in A.D. 415.

33. Æneas. If still a Hellenistic, or Greek-speaking Jew, possessing already enough faith in Jesus for Peter to cure him in Jesus' name. He was doubtless well known as an incurable. Eight years. The number of years corresponding very strikingly with the number of years which had elapsed since Jesus' crucifixion. Luke elsewhere tells the duration of different diseases, as a physician naturally would. Acts 3:2; 4:22; 13:11; 14:8.

34. Jesus Christ healeth thee. Peter makes it explicit as in the case of the cripple at the Beautiful Gate of the Temple, Acts 3:6, that the healer is Christ and that he, himself, is but his agent. Simple language this in contrast to all the mystery and ceremony associated with the alleged cures of the exorcists and sorcerers of those days. Peter liked to emphasize the fact that Jesus ever went about doing good, even still. Cf. ch. 10:38. Jesus himself had once healed a similar case. Luke 5:18-26. Arise, and make thy bed. A task which hitherto he had not for years performed. The tense of the verb (aorist) denotes performance without delay: the force of the command being, "Make thy bed at once for thyself."

35. Sharon. The name of the great fertile plain roundabout Joppa, roughly thirty miles long and twelve miles wide. The name means a plain. Modern Jewish colonies, about fifteen in number, dot it here and there. And they turned to the Lord. "All" the inhabitants of the plain. This statement is indicative of the wide and general acceptance of Jesus as the Messiah. Cf. v. 42. The healing of Æneas by Peter arrested attention.

36. Joppa. The port of Jerusalem, about thirty-five miles distant; though as a fact it is a poor one. Joppa has no harbor. Tabitha. An Aramaic name meaning "splendor," or "beauty." Dorcas. A Greek word meaning "gazelle"; and so called because of its large, bright eyes. This disciple may have borne both names, and, like Æneas, she may have been a Hellenist, or Greek-speaking Jewess. It is not explicitly stated that she was a deaconess, though she evidently did the work of one. Full of good works. Good works always accompany true piety according to the Hebrews. She was a type of true Christian womanhood!

37. They laid her in an upper chamber. Awaiting Peter's arrival; his delay in coming causing them to postpone the funeral. Their act evinced extraordinary faith in the original commission of our Lord to the disciples to "raise the dead." Matt. 10:8.

38. Entreating him, Delay not. Language expressive of large faith in Peter, who, so far as we know, had hitherto never raised anyone to life, but compare Acts 5:15, 16.

39. All the widows. Either those who helped her in the work of helping others; or, those who themselves had been helped by her. Probably the latter, who were real mourners. Showing the coats and garments. Quite possibly they had some of them on their persons at the time. Both close-fitting tunics and undergarments are alluded to.

40. Peter put them all forth. As Jesus had done when he raised Jairus' daughter. Mark 5:40. Thrice Peter had witnessed Jesus raise the dead. And prayed. Following in this also his Lord's example. Cf. John 11:41, 42. It was Peter's prayer, not Peter, which raised Dorcas! She sat up. The same Greek word being used again in Luke 7:15, which tells of Jesus restoring a young man to life.
SUNDAY SCHOOL—Gal TWO

41. Raised her up. She had already sat up. Hence this signifies that Peter restored her not only to life but to health and activity. To have taken her by the hand before she returned to life would have rendered him ceremonially unclean.

42. And many believed. That is, were won to "the Way," Acts 9:2, as at Bethany when Lazarus was raised, John 11:45; yet Peter did not adopt healing as his only, or even as his primary, method of winning converts.

43. He abode many days. Perhaps a year, to gather up the results of the miracle. With one Simon a tanner. Tanning was considered by the Jews a despicably unclean business, because it involved continual contact with the skins of unclean animals.—By Prof. Geo. L. Robinson, Ph.D., D.D.

Another Russian leader has arisen who will direct the resistance being offered to Bolshevism in Eastern Siberia. The hope is that he will be more successful than have been his predecessors. This new leader is General Semenoff, who has been in command of the Siberian forces, east of Lake Baikal, which lies in the southern part of Eastern Siberia, not far from the frontier of Mongolia.

The southern end of the lake is skirted by the Trans-Siberian railway, and about three hundred miles east of the lake on the railway is Krasnoyarsk, near which Admiral Koltchak's army was defeated. After that defeat the government that Koltchak had organized fell to pieces, and now General Semenoff, in the districts east of the lake, is organizing an army and setting up a government that will fight to save Eastern Siberia from the Bolshevists.

General Semenoff has had considerable experience in the life of the East, and with the Cossacks, upon whom success there in a large measure depends. The Cossack chiefs and garrison commanders, under the direct supervision of General Korvath, have been notified by General Semenoff of the new regime, which they are expected to support.

General Korvath has control of the railway zone in which Russia operated a railway on Chinese territory, and he insists upon friendly relations being maintained between the rulers of Siberia and China.

General Semenoff is a young man, a trained soldier, and he may bring order out of the confusion of commands existing in Siberia.

WIT AND WISDOM

Pat Didn't Understand.

A big man and a little man were sawing a piece of wood with a cross-saw, that is, the kind with a handle at each end. An Irishman stopped to watch them pulling it to and fro.

After a few minutes observation, Pat strode up to the big man and, dealing him a violent blow, said:

"Give that saw to the little fellow if he wants it."

Not Noticeable.

"The high cost of living is terrible!"

"Yes, but mighty few people are anxious to die to save money."

A Poet's Plaint.

Poet Alfred Noyes was complaining to a publisher about the failure of one of his books.

"You don't advertise me," he said bitterly.

"I know, but—"

"Poetry," interrupted the poet "is like a wheelbarrow. It won't go unless it's pushed."

Precisely.

The Man of Law: "But, my dear madam, there is no insurance money for you to draw. Your late husband never insured his life; he only had a policy against fire."

The Wonderful Widow: "Precisely That is the very reason I had him cremated!"

A Fleeting Glimpse.

"You will be able to see Mr. Bilton in a few minutes," said the private secretary.

"Thanks," replied the persistent visitor. "As Mr. Bilton is a man of such large affairs. I was afraid I would not be able to get an interview so easily."

"Oh, Mr. Bilton will be leaving for the golf links. He told me to tell you to take a good look at him as he passed out."

WHAT LEAP YEAP MEANS

This leap year affects everybody in more ways than most people think.

The one man in our Empire most affected in a financial sense is the British Chancellor of the Exchequer, for it gives him 366 days of revenue instead of 365. The Post Office gets an extra day of profit in, generally speaking, that extra day on February 29th means another $10,000,000 at least in the pocket of the Government.

On the other hand, a good many people lose heavily by that extra day especially those who are paid regularly once a month. All these unfortunate people work an extra day for their employers, and they have an extra day's household expenditure to face without any return for it. Tradesmen have an extra day to do business in.

No historian of established reputation has ever ventured to explain how it comes about that Leap Year, and particularly Leap Year Day, is the time when every spinster of marriageable age has the right to ask the man of her choice to wed. In the year 1288 a law was passed in Scotland which enacted:

"For like yeare knowne as lepe years, ilk mayden ladye of bothe highe and lowe estait shall hae liberte to bespeke ye man she likes. Albeit he refuses to taik her to be his lawful wyfe he shall be mulcted in ye sum aue puadis or less, as his estait may be."

A few years later a similar law was passed in France. Britons, however, have never been courageous enough to establish the Leap Year custom by statute.

Another case of smallpox has been reported in Galt.

Mrs. Anna F. Burke, Windsor, who with her seven-months-old baby has been missing for a week, was last seen entering a moving picture theatre in Detroit.

BLAMED THE RADICALS FOR LABOR TROUBLES

EMPLOYERS SAY INCREASE IN WAGTES IS CURSE TO THEMSELVES AND MEN

Ottawa, Feb. 6.— Radical Labor men came in the censure at the conference of builders and construction men here during discussion on the request that all labor organizations in Canada become incorporated so that contracts between organised labor and employers will be legal and binding.

Not only were radicals a menace to the employers, but also to the common-sense labor men, who by conditions existing, had to be associated with them, stated one of the delegates.

President Anglin stated that in the past year, however, numerous contracts had been broken, and the excuse had been that there had been more demand for labor and bigger wages in other parts of the country, and that they could not prevent a man from leaving his job, if he so desired. The men staying at home then thought that they were entitled to just as big wages as the men who left and there was much in that argument.

"The undue increase in wages is the curse of ourselves and organized labor also," he stated. He said what was needed was some central machinery to endeavor to control wages. He did not think there was any method to stop the bidding for labor, but he believed the contractors could eliminate a large percentage of it. He was of the opinion that organized labor would be willing to cooperate with organized industries to prevent undue increases, for it caused just as much trouble to Labor as to the employer.

The unanimous passing of a resolution to have the Dominion Government consider the reimbursing of contractors and builders who lost money on Government war work featured the closing session.

WAGES FOR BUILDERS TWELVE CENTS AN HOUR

AND QUART OF WHISKEY WAS DRANK DAILY ON CHURCH CONTRACT

Ottawa, Feb. Feb. 6. — Workmen engaged in constructing an addition to Trinity Church, Ottawa South, have made an interesting discovery in the shape of a letter written by the original builders of the church in 1876. It was deeply embedded in the masonry of the church.

The letter was written on substantial paper and with remarkably good ink, for it has been removed from its long resting place in the masonry entirely legible.

It reads as follows:

"Ottawa, Nov. 15th., 1876.
Billings Bridge Church.
"Builders: William Harris, John Wait, David Wait, John F. Munro.
"Labor: John Brouse.

: : AT THE GRAND : :

Arthur and Leah Bell in their act which they call "A Ventriloquial Diversity," are the headliners at the Grand this week. Their act is one of the best of its kind ever seen on the local stage. It is next to impossible to discern any facial movement on the part of the principals and the lady member of the team even passed through the audience whilst singing a song. They are good.

Swain and Ostman are two good comedy acrobats and their act was most laughable. They do some rather unique tumbling. Bergman and Tdward have a good song and story act, their songs appearing to please the audience. The Mabel Fonda Trio of jugglers have a novel act. Their work with the Indian clubs is exceptionally good whether taken singly or collectively.

That splendid Japanese movie star, Sessue Hayakawa is seen in the film version of E. Phillips Oppenheim's famous story, "The Illustrious Prince." The Pictorial Life film shows some world-famous beauty spots and a Strand comedy completes a most entertaining program which may be seen again tonight and tomorrow.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO IN THIS SITUATION?

ONE WAY TO DECIDE IS TO SEE WHAT NORMA TALMADGE DOES

What Would You Do If—

You were young, beautiful and heart-hungry for romance?

The happiness of your mother and sister depended upon your making the greatest sacrifice a girl can make?

You gave yourself in marriage to a man whose very touch revolted you?

You were thrown helplessly upon the turbulent crest of a storm-tossed sea?

And Then—

You were saved, as if by Magic, from a death beneath the waves!

You were isolated upon a tropic isle, far from civilization, with a single male companion?

You found in him all the qualities of a man—strength and honor—nobility of soul?

What Would You Do?

See what Norma Talmadge does.

CITY NOW BUT A MEMORY

Ur, Birthplace of Abraham, Once Important, Today Consists Only of Vast Group of Mounds.

The British, on their recent advance in Mesopotamia, passed over or at least near the ancient city of Ur, where Abraham was born and grew up; and thence that he departed with his family and relations on a journey to Palestine that was destined to be so productive of important events for the Hebrews.

We are accustomed to think of the days of the early Pharaohs as almost lost in antiquity, but Ur was prehistoric. Eight thousand or 9,000 years ago that great Chaldean city was a seaport on the shore (or near it) of the Persian gulf. It traded with India and all the then known parts of the world.

Today Ur (or what remains of it) is 120 miles as the crow flies from the head of the Persian gulf. Surely it has not moved; but the alluvial deposits carried down by rivers, have built out the land, so that the head of the gulf is no longer where it used to be. The pushing southward of the shore line is known to have averaged about a certain distance yearly since the time of Alexander the Great, so that the period when Ur was a seaport can be reckoned with fair accuracy.

Ur today is about half-way between the head of the gulf and the ruins of ancient Babylon. It is near the Euphrates—across the river from the modern town of Nazareth—and is represented by a vast group of mounds that conceal remains of extraordinary interest. Undoubtedly it was war that destroyed this ancient metropolis—as it seems to destroy everything that is worth while, sooner or later.

Out of one huge mound has been dug the remains of a pyramidal tower which is regarded by Assyriologists as the most perfect specimen of Babylonian architecture known. It is built in a series of stages, like the tower of Babel, with a continuous flight of broad steps running up the outside. It originally supported a temple—the great Temple of the Moon.

Mummies Show Arteriosclerosis.

Egyptian mummies show that arterio-sclerosis afflicted the ancient Egyptians, and it has been established that tuberculosis is at least 2,000 years old, according to the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"Mummies have revealed that humanity has not changed in its pathologic reactions in fifty centuries at least.

"It is illuminating to realize that in spite of the fact that the ancient Egyptians led lives of ease, had no tobacco and did not overindulge in meat eating, their arteries degenerated practically in the same way as our own."

SOME COMFORT FOR "SMOKE"

Company's Pet Assured of Good Qualities, Though He Wasn't Equal to Fighting Monkeys.

Three companies of colored engineers at a big medical supply depot somewhere in southern France have three mascots of which they think the world. One is Bobo, the baboon. One is Smoke, a little black French dog. One is Peoria, a li'l yaller dog—a real O. D. brindle.

Bobo is no respecter of persons. He will climb all over his top sergeant with the unholy glee of a fussy inspecting officer and rough him to a fare-you-well. But his main penchant seems to be for pulling little dogs' ears, a trait bitterly resented by the guardians of Smoke and Peoria, but filling with delight his own adherents.

"Dey can't fahnd a dawg in all dis yere camp wot'll stain' up agin him," they chuckle, when Bobo swings his long arms and lopes after some mongrel that has strayed in.

Not so long ago a pathetic scene might have been witnessed on one of the company streets. Smoke was being carried along, in a cowering, timid state bordering on shell shock or mental collapse, by a great hulking stevedore, who was attempting to soothe him.

"Doan' yo' keer, Smoke," he crooned, "Doan' yo' bother a bit if folks laughs at yo'. Even if yo' cain't fight no B comp'ny monkeys, you's de best li'l black dawg as ever wuz borned een Fra'nce, so yo' is!"

And Smoke nodded and sniffed a rather tearful appreciation.—Stars and Stripes.

Red Hair Unpopular.

Red hair, however unjustly, is still associated with deceit, and, in Ireland and Scotland, with ill luck as well. In the highlands he who meets a red-haired woman when starting on a journey will be well advised, say the wiseacres, to return home and start the journey afresh; and in Ireland red-haired people are supposed to exercise the same baneful influence upon any undertaking.

Diamond-cutting for Disabled Men.

A diamond-cutting factory is to be opened at Wrexham, Wales, the purpose being the employment of discharged soldiers who were disabled in the war. Under the present plan such men will be able to earn as much as $29.20 a week.

Copper in War Area.

The war area in Northern France and Belgium is estimated to contain 3,000,000 tons of copper, of which one-third may be reclaimed. Sectors where hard battles raged are said to have 250 tons of iron to every 2½ acres.

A Business Girl

By WALTER JOS. DELANEY

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

He was the son of the president of the bank, but Aileen Drury did not know that. He was so pleasant, so smiling, so accommodating that she considered he would grace any social or business position. Once a day regularly Aileen had to go to the institution to deposit cash and checks for Truitt & Company, whose stenographer she was.

She always went to the window of the assistant paying teller, after he had one day politely handed to her an exquisite white rose that reposed in a glass pin bowl filled with water on his desk. He had noted her admiring gaze and she accepted the trifle with a smile of genuine pleasure. The next day his kindness was accentuated by giving her a small bouquet of variegated pansies.

So after that it was always a little floral offering, or a brief friendly chat. Aileen's sweet face had enchanted the young bank man and she looked forward to her daily visit to the teller's window.

Aileen was receiving a careful business education from Truitt & Co. They were precise and systematic people. She had sense and aimed to excel and they trusted her implicitly. The senior partner called her to his office one day.

"Miss Drury," he said, "on your way to the bank just drop in on Martin Rolfe, will you and present this bill for $1,200. I scarcely think he will pay it, as he is very nearly on the rocks. If he doesn't, tell him we shall apply some pressure for the collection at once."

Aileen was fully familiar with the Rolfe account and needed no further instructions. She found the man in his office and noticed that part of its furniture had disappeared. Aileen was a keen observer and analyst and fancied she detected sure signs of business trouble.

Rolfe began his usual excuses, but Aileen was clear and firm. Finally he filled in a check for $1,200. It was drawn on the Atlas National, with which Truitt & Company also carried their account. Aileen signed a receipt and left the office, but at the head of the street stairs, paused as she caught a remark from one of two men loitering near by.

"Sure Rolfe is in his office?" he sponse.

"Dead sure," was the response of his companion. "We gain nothing by delay. Serve the notice of foreclosure on what of his furniture he hasn't sold and then get to the bank and garnishee his account. I tell you the man is next door to bankruptcy and is getting ready to jump the city."

"Mercy me!" breathed the startled Aileen. I won't lose any time in getting this check cashed."

She reached the Atlas National quite out of breath and anxious and excited. She was experienced enough to comprehend that she was in a race against risk and possible loss, with time, the essence of the pending transaction.

Alan Britton looked up with a smile of welcome as Aileen's sweet face was framed by the metal bound window of his cage. His quick eye detected her agitation and expressed solicitude. Young Britton glanced at the check presented, then at Aileen as if to indicate that the bit of paper conveyed some arousing ideas of his mind.

"Twelve hundred," he read. "I am pretty sure, Miss Drury, that Mr. Rolfe has less than that amount to his credit account, but I will see."

Alan called a messenger boy, and handed him the check with the direction "Tell the bookkeeper to give me the cash balance of Martin Rolfe," and in a moment or two the boy with the check and a slip of paper upon which the bookkeeper had written the figures: "$1,150." How Aileen knew this, was that with a suggestive glance Alan placed the slip so she could not help but read it. She was business woman enough to take the hint, bestowed upon him a direct smile and passed on to the window of the receiving teller. She had selected $50 in currency from her own deposit money.

"Will you please credit this to the account of Mr. Martin Rolfe?" she spoke sweetly, yet with a little grim, half concealed smile. "It covers a disputed account which I think we had better settle."

Then Aileen innocent faced, demure, calm, though her heart was beating fast, went back to Alan Britton.

"Won't you please pass the check through again?" she asked and a flash of admiration in Alan's eyes made her tremble and blush. Again the messenger, a new slip from the bookkeeper, and with a dry smile at the corner of his lips, Alan paid out $1,200. Aileen had been wise enough to know how to turn the corner of the "not sufficient funds" predicament of the wily Rolfe.

And just in time, for as Aileen stood there seeking to regain her composure two further checks of Rolfe's were presented, and their possessors sent sadly away empty handed.

"You needn't be afraid of my father," said Alan to Aileen the day they became engaged. "He always told me in choosing a wife to get a good sensible girl who knew something about business, and you fill that bill, don't you, dear, and, with your added loveliness, you may be sure of a royal welcome from the whole family."

Mine Tungsten in Australia.

Australia is second in importance among British territories producing tungsten ores. In Queensland many of the principal mines have quite recently been acquired by one of the largest of the concerns which have established tungsten reduction plants in Great Britain since the war, and the event appears to promise a new era of progress for this branch of mining in Queensland. Wolfram is mined in New South Wales and Victoria, while important quantities of scheelite, another ore of tungsten, are obtained in New Zealand and in Tasmania.

France's "Sacred Road."

The French government is arranging for the construction of a "sacred road" 400 miles long, from the coast of Flanders to Alsace. It is proposed that this road should follow, as far as may be found practical, the actual line on which the contending armies faced each other for three years.

In the countless woods through which this road will ultimately pass will be found the beautifully tended graves of those who have given their lives for their country.

Puddling Furnaces.

There are between 600 and 700 puddling furnaces in the Staffordshire district in England, all operated by hand. When operating on full time they employ about 10,000 men.

English Spinsters.

It is estimated that 60 per cent. of the women of England must remain unmarried because of the tremendous loss of young men through war and the influenza epidemic.

Japanese Wireless.

One of the most efficient wireless systems is the invention of Japanese electricians, who were among the first to experiment with radio telegraphy.

Woman's Right.

Frank and Lucille were playing at keeping house and soon a disagreement arose over money matters. Lucille appealed to her mother to settle the question. "Mother," she asked, "we women should always carry the pocketbook, shouldn't we?"

A German Joke.

Musicians—and especially those of German birth—are sometimes credited with little sense of humor, but an anecdote in Clara Doria's "Memories of a Musical Career" indicates that at least one famous musician, von Bulow, the pianist, whose wife left him for Wagner, could make a joke, even at his own expense. At a dinner in Boston at which von Bulow was present the guests had been coached to say nothing of Wagner, to avoid possible embarrassment. Some one inadvertently spoke of seeing a painting "at Wagner's.' Whereupon von Bulow exclaimed, cheerily, "Ah, you were at Wagner's? Then you saw my viddow! How was she?"

Famed Rest of Noted Men.

The Diamond bar, famous for nearly 50 years as a part of the old Auzerais house, of San Jose, Cal., is being fitted up for a grocery store. The Auzerais house, on West Santa Clara street, housed five presidents of the United States and was for a time the abode of a king. It was built in 1863, according to John E. Auzerais of San Jose, and the barroom was the meeting place for many of the men whose names have been written into the history of California.

President Grant was entertained at a banquet in the Auzerais house in 1879. The following spring King Kalakau of Hawaii was a guest, and in September of the same year President Hayes delivered an address from the balcony. President Harrison was a guest in 1891 and both McKinley and Roosevelt visited the famous old hotel on their tours of the United States.

Hundreds of Remmants of Knitted Sweater Coat Cloth

Saturday Sale

AT LESS THAN THE COST OF THE WOOL

Here is a chance to cut down the cost of clothing your family. The remnants of a big sweater mill were cleared by us at far less than the cost of the wool the goods are made from. These ends come in various weaves in which sweaters are made and in every shade the mill made sweater coats. There are little and medium size ends and some good size ones in the lot. From them you can make ladies' and children's sweater coats, knitted underskirts and kiddies' garments of any kind. When you see them, dozens of ways to use them will suggest themselves. On sale Saturday morning. Sold by the end only, at LESS THAN THE PRICE OF THE WOOL. —Dress Goods Counter, Main Floor.

Mid-Season Millinery For Present Wear

A group of interesting new Hats has just arrived in the Millinery Salon. They are for present wear, the time o fthe season when one becomes a little tired of their winter hat. Here is a pleasing change.

These smart little models usher in the spirit of a new season, so different from the winter models.

Especially smart are the hats of satin and silk; many combined with the new straws, wings and berries; ribbons and flowers are deftly employed as trimmings.

COME NOW and visit the Millinery Section.

KEPT ART TREASURES SAFE

Authorities of the British Museum Took No Chances on Destruction by German Bombs.

The Assyrian Bulls from Nineveh have been restored to daylight in the Assyrian transept of the British museum. One room that was closed in war time has been opened since the armistice and three others will be opened immediately. The rare printed books, drawings and manuscripts were removed during the air raids to the National library of Wales at Aberystwyth. Sculpture, statuary and vases of antiquity were secreted in a guarded station of the Post Office Tube railway, the building of which was begun before the war for the rapid underground transit of letters and parcels.

Slabs, Elgin marble and large vases were stored in strong rooms in the basement of the museum itself, so constructed as to be invulnerable except from a direct hit by the heaviest type of bomb. The larger sculptures, including the great Assyrian Bulls and Lions, were buried in mountains of sandbags.

All departments will be reopened to the public as soon as possible. It went to the heart of those in charge of the museum to see the numbers of soldiers who came to the gates of the museum in vain in war time. Sections of the museum of particular value to students are still closed—the whole of the Egyptology department, for instance, and both the reference department of the prints and drawings and the exhibition gallery.

LEARNING VALUE OF BABIES

New Viewpoint Taken by World Marks Beginning of Era of the Highest Importance.

That the babies of a nation are its riches and that they must be afforded, that they are always worth what they cost, is the new viewpoint that we are learning now, writes Kathleen Norris in Pictorial Review.

Europe knows, what we of America are learning, that greater than our mines and forests and cities, in actual commercial value, are our babies, and more important than our financiers and statesmen are the women who bear them.

Suppose that we could save one-half of the 300,000 babies that we lose every year. And suppose that another 150,000 who do not die, but who live sickly and defective, were also raised to strong and healthy and normal man and womanhood? Do you realise that this country would be the richer, in ten years, by 3,000,000 native-born citizens?

Therefore the government is beginning to take a fatherly interest in its babies, and more and more in Europe, and wherever mothers' pensions are paid, the government is beginning to feel itself responsible for them. There is less hustling of children into institutions, there is more and more inclination to leave them with their mother and make life easier for their mother. One likes to think of the time coming when every child will mean more ease, and not less, more honor, and not less, to the woman who bears it. But now we are only beginning.

Flying in the Orient.

Prominent business men of Sydney, Melbourne and Adelaide, under the leadership of Reginald Lloyd of London, have formed a company to develop an aerial route for mail and passenger service between Australia and London, according to Consul Henry P. Starrett, Adelaide, Australia, in the Commerce Reports.

The purpose of the company is to explore the proposed route for landing sites, which are to be approximately 300 miles apart. The route is to be from Sydney or Melbourne direct to Port Darwin in the northern territory of Australia, from which point there will be a 300-mile sea trip across to the island of Timor, in the Dutch East Indies, thence from island to island through Java and Sumatra to Singapore and Calcutta, across India to Karacht, thence to Bagdad and Port Said, from which latter point the choice of several developed aerial routes to London is available.

An Unappreciated Relic.

A wandering auctioneer had gathered about him a merry throng of villagers. He held up a battered violin.

"What offers for this ancient fiddle!" he inquired, pathetically. "Look it over. Notice the blurred finger marks of remorseless time. Observe the stains of hurrying years. To merry notes of this fine old instrument the brocaded dames of fair France may have danced the minuet."

By this time the crowd was becoming exceedingly interested.

"Ha," continued the auctioneer, "it bears an abrasion—perhaps the touch of fire. It may have been the very fiddle on which Nero played while Rome burned. Now, what offers?"

From the back of the crowd came a mournful answer: "Fifty cents."

"It is yours, sir!" replied the auctioneer.

Can Cook Anything.

Mrs. Temple always demanded references of her cooks, but the latest applicant had no written ones. Still she looked promising and Mrs. Temple decided to break her rule if the oral ones sounded good. "What experience have you had?" she asked.

The applicant smiled hopefully. "Oh I can cook anything," she answered. "Why, miss, I was once second cook in the dormitory of a girls' school for six months."

Thos. M. Leake, age 54, concession 6, lot 16, Logan, committed sucide while the rest of the family were at church.

PADEREWSKI A FRUIT GROWER

Great Pianist, Now Premier of Poland, Indulged in This Hobby in the Summer Months.

Now that M. Paderewski has become premier of Poland, he will presumably, dispense with his summer home in Switzerland. For many years, during his "off" seasons, Paderewski lived in a villa at Morges, overlooking the lake of Geneva. Here, in extensive gardens and orchards, he followed his hobby of fruit growing. When war broke out Paderewski was in residence at Morges, and at once interested himself in the work of relieving the refugees who streamed over the frontier on their way to Switzerland and Italy. I met him one day in the railway station at Lausanne, busying himself in the welfare of stranded travelers. He told me that he had at that moment no fewer than forty of these unfortunate persons in his house, and was constantly being called upon for help and advice. Paderewski considered it quite possible that the Germans might attempt an invasion of France by way of Switzerland, for, as he remarked, "if the Germans were so brutal as to invade Belgium, why should they not invade Switzerland if it suits their purpose?" That there was ground for this apprehension was made clear later on when it was disclosed that only by a small majority had the German authorities negatived the proposal to cross the Swiss frontier.—"A. H." in the Manchester Guardian.

HAD FOUND SOMETHING NEW

Literary Boob Got Some Satisfaction Out of His Rejection for Service in Army.

Of course it happened long ago. The poor literary boob had made application for entrance to an officers' training camp. The examining surgeon found that, besides suffering with flat ears, ingrown heart, tobacco eyes and a mole on his spleen, the poor fellow had a complexion too sallow to harmonize with khaki. So the surge had to reject him. The chap began to rave and to tear his hair and to cast ominous glances toward the river. The surge, kind-hearted old military sawbones that he was, saw something must be done quickly, so he seized a little square piece of paper and on it printed the following words: "For once your contribution is rejected because it lacks merit. Furthermore, we do not have an abundance of similar material on hand. We positively will not be glad to receive further contributions from you, because it will simply waste your time and ours. Cordially yours, the United States Army."

With a glad cry, the literary boob pressed the life-saving little document to his lips and, with a fervent prayer for the health and safety of the kind old "surge," went on his way rejoicing that he had tried to do his bit and for once it was his fault that it didn't stick.—Indianapolis News.

Old Cradle for New Baby.

Ten generations of her forbears having been rocked to sleep while cuddling within its roomy confines, Baby Mary Virginia Foose, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Foose, of near Loysville, Pa., is herself finding solid comfort in a stately old walnut cradle which came into the Rice family, the family of her mother, 170 years ago.

The child was born in November, but not until several days ago did the mother feel the need for a cradle for the little girl. Then she remembered that the old relic was reposing in the attic and soon the baby girl was being rocked to sleep in it, after it had enjoyed a furlough of more than two decades. The cradle was not new when purchased by the Rice family 170 years ago, and it is not known how many generations of other families were rocked to sleep in it before it came into their ownership. It is of walnut stock and is in a perfect state of preservation. — Harrisburg Telegraph.

Not by the Hour.

"Do you understand the new telephone rates?"

"No. Can you explain them?"

"I think so. Of course you know we are to have metered service."

"Yes, I saw that in the paper."

"That means we will be charged for every call."

"Each call will be a distinct charge, then?"

"Yes."

"I'm glad of that. I had an idea when they put a meter on the line they were going to charge us by the hour, and judging from the time it takes me to get a number now that would bankrupt me."—Detroit Free Press.

Departed Glory.

"What are these curious inscriptions, professor?"

"Cuneiform writing of the ancient Assyrians."

"Can you read it?"

"Oh, yes."

"Is it fact or fiction?"

"Fiction, as a rule. Now, this block of stone bears the proud boast of a king that his fame will never die, yet there isn't a street or a public square on the face of the earth that is named after him now."

Would Spare Her Strength.

"Did you make this bread, darling?"

"Yes, love."

"Well, I'd rather you didn't do any more work like this, dearest."

"Why not, sweetheart?"

"It's too heavy, angel."—London Tit-Bits.

SPLENDID RESPONSE IS MADE TO ANGLICAN FORWARD MOVEMENT

Archdeacon Davidson Meeting With Encouraging Success in His Campaign as Organizer of the Rural Parishes in Toronto District.

In the closing weeks of the Anglican Forward Movement Campaign in the diocese of Toronto, it was felt that a travelling organizer was needed to visit town and country parishes, and to give final direction and impetus to efforts being brought to bear with regard to the great campaign.

Archdeacon Davidson, of Peterborough, was urged to undertake this eleventh hour enterprize, with the help of a few local clergy, in some deaneries impossible to be thoroughly canvassed, acting under the diocesan organizer, Dr. Seager.

The results of this impromptu mission have been up to date, most encouraging. In a spirit of daring faith men and women have risen to standards of giving, hitherto unknown in connection with the church.

What Oshawa Did.

It may seem invidious to mention specific cases, but it seems a duty at this time to give concrete examples which may stimulate others. To give examples of different types of parishes. The rising town of Oshawa is an instance of a daring venture of unselfish faith. In the very midst of an intensive campaign for their new $100,000 church the members of this parish at a largely attended meeting, chose with enthusiasm $10,000 as their objective, and are striking out boldly to raise it, hoping thereby to enable their deanery of East York to meet its objective of $20,000 in full, most of its parishes having comparatively small financial strength.

At Port Hope.

Port Hope's two parishes accept willingly between them $4,500, the raising of which is assured.

Bowmanville, not only takes $2,000 as its objective, but practically guarantees this sum or more, as also does the small country parish of New Castle.

It seems fairly certain that the deanery of Durham will over pay its objective of $24,000.

Brampton has revised a previous negative resolution of the vestry, of entered for a $3,000 objective, of which $1,500 was enthusiastically subscribed at once.

Erindale has taken $2,000 and has united its efforts to meeting the Peel objective.

Our Home Churches.

Peterborough city churches are waging a united campaign and in view of the weakness of surrounding missions, raised their objective from $16,000 to $20,000, so that their deanery might be carried.

Cobourg and Lindsay.

Cobourg adds its quota of $2,000 and Lindsay the same with prospects of exceeding the sum.

Alliston aims at $2,000, a large sum for them, while 8 men of this village of Omemee got together on a hurried call at two hours' notice and subscribed $800.00 as a "starter" to their contribution.

Coldwater, in spite of past difficulties, took its proportion with spirit, and the whole country parish at Mulmur at two large week-day meetings determined on $2,000 at least, with the expectations of largely exceeding this. Its energetic rural dean is determined that South Simcoe deanery will reach its objective of $17,000 and is taking practical steps to insure this.

Collingwood and Barrie are dining at generous sums in the neighborhood of $4,000 each, which await final decision.

West Simcoe's objective is $19,000 and East Simcoe is $20,000. Reports of other parishes are daily coming in on similar levels.

In the country parts of Toronto diocese, as elsewhere, men and women are showing in this loyal and spiritual way that they heard the call of their nation-wide church to hold their respective proportions of the financial battle line and that they intend to do it.

A Word from Archdeacon Davidson.

Archdeacon Davidson, the organiser of the country districts of the diocese of Toronto, asks all clergy in his constituency to instruct the chairman of their committees, in addition to notifying headquarters, as per printed instructions, to telegraph him at Peterborough on Feb. 15th at latest, the different parochial objectives and amounts actually raised, both cash contributions and promised amounts being stated. These will be tabulated as quickly as possible and acknowledgement duly made.

The district organiser also gives his final call to constituents in all country parishes of the diocese that determined efforts be made to secure the name of every single member for this, the Canadian churches honor roll, and that the individual givings be raised from low levels and small acts of common place duty to inspired venture of daring faith, stimulated by the vision of divine power and the appealing call of our church and country.

LAYMEN'S COMMITTEE HOLD A CONFERENCE

LOCAL WORKERS IN AGLICAN FORWARD MOVEMENT AT DINNER AT HOOPER'S

Last evening the members of the local Laymen's Committee of the Anglican Forward Movement, met at Hooper's Palm Rooms for dinner, and to discuss the forth coming canvass. Mr. J. A. Aylmer, chairman of the city committee, occupied the chair, and after all had done justice to the good things provided by Miss [illegible] Hooper he explained the use of the different forms provided for making the canvass. The team captains were given their lists and other supplies and then team meetings were held and details of next week's work were gone into. To judge from the reports of several of the special canvassers the Anglican churches of the city are going well beyond their objective, but at the same time the determination was expressed that there be no slackness shown on the part of the different teams and an extra effort will be made to make this most worthy cause the huge success which it should be.

NO SALARIES FOR THE SCHOOL TRUSTEES

MOTION ON TORONTO BOARD OF EDUCATION LOST ON TIE VOTE

Toronto, Feb. 6.—The following motion presented by Dr. John Hunter, was perhaps the most important matter discussed at the meeting of the Board of Education last night: "That this board petition the Legislative Assembly for an act providing for the following remuneration for the services rendered by the members of the board: Members, $600 per annum; Chairmen of Standing Committees, $800 per annum; and Chairman of the board, $1,000 per annum."

It was felt by Dr. Hunter that the laborer was worthy of his hire, and he thought that a city as wealthy as Toronto should not ask men to meet and devote the time they were giving to the work without some remuneration. They were not as well off financially as they would have been, he said, had they kept off the board. They were doing as equally valuable work as any other public body, and the city, he thought, should show in some tangible way their appreciation of their services.

Trustee Dineen was of the same opinion, and said that it was getting tiresome working for nothing. Trustee Douglas differed from this, and did not think that they should look for any financial return from the work, believing that the joy of the work was its own reward. Mrs. Courtice expressed herself in favor of the members being given some salary for their services. Two years ago, she said, she would have been opposed to it, but the high cost of living had caused her to change her opinion. Other members expressed themselves for and against the motion, and when a vote was taken the motion was defeated on a tie vote.

In expectation of the question of teachers' salaries coming up for discussion at the meeting there was a large representation of teachers present. They were doomed to disappointment, however, when Dr. John Noble, Chairman of the meeting, announced that there would be no discussion of salaries till the next meeting of the board.

Little hope is held that a strike of maintenance of way and railway shop laborers will be averted.

ORGANIST AT ST. LUKE'S ACTED AS ACCOMPANIST

W. C. THOMSON TOOK PART IN RECENT CONCERT AT CAMPBELLFORD

The music-loving public of the town may be well pleased that the Campbellford Choral Union has this season been revived by Mr. David Nicholson, the organist and choirmaster of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, after a lapse of four years' war period. The result of his work was seen to the best advantage at the first concert of the season, on Tuesday night, the 27th, January last. Not a word of adverse criticism has been heard, but on the contrary although the program was lengthy not a soul got up and walked out and all seemed to enjoy the musical fare provided.

One fact possibly tended to the popularity of the event was that only local talent was heard.

The choral accompanying was in the able hands of Mr. Wm. Colborne Thomson, who has been accompanist for the Choral Union for the season and recently appointed organist and choirmaster of St. Luke's Church, Peterborough.

OBITUARY

MRS. W. A. BRONSON

The death took place on January 13, from pneumonia, at her late home near Haynes, Alta., of Helena Stone, beloved wife of Wilton A. Bronson and only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Stone of Mount Julian. The deceased was a particularly bright and lovable disposition and was a favorite with all who knew her. She leaves to mourn her loss besides her husband three children, Roy, Alice and Willard; her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Stone, and one brother William, of Mount Julian. Mrs. Hope was a daughter of the late John Miller, was born in Otonabee and had lived there al her life. She leaves behind, besides her sorrowing husband, six children, three sons, Richard on the adjoining farm and John and William at home and three daughters; Mrs. S. Graham Westwood, Mrs. Allan McKeown, Riverdale, Sask., and Edith at home; one brother, John Miller, 22 Woolsey street, and one sister, Mrs. P. J. McFarlane, Keene.

The funeral will take place at two o'clock on Monday, February 9th, from her late residence, Lot 22, Concession 6, Otonabee to Keene Cemetery.

WAR MEMORIAL FOR THE CANADIAN SOLDIERS

TO BE ERECTED IN OTTAWA AND HOLD TROPHIES OF ARMY

Ottawa, Feb. 6.—Canada's official war memorial will take the form of a museum, which presumably will be erected in Ottawa, in which will be housed the war trophies belonging to the Canadian forces. At a meeting held here a resolution was adopted unanimously that there be built for this purpose "a monumental museum containing such other elements as may be necessary to give full expression to national feeling" and as an "expression of the sacrifice of the dead and the greatness of our national effort."

The architect for the memorial will be chosen in a competition open to Canadian architects, and the working out of the project is placed in the hands of a commission composed of three delegates from each of the following bodies: Great War Veterans' Association, Royal Society of Canada, Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, Canadian Royal Academy, and the Town Planning Institute of Canada, and the Chairman of the Advisory Arts Council.

The name of the commission will be the "National Memorial Commission." Its members will serve without remuneration.

ENTERTAINED ALDERMEN

Ald. Copping entertained Mayor McIntyre and other members of the City Council at dinner at his residence last night.

Three children of Mrs. Fordham of Ansley Arm, B.C., were drowned when trying to save a brother, who was saved.

Canada's official war memorial will take the form of a museum, presumably at Ottawa, to house the Canadian forces' war trophies.

EDITOR'S MAIL

LAKEFIELD VILLAGE HALL

Editor Review: Permit me to address the following letter to the ratepayers of the village of Lakefield:

There are rumors around the village, also statements made at the meeting held in the Queen Street Theatre, January 26th, regarding the extra cost of the new Memorial Hall.

In reference to extra lumber required over contract, which cost $1808.61, this includes all lumber for basement forms, tool house, mixing boards, mortar boards, mould for cement blocks, arches and sills, strapping for ceilings, planks for bricklayer's scaffolds, all ceiling joist over auditorium, purline plates, three set of stairs, outside steps, frames, sash, cornice, tower, roof over side and front entrance and lath. In regard to ceiling joist over auditorium this item was not on the contract as I had to see the architect as to a change from the plan, which was for the best and cost less money.

When I was engaged by the Council, I was ordered to start at once, as Mr. McDonald was chairman of the Building Committee, he gave me instructions to get what ever lumber I required from Mr. N. Moore on account of his mill being handy and close to the building and he had what I required until I had time to make out a list of material for the bill—lumber, roofing, shingles and pine flooring.

Mr. Lillicrap of the Kawartha Lumber Co. claims he was entitled to the contract for the bill lumber, his tender being the lowest, also he was to supply all lumber and shingles for $2000.00. Now this only covered the material I had on the list which was given him, but the public will see by the following letter to Mr. W. Sherin that he could not supply same according to specifications:

Mr. W. Sherin,
Town Clerk, Lakefield, Ont.

Dear Sir,—We have been notified by Mr. Hendren, foreman on the Memorial Hall work, that our tender for the lumber required is the lowest and that we can go on and supply same.

At the same time he suggested that we sign an agreement to furnish this lumber from 1918 saving and have the joists for the ground floor supplied by the 5th inst.

The lumber we are prepared to supply was sawn during the spring and summer of this year and has been from three to four months piled.

This, of course, applies to the bill lumber, scantling and joists. The floor would be bone dry stock. We would also require a reasonable time to get the material on the ground for the basement floor, say two weeks.

We think that there is very little 1918 hemlock on the market.

If you will take the lumber as above mentioned we are willing to stand by our tender.

Yours truly,
KAWARTHA LUMBER CO., Ltd.
Signed by G. J. Emsley.

It would not have been a square deal to let Mr. Lillicrap supply green lumber when Mr. N. Moore could furnish 1918 cut as called for in the specifications.

The lumber which I ordered from Mr. N. Moore before any tenders were called for was supplied for at the rate of $40.00 per thousand. What I had ordered from the Kawartha Lumber Co. was charged at the rate of $49.00 per thousand. I consider I saved the village money by buying as little lumber as possible from Mr. Lillicrap for Mr. N. Moore's rates were much lower.

Mr. Lillicrap said his list of material was not the same as Mr. N. Moore's. If he will leave his list with Mr. W. Sherin, that was written by my son, F. Roy Hendren, why I will have Mr. N. Moore do likewise and have both copies published. If Mr. Lillicrap does not do this, the public will know his statement was false.

It was brought up at the meeting of January 26th that the Council had not seen a contract signed by Mr. N. Moore. This was signed last July and Mr. W. Sherin has it in his office.

If the Council though there was any crooked dealings by letting the contracts to Mr. N. Moore it was their place to come to me and find out the particulars, and not wait until the end of the year.

I don't think it is a square deal of Dr. Smith and Mr. Porter to stand up the night of the meeting and say the extra cost of the hall was put on by ex-Reeve Moore and myself. They also try to blame Mr. Moore for having it done by day work. Why Mr. Porter suggested day work to me before Mr. Moore ever thought of it! If the Council was not in favor, why did they sign to have it day work? It is easily seen Dr. Smith and Mr. Porter are not property owners in the village or they would have looked after the cost of the building a little more careful before it went so far.

There are a few jealous-minded men in the village whom I believe caused most of the trouble, and if the village had a Council composed of property owners, I believe they would have had better results, regarding the keeping down of the cost of the building.

I have been contracting in Lakefield for over 45 years and I defy any person whom I have built for to say I ever did any grafting or had any dishonest dealings with them.

Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space.

Yours truly,
A. HENDREN.

VETERAN MAY OPPOSE PREMIER IN HALTON

E. G. STEPHENSON OF TORONTO ANNOUNCES HIMSELF AS CANDIDATE

Milton, Ont., Feb. 6.— This riding was given a surprise when Edward John Stephenson, of Toronto, former editor of the Veteran-Democrat, and an ex-secretary of Scarboro branch, G. W. V. A., arrived here and announced his candidature against Premier Drury. Stephenson, after announcing his intentions to contest the riding in which he appears to be almost a complete stranger, applied to Deputy Returning Officer, R. L. Hemstreet for nomination papers. Upon receiving them he left Milton to secure the signatures necessary for his nomination.

While in Milton Stephenson conferred with the local branch of the G. W. V. A.. To the returning officer he said the he was not backed by any particular party or faction. He stated that he intended to run as an independent soldier candidate. There is a very heavy returned soldiers' vote in this county which it is understood Stephenson is hoping to secure. He is a member of the U. F. O., but asserted today that, while supporting their principles, he opposed Premier Drury and Hon. W. E. Raney as leaders in the movement.

Rumor has it here that Stephenson has the backing of the Liberty League, but he has not confirmed this report. The rumord has gained considerable credence because of his anti-prohibition stand whenever the liquor question was discussed by the G. W. V. A. Stephenson was a leader in the soldier attack upon the O. T. A., and was one of the outstanding veterans in the fight for the $2,000 gratuity. While he was editor of the Veteran-Democrat, he became the recognized mouthpiece of the returned men agitating for the $2,000 gratuity.

"I don't think Stephenson has a chance in the world," state Charles McGregor, secretary of the Liberal Association.

Other well-known Liberals and Conservatives disagree with this opinion, but the riding has been taken too much by surprise to accurately gauge the situation. Men who know the county well state that any candidate securing the soldier vote and Liberty League vote, with a sprinkling of old line party anti U. F. O. support, might poll a heavy vote.

"Go Teach All Nations Beginning at Jerusalem"

"THAT'S it," says a critic, " 'beginning at Jerusalem!' You should correct paganism at home before going abroad to look for it. I do not believe in Foreign Missions."

Yet Jerusalem was not Christianized when the Apostles went to Antioch; when Philip was sent to the Ethiopian.

The Need of Africa

Africa was first explored by a Missionary who lies in Westminster Abbey, honored by all nations. David Livingstone was succeeded by other devoted men, who gave themselves unreservedly to the people of the Dark Continent. Triumphant success in some districts—Uganda for instance—is balanced by dull failure in others. Yet the general prospect is encouraging. Through Canadian Missions in that land, men are raised out of savagery, women are ennobled, children are cared for and educated.

Remember This

The man who does not believe in Foreign Missions stands today clothed and educated because of Foreign Missions. When did English culture begin? With the visit of St. Augustine, a Foreign Missionary from Rome. Who Evangelized Rome? A Foreign Missionary named Paul, of Tarsus and Jerusalem! What if he had gone to the Ganges instead of to the Tiber?

Certainly Canada needs more Christianity, but the best way to improve our own spiritual life is to help bear the burdens of the world.

The Missions Established

Five Christian Communions in Canada — Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian — have an extensive mission work abroad. They have sent overseas many devoted men and women. By their work, barriers have been broken down and in every land there is an eager call for more missions, more teachers, more doctors, more hospitals. Now, owing to the declining value of the dollar, it is necessary to double the expenditure in order even to hold the ground won. Until that is done, an advanced Missionary programme can not be undertaken.

Mass Movements in India

India is our brother-land, a loyal British dependency. Illiteracy is the rule. Caste imprisons the people and stifles all ambition. British administration has taught the folk the value of peace. English-speaking Missionaries from Canada are teaching them the value of education and the power of the Name which is above every name. Great masses of the people are asking for baptism, but there are not enough Missionaries to teach them.

A Mandate for Expansion

All men, who think honestly realize that the Gospel of Christ is unique in moral splendor, in spiritual force, in civilizing influence. It redeems the individual and exalts the nation. It has made the modern world of thought, of industry, of progress. It must go out over all the earth to ease international relationships, to put an end to cruelty and misery. There is free entry for the Gospel in every nation under Heaven. Lift up your heads, O ye Gates of India, and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting Doors of China and Japan and Africa, and the King of Glory shall come in.

The Chance in China

China is attempting to develop a democratic spirit before the nation is prepared for it. Many of the leaders got their first glimpse of true liberty in Christian Mission Schools. Now they talk of establishing one million Government primary schools. They look to Canadian Missionaries for help in the establishment of normal courses. Was ever such an opportunity before the Church — to help influence the school teachers of a great, new nation of four hundred million people?

The Call to Action

Canadians, Churchmen or non-Churchmen, you met the charges of the war with cheerfulness, since it was waged to establish righteousness in the earth. Now hear the call of the Churches for adequate means to continue by peaceful suasion the work which for four years was done by batteries and bayonets. Your Church appeals directly to you, civilized and educated by Foreign Missions of an ancient time, to meet your obligation to that same Great Cause today.

The Need of the World

Japan, Formosa, Korea, the South Sea Islands, South America, and not least, the pagans in our own land, need the Gospel. The Missionary is welcomed in all lands. Men everywhere appreciate the spirit of those Canadians who forget themselves in order to serve the suffering and the weary. Idealism in action counts!

One of the Family.

We had a beautiful outdoor wedding for our sister on a September morning. Elaborate floral arches, altar, etc., had been arranged. Our guests were assembled. From out the house came the procession, the minister leading, the bride and bridegroom with their attendants, when to the merriment of all, our family dog joined in the procession, walking along slowly as the rest, and he laid down by the altar during the ceremony.—Chicago Tribune.

Courage.

True courage is a spiritual victory and cannot be marked with a physical label. It is developed and strengthened, as is everything, by exercise. Its index is not in squareness of chin, but in squareness of purpose; not in firmness of lips, but in fashioning the lips to speak the truth; not in depth of chest, but in depth of soul; not in confident tread, but in walking uprightly. —W. S. C.

Trials of Matrimony.

We were stopping at a hotel, while on our honeymoon, and were trying to hide the fact that we were newlyweds. We succeeded quite well until dinner time. Just as we had reached the center of the big dining hall, a tot stood up on her chair and shouted, "Which one is the bride, mamma?" Every one then knew, by my telltale blushing, that it was I—a most embarrassed bride.—Chicago Tribune.

Gustav Noske Has Proved That He Is Strong Man Of the Ebert Cabinet

GUSTAV NOSKE has been playing the part of Ajax defying the lightning. Noske is the German Minister of Defence; he is the "Iron Man" of the Ebert regime, and it is more than hinted that he is the tail that wags the German Governmental dog. At any rate, he set his large Teutonic foot against accepting the protocol putting the Peace Treaty in effect, offered to let the Allies take over Germany as a going concern, and the actual effect was that the German Government held out.

Noske practically stole the early German revolution. He was a member of the Reichstag from Kiel and when the German soldiers mutinied, starting the revolution, Noske was sent to quiet them. He quieted them by putting himself at their head and helping things along, and with the backing of this most turbulent armed body, made himself a formidable revolutionary figure.

Copyright, Underwood & Underwood

GUSTAVE NOSKE.

While he has never figured as a Junker, being originally a workman in the naval shops at Kiel, he now is considered a reactionary, probably because of the ruthlessness with which he has put down the Spartacans. He saw from the first a strong hand was needed to govern Germany and decided that the hand should be the hand of Noske. He came to an agreement with Col. Reinhardt, the commander of the Berlin garrison, who used his volunteer force — the "Regiment Reinhardt" — to further Noske's ends and did it in a characteristic Prussian fashion.

Foreseeing the Spartacan rioting, Noske organised highly paid volunteer companies of former soldiers and when the Liebknecht followers rose, beat them badly. He was, no doubt, brutal in his handling of the rioters, but scarcely any more brutal than the Spartacans would have been had they triumphed.

Noske has a host of enemies, but he has kept Germany in such order as has prevailed. He is the backbone of the Government, and in a sense is the Government. He has been proposed as dictator in name, and in times of stress has been dictator in fact. He is of the stuff of dictators —a big, hard man who knows what he wants done and is not squeamish of the means of accomplishment.

Some people make room at the top by pushing others off.

The less a man knows the more he wants to tell it.

TONIGHT! YES! YOU MUST!

You Can't Stay Bilious and Constipated. Your Liver and Bowels Need "Cascarets"—No Gripe!

Turn the rascals out—the headache, biliousness, indigestion, colds, the sour stomach and misery-making gases—turn them out tonight and keep them out with Cascarets.

Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never know the misery caused by a lazy liver, clogged bowels, or an upset stomach.

Don't put in another day of distress. Let Cascarets cleanse your stomach; remove the sour, fermenting food; take the excess bile from your liver and carry out all the constipated waste matter and poison in the bowels. Then you will feel great Cascarets tonight straighten you out by morning. They work while you sleep.

Gossip From The Wide World Of Sport

The amateur skating races for the Dominion of Canada championships will be held in the west this year, Winnipeg in fact.

They have been more often held in Montreal upon the big open rink at Westmount of the Montreal Amateur Athletic Association than anywhere else, principally because in that way they were more accessible to skaters from other places, than elsewhere, but this time, the strong requests from the west, coupled with the reports to the effect that a great rival in skating had taken place there, resulted in the executive of the Amateur Skating Association of Canada allowing the contests to be held there.

One of the inducements, no doubt, was that the local executive in Winnipeg agreed to pay the hotel and travelling expenses of two men from the east to respectively represent the Toronto and Montreal districts.

These men will be selected by committees specially appointed by the Amateur Skating Association Executive.

At first February 17 was designated as the date for the Canadian Championships but when it was found that the 18th and 19th had already been selected by the International Skating Union of America for the U. S. championships, the date for the Canadian contests was set back to February 27th, because otherwise neither skaters from eastern Canada nor the United States would be able to complete.

Ski-ing, like every other branch of sport, has taken on a tremendous boom in the east during the present cold spell, and the only trouble is that on account of the increase in the prices of sporting goods and their scarity it is becoming a very expensive pastime.

In Montreal there is a curious rivalry between the organized clubs, while there are scores of individual ski-ers not connected with organizations, snowshoes having almost disappeared.

The Monteral Ski Club is the oldest organization of its kind, and up to now considered the most aristocratic one, but some two years ago, a Swedish Ski Club was a large number of members, and last year a French Canadian Club.

This latter has been running the older organization a close race for popularity and prosperity, and its executive has been very versatile in finding new competition stunts for its members. As a crowning piece of enterprise they have virtually cinched an affiliation with the Club Alpin of France, which is supposed to control international ski competition on the continent of Europe, and when this is consumated they expect to turn their competitors green with envy.

As to snowshoeing, it has become so much in disuse that an announcement in the newspapers to the effect that the "Athletic members of the St. George's Snowshoe Club of Montreal would hold a snowshoe tramp," created quite a furore. The St. George used to be the most select and one of the most active clubs in Montreal, and had, and still has, for that matter, a chalet on the side of the Westmount mountain, which has been visited by some of the most distinguished people in the world, and is known far and wide for its wonderful hospitality.

The campaign against Jack Dempsey on the ground that he was a slacker is being pushed with such vigor that it begins to look serious for him.

Organization after organization of United States war veterans are joining in the movement and the press campaign has been started to show the difference between Dempsey and Carpentier as to their behavior during the war. Based upon this difference which shows up entirely in favor of the Frenchman is made the demand that Dempsey should never be allowed to meet Carpentier and some go even so far as to demand that the man who defeated Willard shall go in retirement and hand over his title to the man who vanquished Beckett.

While the truth of some of the allegations and conclusions against Dempsey is admitted, there are many who do not hesitate to say that the entire thing is engineered by rival boxing promoters of those interested in booming Dempsey at present, because efforts they have made to get a piece of the "graft" and being "declared in on it' have failed.

Similar tactics resulted in Les Darcy, the Antipodian boxing star being driven to his death as the result of worry, and by Jimmy Wilde, the English flyweight wonder being prevented from making any money worth mentioning during his visit to the United States.

And while talking about the Antipodes, it looks as if the Australians still had the secret of how to win at International tennis safely locked up in their bosom.

Their once great star, Brookes, is getting pretty old as far as such a strenuous sport as tennis is concerned, but he was quite good enough yet with the aid of General Patterson to cinch the Davis sup once more a trophy which stands for the world's championship.

It has been stated before that the high cost of living is affecting all branches of sport. This spring it is affecting the umpires in the big baseball leagues.

Good umpires are scarce, and since they have all asked for an increase, they are all likely to get it.

There are lots of men who would make good umpires, but they lack the moral courage to go out on the ball diamond and show what they can do.

During the war the umpires received a cut down in their salaries. Last year they did a little better, but this year they want considerable more.

An argument in their favor is that the celebrated umpire, Buron, asked for an increase some time ago and did not get it. He then went back to his old trade of plumber which he used to follow in his free time, and when the National League wanted him back later on, he was making so much money that he could afford to snap his fingers at even the increased offer that they were making him.

BOARD OF TRADE NOTES

Consistent with the bylaws of this Board of Trade, a regular meeting of the members is called, to be held in the Council Room on the evening of Thursday, 12th February, at half after seven o'clock, sharp, for the consideration of such matters as may require attention.

As this meeting will be the last regular one prior to the annual meeting on Tuesday, March 9th, a nominating committee is to be selected, by open nomination and vote, whose duty it shall be to select candidates and prepare the official ticket for the election of members of the Council for the succeeding year. An auditing committee is also to be nominated and chosen. There must also be appointed five members to act as judges of the election on March 2nd.

The Board will be called to order promptly at 7.30 p.m. so as to adjourn at 8 o'clock, to make way for a joint meeting with the Peterborough branch of the Engineering Institute of Canada. Members are asked to make particular note of this engagement and, if practicable, to keep it, as a representative attendance of the members is particularly desired.

TELL THE WORLD THIS WOMAN SAYS

That Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound made Me a Well Woman.

Los Angeles, Cal.—"I suffered with female troubles for years, was sick most of the time, was not able to do my own housework, and I could not get help from doctors. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised in the newspapers, and took six bottles, and am a well woman. You can use my name to tell the world the good your medicine has done me as I shall praise it always."—Mrs. A. L. DeVink, 647 St. Paul Avenue, Los Angeles, Calif.

Women who suffer from any form of weakness, as indicated by displacements, inflammation, ulceration, irregularities, backache, headaches, nervousness or "the blues," should do as Mrs. DeVink did, and give Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a thorough trial.

For over forty years this famous remedy, which contains the curative, strengthening properties of good old fashioned roots and herbs, has been correcting just such ailments. If you have mysterious complications write for advice to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass.

Quebec, Feb. 6.— The amendments to the license law will probably be introduced in the Legislature at the beginning of next week, and there seems little doubt that something wil be proposed which will increase wine considerably, almost if not quite the alcoholic strength of beer and up to what it was in pre prohibition days.

Mark Twain of Canada

MR. GEORGE HAM.

In the days when interesting people came to Canada to find it freshly interesting there was nobody could reveal the spirit of the land to them like George Ham of the C.P.R. It is said he put Major Pond of the United States out of business. Why go on a wearisome lecture tour under that impressario's guidance when George Ham could transport you to Winnipeg and on through the delights of the Rockies in all the comfort of a sumptuous coach? Great personages beseech him to call them by their first names. He has loaned matches to kings and potentates and autographed photogravures of his features for admiring authoresses of best sellers. There did once seem to be a time when the truly great would not venture to come to Canada without first ascertaining whether George Ham could receive them. He is said to have got so "fed up" with dukes and royal bodies that he did not mind, for a change, escorting untitled personalities of international fame. Many men whose signatures command imperious power would no more think of forgetting to send him their Christmas cards than they would dream of neglecting a royal command. He is so very much persona grata with all kinds of people in Who's Who, when he arrives in London the court circular has to be enlarged to publish the invitations issued in his honor. Now he has achieved the signal honor of an unpaid-for mention in the exclusive Morning Post. It feels relieved to know that even if the League of Nations be jeopardized, the official entertainer of the C. P. R. is keeping his health and revelling in his high spirits. This bright though aristocratic London paper says George Ham is the Mark Twain of Canada. It claims his jests are beyond computation. He will yet go down to fame as having originated one joke. He has been as generous with his humor as he has been a profitable acquaintance for professional jokesmiths. As he never has patented any of his inimitable quips he often laughs at them when he hears them on the stage, until he realizes that they were of his own making. You may have heard of the Cincinnati millionaire he took to Muskoka. While there the plutocrat was attacked by brigands from Toronto. The chief brigand later complained to the police that in the encounter his watch and chain had been stolen. It should be added that George Ham was not out with his Cincinnati charge when the watch and chain were stolen. Thousands of personages who have enjoyed seeing Canada have testified to how much their enjoyment was due to his kindly wit and indefatigable attention. They have paid tribute to the courtesies he knows so well how to extend in behalf of his railway. But perhaps one of the best tributes ever paid this incomparable humorous cicerone of the railway ties, was a copy of verses by Mr. Neil Munro, the Scottish author. He sang how George Ham had "freighted laughter ten thousand miles," when acting as uncle, aunt, brother, father and grandfather to a party of British scribes. They think in Britain that not to have known George Ham of the C. P. R. is to display ignorance of the Empire's geography.

Cold Feet In Advertising

Phone 189 and our Representive will Call and discuss Rates, etc., with you

It is a well-established principle of commerce that there is no business that should not devote a proportion of its gross revenue to advertising if it is to be successful.

Yet it is a surprising fact that many businesses, generally speaking, advertise too sparingly, or only spasmodically.

National advertisers, the very ones who, at the expense of millions, have tested the value of advertising, don't think of cutting down or stopping their activities. Some of the most successful national advertisers even declare that their advertising plans for this season provide for still larger appropriations than last year.

Why shouldn't the local merchant follow their example and make a yearly appropriation for advertising in its various forms? Spasmodic advertising never pays like a regularly mapped out campaign.

MAY ADOPT GUELPH'S PLAN

System of Election is Explained to Ratepayers of Paris.

Paris, Ont., Feb. 5— For some time a number of progressive citizens here have thought that the best interests of the town would be served if a system of electing members to the Council similar to that for the Board of Education were adopted. The plan is for about one-third of the Council to be retired each year. Ex-Mayor Carter, Guelph, gave an outline of the first year's work of things. In January, 1919, the citizens elected 18 aldermen, the six receiving the highest votes were elected for three years, the next six highest aldermen were elected for two years and the six receiving the lowest votes were retired at the end of one year, but were eligible for re-election. From these 18 the Mayor was chosen at the first meeting of Council. The change he said, had been satisfactory at Guelph. The meeting was under the auspices of the Board of Trade.

FALLING? HERE'S WHERE IT SHOWS

Don't worry! Let "Danderine" save your hair and double its beauty.

To stop falling hair at once and rid the scalp of every particle of dandruff, get a small bottle of delightful "Danderine" at any drug or toilet counter for a few cents, pour a little in your hand and rub it into the scalp. After several applications the hair usually stops coming out and you can't find any dandruff. Your hair will grow strong, thick and long and appear soft, glossy and twice as beautiful and abundant. Try it!

Lord Robert Cecil Has Taken a Unique Position In British Public Life

BRITISH politics are in a peculiarly fluid condition and no prophet has arisen bold enough to say what the outcome will be. It is agreed that the present Government contains few if any of the elements of stability, but whether Lloyd George will break with his Tory lieutenants or maintain the coalition by accepting their viewpoint are points on which there is little light.

There seems to be only one point in connection with British politics on which all observers are more or less agreed. The coming man is Lord Robert Cecil. A man of rare intellectual power and enlightened views, Cecil is looked upon as a real force. In fact, although he comes of the Toriest of Tory families, he is regarded as a possible leader for the Labor party! Discussing Cecil in the English Review of Reviews, H. Witson Harris writes:—

His experience at Paris left visible marks on him. He went there one man and he came back another. He carried through with unlooked-for success the work he was charged with. He gave evidence of unsuspected executive ability. And when he came back to Parliament in June it was manifest that his work of the past six months had invested the member for Hitchin with a new authority and a new power of leadership both in the House of Commons and outside it.

He had filled a great place in Paris, and his work there had reacted on his personality. No man could hold the position he held in an international gathering and come back to play a secondary part in home politics. The impression he made at the Peace Conference was profound. Holding a status beyond that of an ordinary member of Parliament—he had ceased to be a Minister in November—he was as largely responsible as any one for the two great constructive achievements of the conference, the creation of the League of Nations and the relief of starvation in Europe through the Supreme Economic Council. No member of the conference — certainly no member of the British delegation—was held in higher respect or regard.

LORD ROBERT CECIL.

If there is one thing that burned itself into Lord Robert's soul at Paris it was the suffering of the world. No man who had access, as he had, to the reports coming in almost hourly from relief agents in every corner of Europe could be insensible to the misery they unfolded. That was Lord Robert's text when he came home to address the House of Commons in April, and he has recurred to it again and again in speech and interview since. It may be that the part he had played when Minister of Blockade in imposing starvation as a weapon of war made him the more resolute in his fight against starvation when the war was at an end. At all events, his contact with the sufferings of the people bred in him a new sympathy with the people as people. Aristocrat, Tory, Cecil, as he was by tradition and origin, you could imagine him now preaching with all the conviction of his nature from the Corn Law Rhymer's lines:

> The people, Lord, the people,
> Not thrones and crowns but men.

He returned to the House of Commons to make himself its leading figure. There is no one whose criticism is more uncompromising, more sincere, more constructive, or more just. He speaks as one having authority. His escape from the Treasury Bench to the independence of the private member has unfettered him.

But no one believes that Lord Robert Cecil has gone off the Treasury Bench to stay off it. All that is in question is the time and manner of his return. Someone described him not long ago as the only possible Tory Prime Minister. That judgment is already out of date. That Lord Robert is a possible Prime Minister is manifest. That he would be willing to head an administration composed of the type of politician who calls himself Tory to-day is not credible.

Where, then, is he to find his associates in the work of government? He is said to have observed once that the only party that had really interested him for ten years past was the Labor Party. There is still a wide gulf that separates him from even the moderates of the party —men like Mr. Henderson, and Mr. Thomas, and Mr. Clynes. Where they stand for nationalization, he preaches, as he has always preached, co-partnership.

The Difference.

Henry Watterson is credited with this up-to-date witticism: A Louisville banker remarked to the retired editor, "I understand, sir, that you intend to start a paper of your own—a paper that will strike a new note." "Well," the veteran newspaper man replied, "that would be a welcome change, indeed, for papers nowadays do nothing but note a new strike."

Colloidal Fuel.

"Colloidal fuel" is a mixture of oil, finely powdered coal, and a stabilizer which keeps the coal particles from settling in the oil. It was devised to meet naval demands for fuel, but is expected to make possible great savings of both coal and oil in industrial plants.

MOBS OF CHILDREN CRAVING FOR BREAD

Gaze Into Bakeshop Windows for Hours at a Time, Hoping for Something to Eat.

"The saddest thing in all Eastern Europe at the present moment—worse than all the other instances of starvation and even of death and disease on every hand—are the child-mobs one sees outside of the few bakeries that are able to keep going in Warsaw," Sholom Asch, the famous Yiddish playwright and poet reported to the American Jewish Relief Committee upon his return from Eastern Europe, where he went as a commissioner of the Joint Distribution Committee of American Funds for Jewish Sufferers from the War.

"In the bakery windows are a few loaves of bread, and sometimes cakes, that are sold at a simply prohibitive price," he explained, "and even if these were as cheap as in Canada and the United States, their taste would still be unknown to the hungry Jewish children, who live on the cup of soup a day they get from American Jewish relief agencies. But the youngsters tantalize themselves with the sight of food, when they cannot get the taste of it.

"They press up to the window, and at first merely stare respectfully at the bread, an uncanny little crew of gaunt small folks with old faces and suffering unchildish eyes. Perhaps it is raining, or the wind is blowing coldly through the tatters that they wear, that little barefoot army, but they huddle together for warmth, and do not stir. The sight of the bread has fascinated them, it is so rarely seen.

"A customer comes out, leaving the door ajar for a moment, and the warm fragrance of the bake-shop drifts out to the little ragamuffins, maddening them. They press closer to the window, their thin little faces against the glass. Those in front put out their tongues and lick the glass, as if, by so doing, they could taste the bread behind it. No poet could ever write into words the wistfulness of their faces as they do it.

"One of the men from the bakery comes out and drives them away every few minutes, else they would break the glass. They are afraid of him, and for a few minutes they stand at a distance, their eyes still upon the bread. Then hunger overcomes their fear, and they press up to the bakery window again. Soon they are eagerly licking the glass once more. And this goes on all day every day in front of the bakery window."

More money is needed to help feed those children, and an appeal soon is to be made in Canada for that purpose.

ON DUTY, AS EVER

Ex-Sergeant Merely in Another Line of Trenches.

In Fact, One-Time Commander Thought Him More Valuable in Civil Life Than During the Hot Days in France.

At breakfast that morning, says a contributor to London Punch, Joyce had announced firmly that if I really loved her I would take the pattern up to town with me and "see what I could do." What she failed to realize was that if I ventured alone into the midst of so intimately feminine a world as Bibby & Reuns' for the purpose of matching stuff called pink georgette, I should become virtually incapable of doing anything at all.

The only redeeming feature about the whole nerve-racking business was that he found me as soon as he did.

"Good afternoon, sir!" he said in a most ingratiating voice. "What can we have the pleasure of showing you, sir?"

He was tall and handsome, with a perfectly waxed mustache and a faultless frock coat. He bowed before me with a solicitous curve to his broad shoulders, and the way he massaged one hand with the other had a highly soothing effect.

"Pink georgette, sir? Certainly, sir!" To my inexpressible relief, he seemed to consider it the most likely in the world.

"Miss Robinson!" he called; "pink georgette."

With a polite wave of the hand, he motioned me toward the lady. He hovered about while I opened the bit of tissue paper containing the pattern and murmured my needs to Miss Robinson. His very presence gave me confidence.

When it was all over, he came up and led me away. As we emerged into the stronger light near the door I peered at him closely. Then I touched him on the arm and beckoned him behind a couple of Paris models.

I took hold of his hand and wrung it fervently.

"Sergt. Steel," I said, "you always did have the knack of being in the right spot at the right moment. I have not set eyes on you since that hot day in 1916, when you brought up the remnants of 14 platoon and pulled me out of that tight corner at Guillemont. That was a valuable bit of work, sergeant, but nothing to this—simply nothing!"

The solicitous curve had straightened out from his broad shoulders. His hands has ceased their soothing massage. His heels were together, his arms glued to his sides, his eyes glaring at a fixed point directly over the top of my head.

"Thought it was you, sir, as soon as I saw you. But of course I wasn't going to say anything till you did." It was not the ingratiating voice now, but that rasping half-whisper he always used for nocturnal conferences in the front line. "Never heard anything of you, sir, since you went down with a blighty after Guillemont. Beg your pardon, sir, but you looked a bit windy as you came in just now, so I thought I'd keep in support.... Yes, sir, got my ticket last month—only been back on my old job a fortnight."

I tapped the parcel that Miss Robinson's own fair hands had made up for me.

"This is a good issue, sergeant?" I asked. "Sound, reliable, and all that?"

"Couldn't be better, sir. I had my eye on her. We only drew it ourselves lately. That's the stuff to give 'em. .... a perfect match.... exquisite blending of color.... those art shades are to be very fashionable this season. I assure you, sir."

Imperceptibly his hands had resumed their message, the solicitous curve had returned to his broad shoulders, his voice was ingratiating again.

"We have a large range of all daintiest materials. I believe our charmeuse, ninons and crepe de chines to be unrivaled, sir. A little damp underfoot to-day, sir, but warmer—much warmer. Yes, sir! Thank you, sir! Good day, sir!"

And Sergt. Steel (D. C. M. and four chevrons) bowed me into the street.

Huns Have a Town Crier.

The officers of the regiment have nothing on the burgomaster of Polch when it comes to having a striker. The only difference is that he is a clanger, for he rings the bell to announce new tidings to the populace. For instance, if the square-heads are not on the square with Americans and a fine is imposed, the tidings of Heinie's hard luck must be published broadcast. So the chief mogul of Polch crooks his finger and explains the mission to the bell ringer, who in turn goes to each street corner announcing that Herr Hassenfeffer has been fined 200 marks for not having the outside door unlocked. All this time the bell plays a clanging accompaniment.

Noisy Wedding.

At one of the Canadian army camps there was a cowboy wedding lately, and enough cowboy gear—radiant shirts and neckwear with the inevitable sheepskin "trews," not to mention the six shooters—could be found to rig out an escorting band which would not have disgraced the Wild West. After the ceremony the cowboys, who were all suitably mounted on untamable bucking mustangs and bronchos, gave vent to fearsome yells, and wildly escorted the happy pair to the noisiest wedding on record.

Digs Grave With His Teeth.

If you are a woman, you will live longer than the average man.

It is an old saying, but very true to-day, in spite of the stress of the modern woman's life and the physical conditions to which she is subject.

Statistics prove the truth of the saying.

Nine hundred and five spinsters out of every 1,000 at twenty-five years of age reach forty-five; 652 out of every 1,000 reach sixty-five; 119 reach eighty-five, and eight attain the age of ninety-five.

On the other hand, only 879 males out of 1,000 at twenty-five years of age reach forty-five; 59 sixty-five, 64 eighty-five, and three ninety-five.

That married men live longer than bachelors was mentioned as a curious fact by an official of an assurance company to the writer, while, although in the long run women live longer than men, a man of twenty-five has more chances of living to be fifty than a woman of the same age.

On the other hand, if a man and woman have both reached the age of fifty, the chances are that the woman will outlive the man, a fact accounted for by the difference in temperament.

Clergymen and farmers are popularly supposed to be the longest-living people. Compared with engine-drivers, they would seem to lead a very placid existence, and yet the latter have a good longevity average. Altogether nearly three times as many males as females die a violent death.

Proper living, of course, counts for everything. Hard work never killed anybody, but to quote a popular saying, "the average man digs his grave with his teeth." Abundance of food and ease shortens life; while people who take frequent drinks shorten their lives by at least six years.

Which brings us to another curious phase of the subject. The percentage of suicides among innkeepers is greater than in any other occupation. According to the last available figures it amounts to fifty-eight per 1,000 suicides, as compared with ten among miners and the same number among railway workers.

In regard to mortality among children, Providence and the law of average seems to strike a fairly even balance. While twenty per cent. more male children die of consumption than females twenty-five per cent. more girls die of cancer than boys. Nearly forty per cent. more girls die of whooping cough than boys.

Again, while rheumatism and arthritis causes the death of fifty per cent. more girls than boys, pneumonia and asthma results in the death of fifty per cent. more boys than girls. —Tit-Bits

PREFER EMPLOYMENT TO RECEIVING AID

FEW VETERANS ATTEMPTED TO DEFRAUD FUND TO TAKE CARE OF DISABLED.

Ottawa, Feb. 5.—The experiences of the Federal Emergency Appropriation Department of the Canadian Patriotic Fund indicate that there has been a gradual decrease in unemployment among returned soldiers since January 17th. Officials charged with the administration of the fund voted by Parliament for the benefit of ex-service men out of employment during the Winter have endeavored to find position for as many such men as possible. In every instance returned soldiers have been eager to accept employment rather than assistance. Very few attempts to defraud the fund, moreover, have been made. To January twenty-fourth a total of $1,230,000 was paid out of the fund to aid unemployed returned soldiers, if the same rate of disbursement is maintained it is estimated that only about $4,500,000 will be required to carry on the work until May 1st, when payments out of the fund are to stop.

In the week ended January 10th relief was extended to 16,999 men, in the week ending January 17th, to 17,877 men, and in the week ending January 24th, to 15,340 men. In the weeks ended January 10 and 17 the relief was distributed to the following numbers of persons in the cities named: Week ending January 10, Montreal, 4,211; Toronto, 4,790; Quebec, 355; Winnipeg, 814; Vancouver, 2,526; week ending January 17th, Montreal, 2,094; Toronto, 5,150; Quebec, 413; Winnipeg, 897; Vancouver, 2,946.

CHIROPRACTORS GET HEARING

Wait on Premier Drury to Ask For Protective Legislation

Toronto, Feb. 5.—Claiming that two of the cults were going to attempt to lobby through certain legislation to obtain control of or destroy chiropractic, a peputation of chiropractors, headed by Dr. D. DuVal, chairman of the chiropractic legislative committee of Ontario, waited on Premier Drury yesterday requesting that the Government reject the "discredited" report of Mr. Justice Hodgins, thus opening the way for a just settlement of the question by legislation, or in the event of this being impossible, that the order-in-Council requested of the late Government be granted, that he practice be temporarily regulated pending a final issue of the general question by making the incoming chiropractors produce evidence of reasonable qualifications defined. In the event of both these requests being refused the delegation asked that no other cult should have legislation that would be detrimental to chiropractic.

Premier Drury promised consideration.

Not As He Knew It.

Marshal Jofre was dining with some of his wife's relatives who own a country home near Meaux. Coffee was served on a terrace that overlooked a pretty, winding river toward which the lawns of the estate sloped.

"What is that water down there?" asked the marshal.

"That," replied his host, "is the Marne."

Not "Old World" Scene But New World Problem

"Don't argue. Just show me."

Here's an attempt by the church to do in picture what has so often failed in sermons — to convince church-going Canadians that it is worth while to spend millions of dollars in Canadianizing the alien.

The scene here reproduced is from a photograph taken in Toronto's slumiest centre, "The Ward." Greatly enlarged and embellished with design, it is the feature of a book on national problems which the Methodist' National Campaign has just issued in connection with the effort to raise $4,000,000 in an every-member canvass, February 9-14.

Artists say that the photograph is fine enough to be a good painting of an Old World scene. It is "Old World" enough—happy Italians at cards after work. Cards! And no effort is made in the whole production to brand the group as degraded foreigners. Rather they are treated as "New Canadians."

Chinese Railways Busy.

Latest reports indicate that the 3,000 miles of government railways carry annually more than 25,000,000 passengers a total of 1,000,000,000 miles. Thirty-seven per cent of the receipts of the government railways come from the passenger service. On five of the lines the passenger revenues exceed those from transportation of goods. Ninety-five per cent of the passenger traffic is third-class at an average fare of one cent a mile, which means a large amount of travel by the poorer classes.

Wide macadamized highways are being constructed in the suburbs of many cities. The coming of the automobile will hasten this development. An automobile service across the Gobi desert connecting Peking with Urga and the Russian railway has been inaugurated.

Wings

"Riches have wings," remarked the ready-made philosopher.

"Yes," replied Mr. Dustin Stax; "and I might add that they can be useful in many ways in hands of a skilled aviator."

Something to It—After All.

The hostess had talked about her wonderful ancestry until her guests were bored to distraction. No one made any comments, but still she was determined to win some. So she turned to the young woman next to her and said: "Isn't it splendid to have an ancestry of which one can be proud?"

The young woman, who was very successful indeed, smiled and calmly rejoined: "I really don't know. You see I've been so busy all my life trying to do something worth while so that my ancestors, should they suddenly come to life, would not feel ashamed of me, that I've had very little time to hunt information about them."

New and Old Books.

In science, read, by preference, the newest works; in literature, the oldest. The classic literature is always modern. New books revive and redecorate old ideas; old books suggest and invigorate new ideas.—Bulwer Lytton.

FUTURE CEMETERIES.

Proposal Is Interesting to a Young Country.

Cemeteries are not cheerful places. Burial lots are cared for during two or three generations and then too commonly are neglected. Weeds grow over the graves and fallen tombstones are allowed to lie. The long-dead are forgotten.

Dr. David Fairchild, a distinguished scientist, urges a new departure. He thinks that cemeteries should be made attractive and that the principal feature of a great city burying ground ought to be a beautiful building somewhat resembling a library, with alcoves and quiet nooks.

Instead of book-stacks it would have fireproof vaults containing personal records of members of the families whose lost ones are buried under flat stones amid the charming surroundings of a vast garden. These records would include all kinds of data relating to the dead—accounts of their most noteworthy doings, photographs, etc.

"Cannot you imagine," says Dr. Fairchild, "strolling into the hall of the dead, to find there, in their proper place, all of the personal records of your family for generations back? There are the photographs of your grandparents, of departed uncles and aunts, of little ones who did not live to grow up, all with stories of their lives attached and letters and anecdotes.

"With these might be preserved phonographic records of the voices of the dead, so that they could be heard to talk; and rooms might be fitted up for privately viewing moving pictures of the departed, who would thusly be made to 'come alive again'."

The dead could thus be made, in a sense, to live on indefinitely. Between the living generation and the past would be established a definite and permanent tie.

Beauty.

Animals living in nature are everywhere beautiful; but it is only among men that ugliness flourishes. Savages nearly everywhere are gracious and harmonious; it is only among the civilized that harshness and discord are permitted to prevail. If the eugenic ideals that are now floating before men's eyes never lead us to any heaven at all, but merely discourage among us the generation of human creatures below the level of decent savagery, they will serve their turn.—Havelock Ellis.

Brains Not Their Strong Point.

Even an oyster has a brain of a sort; and a clam likewise. The brains of fishes are very inferior, as compared with those of mammals, but the optic lobes are enormously developed, because finny creatures, to get the food they need, must be able to see well in dim light under water. Reptiles generally are very stupid creatures, and so it is not surprising to find that their brains are remarkably small. That of a 12-foot alligator is no bigger than your thumb.

A Cure.

No better presentation of the relation of doctor to patient has been offered than we find in Dr. Osler's addresses collected under the title "Asquinimitas." He had small patience with mere hypochondriacs. For one such he kept a secretary busy half a day noting minutely her pessimistic details of her symptoms. Afterward he read the note-book intently and then he dismissed the patient without a prescription. "But aren't you going to tell me what to do?" she said, astonished. "Madam," his answer is said to have been, "if you don't know enough to come in out of the rain when it's raining I can do nothing for you." The fee for this bit of common sense was more than $1,100. The shock probably went part way toward healing a delusion. It cost too much to continue to play malade imaginaire.

New Citizens.

During the last nine months of 1919 a grand total of 91,420 immigrants entered Canada, and a considerably larger influx is looked for in the spring. Of the newcomers who arrived in the eight-month period ended November 30, 36,513 came from England, 523 from Wales, 8,412 from Scotland, and 2,317 from Ireland. British immigrants thus numbered 47,585. From the United States came 38,721, and from other countries 5,114. The entry of Germans, Austrians, Turks and Bulgarians is still prohibited. There has been, however, a modification in the regulation, inasmuch as persons who were formerly enemy nationals, but who are now citizens of new European states, established by the treaties with Germany and Austria, are now admitted to the Dominion.

Freak of Nature.

One might think that the powerful bumblebee and the milkweed would make ideal partners, but such is not the case says the American Forestry Magazine of Washington. These remarkable plants, which not only flow with honey, but also invite their insect guests by a strong honey scent, are utterly ignored by the big hungry bumblebee."

Not in Bull's Class.

Peter was out exercising his bulldog when a small white poodle ran up to the gate and began barking through the cracks of the gate at Peter's bulldog, which made him growl and raise his bristles as if he would chew the poodle up. Peter said to his dog: "Drop your bristles, Bull; nothing doing with such a little dog like that."

Social Etiquette in China.

The Chinese send three invitations to guests. The first is dispatched two days before the feast; the second on the day itself, to remind those they expect of their engagement; and the third just before the hour has struck, so as to show how impatient they are to see their friends.

UNPRECEDENTED CRASH IN FOREIGN EXCHANGE FINANCIAL FEATURE OF WEEK

Report of Embargo to be Placed on Export of Some United States Commodities, Added to Uncertanty

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 7.—An unprecedented crash in foreign exchange call loans as high as 25 per cent. and stiffer rates for more necessary form of financial accommodation were the central features of this week's turbulent and reactionary stock market. The collapse of international credit quotations brought export conditions to a standstill for a time and excited the gravest misgivings respecting the foreign trade movement. This was heightened by rumors of embargoes on various exports from this country, especially cotton. The selling of stock represented a mixture of enforced liquidation and bearish pressure, the former probably predominating, banks withdrew funds to meet Government payment and other usual sources of supply were closed to speculative accounts.

Extreme reactions for the week ranged from 10 to 45 points in a wide variety of stocks, especially oils, motors, equipments and shippings. Many low priced specialties were sacrificed at a gross recession of five to twenty-five points. Favorable developments were ignored for obscured by the pessimism which marked the course of the foreign exchange.

Reports that leading steel mills have sufficient orders to run at full capacity for home consumption into the second and third quarters of the year elicited little interest. Reactions in some of the important commodity prices, such as cotton, provisions and cereals, were in keeping with the stock market losses, but the opinion prevailed that much remains to be done if foreign exchange is to be even partially stabilised.

MR. TOOMS TO ARRANGE FOR A CONFERENCE

WITH MEMBERS OF CABINET, RELATIVE TO PROPOSE EXPERIMENTAL FARM

Hon. Manning M. Doherty, Provincial Minister of Agriculture, writing to Thomas Tooms, Esq., M.P.P., says that the subject of establishing a demonstration farm near Peterborough has "not received any consideration from the Government, and there is, therefore no present intention on the part of the Government to establish such farms in the near future."

Mr. Tooms wrote the Minister at the request of the joint committee representing the Board of Trade and Farmers' Club asking for an appointment to receive a deputation to discuss the matter.

The Minister adds that if those interested would like to wait on the Prime Minister and himself he will be happy to meet them and fix an appointment toward the end of the month.

In view of the strong arguments in support of the project and the deep interest taken in it both by the farmers and business men, Mr. Tooms will likely press for a conference.

ONTARIO LEADS IN HOUSING

Nearly Five Thousand Dwellings Be Built This Year

Ottawa, Feb. 7.—All nine Provinces have adopted the Federal housing project for which $25,000,000 was set aside a year ago. According to information reaching Ottawa, British Columbia and Ontario have made most progress in housing development. About 1,400 houses have been erected or are in course of construction in Ontario, and some 90 municipal schemes have been prepared or are under consideration. Between 4,000 and 5,000 houses will be erected this year in Ontario if money is available.

GUARDS AS DEATH WATCH

Change Has Been Made in Routine in Toronto Jail

Toronto, Feb. 7 — Now that George Coppen occupies the death cell at Toronto Jail, and, as a result of the McCullough escape, a departure has been made from the old custom of securing death watches from outside the institution. Sheriff Mowatt has directed that three of the regular jail guards act as death watch. Their names the authorities deem it advisable to withhold. These regular guards will be relieved by outsiders, for the routine jail duty.

Inspector of Prisons, W. W. Dunlop has recommended that a grille be place in the death cell to separate prisoner and guard, but council only passed the recommendation recently and it will not be built while Coppen occupies the cell.

Coppen has selected as his spiritual adviser Rev. (Capt.) Bridges, the Church of England minister, who attends at the Police Court.

Coppen maintains the cool indifference which characterized him through his trial. He said he was perfectly satisfied.

Commenting on the death sentence imposed by Justice Latchford, that Coppen be hanged on Wednesday May 5th, next, City Sheriff Mowat said: "While there is no reason why a condemned man cannot be hanged on any day of the week, the usual custom is to sentence for execution on Friday. The date set for the execution is exactly thirteen clear calendar weeks. Old English law says that six clear weeks must elapse.

PUBLISH DAILY PAPER

Montreal Trades Council Will Also Establish Store.

Montreal, Feb. 7— The publication of a daily paper and the establishment of a co-operative store will be attempted by the Montreal Trade and Labor Council in the near future. The Council will run them in connection with a new labor temple which will be erected here and which will contain, besides offices to house every department of the organization in Montreal, also a large auditorium for conventions. A number of prominent labor men have already promised to subscribe $100 each to the scheme, and subscriptions from every other union man in the province will be invited. The council plans to raise $2,000,000.

Forty-six more employes of the Printing Department at Ottawa will be released on Saturday.

CANADIAN GENERAL ELECTRIC COMPANY PROPOSE MILLION DOLLAR EXTENSION

Senator Nicholls, President, Asks Council for Fixed Assessment for Ten Years Longer—Increase in Plant Will Mean Yearly Payroll of $2,500,000—Matter Will be Submitted to Vote of Ratepayers.

Senator Frederic Nicholls, president of the Canadian General Electric Company, met the City Council at their invitation last night and told the mayor and aldermen of proposed building extensions by the company to their plant here or elsewhere. The senator said he favored the extensions being made at Peterborough. He asked that Peterborough continue for a further period of ten years the present fixed assessment of $150,000, this assessment to cover the present buildings and also the extensions. The company would expend probably $1,000,000 on buildings and equipment, and very largely increase the payroll, which is now at the rate of $1,500,000, and has shown a yearly average of $500,000 for the past twenty-five years.

The fixed assessment now enjoyed by the company expires at the end of this year. The company were given the concession in 1907, following an application made to the Legislature by the city. The Council at that time had agreed to give the company the fixed assessment for twenty years but the twenty-year term was not permitted by the Legislature, the restriction being to ten years, commencing in 1910. It is on the action by the Council in agreeing to an exemption for twenty years that the company base their suggestion that the exemption be continued.

The City Council, which met in committee last night, after hearing the senator, who was accompanied by Mr. E. G. Patterson, superintendent of the plant here, discussed the matter and passed a resolution recommending that the tax exemption be continued.

The question will be presented to the ratepayers for their endorsation. When the bylaw is presented, two-thirds of those who vote must do so in favor of the measure, in order that the bylaw pass.

In addressing the Council Senator Nicholls said that ten years ago the company and the City Council made an agreement to fix the assessment of the company's property at $150,000 for twenty years, and it was embodied in a bylaw, but the Legislature said that their policy was not to give a policy for more than ten years at a time. The Legislature changed it to ten years, and at the same time said that there was nothing to prevent a request for an extension for ten years when the time was up.

Toronto Wants It.

Senator Nicholls asked the Council to keep faith with the company and to extend the fixed assessment for the further ten years. The company intended to expend from $600,000 to $1,000,0000 here or elsewhere, and this would add about $1,500,000 to the payroll. In 1919 they had taken work in order to give employment at Peterborough at no profit and at a loss. Some of the directors who lived in Montreal wished the extensions made there, and the Toronto directors, who were in the majority, wished them made there. However, if Peterborough did not give his confreres a reason for opposing his recommendation, he believed that his recommendation would be adopted and the expenditure would be made in Peterborough.

Payroll Now $1,500,000

In the past twenty-five years their payroll had averaged $500,000 a year, and at present the payroll amounted to a rate of $1,500,000 a year. The company would not expend the money they proposed to expend unless they expected to increase their payroll by at least $1,000,000 a year. The buildings alone would cost between $200,000 and $500,- with a minimum of $300,000 on buildings, and their program, which might not be carried out this year, included an expenditure of $1,000,000.

Peterborough Lost Foundry

Two years ago the company con-

Two years ago the company conerborough, but the Council did not see fit to carry out the arrangement that they had agreed to, and the foundry went to Montreal, which was the logical place. Senator Nicholls said he did not propose to bargain but simply ask the Council to keep faith. The minimum expenditure on buildings would be $200,000 and on buildings and equipment $500,000, the work to be begun by June 1, 1920, and proceeded with continuously until completed.

The Resolution.

Moved by Ald. Turner, seconded by Ald. Copping, That the Council submit a bylaw to the people to confirm the fixed assessment of the Canadian General Electric Company for a further period of ten years to date from the expiration of the present fixed assessment, on condition that the company expend the sum of $500,000 on buildings and equipment.

Previous to the meeting the City Council and a number of prominent citizens were the guests of Senator Nicholls at dinner at the Empress.

SPLENDID EDIFICE IS DESTROYED BY FIRE

NEW BAPTIST CHURCH IN LONDON, ONTARIO, A TOTAL LOSS

Milton, Feb. 7.—"I am definitely in the field as independent soldier candidate in Halton County," stated Ed. J. Stephenson, of Toronto. "My taking the field is a determined protest against the inclusion of Premier Drury and 'Jonah' Raney into the new Ontario Government, and also against the ascendancy of James Simpson in the Independent Labor party."

GERMANY CANNOT GIVE UP CULPRITS TO ALLIED POWER

MINISTER AT BERLIN CALLS DEMAND HATEFUL REVENGE OF THE ALLIES

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 7.—A wireless despatch received from Berlin says that Mathieus Erzberger, the German Minister of Finance and Vice-Chancellor, declares it will be impossible to deliver up a single German to the "hateful revenge of our adversaries." The dispatch adds that Count Montgelas, the well-known Pacifist who is included in the list of persons demanded by the Allies, has withdrawn his former declaration urging the Germans demanded to surrender voluntarily. This action was due to the length of the list. It is asserted by the dispatch that the German Government anticipates that the wording of its new note to the Allies will admit of the possibility of farther negotiations.

Cabinet Meets Monday.

Berlin, Feb. 7.—A committee of the oldest members of the National Assembly will meet today to advise the Government relative to the extradition question. Philip Scheidemann, former Chancellor who has been summoned to Berlin, conferred yesterday with President Ebert, Premier Bauer and Foreign Minister Mueller preparatory to Monday's meeting of the Cabinet, at which Germany's policy will be decided upon.

LONDON PAPERS DEBATE FINANCIAL SITUATION

SUBJECT RECEIVES MORE EDITORIAL ATTENTION THAN DO GERMAN CULPRITS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 7.— More editorial attention is attracted to the exchange situation than to the demand for the extradition of Germans accused of war crimes. Several newspapers discuss the situation, especially in reference to cotton. The suspension of imports of which is declared in some quarters to be an "excellent example which it may be hoped other traders will follow." Elsewhere it is regarded as a dangerous remedy and fear is expressed that its cost will eventually fall on the British consumers. The doctrine calling for increased production and universal economy is again vehemently preached, journals reiterating the assertion that public and private expenditures continue on scale that if continued, must lead to financial disaster.

The Hague, Feb. 7.—The Socialist members of the Dutch Parliament are agitating a movement to intern former Emperor William and restrict his liberty. This step is urged, although the party generally approves the government's refusal to surrender the German monarch.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH SETS OUT TO RAISE $25000 FOR THE FORWARD MOVEMENT

Details of Canvas Which Begins Monday, Arranged at Inthusiastic Banquet of Workers Last Night.

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church is asked to raise the sum of $25,000 as its share of the Forward Movement Fund. A banquet was held in the church last evening at 6:30 at which fifty of the men of the church assembled to make final arrangements for the canvass. The Ladies' Aid provided in their usual liberal way for the banquet, and at the close Mr. Madill moved that a hearty vote of thanks be extended to the ladies for all they had done to make the gathering the success which it was. The chair was taken by Mr. P. A. Ferguson, the chairman of the committee appointed to look after the canvass. He spoke of the amount allocated to St. Paul's and expressed his confidence in the members of the church that they would not only raise this amount, but go far beyond it. Rev. A. M. Mackay, the synodical organiser, was present and spoke at length on the spiritual aims of the movement. In closing, he said we owed it to God, we owed it to those at home and abroad who need the Gospel of Christ, we owed it to ourselves, and especially do we owe it to the splendid men who staked their all, some of whom gave their all, that we might enjoy life and freedom, to make the movement a success. We cannot afford to fail. The present movement is a result of the war, and it aims to complete their work and establish freedom, righteousness, brotherhood in our land and in all lands. It will require the same resolute and self-sacrificing men to carry on for Christ as it did to win the war.

Mr. Robert Harstone, who has taken a deep interest in the movement, and is a member of a special committee to secure large subscriptions, gave a short but inspiring address, in which he called upon the men and members of this church to rise to the occasion and opportunity and see that when the canvass is copiete St. Paul's share will to fully subscribed.

After a few words by the minister, and the singing of the Doxology, in which all joined heartily, the meeting was brought to a close. The canvassers then separated to receive special instructions in preparation for their work, which will begin on Monday.

ENGINEER BARBER TO MEET CITY COUNCIL

WILL DISCUSS BRIDGE MATTER WITH ALDERMEN NEXT THURSDAY NIGHT

Frank Barber, engineer for the new Hunter street bridge, will be asked to come to Peterborough and meet the Council next Thursday night. Some of the aldermen are not satisfied with the present state of affairs at the bridge. Ald. Frank Whitehouse expressed his dissatisfaction at the committee meeting last night and said there were many citizens who were not satisfied. Ald. Whitehouse was convinced that Mr. Barber should be in Peterborough, now that construction has reached a critical stage.

Ald. Hamilton, chairman of the Special Bridge Committee, assured the aldermen that the work now being carried on was necessary and was not entailing useless expense. He asked the aldermen if they were satisfied to accept Mr. Barber's statement that the herd pan now being used for a foundation was satisfactory and safe. He said he understood Mr. Townsend was satisfied with the hard pan and so also was Mr. Parsons, the city engineer.

FRENCH TO PRESENT LIST OF CULPRITS

COUNCIL AT PARIS DECIDE ON ONE METHOD OF SOLVING PROBLEM

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Parias, Feb. 7.—The delivery to the German Government by the French Charge d'Affaires in Berlin of the list of Germans whose surrender is demanded, is the proper course to pursue in the existing circumstances, the Council of Ambassadors decided this morning. An official communique to this effect was issued today.

LUMBER PRICE TOO HIGH

That is Opinion of Rural Reeve in Saskatchewan

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Saskatoon, Feb. 7. — Alexander McOwan, reeve of Canwood rural municipality, believes that lumber companies in Canada, those who are clearing the forests, are sacrificing the interests of Canadians for the sake of getting a bigger price in the United States.

In an interview Mr. McOwan declared that "there is absolutely no relationship between the cost of lumber and the retail price to the consumer." Continuing, he maintained that it does not cost more than $20 a thousand to get lumber out of the bush.

RUSSIAN COUNTESS COMMITS SUICIDE

WAS FORMERLY MAID OF HONOR TO DOWAGER EMPESS OF RUSSIA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Geneva, Feb. 7.—The Countess de Henrichen, member of the Russian colony at Montreux, and formerly maid of honor to the Dowager Empress of Russia, has committed suicide by drowning in Lake Geneva. Her body, still decked in valuable jewels, was found floating in the lake off the town of Villeneuve, near the upper end of the lake. Driven from Russia when the imperial regime was overthrown, the countess came to Switzerland. The assassination of the former Czar was keenly felt by her, and she was often heard to complain of the barbarities practised in Russia by the Bolsheviki. She left no letters or papers.

Russians who have arrived here recently by way of Sweden and Germany, say that former Minister of Justice Spitsberg has been installed in Petrograd as the "breaker of marriages." He is said to be granting from 500 to 600 divorces weekly. No investigation is necessary. All that appears to be required is the signature of the person desiring freedom from matrimony.

SALARIES FOR ALDERMEN.

MEMBERS OF the Board of Education in Toronto became weary of the thankless task of giving their time and devoting their energies to the public service without compensation. One of the members introduced a resolution asking the Legislature to pass an Act granting them some compensation for their labors. After a vast amount of discussion, which was carried on over a number of meetings, the proposition was defeated on a tie vote. The matter, however, serves to show the signs of the times. Especially among aldermen who now serve without compensation there is a feeling that the time is ripe for a change in this regard.

Members of Parliament and Legislatures are paid. Members of county and township councils also receive compensation. It is those who belong to boards of aldermen and councils in the city who are supposed to be public-spirited enough to work for nothing, work which so often involves serious sacrifice both in time and business interests.

There is something illogical about the whole arrangement. Every wheel in the election machinery costs money. The deputy-returning officers, the poll clerk and the constables who act at the civic elections are paid for their services. Why not require these to render for nothing this service, which is inconsequential in comparison, so long as the members of the School Board and of the City Council are expected to do so? Why pay the members of the Utilities Commission, or of the Police Commission, while the aldermen, who devote at least double the time to the public interest, or the members of the School Board who handle large affairs, second to none in importance, are unsalaried? There are men in the Council who can ill afford the sacrifice which the position calls for. There are others, of course, to whom a salary offers no attraction. But both classes of members are essential if the balance of representation is to be maintained.

Of course, the aldermen have no authority to vote themselves compensation. Such authority must come from the Legislature, another argument in favor of a greater measure of home rule for the cities. Any municipality should be allowed the right to settle these matters for itself. A bylaw rather than a special legislative Act should be sufficient.

FIFTY YEARS OF PROGRESS.

THE YEAR 1919 was a notable one for the Mutual Life Assurance Company, a statement of which appears in another column, inasmuch as it completed the first fifty years of the company's active operations, and at the same time marked the year of its greatest development and progress in all departments of its business. The first policies were offered to the public in the spring of 1870, and the end of the first half century sees the company with unimpeachable assets of $38,000,000 and policies in force amounting to $170,000,000.

The most remarkable feature of the year was the flood of new business received, due largely to the awakening of popular appreciation of the beneficent function of life assurance by the experiences of the war and the influenza epidemic that followed. The increase in new business acqured was nearly 90%. That the record for quality business was fully maintained is indicated by the large increase of $33,066,691 in the total business in force, being 80% of the new business written.

No item of the year's operations is more gratifying than the great increase in the surplus earnings. Notwithstanding a certain number of abnormal death losses arising from the war and the influenza epidemic, amounting to $252,357.65, the surplus earnings for the year were $1,303,801, an increase over the previous year of 60%, and showing earnings of $34.27 for every $1,000 of total assets held at the end of the year.

Never in the history of Canadian life insurance has there been such a remarkable opportunity for the profitable investment of life insurance funds, and the effect of the past year's investments will be to enhance the surplus earnings over a long period of years, through holding up the average rate of interest earned on the invested funds. For the year 1919 the company earned the very satisfactory rate of 6.39%.

DAYLIGHT SAVING FOR 1920.

SOMEONE with a superficial knowledge of the subject speaks of the "prejudice" of the farming community to daylight saving. The objection of the farmers to the new system of reckoning time is based on something more substantial than mere sentiment. Daylight saving works against their interests, depriving them as it does of one of the best working hours of the day.

The hours of work in the country are coming to correspond more and more with those in the city. On no other condition can the modern working man be induced to accept a job on the farm. He wishes to begin work in the morning at the same hour and quit in the evening as the urban wage-earner. If the farmer in harvest time is compelled to begin one hour earlier he is often really called upon to lose that first hour waiting for his crops of grain or hay to dry in the morning sun before he can work among them. In the evening, when conditions for work are just right, his help insists on quitting for the day. That affords the farmer a substantial reason for objecting to daylight saving. In the city the hours of work are not affected by weather conditions, fair or stormy, that is, so far as shop and factory are concerned.

The United States Congress has passed an Act against the further use of daylight saving. When the system became operative among the Americans the excuse was urged that the plan was a necessity for Canada because the international railway traffic would be confused if the roads of both countries were not run on the same schedule. That reason for daylight saving no longer exists, so that the Canadian Parliament is not likely to make daylight saving operative this year.

Various cities, however, may adopt it. In past years it was found that this checker-board method of reckoning time resulted in confusion. If the city time is one hour ahead of the time used by the railways, the result is easily foreseen. Peterborough would not care to operate under such a system, while the railways and the farmers still adhered to the old schedule.

Daylight saving really robs those who are under the necessity of going to work at 7 o'clock of one hour sleep every night. It also causes undue haste in the morning in order to reach work on time. It is the leisure class, those who work easy hours, who are really benefited, as it gives them an extra hour in the evening for recreation. The fiction that this hour is largely devoted to backyard gardening no longer exists. Even if it were, the amount of extra production of foodstuffs in the city would not begin to offset the loss that results in the country under daylight saving. If farming is the basic industry in Canada, then that industry should not be hampered in any way by enactments designed primarily for the selfish benefit of the residents of the city.

The most powerful argument of all that can be used against daylight saving by municipalities is that it is illegal unless sanctioned by special legislative enactment, which is likely to be withheld in the future. The Ontario law states clearly that children of a certain age shall not begin work in the morning before 7 o'clock standard time. If the clocks of a city are moved ahead one hour and children in the class referred to are required to begin work at 7, the Factory Inspector can take action against any employer who adopts daylight saving in his plant. That fact has been established and the warning to emploers has been issued. The present Legislature with the farmers in control, is not likely to do anything to help legalize a system that is in such disfavor in the agricultural sections.

THE PATRONAGE SYSTEM.

(Farmers' Sun.)

PATRONAGE, like Hamlet's ghost, will not down! The Drury Government's probably having more trouble over the patronage question than all other problems combined. The Premier is receiving enough gratuitous advice to fill the Parliamentary library. Much of this advice is from real friends who are anxious to safeguard the Farmers' Party from the pitfalls connected with the patronage question. Some papers, such as the Toronto Globe, are advocating such an altruistic and Utopian policy that it would make is almost impossible for any Government to carry on if they were to follow the advice given.

The new Government in Queen's Park is anxious to wipe out the evils of patronage. This was one of the planks in the platform on which they attained office. Some extremists would have the Government adopt a policy so extreme that a man who had a bowing acquaintance with any member of the Government would be denied equal privileges with a man who had spent his life in opposition to the U. F. O. movement. In every other walk of life friends are given at least equal consideration with those who are not friends.

This must be done by the present Government. We do not claim that friendship should be the first or chief claim. Efficiency and fitness for any given task are the first and most essential requisites, but if a man friendly to the Government possesses qualifications equally as good as an enemy of the Government, his friendship should not debar him from consideration. There is such a thing as a man standing so straight that he leans backward. The same may be true of a government.

In connection with patronage, Hon. Mr. Drury inherited a legacy from the late lamented Hearst Government in the shape of a civil service commissioner. The Farmers' Sun has no quarrel with Mr. McCutcheon, the commissioner in question, but we feel that he has too much power. Under the present Act Mr. McCutcheon can veto any appointment, no matter by whom it is made or what the qualification of the party may be. This affords opportunities for autocracy and patronage of the worst kind, and there is every need of making a change in the present system at the earliest possible moment.

Mr. McCutcheon's admittedly large qualifications might be utilized in some other way, but no man, not even the angel Gabriel, should be given absolute veto powers in regard to all government appointments.

SUFFERED IN A BOLSHEVIST DUNGEON

Experience of an Englishman in Russia After Soviets "Abolished the Almighty".

To give an idea of what Bolshevism means to the ordinary Russian, irrespective of class, and to the British subject at the mercy of the Soviets, I cannot do better than relate the circumstances of my arrest and imprisonment in a Bolshevist dungeon in Moscow," writes Gerard Shelley, an Englishman who had worked with the Russian Red Cross, in a recent issue of The London Times.

"As I lay in bed in a high fever, a party of about ten Red Guards, headed by a Jewish Commissary, burst into the house. They had come to search the house for food, arms, and counter-revolutionaries. The house had already been searched more than a dozen times within a couple of months. Nevertheless, the Bolshevists were only happy when they were active in making life unpleasant for their victims.

"They marched into my room, and in spite of my illness they dragged me from the bed and cut the mattresses with swords in the vain hope of finding food, money, or arms. They threw everything out of the cupboards and 'nationalized' my gold watch and other objects of value. I protested against the confiscation of my property, but they told me that the right to possess private property had been abolished. When I asked who was to become the possessor of my property, the Commissary answered, 'The People.'

"When they had finished their search, they left the house and I crept back into bed. About half an hour afterward the Commissary returned with four soldiers—two Letts and two Chinamen. They entered my room and told me they had come to arrest me. They paid no heed whatever to the fact of my being ill with influenza. When I asked by whose order they were to arrest me, the Commissary pointed a revolver at me, but did not utter a word. The other people in the house were greatly alarmed lest I should be shot in bed, and they urged me to get up and go with the Bolsheviki. With revolvers and rifles leveled at me, I had no choice.

"I got out of bed and was about to put on a day suit, when a Bolshevik barred my arm with his rifle. 'Leave that!' he ordered.

"'Surely I may dress!' I replied.

"'You are dressed already,' said the Commissary.

"'But these are merely pajamas,' I protested.

"'That's quite enough,' he replied; 'it's a bourgeois prejudice to wear more than one suit.'

"I just had time to slip on a pair of bedroom slippers when I was seized by two Chinamen. I realized it was useless to resist.

"Led by the Commissary, and followed by the Red Guards, I was conducted downstairs and through the deserted streets to a large old house in the Georgieevski Square. There I was taken before som Bolshevist women and soldiers, who asked me a number of questions and cracked coarse jokes at my expense. When they had finished examining me a woman cried out, 'Take the English rabble downstairs!' and then started an unseemly dance with a soldier to the accompaniment of whistling and shouts.

"I was led down a flight of steps and along a dark corridor, at the end of which was an iron grille. This was opened, together with a door, and with a brutal thrust in the back from the butt-end of a rifle, I was thrown into darkness.

"I saw nothing. The smell of the place was so terrible that I felt it like a heavy cloak. After a few seconds I heard harsh voices, and I was surrounded by invisible people, who felt me from head to foot with their cold, bony hands.

"'Have you brought any food?' was their only cry. 'Nothing,' was all I could answer.

"When the noise of the starving prisoners had ceased, the soft voice of a cultured lady asked me why I had been arrested. I endeavored to go in the direction of the voice, but I stumbled over the bodies of prisoners who were trying to sleep on the damp stone floor. A gentle hand came from out of the darkness and led me across the bodies to the wall.

"'I am a Colonel's wife,' the voice told me; 'I am 75 years of age and have been thrown into this dungeon for some reason which I cannot at all imagine.' When I told the voice that I was ill and merely dressed in pajamas, I heard a little rustling sound by my side and immediately something soft and warm was thrust into my arms. 'Put this on,' the voice said. 'It is a woollen petticoat. It will keep you warm. I have another for myself.'

"Soon afterward another warm garment came to me from out the darkness, and a gruff, pleasant voice begged me to accept it as a protection against the damp and cold. I asked who my kind and invisible benefactor was, and the same gruff, but pleasant, voice told me that he was a workingman, who with thirty others had been arrested by the Bolsheviki for going on strike.

"From time to time the door of the dungeon was opened and new prisoners were brought in. One was a working woman, who cried out in a hysterical voice that the Bolsheviki had obliged her to leave her suckling baby at home. She was almost driven out of her mind by the fear lest her baby should die of starvation before she was released from the dungeon. She kept up her hysterical wailing till she sank, in a state of utter exhaustion, upon the stone floor.

"From time to time a Commissary visited the dungeon and called out a few names. The unfortunate owners were led away after endeavoring to bid farewell to their fellow-prisoners.

"At about 11 o'clock a Bolshevist woman brought us a pot of potatoes and some hot water containing a small piece of fish. At about 6 o'clock in the evening we would receive the same fare. It was just sufficient to keep body and soul together.

"However, during the three weeks that I spent in the dungeon there were three or four occasions on which no food at all was brought to th prisoners during the space of two days.

"No one was allowed out of the prison except to be shot or liberated. The old man of 85 died a couple of days after his arrival. The prisoners begged that a doctor, or at least a priest, might be sent to him. When a priest was asked for the Commissary replied:

"'We've abolished the Almighty.' When a doctor was requested the Commissary replied:

"'Let the old man die. He's of no use to the State.'"

WIT AND WISDOM

The Report Pointed.

After a ruthless process of rejection there were five applicants for the post of errand boy left for the head of the firm himself to interview.

It was one of his flippant mornings, and he sought to amuse himself by asking the eager boys puzzling and quite irrelevant questions to test their general knowledge.

"How far away from the earth is the North Star?" was the question he fired at the third shiny-faced youngster.

"I'm sorry I can not give you the exact figure offhand, sir," was the reply, "but on a rough estimate I should say that it is far enough away not to interfere with me running errands."

He got the post.

Restoring Good Humor.

A Scot who dates from the Mincing Lane protests that the joke about the picture of the Scots Greys at Waterloo—"it doesn't show who's chasing them"—is in "extremely bad taste," and, regarded as a joke, helps to explain "why Scots have earned a reputation for their ability to appreciate English wit."

This is a painful and even dangerous controversy. The Scot thinks English humor too easy and obvious; the Englishman thinks Scots humor too difficult and subtle. Perhaps both are right. So I shall tactfully introduce as a red herring an Irish joke, because English and Scots agree that in unconscious humor the Irishman is incomparable.

An Irish pension officer greeted one of his aged beneficiaries: "Hallo, Phelim, still living yet?" "Yes, sir, I notuss that when I do not die before March thirty-wan I niver die after that year at all."

Willing to Retire if Asked, Says Premier of Quebec.

Quebec, Feb. 7. — Willingness to retire whenever requested was expressed by Sir Lomer Gouin, Premier of Quebec, at a caucus of Liberal members of the Legislature. "Now, as always," said the Premier, "I am at the service of the party and desirous of doing all I possibly can for it."

Teach the Children to Save

Habits are acquired early in life. Children, who are taught the value of money and the habit of saving, grow up into good business men and capable women.

The easiest way to teach children to save, is to start a Savings Account for each child ($1.00 each is sufficient). After a child has saved another dollar to make an additional deposit, he or she will have a better appreciation of just what a dollar stands for, and how much work and self-denial it represents.

ONLY TABLETS MARKED "BAYER" ARE ASPIRIN

The name "Bayer" stamped on tablets positively identifies the only genuine Aspirin,—the Aspirin prescribed by physicians for over nineteen years and now made in Canada.

Always buy an unbroken package of "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" which contains proper directions for Colds, Headache, Toothache, Earache, Neuralgia, Lumbago, Rheumatism, Neuritis, Joint Pains, and Pain generally.

Handy tin boxes containing 12 tablets cost but a few cents. Druggists also sell larger "Bayer" packages.

There is only one Aspirin—"Bayer"—You must say "Bayer"

Aspirin is the trade mark (registered in Canada) of Bayer Manufacture of Monoaceticacidester of Salicylicacid. While it is well known that Aspirin means Bayer manufacture, to assist the public against imitations, the Tablets of Bayer Company will be stamped with their general trade mark, the "Bayer Cross."

"SILENT SLEUTHING" ANSWERED A LOT OF "SILENT COMPLAINTS"

Mrs. Jennie Wakefield, who manages the corset department for the Waters Dry Goods Store, in Los Angeles, has made it a point to know about every patron and prospective patron of the community. As a result many of the women came to her with their corset-fitting troubles. But not all of them. And she knew it.

"Mr. Waters," she confided to the proprietor one evening, "we are missing a lot of the corset business. Today two women told me that friends of their had bought their corsets downtown. They feel so friendly toward me that they think they have to tell me all the facts they know that might interest me."

"Why do you suppose we lose those women's trade—we carry brands that women know and they are fitted correctly since you made a study of fitting?"

"I am not sure. Suppose we get some one to investigate?"

"All right. Let Miss Helden run down one or two names that you get. Just make it a point to ask for names of women who do not buy corsets in your department. It will be worth the while."

Two days later a woman who was a stranger to the patrons of the store rang a number of doorbells. When she was successful in getting to talk to the woman of the house she spent a great deal of the time explaining that she was not selling, soliciting or demonstrating merchandise, but was merely investigating local conditions. She discussed a number of things as one woman with another. Incidentally she inquired as to the kind of corset the woman wore. And what did the woman think of the corset department of the Waters store?

"Well, their department and their corsets may be all right," one woman said, "but one day when I opened up a corset to give it a look I happened to see a man in the department next to that one looking right at me. I don't care to shop before men that way, although I do know that Mrs. Wakefield takes lots of pains and fits a person rightly."

"I go down to Baer's," said another woman. "They handle the same corset that Waters does, and I have known it for years; but some way I like the Baer department so much better."

When the reports came in it did not require much time for Mr. Waters and Mrs. Wakefield to see the point. It had never occurred to them that a corset department requires privacy. The Waters department had been neighboring the men's haberdashery. It was true that the fitting room in the rear gave privacy for the fitting—but women disliked holding up a corset to the view of men in the other department.

WALL PAPER AS STATIONERY

A Buffalo wallpaper firm caught the attention of the people on its mailing list by sending out its literature printed on the back of the wallpaper samples themselves. Several rolls of the new modes were cut up into letter size and the missives were printed on the other side of the colored sheets. They resembled the Civil War mementoes found in museums showing how the southern cities were furnished with their daily news.

"GIVE US YOUR LITTLE ORDERS," PROVES GOOD APPEAL

What subtle influences make for business success? In Seattle, while competitors displayed pictures of goods in newspaper advertising and talked the many things that can be talked, and usually are, the Seattle Office Equipment Co. settled on a definite policy of exploiting its wares.

It would "do something different." It would get a new slant. The advertising manager therefore suggested that the concern advertise the importance of little orders.

"We don't worry," says a characteristic advertisement "about the big orders. They are not of much importance after all. It's pleasing you in the little details that interests us most. Perhaps it's only a letter file or a desk pad. It may be only a pencil. We argue that if we can build a reputation for satisfying customers on small orders the big ones will take care of themselves. That will henceforth be the guiding motif of this company—making you glad you came here for the rather inconsequential things. We want to prove that clerks can be as courteous and polite when they sell a ten cent order as a five hundred dollar one. Visit us and see how it works out."

Seattle likes the idea as proven by the fact that the O. E. Co. is booming.

SOON THEY'LL BE BUYING FROCKS AT THE JEWELER'S

Just when Attorney General Palmer, William Wood, George T. Sales and other theoretical economists are figuring that they are going to knock the "H" out of the H. C. of L. along comes a scientist with the prediction that women's dresses will soon cost thousands of dollars instead of mere hundreds!

Dr. Charles L. Parsons, secretary of the American Chemical Club, is the scientist in question, and it was in the course of an address before the Philadelphia section of the Engineers' Club that he made the statement which caused every married man in the audience to writhe in anguish.

What does a chemist know about clothes?

Simply this: Doctor Parsons explained that the use of platinum as a "catylist"—meaning a reagent which causes a reaction without experiencing any chemical change itself—in making ammonium nitrate for fertilizer by shooting ammonia gas and air through the platinum woven into a beautifully fine screen which does the catylistic stunt without turning a hair.

Here's where the gowns come in—for Doctor Parsons claims that the platinum screen is so fine and of such a beautiful texture that it is only a question of time before some modiste adopts it in lieu of georgette or crepe de chine. The cost, of course, will be several hundred dollars a yard.

But even a platinum cloud has a silver lining. The gowns that many of 'em are wearing these days wouldn't cost a fortune, even if they were made from this platinum mesh!

The death of Baroness Leibenberg, wife of Prince Joachim Albrecht of Prussia, revives one of the most piquant of Hohenzollern scandals. The Baroness Leibenberg was the daughter of a Jewish official in the ministry of education at Vienna, her real name being Fraulein Sulzer. She became an actress and, at a Berlin theater, made the acquaintance of Prince Joachim, who had artistic leanings and some reputation as a composer. The Prince fell in love with Fraulein Sulzer, the result being an intimacy which caused the Kaiser to send his son away to the troops in German Southwest Africa.

Fraulein Sulzer took advantage of her lover's absence to contract a singular kind of marriage. Baron Liebenberg agreed, for a pecuniary consideration, to go through the marriage ceremony with her, endowing her with his title, agreeing also immediately afterward to provide her with reasons for divorce. In this way she hoped to obtain the social qualifications for a marriage with the Prince.

Upon the Prince's return from Africa, the Kaiser gave up his attempts to subdue the passions of his rebellious cousin, and turned him out of the Prussian army without the right to wear uniform. The Prince having inherited 5,500,000 marks from his grandfather, the Duke Ernst of Saxe-Altenburg, became financially independent of the Berlin court, married Fraulein Sulzer and settled down in obscurity in Salzkammergut. The story of this Hohenzollern scandal was put to good use by Franz Lehar, the Austrian composer, in his Viennese operetta "Count of Luxembourg."

IF KIDNEYS AND BLADDER BOTHER

Take Salts to flush Kidneys and neutralize irritating acids.

Kidney and Bladder weakness result from uric acid, says a noted authority. The kidneys filter this acid from the blood and pass it on to the bladder, where it often remains to irritate and inflame, causing a burning, scalding sensation, or setting up an irritation at the neck of the bladder, obliging you to seek relief two or three times during the night. The sufferer is in constant dread, the water passes sometimes with a scalding sensation and is very profuse; again, there is difficulty in avoiding it.

Bladder weakness, most folks call it, because they can't control urination. While it is extremely annoying and sometimes very painful this is really one of the most simple ailments to overcome. Get about four ounces of Jad Salts from your pharmacist and take a tablespoonful in a glass of water before breakfast, continue this for two or three days. This will neutralize the acids in the urine so it no longer is a source of irritation to the bladder and urinary organs which then act normally again.

Jad Salts is inexpensive, harmless, and is made from the acid of grapes and lemon juice, combined with lithia, and is used by thousands of folks who are subject to urinary disorders caused by uric acid irritation. Jad Salts is splendid for kidneys and causes no bad effects whatever.

Almost Perfect Time.

Our day—the sidereal day of the apparent motion of the stars—is 3 minutes 55.91 seconds shorter than a mean solar day. Considering clock gearing, a French astronomer calculates that with four wheels having 119, 130, 317 and 314 teeth sidereal can be converted into mean time with the loss of only one second in eight years, and that with wheels having 188, 465, 588 and 227 teeth the error can be reduced to only one second in a period of 249 years.

Selah!

The word Selah, which occurs so frequently in the Psalms, is usually believed to be a direction to the musicians who chanted the Psalms in the temple. Mattheson, the great musical writer, wrote a book on the subject in which, after rejecting a number of theories, he came to the conclusion that it is equivalent to the modern "da capo," and is a direction that the air or song is to be repeated from the commencement to the part where the word is placed.

Dwarf Tree Nearly 200 Years Old.

A species of Greenland fir, believed by scientists to be nearly two hundred years old, is growing on the Shenk farm in Bullfrog valley, near Hummelstown, Pa. The unique tree is less than two feet high, but its branches have a spread of 15 feet and a circumference of about 60 feet. It resembles a collection of shrubs, and is one of the largest specimens known.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF RHEUMATISM

Entirely Well After Six Weeks' Treatment With "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. AMEDEE GARCEAU

32 Hickory St., Ottawa, Ont.

"I was for many years a victim of that terrible disease, Rheumatism. In 1918, I was laid up for four months with Rheumatism in the joints of the knees, hips and shoulders and was prevented from following my work, that of Electrician.

I tried many remedies and was under the care of a physician; but nothing did me any good. Then I began to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and in a week I was easier, and in six weeks I was so well I went to work again.

I look upon this fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', as simply marvellous in the cure of Rheumatism, and strongly advise everyone suffering with Rheumatism to give 'Fruit-a-tives' a trial."

SIX MILLION JEWS NEAR STARVATION

Cold and Disease Add to Sufferings of Destitute Peasants of Poland.

Eastern Europe is the only part of the world to-day that really understands the meaning of conservation, in the grimmest sense of the word, according to reports brought back to the American Jewish Relief Committee by relief workers recently returned from these stricken lands.

Not a particle is wasted of any of the relief supplies sent from America by the Joint Distribution Committee of American Funds for Jewish War Sufferers or by other organizations. Garbage cans and dump heaps are naturally unknown quantities in a region where 6,000,000 Jews—men, women, and children—are at the point of starvation. Typical of the extreme thoroughness with which these people utilize everything to-day was the use recently made of a shipment of flour, sent to eastern Europe by American Jewish relief agencies.

The flour itself was used to feed destitute Jews at the soup kitchens. White bread is a luxury in these lands to-day, the taste of it forgotten by the poor, and none of the flour sent from America is made into bread as yet. It goes farther stirred into the soup issued at the Jewish relief stations.

In order to make sure that not one atom of the flour was going to waste, the seams were ripped from the sacks, which were then shaken over the soup receptacles. The next thing put to use was the cloth of the sacks themselves. There is practically no cotton or linen in eastern Europe to-day, and every scrap of cloth is put to use.

In this particular case, the sacks were needed both as shrouds for the dead, and as cloths in the operating rooms of the hospital. A part of them was devoted to each purpose. Both shrouds and bandages in eastern Europe to-day have to be made by sewing hundreds of tiny bits of used cloth together, so these flour sacks proved a godsend.

The thread which had stitched the bags together was carefully saved, also, and used to patch together the rags that form almost the only clothing of the destitute Jewish children in these lands, and to sew together the scraps of cloth that they wear around their feet, in lieu of shoes.

In order to help these sufferers, Canadian Jewish Relief Committee is making an appeal for funds.

Mr. and Mrs. Benjamin Foster of Windsor both died of influenza within a week, and were buried at Belleville.

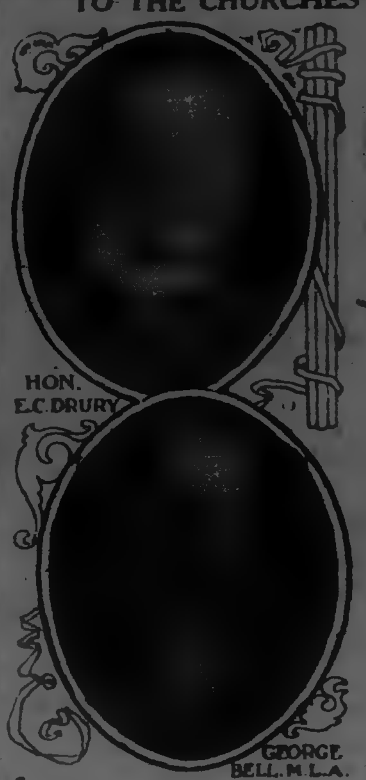
WHEN MEALS HIT BACK

"Pape's Diapepsin" instantly ends Indigestion, Sourness, Stomach Acidity

Are lumps of undigested food causing you pain? Is your stomach acid, gassy, sour, or have you flatulence, heartburn? Then take Pape's Diapepsin.

Just as soon as you eat a tablet or two of Pape's Diapepsin all that dyspepsia, indigestion and stomach distress caused by acidity ends. These pleasant, harmless tablets of Pape's Diapepsin never fail to make sick, upset stomachs feel fine at once, and they cost very little at drug stores.

PIN THEIR FAITH TO THE CHURCHES



Public men, east and west, are not slow to see the possibilities for national betterment in the great Campaign of the Churches. Premier Drury of Ontario, himself a leader in the little Methodist Church at his Crown Hill farm, says he believes "the Inter-Church Forward Movement can do more for Canada than all other movements combined." Mr. Bell is chairman of the British Columbia executive in the Methodist National Campaign.

HOW TO TREAT STOMACH TROUBLE

A TONIC MEDICINE IS NEEDED TO BUILD UP THE DIGESTIVE ORGANS.

The old-fashioned methods of treating the stomach diseases are being discarded. The trouble with the old-fashioned methods was that when the treatment was stopped the trouble returned in an aggravated form.

The modern method of treating indigestion and other forms of stomach trouble is to tone up the stomach and glands to their normal work. Every step toward recovery is a step gained not to be lost again. The recovery of the appetite, the disappearance of pain after eating, the absence of gas, are steps on the road to health that those who have tried the tonic treatment remember distinctly. Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are a tonic every constituent of which is helpful in building up the digestive organs, and therefore the very best remedy for simple or chronic cases of stomach trouble. The success of the treatment is that shown by hundreds of cases like the following. Mrs. Chas. Comer, Picton, Ont., says—"For upwards of two years I was a great sufferer from indigestion. Food would ferment in my stomach, and I would belch gas with a burning sensation. Often I would be troubled with nausea, sick headache and dizziness. Notwithstanding that I was under medical treatment the trouble grew so bad that I would only eat when absolutely forced to, and was in constant misery. I was finally advised to try Dr. Williams' Pink Pills and had only been using them a few weeks when I found they were helping me. I very gladly continued their use and the result is they have made me a well woman, every vestige of the trouble having disappeared. I am so grateful for what Dr. Williams' Pink Pills have done for me that I strongly advise any who may be suffering from stomach trouble to give them a fair trial, and I believe that like myself they will find a sure cure."

You can get Dr. Williams' Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail, post paid, at 50 cents a box, or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

The protest against Mayor MacBride's election in Brantford has been dismissed on both grounds.

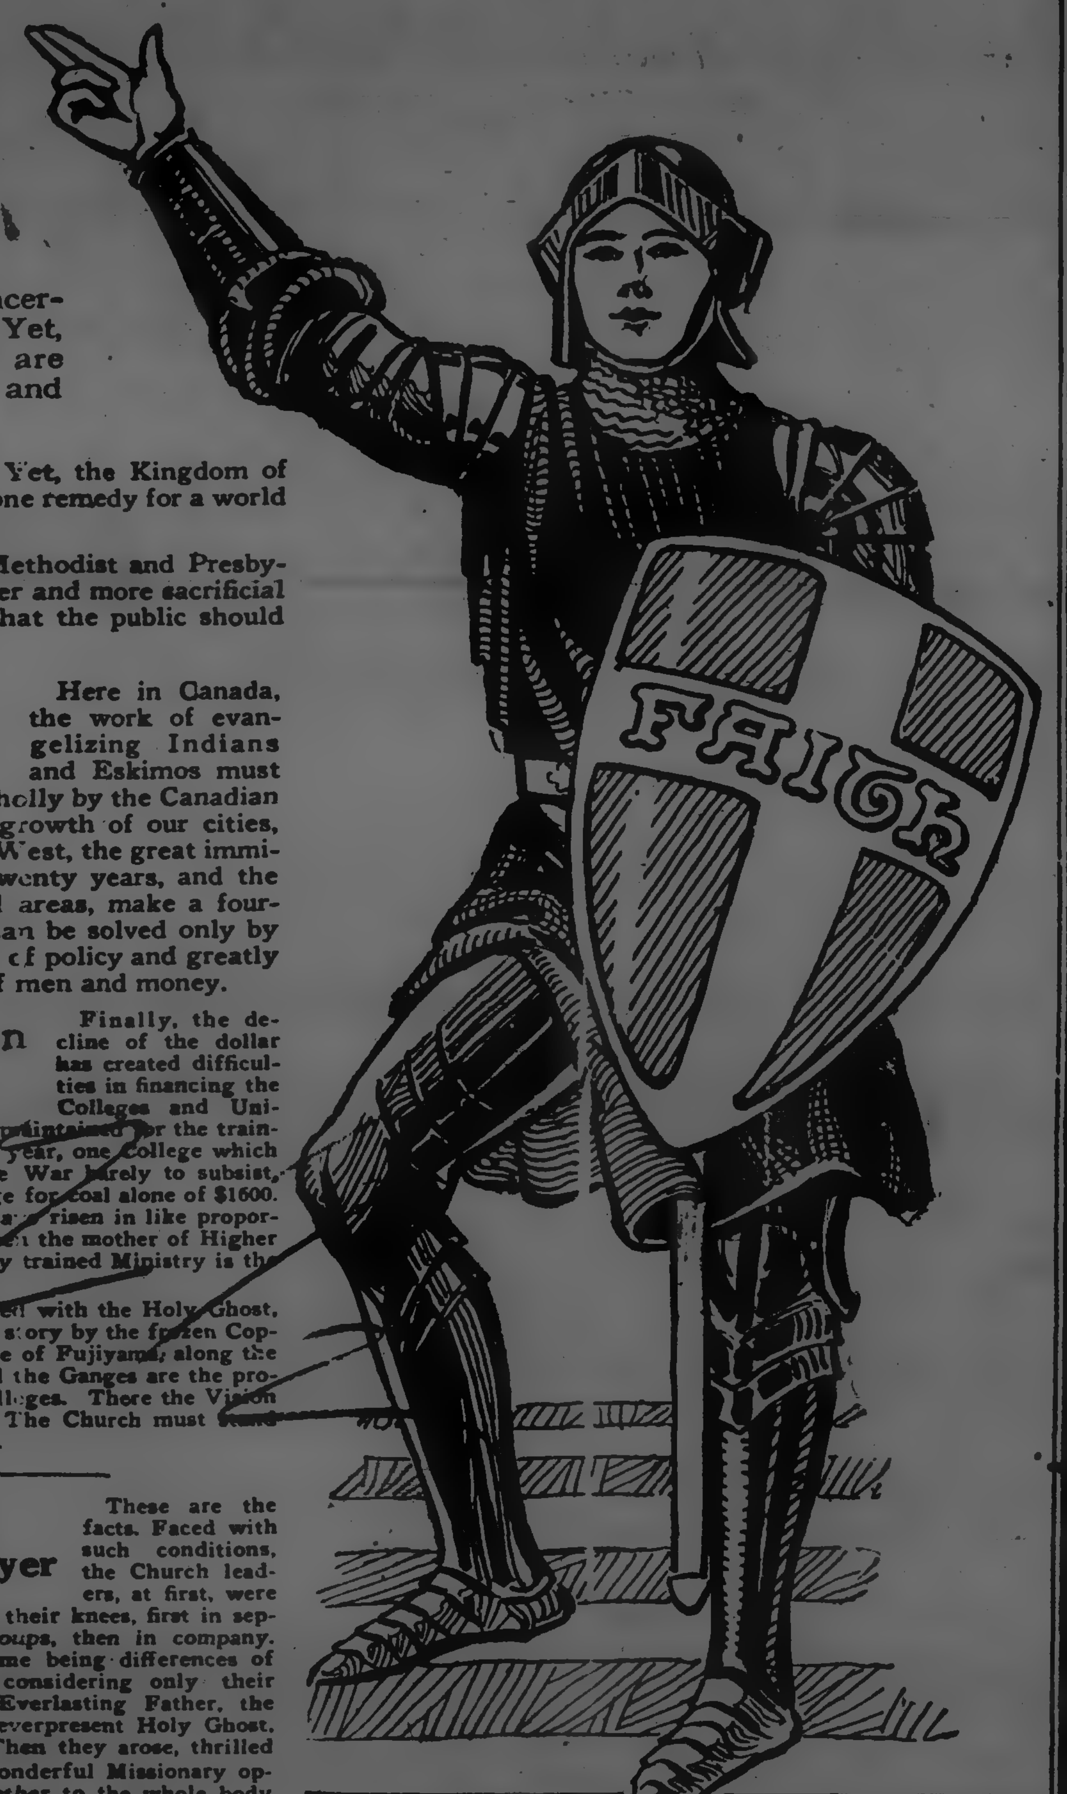
Four Good Reasons for a National Forward Movement

"For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son, that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but have everlasting life."



DESPITE the four years' fury of War, and the year of uncertainty just ended, the people of Canada have prospered. Yet, spiritual glories revealed to us in the great Conflict are being clouded by drifts of class-hostility, mutual suspicion and cynical materialism.

The world is troubled. Old conceptions are giving place to new. Yet, the Kingdom of God remains, firmly grounded on the great principle of love. It has the one remedy for a world diseased:—"Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved."

Five Christian Communions—Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian—call their various constituencies and the whole nation to a livelier and more sacrificial Christianity. They are making a great financial appeal. It is fitting that the public should know the reasons.

1 The Decline of the Dollar

The sharp rise in prices the world over has affected injuriously the position of every man working for a fixed salary. Missionaries are in this category. Stipends that were ample in 1900, and nearly adequate in 1912, are utterly insufficient in 1920. There has been no general increase in these stipends. There cannot be, until the Canadian people scale-up their giving to balance the decline in purchasing-power of the Canadian dollar.

International exchange has been unstable. Money for export has been subject to heavy discounts. In view also of the increased cost of materials and of labor, any new building programme abroad has been out of the question. But the need for new buildings is imperative. Some missionaries are living in clay-floored huts.

New Standards are Necessary

The Anglican Synods, the Baptist Conventions, the Congregational Union, the Methodist Conferences, and the Presbyterian General Assembly, have set new standards for the salaries of Clergymen actively engaged in Canada. But, for the Missionaries, and for the Superannuated Ministers, no increases have been possible.

One of the aims of the Forward Movement is to show the fine-spirited, generous, Christian people of Canada that the old standards of giving for Missions must be revised. It is impossible to maintain existing stations, even on a pre-War basis, without more men and much more revenue.

2 The Call from Abroad

Coincident with this financial difficulty, new and glorious opportunities for the extension of Christian teaching have appeared. In India, literally millions of "outcastes" are pleading for Missionary preachers and doctors. In China, a new National spirit has been born. Missionary teachers are urgently required to help formulate the National system of education. Hospitals, Missionary nurses, doctors and dentists, are heartily welcomed by the people. From Japan, Africa and the Islands of the Sea, comes the same story.

3 The Home Responsibility

Here in Canada, the work of evangelizing Indians and Eskimos must now be undertaken wholly by the Canadian Church. The rapid growth of our cities, the expansion of the West, the great immigration of the last twenty years, and the depopulation of rural areas, make a fourfold problem which can be solved only by radical readjustments of policy and greatly increased resources of men and money.

4 The Pressure on the Colleges

Finally, the decline of the dollar has created difficulties in financing the Colleges and Universities established and maintained for the training of the Clergy. Last year, one College which had been able before the War barely to subsist, faced an additional charge for coal alone of $1600. All other expenditures have risen in like proportion. Christianity has been the mother of Higher Education. A thoroughly trained Ministry is the great need of the times.

The men of faith, filled with the Holy Ghost, who proclaim the Gospel story by the frozen Coppermine, beneath the cone of Fujiyama, along the banks of the Yangtse and the Ganges are the product of our Canadian Colleges. There the Vision first appeared to them. The Church must stand behind these institutions.

The Unity of Faith and Prayer

These are the facts. Faced with such conditions, the Church leaders, at first, were appalled. They went to their knees, first in separate denominational groups, then in company. Putting aside for the time being differences of religious temperament, considering only their common belief in the Everlasting Father, the Almighty Son, and the everpresent Holy Ghost, they prayed together. Then they arose, thrilled with a glimpse of the wonderful Missionary opportunity, to appeal together to the whole body of Christians in Canada.

The Greatest of All Gifts

You are a believer in the Lord Jesus Christ, and in the Gospel He proclaimed. Your country has become great through Christianity. The hope and love of the Gospel have warmed your heart and illumined your life.

Next week you will be asked by the representatives of your Church to show practical proof of your convictions. Be prepared—not to give a trifle out of your abundance, but to taste the full sweetness of Sacrifice.

LAKEFIELD

(Special Correspondence.)

Lakefield, Feb. 7.—Mrs. Braden Blewett and Mrs. Ira Lennox spent Wednesday in Peterborough.

Mrs. Sabatino was a visitor to Peterborough Wednesday.

Mr. Braden Blewett spent Wednesday in Peterborough. Mr. Blewett played hockey for the Peterborough Woollen Mills in the City League.

Mrs. Webb Blewett spent a couple days in Peterborough this week.

Mr. Wm. Dever, of Burleigh Falls, was in the village on Wednesday.

A number of the young men of Lakefield attended the hockey match at Brock rink between Peterborough and Lindsay on Friday last.

Mr. Arthur Lawless, proprietor of the Lakefield House, closed his doors to the public on Monday, being recently fined $1,000 and costs for violating the Temperance Act.

Messrs. G. and H. Brooks, of Young's Point, spent Wednesday in the village.

Miss Young, of Young's Point, was a visitor to the village Wednesday.

On Wednesday evening about 30 employees of the Barries, Limited, Peterborough held a sleighing party to Lakefield. Upon arriving in the village those who wished to skate had a couple of hours of good skating on "Tad's" ice, after which they assembled at Alford's restaurant where a hot dinner was served.

Mr. Ciphas Lemay returned to Toronto on Thursday.

Mr. and Mrs. Walton, of Dafoe, Alta., were the guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Alford on Wednesday.

Mrs. M. Osborne spent Wednesday in Peterborough.

Mrs. G. Northey was a visitor to Peterborough on Thursday.

While tearing down the Cavendish Lumber Co. mill on Tuesday Mr. R. White slipped and fell from building and was badly hurt in the leg and heel. It may be some time before he will be able to get around.

Hockey Match.

The first hockey match between Young's Point and the Lakefield High School was played in the local rink on Wednesday afternoon, which resulted in favor of the localites, the score being 7-2.

Following is the line-up:

Young's Point—Goal, Heard; r. defence, Young; centre, Frost; r. wing, Cummings; l. wing, Carroll.

High School—Goal, Erskine; r. defence, Hull; centre, Sherin; r. wing, McIlmoyl; l. wing, Girven.

Clayton Ridpath was referee.

NOT WHAT YOU EXPECTED

You thought I was going to tell you the Havelock man came back this week with all of Havelock, but while it would be exciting reading, it would not be true. But listen! Last summer a friend suffered agony for two weeks with acute indigestion. She was induced with difficulty to take Gallagher's Blood Purifier—was soon cured and now it is a family remedy. The other night I met a young [illegible] farmer who told me he had doctored for years for acidity of the stomach and indigestion, getting no relief until he took our Blood Purifier. Now he is not troubled with it. Is it any wonder I am enthusiastic about it when almost every day someone tells me a similar story. This Herbal Remedy is manufactured by the Gallagher Remedy Co., [illegible] Water Street, Peterborough. If you are similarly troubled it will do the same for you. I thought you would like to know.

Your friend.

NATIONS MUST KEEP WITHIN REVENUES

London, Feb. 6.—Reginald McKenna, former Chancellor of the Exchequer, in a statement to a correspondent of the Sun and New York Herald, outlined a practical solution of the foreign exchange problem.

Mr. McKenna last year succeeded Sir Edwin Holden as chairman of the London Joint City and Midland Bank, the largest financial institution in the world, with 1,700 branches in the United Kingdom and on the continent. He is regarded as the foremost financial authority in England. He said:

"Obviously the essential condition for the restoration of European exchanges is a full revival of European industry, and this can bse accomplished only when the Governments of the various European nations have brought their expenditures within the compass of their revenue. So long as they meet their requirements by internal borrowing, followed by an unlimited issue of paper money, there is no possibility of a restoration of normal exchange."

Says America Right

America is right in refusing to lend money to governments which have not put their own houses in order. When, however, a country ceases to issue fresh paper money to supply it with raw materials of industry, or machinery and railway material on credit, will prove not merely a policy dictated by a humane desire to restore the ravages of war but also will be excellent business.

Fortunate is the man who is able to bear misfortune

OBITUARY

JOHN AUSTIN

The death occurred at 431 George Street south, of Mr. John Austin, aged 52 years. After a long illness borne with great patience, he passed peacefully away at the residence of his son-in-law, Mr. Thomas Pitchford.

He leaves to mourn his loss a wife and two daughters, Mrs. Thos Pitchford and Nellie at home.

Mr. Austin came from Shropshire England, seven years ago, and since that time has resided in Peterboro, having been employed as a machinist at the Canadian General Electric.

The funeral will take place from the residence of his son-in-law, 431 George Street south, on Monday at two p.m., and will proceed to Little Lake cemetery for interment.

THE FORWARD MOVEMENT.

Editor Review: May I, through your columns, say a few words to members of the Church of England throughout Peterborough in regard to the great united effort before us all, which can be carried through to a successful issue only by generosity, by real self-sacrifice, and by every single one of us doing our full duty at this crisis to our Church and thus to the Divine Head of that Church?

Different calls come to us at different times. The call of today is to give in a way and to an extent that we have never risen to before. In company with multitudes of others who have seen the beckoning vision, it is our high privilege to step out of what is an ordinary, dull and common place, and to set our feet even for a brief period on a path of daring and heroic venture. It is not only a matter of duty, but also of very real privilege.

Let each of us, then, think out (perhaps over and over again, as our standard rises) what is the best and most worthy contribution which we can make over the stated period of two years, and make a glad and truly religious act of this act of giving.

Coming down from higher grounds to lower but also real ones, it is most important that each one of us do our part towards securing the raising in full of Peterborough's financial objective of $20.000. It is all very well to say, "This is sure to be done," but as a cold matter of fact, it will not BE done unless the giving power of all our people is fully brought out. A great many big, generous gifts are necessary, and also a multitude of correspondingly generous smaller ones.

The situation in Peterborough is an exceptional one, the campaign having been largely left to the laity, and the issue will be watched by the Church generally with interest. Can our laity rise to an emergency call? In my privileged work in different parts of our large diocese I have quoted Peterborough everywhere (both within and without the Church of England) as generously and daringly going in for great worthy objectives, and also as undertaking this big effort unitedly.

On the 18th day of February our city will practically become campaign headquarters for the country districts from Brighton to Collingwood, and returns from all parts will be sent here and the results tabulated. See to it that this honored centre is enabled to worthily hold up its own head!

I feel so stimulated by the many thrilling examples of real heroism and devotion which I have seen in my work as a Campaign Leader that with all confidence I call upon our people in a city which is truly set upon a hill and has distinguished herself in the national campaigns of the war, to do what is worthy of her past record for the support of this glorious cause, which is in very truth the cause not only of the Church but also of the well-being of our country.

But to ensure this, remember that what Peterborough is able to do will depend on each single individual contribution.

Faithfully yours,
J. C. DAVIDSON.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Sage Tea and Sulphur Turns Gray, Faded Hair Dark and Glossy.

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when faded, streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and troublesome.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound." You will get a large bottle of this old-time recipe improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost. Everybody uses this preparation now, because no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two, your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger.

IT WAS AGONY TO RAISE HER ARM

NEW ABERDEEN WOMAN IS REJOICING OVER HER RECOVERY AND PRAISES TANLAC.

"For two years I had rheumatic pains in my right side and arm, but now since I have taken four bottles of Tanlac all traces of the rheumatism have left me," said Mrs. George H. Campbell, of New Aberdeen, Cape Breton, Nova Scotia, a few days ago.

"I have certainly known what suffering means, for during the past two years I have been troubled with rheumatism, indigestion and nervousness," continued Mrs. Campbell. "The muscles all through my right side were drawn up and I had dull, aching pains in my side and arm that never left me, and at times they were so bad I thought they would run me wild, and if I tried to raise my arm above my head I would be in agony. The rheumatism seemed to trouble me worse at night when I would be lying still, and for that reason it was almost impossible for me to get any sleep. Indigestion troubled me so bad that it looked like everything I ate disagreed with me and caused me no end of misery after every meal. My nerves were shattered, and any little noise I wasn't expecting would completely upset me, and I was so miserable and weak that any work I did was torture to me.

"I had tried so many different things and got no benefit from them that I had lost confidence in medicine, and when a friend of mine advised me to try Tanlac I wouldn't do it at first, but finally as I was getting worse and worse all the time, I made up my mind to take it. And now I am certainly glad I tried it, for four bottles are all that I have taken, and all my troubles have entirely left me, and I am in fine health. I don't have a sign of rheumatism any more and my muscles are not drawn, and I can raise my arms as high as I please. Everything I eat agrees with me perfectly with no bad after effects at all, and my nerves are as steady as a clock. I am sleeping sound every night, feeling fine all the time, and I am so happy over what Tanlac has done for me that I cannot find words to praise it enough."

Tanlac is sold in Peterborough by W. B. Warne Drug Co., Ltd.; in Havelock, by A. C. Denike; in Lakefield, by Tanner Drug Co., Ltd.; in Fowlers' Corners, by W. A. Hunter; in Gelert, by A. J. Scott; in Westwood by G. Pringle & Son.

SOME FACTS ABOUT MEN AND BOOKS

(By F. M. Dela Fosse)

Years ago, in a certain college chapel in England, the writer of this article played his humble part as an indifferent treble in the choir. Day in and day out, as the boys filed into their places in the beautiful edifice, the choristers took seats opposite those reserved for visitors to the college. We thus had many opportunities of viewing at close range personages well-known in the great world outside the college walls. Names that occur the most readily to one's mind are those of Charles Kingsley, Mr Gladstone, and the famous Bishop Magee of Peterborough, afterwards Archbishop of York.

Charles Kingsley lived only fifteen miles away, at the village of Eversley, of which he was rector. He was a great friend of our headmaster and it is to be feared that the chief merit that we saw in him, far out-ranking his fame as a writer, was the power that he seemed to possess of obtaining half-holidays for us from Dr. Benson. It was only after his death that the boys awakened to the fact that he had been a great and shining light in the literary world. But what a treat was laid out for us when we did gain a knowledge of his works: "Westward Ho," and "Hereward the Wake," were two books which were the special delight of us younger boys. But those of us who had any love of poetry, revelled in the lilt of his verse, To most of us the favorite writings of one's boyhood remain the favorites to the end, whether they are verse or prose, and possibly because the brain is more plastic in youth than in after years what we then read remains more deeply engraved on the memory. Kingsley's writings always had a fascination for me, and there are doubtless thousands of others, who, having once read, have never forgotten their music. Such verses as:

"Be good, sweet maid, and let who will be clever;
Do noble things, not dream them
all day long;
And so make life, death, and that vast for ever
One glad, sweet song."—

And that verse from the "Old, Old Song,"

"When all the world is old lad,
And all the trees are brown;
And all the sport is stale, lad,
And all the wheels run down;
Creep home, and take your place
there,
The spent and maimed among;
God grant you find one face there
You loved when you were young."

Theer is no collected volume of verse by Kingsley in the library, but most of his poems are to be found scatterd through various anthologies.

Kingsley's life was spent in strenuous endeavors to better the lot of the poor. Nobody had a greater hatred of the shams of society and of its squirearchy who did not live up to their obligations to their tenants than he. The laboring man of today, whether in England or in America may thank Kingsley, Maurice and others like them, who, in the face of the greatest opposition paved the way for the amelioration of the lot of the labourer. His books, "Yeast" and "Alton Locke" are hardly ever read nowadays and people are missing a great deal by not reading them, for they are both of great interest and point a very sound moral. "Hypatia" is another of Kingsley's books that is very rarely taken out. It is a very fine romance and presents a stirring picture of the fifth century of the Christian era. Hypatia, a young, beautiful and gifted woman, lectures on principles of religious philosophy in Alexandria. Her influence raises the ire of the followers of Bishop Cyril, and the story ends in the dramatic death of Hypatia when the infuriated Christians fall upon her and tear her limb from limb.

JUDGE HUYCKE EXPLAINS METHODS OF LEGAL PROCEEDURE IN VARIOUS COURTS

Third of Series of Interesting Lectures Delivered Last Night at the Y. W. C. A.

His Honor Judge Huycke, at the Y. W. C. A. last night, delivered a most enlightening address on "Legal Procedure." This, the third of the series, sounded a special note of interest, as most ladies appreciate the necessity for at least a general knowledge along this line. Departing from the technical to some extent, his Honor explained the points of vital importance in a conversational manner, interspersing his discourse with humorous stories which were illustrative of the point he wished to impress. It was, he said, a question of philanthropical importance that laws should be enforced, and the theory of civilised law is that people have rights, hence the reason for the institution of courts.

While it cannot be said that ladies anticipate being in court, it is highly important that they should know how to deport themselves in case they should at some time be called on to appear.

Speaking of courts, ther are two distinct classifications, criminal and civil. A crime is when a person infringes upon a law of the State, and therefore commits a sin that is punishable by the State. The law which prohibits such an infraction is a criminal law. The other court, civil, as distinguished from criminal, is in a preliminary stage very different.

"Crimes are too many," his Honor went on to say, and, dealing with criminal procedure, explained that our criminal law is embodied in a code and is, thanks to the legal lights of bygone years, a very efficient law.

If a person is suspected of crime, it is the duty of those who are aware of it to lay the information—this to a police magistrate, an official who has the jurisdiction of two justices of the peace. By consent of the accused, the police magistrate has increased jurisdiction over the information laid. A summons to appear is then issued to those concerned, and the magistrate hears the evidence, giving due emphasis to important points, and in minor matters disposes of it then and there, makes a decision.

In matters of grave importance, the magistrate hears the evidence only of the Crown. This is against the person charged. When the accused is committed for trial he can defend himself. However, an abuse crept up with this procedure. A person would be confined until the regular court would come, regardless of guilt or innocence. It was at that time that Parliament made a provision that no person would be confined more than two days previous to being brought before a judge. The prisoner has the choice of two courses. He can be tried by the judge and have the case disposed of without delay, or he can be tried by a judge and jury. This latter course necessitates either that he remain in confinement while waiting for the trial or else apply for bail. In other words, he may give security (the amount of which will be fixed by the judge) that he will appear on a certain day.

In the meantime he is allowed abroad. A person is presumed innocent until proved guilty. If the accused appears on the day mentioned the bondsmen are released; if not, his property will be taken as a debt to the Crown. In case he should be devoid of worldly possessions, then the bondsmen are forced to pay the debt. Our system of procedure, his Honor said, is jealous of the rights of others, and often charges are laid as the result of spite or some such antagonistic disposition. So we have the grand jury and the petit jury.

The grand jury is an institution of antiquity. When called, it is the duty of these men to hear all the evidence against the prisoner. The Crown lays the charge in what is termed a "bill of indictment." On this instrument are the names of the witnesses. The jurors, thirteen in number, are directed by the presiding judge to take the case in hand, and are at liberty to ask any question they wish. If they decide that the evidence is sufficient, this decision is verified in a "true bill." If otherwise, the case is dismissed. Out of the thirteen jurors, seven can find a "true bill."

The jurors and also the witnesses are solemnly sworn in a method that is binding on the conscience. Owing to the complicated condition of affairs in our country as regards religion and hereditary beliefs, there was some difficulty here. For instance, the Jewish race swear by Jehovah, the Chinese method is by smashing a saucer, meaning that they wish their soul to be so shattered in case they do not tell the truth. But we must respect the sanctity of their intelligence and truth and must assume that they are conscientious. The judge must then dissociate all he may know of the case from his mind. The jury are sworn to give their verdict on, first, conscience, second, evidence. Then the judge decides to the best of his ability on the evidence as given and renders his judgment accordingly.

His Honor said that because a story is contradictory it is not always untrue, and pointed out that no two persons receive exactly the same impression at the same time, and from his experience, if a case is brought in and a witness tells exactly the same story it is a pretty safe wager that he is telling an untruth.

Touching on the Division Court, the speaker said that it dealt with minor cases. The person entering a claim may or may not employ a lawyer. The clerk will accordingly make out a summons. If the defendant denies the debt or such like, he is directed to dispute the claim. He will therefore be present with witnesses, and he may or may not have lawyers plead the case for him. In the Division Court the person summoned may be represented by a friend, but in higher courts it must be a lawyer. Trials in this court are similar to others, and in certain cases a jury may be called, but this is seldom the case. His Honor said that the jury trial seems to be a favorite method of the English-speaking people.

In conclusion, Judge Huycke explained fully the procedure of the Surrogate Court, emphasizing the points of importance and giving all necessary information on the subject.

Causes of Memory's Stirring.

"How I love the smell of a wood fire," is a common exclamation. Now, there's nothing delightful about smell of wood smoke, but, oh! the memories. The lavender sprigs in grandmother's bureau drawer did much toward keeping her memory green. Returning seasons redolent with the fumes of flowers and fruit are responsible for many a homesick hour.

The teacher had spent twenty minutes impressing on her pupils the correct pronunciation of the word "vase." The following morning she wanted to find out if the children remembered, so she turned to one little boy suddenly and demanded: "What do you see on the mantlepiece at home, Jackie?" "Father's feet, miss!" came the prompt reply.

Weather Reporting.

Weather reporting is generally regarded as the mildest of occupations, but it will become one of the most adventuresome and romantic if the idea of a weather bureau official is put into effect, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The plan calls for a number of swift, staunch vessels to pursue tropical storms through Atlantic and Mexican Gulf waters and report them by wireless for the protection of the coasts. These storms frequently centre far out at sea, without affecting land barometers until it is too late.

Pays to Be Straight.

There's a satisfaction in living up to your obligations. Only the man who consistently meets his bills can look the world in the face without either feeling shame or acting the lie. It makes a fellow step with a firmer tread when he knows that he has done his best and that no one can call him a slacker or point toward him the finger of scorn. Sometimes he may feel burdened by this constant living up to deals when others don't, but the load will soon become one of satisfaction as conscience declares approval. You can't do better than live up to your sense of obligation.—Grit.

Poise Worth Cultivating.

Cultivate repose of manner, calmness, quietness, emotional control, if you want to grow in personal influence over your fellow men. Poise by no means constitutes the whole secret of personality. But it is an important element in it. If a choice has to be made between two leaders, one well poised, the other excitable, there can be no question as to which will be chosen. Always poise, with its unconscious revelation of well controlled energy, will carry the day.

Learning.

Learning taketh away the wildness and barbarism and fierceness of men's minds, though a little superficial learning doth rather work a contrary effect. It taketh away all levity, temerity, and insolency by copious suggestions of all doubts and difficulties, and acquainting the mind to balance reasons on both sides, and to turn back the first offers and conceits of the kind, and to accept nothing but the examined and tried.—Bacon.

SOME FACTS ABOUT

was unlucky enough that day to get bowled for a duck's egg in both innings by a fast bowler of the name of Kemp. The boys were elated. That evening in chapel, either by accident or design, most probably the latter, a hymn was chosen, two lines of which especially appealed to the boys as applicable to Grace and the way the whole college roared out those lines at him, made that redoubtable gentleman furious. They ran as follows:

"The scanty triumphs Grace hath

The broken vow, the frequent fall;—"

Special emphasis we may be sure was laid on the word "grace."

I remember my cousin, who was a pupil at the college, coming home that evening chuckling merrily over the incident.

There is a life of Dr. E. M. Grace one of the famous trio of cricketers, in the Library.

Archdeacon Farrar was also a poet, and one of his hymns: "Father, before Thy Throne of Light," a very well-known one, was composed at Marlborough.

Stanley Weyman has written many very interesting tales and one of the most interesting is the "Castle Inn," which has for its setting the old hostel in the High Street at Marlborough. Being on the main road from Bath to London it became one of the chief stopping places for the stage coaches and many a tale of the glories of past days could that quaint old inn unfold. If you wish to gain an insight into the spirit of those times read "The Castle Inn."

One would like to ramble on for a long time on the history of that sleepy old Wiltshire borough, sheltering under the well-known downs. One of the famous white horses carved out of the chalk in the hill side is just outside its borders and within easy driving distance are the world-famed ruins of Stonehenge and the remarkable mound, Silbury Hill, which is believed by many authorities to mark the resting place of those who fell in the last great Arthurian battle of Badon, A.D. 520.

HERE'S THE SECRET OF FACIAL BEAUTY

No Matter How Disfigured With Pimples, Blotches, Blackheads or Muddiness, the Use of Stuart's Calcium Wafers Works Wonders.

You will be astonished to see the wonderful change that so often takes place in just a few days after using Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

Pimples, blotches, liver spots, blackheads, muddy complexion and skin eruptions affect the skin because it is one of the natural outlets of the body to rid itself of impurities. If you supply it with the proper materials it will convert these skin poisons into a harmless substance to pass off instead of forming ugly accumulations in the skin. These Wafers contain the best skin purifier known to science—Calcium Sulphide.

Historic Tree Now Only a Memory.

The "tree in the road" a mile and a half west of Hartford, Mich., has been cut down to clear the way for a new concrete road. This maple tree, supposed to be more than a hundred years old, was the most famous and most cherished landmark of the region. Standing in the middle of the road on the crest of a hill, it had from the time of the oldest inhabitant been used as a point from which all distances were measured.

In giving directions a place was always said to be a certain distance "this side of the tree in the road" or a certain distance "beyond the tree in the road." With the advance of civilization, however, the natives have reluctantly concluded that the tree can be dispensed with, since the only distance people ask about now is the distance between gasoline tanks.—Exchange.

As to the Number "Forty."

Forty may not be a "magic number," like three, or seven, and it has not the extraordinary properties which mathematicians have discovered in the number nine, about which a whole volume might be written without exhausting the subject. But the manner in which it figures in both fact and fiction is certainly calculated to pique curiosity. It is impossible to discern any mathematical reason for such use of it, wherefore the natural assumption is that it had its origin in some striking incident.

Civilization in Korea.

History for many years B. C. tells us that the people of Korea were among the highest in genuine civilization. About the year 1597 a general by the name of Li built the first iron fleet, composed of wooden circular vessels with iron plates on top, studded with iron teeth. Because of the prosperity of the Korean nation, Japan was extremely jealous, and had therefore brought 700 boats in battle array. However, Li, with his 80 boats, succeeded in inflicting a disastrous defeat upon the Japanese.

British Columbia Woman Speaks Plainly.

Her Message is to Everyone.

Those who have found relief are the people who want all sufferers to know what they gained from their experience.

Mrs. B. Walters, of Savona, B.C., writes, praising Gin Pills for the immediate relief given by these splendid Pills. Mrs. Walters says:—

"I advise people who have not used Gin Pills to try them. I have been troubled for years with weak kidneys, and one box of Gin Pills cured me. I recommend them as an absolute and reliable cure."

Derangement of kidneys or bladder is so very serious that, at the first sign of pain in side or back, treatment with Gin Pills should begin. The duty of the kidneys is to cleanse the blood. If weak or inactive, uric acid and other poisons and waste are carried to the joints and muscles, causing inflammation, rheumatism, sciatica, neuralgia, lumbago, constant headaches, dizziness, floating specks before the eyes, gravel or stone in the bladder, general debility and lassitude. If you have any of these symptoms, get Gin Pills at once. Free sample on request. At druggists or dealers, 50c a box. Money refunded if not relieved.

AIDING NEEDY CANADIANS

Red Cross Helping While Government Still Delays Action.

London, Feb. 7.—The Red Cross is assisting five hundred destitute discharged Canadian officers and men in Britain at the present time. It is estimated that of the 22,000 soldiers demobilised here, 2,000 of them are without means. One officers in rags who applied for aid lately is absolutely destitute and has nothing for his wife and family. Scores are hoping for word from the Government that assistance will be given for their return to Canada.

SLEIGHING PARTY FOR KNOX BIBLE CLASS

ENJOYABLE OUTING ENDS UP WITH SOCIAL HOUR AT THE MANSE

The Volunteer Bible Class of Knox Church were entertained last evening to a sleigh drive by the A.S.K. Bible Class of the same church. The young people assembled at the church about 7.30. Upon the arrival of the sleighs there was no delay in getting packed in, and the sleighs were filled to capacity. The weather being ideal for such an occasion, everyone thoroughly enjoyed the outing.

After about two hours' drive, the party met at the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. A. McKenzie, where a pleasant time was spent in music and games. Refreshments, which were prepared by the boys, were then served.

At the conclusion of the evening's program a hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. and Mrs. McKenzie for their much-appreciated kindness in opening their home for this occasion, after which all joined hands singing "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows."

YOUR LONG LIFE.

Scientific Facts That Few People Consider.

How long have you lived?

Certainly for untold millions of years.

True, the individual that you recognize as yourself came into the world only a short time ago. But the "germplasm," which is the essential element of your being, is of a derivation inconceivably ancient.

You began your present career very humbly, as a single cell about 1-125 of an inch in diameter. That cell split into two, the two into four, the four into eight, and so on, this sort of progressive multiplication accomplishing the building, or growth, of your body.

The tiny original cell had a nucleus, the function of which was reproductive—in other words, to multiply. Surrounding the nucleus was the "cell-plasm," which had to do with nutrition.

What could be more simple? And yet such a cell is the most mysterious thing in the world. It holds a secret the revelation of which would solve a puzzle that has up to now defied scientific inquiry—the secret of the principle of life.

Your body is a congeries of cells, the progeny and descendants of the first tiny one, and each one of them contains the same sort of cell-plasm. But the latter did not originate with yourself; it has been handed down to you through innumerable generations. You received it from your parents, and in turn you pass it along to your children.

Thus, in a very literal sense, we go on living after we are dead. We survive in our descendants, their lives being an extension of our own lives.

The cell-plasm itself is a substance indistinguishable from ordinary proto-plasm, but it contains the "chromosomes," which are of all things in this world the most wonderful. For they are the carriers of inheritance traits.

You received from your parents twenty of these inheritance bundles, ten from your mother and ten from your father. To-day every cell of your body contains the same twenty characteristic chromosomes — the same bundles.

They represent the traits of innumerable ancestors, and may be said to stand for your individuality, being accountable for everything that you are, from the shape of your nose and the color of your eyes to the peculiarities of your temperament, disposition and mental equipment.

In a young cell, viewed beneath a high-power microscope, there is seen something that looks like a tangled thread. Later, this thickens and shortens, taking the form of a rod. The rod finally breaks into twenty pieces, which are the inheritance bundles.

Your mother, out of her twenty bundles, could give you only ten; your father likewise. Thus it was purely a matter of chance which ones you got.

Yellow Fever.

In 1916 the Rockefeller foundation sent a sanitary commission to Ecuador for the purpose of arranging with the Ecuadorean Government to take the responsibility of eradicating yellow fever from Guayaquil. The proposal was accepted June 10, 1918, when a celebrated bacteriologist arrived and began his work. He succeeded in discovering the germ which causes yellow fever, his investigations promising to produce not only a preventive, but also a cure for this malady.

"PETERS" HAVE CHANCE TO WIN FROM OSHAWA

HOLD LATTER TO TIE SCORE IN OSHAWA FOR GROUP

Oshawa, Feb. 7.—Peterborough intermediates, winners of Group 2, and Oshawa intermediates, winners of Group 3, clashed here last night in the first of home-and-home games. Each scored six times.

An exceedingly large crowd was on hand and the game was quite fast and exciting in the first period, but as the ice became heavy the play slowed up considerably. Oshawa scored the first two goals. Then the visitors came right back and got two in succession.

In the second period Peterborough scored two and Oshawa one, while in the third Oshawa got three and Peterborough two. The line-up:

Peterborough — Goal, Murray; defence, P Thornton and Halpin; centre, R. Rose; wings, H. Thornton and Evans. Subs—Jackson and L Rose.

Oshawa — Goal, Childs; defence, Kemp and Jacobi; centre, Rowden; wings, Roenick and Blanchard. Subs —Osborne and Hambly.

Referee—Steve Vair, Toronto.

LINDSAY MIDGETS SPRING A SURPRISE

DEFEAT BELLTVILLE ON THEIR OWN ICE AND WIN THE ROUND

Belleville, Feb. 7. Belleville's junior team and Lindsay's midget team crossed sticks last night for supremacy in section two of Group one. At Lindsay on Tuesday the team of that town defeated Belleville by one goal, and it was confidently expected that the Belleville team would on their own ice wipe out that lead, but the unexpected occurred, and Lindsay won the game by a score of 5 to 4. In the first period the score was two to none in Lindsay's favor. In the second period Lindsay scored two and Belleville a like number, while in the third Belleville scored two and Lindsay one. Lou Marsh was the referee. The line-up:

Belleville—Goal, Hulin; defence, Beach and Canning; centre, Tilton; right wing, Coon; left wing, Holloway; subs, Swayne and Holloway.

FORD CARS ARE POPULAR WITH NEW ZEALANDERS

NO AUTOMOBILES MANUFACTURED THERE BUT MANY IMPORTED

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Winnipeg, Feb. 7.—Exchange conditions are causing New Zealand to support British manufacturers in preference to others, according to W. E. Hyslop and H. Jackson, of New Zealand, who are in Winnipeg, en route to their homeland. English money used in New Zealand they pointed out, and gets its full value only in the British Isles. Mr. Jackson left home in May, 1919, to purchase automobiles for the New Zealand Government, and has visited factories in Italy, France and England, while Mr. Hyslop, an importer of automobiles, has surveyed these fields and also Belgium and Germany. No automobiles are manufactured in New Zealand, they said, as it is sparsely settled and primarily a farming country but cars are widely used. Most of these imported have been from the United States but the rate of exchange is now forty per cent. against New Zealand's money so the supply is being sought elsewhere.

Much of this trade would come to Canada if the cars were available here, but practically the only Canadian cars seen in New Zealand are Fords, which are very popular. Over 2,500 were imported last year, and are used extensively in the Government service, notably in the postal department.

Of all the countries visited, Belgium is getting back to normal most rapidly, they thought. The indemnity paid by the Germans was a great help and there was no labor unrest as the workmen seemed anxious to get back to work and help the manufacturers. The motor industry there was flourishing, said Mr. Hyslop. There had been little trouble about soldiers re-establishment in New Zealand, they thought, and little unemployment for those who wanted work. However, there was the same tendency there as in Canada for people to congregate in the cities, and one of the problems was to induce them to work in the country.

Mrs. Robert Robers, wife of Hon. Robert Rogers, broke her arm while skating at Winnipeg.

FIN. MINISTER AT ST. ANDREW'S

Rev. Dr. Laird of Toronto Will Preach at Morning Service

St. Andrew's Church is fortunate in having secured for the morning service tomorrow the Rev. Dr. Laird, "Finance Minister" of the Presbyterian Church in Canada. Dr. Laird has a big mind in a big body—a virile type of man with a virile message. Every member of St. Andrew's should hear him. At the evening service the minister will begin a new series of evening sermons, the first being on "How a Young Man Changed History."

R. H. ALLARD,
Auctioneer.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Dr. H. F. Carr, of McMaster University, a Scotchman of torrential eloquence, will occupy the pulpit in Murray St. Baptist Church tomorrow morning and evening.

The Ladies' Auxiliary of the G.W.V.A. request a full attendance at their meeting Monday evening at 8 o'clock.

Dr. H. F. Carr, who is to occupy the Baptist Church tomorrow, is the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Scott.

Mrs. C. H. Ackerman and little son left yesterday for Toronto, where they will spend the week-end with relatives.

Mr. J. F. Herman, of Toronto, is in the city for the week-end.

Mr. and Mrs. Black, of Detroit, left for their home today after spending the past two weeks with Peterborough friends.

Miss Helen Cassils is visiting friends in Toronto today.

PRESENT ADDRESS AND RING TO MRS. F. ROME

VIMY RIDGE LODGE WARMLY APPRECIATES HER SERVICES AS PIANIST.

Vimy Ridge Lodge, No. 244, expressed appreciation of Mrs. Frank Rome as pianist at its last meeting On Wednesday evening, just at the closing of the Lodge, Mrs. F. Rowe was called to the platform and the following address was read by Pearl Lucy and the presentation made by Mrs. Charles Wright:

Dear Sister Rome:

It is with much pleasure we are able to meet here tonight and present you with this small token of appreciation for your true and faithful service as pianist. You have always been a cheerful and willing worker amongst us and we wish you to accept this ring, with good wishes of officers and members of Vimy Ridge Lodge, No. 244.

Although completely taken by surprise, Sister Rome made a suitable reply, wishing the Lodge every success in carrying on its good work.

STORMY WEATHER HARD ON BABY

The stormy, blustery weather which we have during February and March is extremely hard on children. Conditions make it necessary for the mother to keep them in the house. They are often confined to overheated, badly ventilated rooms and catch colds which rack their whole system. To guard against this a box of Baby's Own Tablets should be kept in the house and an occasional dose given the baby to keep his stomach and bowels working regularly. This will not fail to break up colds and keep the health of the baby in good condition till the brighter days come along. The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

WILL NOT DROP PROTESTS

Toronto, Feb. 7.— Premier Drury and Hon. G. Howard Ferguson, Conservative leader, both deny that a saw-off will occur in the protests made by the U. F. O. and Conservatives against each other.

Mr. Jayne, M. P. P., of Grenville who is protesting Hon. Mr. Ferguson's election, was in town yesterday, but the Premier denied that the Government has anything to do with his protest.

Mr. Ferguson also stated that he is active in no way toward opposing Hon. Mr. Raney in East Wellington If Mr. Raney is opposed it will be a local matter entirely.

J. W. BARRIE, THE SCOTTISH HUMORIST

A real treat was enjoyed by the many members of the Women's Art Association and their friends, who were present Thursday evening, Feb. 5th, at the Conservatory to hear Mr. F. J. A. Morris, M.A., of the Collegiate Institute staff, deliver his delightful address on J. M. Barrie, the Scotch humorist.

Being himself an enthusiastic admirer of Barrie, Mr. Morris succeeded not only in arousing a deeper admiration in all lovers of Barrie for their favorite author, but also in kindling in the hearts of those who as yet had not come under the spell of the great humorist, a strong desire to become acquainted with his writings.

In introducing his subject the speaker clearly defined what is meant by humor, showing the difference between false humor and true, between humor and wit, illustrating his explanation by a delightful reading from the The Window in Thrums, viz., A Humorist on His Calling.

Mr. Morris then gave an interesting sketch of the writer's life and career, dwelling particularly on the beautiful relationship which existed between Barrie and his mother. The lecturer then spoke of Barrie as a writer of romance, mentioning as his four great achievements, Thrums Idylls, Margaret Ogilvy, The Little Minister and Sentimental Tommie. From the first of these two readings were given to the great enjoyment of the listeners, Preparing to Receive Company and The Country of Thowbead's Bell.

The lecture was concluded by an analysis of Barrie's style, special emphasis being laid on his brilliant dialogue, in illustration of which another reading was given: How Gavin and McQueen Tried to Take Nannie to the Poor House.

An appreciative vote of thanks was moved by Mrs. A. Mowat, seconded by Mrs. Munro, and heartily endorsed by the audience.

Two piano selections, (a) Gondola Song, (b) Spring's Awakening, by Miss Dorothy Stuart, and a vocal solo, The Wooing of a Rose, by Miss Lillian Eastwood, added greatly to the enjoyment of the evening.

Mrs. Sherwood, president of the Women's Art Association, gracefully presided over what one and all pronounced to be a delightful entertainment.

Annual Meeting Otonabee Chapter I. O. D. E.

The fifth annual meeting of the Otonabee Chapter, I.O.D.E., was held in the green room at the Y. W. C. A on Thursday afternoon February 5 1920.

The following officers were elected:

Hon. Regent— Mrs. Wallace.

Hon. Vice-Regent— Mrs. Huycke.

1st. Vice-Regent— Miss Lancaster

2nd. Vice-Regent— Mrs. R. Harstone.

Secretary— Mrs. Seels.

Treasurer— Miss M. English.

Echoes Secretary— Mrs. Morphet

Standard Bearer— Mrs. A. Stratton, Miss N. Hall.

Councillors— Mrs. Fessenden, Mrs Sanderson, Mrs. Widdess, Mrs. Stenson, Mrs. Carmichael, Mrs. A. Robinson, Mrs. F. Robinson, Mrs. Stapleton, Miss Archer, Miss Brunett.

During the past year two executive and nine general meetings have been held.

Average attendance regular meetings, twenty-three, being an increase of three over last year.

We have enrolled fifteen new members and lost eighteen. One by death eleven have left the city, and six withdrawn from the chapter.

We now have a paid up membership of 86.

During the year several functions for the purpose of raising money have been held. All of which have proved very successful.

They were a St. Patrick's tea and musicale at Mrs. T. H. Denne's; a Children's Fancy Dress Party, held on April 26th, in the Y. W. C. A., a Lawn Party and Dance at Mrs. R R. Halls', on June 24th.

Tag Day in October to aid the Navy League.

Dance and card party at G.W.V.A Hall in November.

Tea carl party and sale at Mrs. Morphet's, December 19th.

Dress up party at Y. W. C. A. January 28th.

At the October meeting Miss English gave a report of annual meeting

At April meeting Dr. Burnie talked to us about the proposed baby clinic And we are glad to give aid to so worthy an object.

At the April meeting, our Regent Mrs. Allen told us she was about to move from town and so tendered and we were obliged to accept with regret her resignation as regent.

Mrs. Coulthard was then by unanimous vote elected to fill the vacancy and again has most ably filled the position.

We wish to thank the members who so kindly gave us the use of their homes, and the committees for the year who have been most faithful, and have performed their tasks with enthusiasm and hearty good will.

Some of the members having done war work so much in the past think this a time to relax. Now, there is as great need for united effort that the work of education for our soldiers' children may be made possible and readjustment of all people and things throughout our Empire need ourwomen's aid.

We, as true daughters of the Empire must not drift with the times. We must be ready to work for better things whenever comes the call. Since our soldiers have given so much to make this country a safe place to live in we must keep it so by doing whatsoever our hands find to do, though at times it means giving up some amusement more pleasing than the duty at hand.

Co-operation has proved the lever in so many big undertakings which have proved successful. Let us prove its efficiency throughout the year by standing with out officers and so by each doing out little duties prove inspiration to them and a power in all the work our patriotism calls us to do.

MAE W. SEELS.,
Secretary

Fifty Years of Progress

Our Jubilee Year.—The year 1919 was notable inasmuch as it completed the first fifty years of the company's active operations, and at the same time marked the year of its greatest development and progress in all departments of its business. The first policies were offered to the public in the spring of 1870, and the end of the first half century sees the company with unimpeachable assets of $38,000,000 and policies in force amounting to $170,000,000.

Remarkable Expansion of Business.—The most remarkable feature of the year was the flood of new business received, due largely to the awakening of popular appreciation of the beneficent function of life assurance by the experiences of the war and the influenza epidemic that followed. The increase in new business acquired was nearly 90%. That the record for quality business was fully maintained is indicated by the large increase of $33,065,691 in the total business in force, being over 80% of the new business written.

The Surplus Earnings.—No item of the year's operations is more gratifying than the great increase in the surplus earnings. Notwithstanding a certain number of abnormal death losses arising from the war and the influenza epidemic, amounting to $352,857.65, the surplus earnings for the year were $1,302,801, an increase over the previous year of 60%, and showing earnings of $34.27 for every $1.000 of total assets held at the end of the year.

Invested Funds.—Never in the history of Canadian life insurance has there been such a remarkable opportunity for the profitable investment of life insurance funds, and the effect of the past year's investments will be to enhance the surplus earnings over a long period of years, through holding up the average rate of interest earned on the invested funds. For the year 1919 the company earned the very satisfactory rate of 6.39%.

Comparative Statement of Growth

EXHIBITION DIRECTORS APPOINT COMMITTEES FOR CURRENT YEAR

Business Transacted at Meeting in Board of Trade Rooms Saturday Afternoon—Delegate to Annual Meeting of Fair Boards in Toronto Makes Report.

A meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition was held in the Board of Trade rooms on Saturday afternoon, a full attendance of the directors being present. Letters from the Woman's Art Association in references to some changes and from C. S. Cammer of the Merchants Bank on printing tickets free with certain advertising on the back were received.

The secretary reported that outstanding accounts had all been paid.

The principal business was the striking of the committees of management for the coming year.

President Denne suggested the mixing of the committees so that a number of the new directors would have added interest in the work, leaving a number of the old members who already knew it.

Messrs. Cox, Turner, Brown, Webber, Gillespie and the president were appointed a committee to strike the different committees for the coming year.

It was suggested that a finance committee be appointed, and also an advertising manager who would be responsible for advertising and other expenses pertaining to publicity.

Mr. Fraser took the chair while the president and committee were striking the committees.

In the matter of increasing the prize list of cattle and horses the secretary drew the attention of the committee to the fact that the prize list for the cattle was $300.00 more than the horses notwithstanding that the horses were a greater drawing card. This was left for committee to deal with.

As the fair is getting larger and also extending over a period of four days, the matter of weather insurance was discussed. The secretary pointed out that the Government guaranteed a certain amount of the average gate receipts in case of bad weather, and altogether likely would increase the grant this year. The matter was left to the secretary to make further enquiries.

Mr. Fraser took up the matter of price of admission and was of the opinion that the Board was giving too much for the money and that other places were charging more than in Peterborough.

At present each member paying one dollar had the privileges of the fair and free admission. The Board was generally of the opinion that this matter should be taken up by the committee later.

The standing committee recommended the following and was adopted by the Board:

Light Horses—T. Cruickshank, Noble Kelley, W. J. Cox, Smith Milburn.

Heavy Horses—John Gillespie, Robert Grandy, Harold Sanderson, A. W. Winch.

Dairy Cattle—Wr. Steinkrauss, Wilbert Roseborough, Michael Geary, J. T. O'Connell.

Sheep and Swine—J. O. Ball, Wm. Steinkrauss, J. Gillespie, A. Roberts.

Poultry—Harold Baptie, Joseph Kelly, W. J. Dickenson.

Dairy—T. Hooper, C. S. Cummer, E. B. Fowler, W. R. Breyfogle.

Horticultural—D. Jordan, W. J. Young, H. Theobald, G. O. Cameron, Geo. Duncan.

Agricultural—F. Kitney, J. Williams, B. Johnston S. A. Oke, Harry Webber.

Fine Arts—V. Eastwood, J. W. Fraser, R. M. Glover, Chris. Graham, Mrs. Stevenson, Miss Davidson, Miss Elliott, Mrs. E. B. Clegg, Miss Simons.

Amusement and Advertising—W. P. Turner, E. B. Fowler, G. O. Cameron, Chris. Graham, T. Hooper.

Subscription—The whole Board.

Grounds and Concessions—R. H. Turner, T. Brown, W. R. Breyfogle, J. W. Cox.

Reception—G. O. Cameron, W. R. Breyfogle, V. Eastwood, Harry Webber, Geo. Duncan, S. Dickson Hall.

Executive—Roland Denne, R. H. Turner, W. J. Cox.

Building—R. H. Turner, T. Brown, W. J. Cox, Roland Denne, S. D. Hall.

Mr. Thomas Brown was unanimously elected superintendent with Mr. W. J. Cox as assistant superintendent.

Mr. Vincent Eastwood was elected treasurer.

It was moved by Mr. Bruce Johnston and seconded by Mr. R. H. Turner that the Ontario Government be requested to have Mrs. F. C. McRae, agricultural representative of the Ontario Government, moved to Peterborough and would like the co operation of the school fairs, this being the county seat.

The secretary was instructed to notify every chairman to have their reports ready for a meeting to be held at the Board of Trade rooms on Saturday, Feb. 21, at 2 o'clock.

Report of Toronto Delegate.

Mr. J. T. O'Connell presented his report of the Ontario Association of Fairs and Exhibitions which held its 20th annual convention in Toronto Feb. 3 and 4, and which had a large representative attendance. The president, Mr. Bull, in his address placed before the delegates the great advantage of departmental judges' courses and the abolition of fakirs on the grounds as they had no educational value. The superintendent, Mr. Lockie, in his report called our attention to the increase of all farm production through the new farm government and notified them of the increased grant from $75,000.00 to $125,000.00, which is expected this year. A resolution supporting standardization of all farm machinery, wearable and breakable, was unanimously adopted. Mr. Davidson, of Springville, Ill., gave a talk on fairs wherein he showed that the country fairs came closer to the people than any other and were more educational. He strongly advised the budget system inconducting fair finances. An address from Mrs. Stephens strongly advised the completion of the fair boards by having ladies as members.

Mrs. Powell, in her developing scheme of the prize list, criticised articles such as butter, pies and turnips.

The banquet held at the Carls Rits Hotel was attended by 300 people.

The school children should have every encouragement and chance and seeds should be delivered to the schools in April, thereby giving the teacher and pupils an early start. The school fairs should work in conjunction with the agricultural society.

GERMANY CANNOT CARRY OUT TERMS OF TREATY

THAT IS OPINION OF FORMER SECRETARY OF FOREIGN AFFAIRS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Berlin, Feb. 9.— Philipp Scheidmann, former secretary for Foreign Affairs, writing in the National Zeitung, says that since the Government with the approbation of parliament had signed the peace treaty, it had tried to fulfill the conditions imposed, but since June last he had seen that such fulfillment was impossible. Herr Auer, former Minister of the Interior, says he is well disposed towards the Allies, and will place no difficulties in the way of the German Government handing over the persons demanded.

ENORMOUS BOOTY SECURED BY SOVIET TROOPS ON TAKING ODESSA

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 9.— The Bolshevik forces have definitely evacuated Letvia according to a statement issued at the Lettish Legation here. Enormous booty was taken by Russian Soviet troops when they occupied Odessa according to a wireless message from Moscow received here. British and Russian cruisers are reported to be bombarding the Reds from the harbor.

SUPREME COUNCIL NOW RECOMMENDS CONFERENCE OF FINANCIAL EXPERTS

That Was Result of Meeting Saturday to Deal With Exchange Situation—Governor of Bank of France Explains Condition to Stockholders.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Paris, Feb. 9.—Consideration of the general European financial situation as reflected in the exchange resulted in the adoption Saturday by the supreme economic council of a resolution advocating a conference of competent ministers of France, Great Britain, Italy and Belgium, to consider possible measures for relief. Financial writers devote little space to the sentimental aspects of the situation that figured largely in the earlier discussions, but recognise that the adoption of heavy taxation, stringent economy and reduction of imports by France must be awaited before these several conventional methods of bettering the exchange situation can be applied. It is pointed out that the total debt of France at the end of 1919 aggregated 238,474,133, 850 francs. Georges Pallain, governor of the Bank of France, explaining to a meeting of stockholders the alarming situation with regard to exchange, declared that it was caused by the interruption of advances from the English and American treasuries, which had thrown the market on its own resources at the moment the burdens of France became heavier through purchases for industrial reconstruction.

FOUR KILLED; FIFTEEN INJURED IN ATTEMPT TO LYNCH A NEGRO

Police and State Troops Fired on Mob—Prisoner Was Sentenced to the Electric Chair While Attempt Was Made on His Life.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Lexington, Ky., Feb. 9.—Four persons were killed and fifteen injured here today when a mob intent upon lynching Wm. Lockett, negro, who confessed to the murder of ten-year-old Geneva Hardman, charged the Court House during Lockett's trial and was fired upon by the police and state troops. Two women were among those wounded by the troops. While the mob, ring leaders of which carried a rope, was attempting to get into the Court House to get Lockett, the jury found him guilty of first degree murder and a minute or two later the negro was sentenced to die in the electric chair March 11. After the attack the prisoner was spirited away to a place of safety.

SASKATCHEWAN MAN INVENTS RADIOGRAM

CONTRIVANCE CATCHES ALL MESSAGES FROM WIRELESS STATIONS IN EUROPE

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Regina, Sask., Feb. 9.—According to reports from Candiac, Sask., A. P. Oberson, an electrician, has perfected a sensitive radologram receiver with which he is able to intercept the faintest messages and also get all flashes from the larger wireless stations in Europe and America. Mr. Oberson has been in communication with the Eiffel Tower station, Paris, the station at Lyons, France, San Diego and Sanu Francisco, California, and daily gets standard time as it is flashed to the American navy at sea.

NURSE ATTENDANTS WANTED

To Save Women of the West From Effects of Loneliness

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Vancouver, B. C., Feb. 9. — "As I look over this vast country and see the loneliness of the women in rural districts, I wonder who is wanted most—the gradnate nurse or the nurse attendant who will help with family duties, and it seems as if it is the latter."

In these words Mrs. Hannington, superintendent of the Victorian Order of Nurses in Canada, at a meeting of the Vancouver branch, enlisted the sympathy of her audience in the objects of the Order. Mrs. Hannington reminded her hearers that, being a graduate nurse herself, she was free to speak on the subject.

METHODIST CHURCH HAS INCREASED OBJECTIVE

DECIDES TO RAISE FIVE MILLION INSTEAD OF AMOUNT ASKED FOR

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Toronto, Feb. 9.—The Methodist Forward Movement leaders here have decided that the Church will make five million dollars the objective of its canvass in Canada in place of four millions. The Toronto objective of eight hundred thousand was practically reached yesterday. It is expected that the total will ultimately reach one million.

JAPANESE RETIRING FROM NORTHERN KOREA

CHINESE AND NATIVES JOIN TOGETHER TO DRIVE OUT THE STANGERS

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 9.—Northern Korea has been evacuated by the Japanese, it is claimed in a wireless despatch from Moscow today quoting an Omsk message. The population rose to aid the Korean forces from the Chinese territory, it is declared.

The Omsk message, as given in a Bolsheviki wireless, says that on February 6, bands of Koreans raised in the Chinese territory crossed the frontier and attacked the Japanese. Masses of population are joining the insurgents, it is added. The Japanese retiring and evacuating Northern Korea.

THRFE FRENCH SCHOLARSHIPS

Will be Established by the Legislatpure of Saskatchewan.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Regina, Feb. 7.—Under the title of an Act for the creation of scholarships for Canadian students at Paris, a bill is being introduced in the Legislature authorizing the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council to grant annually three scholarships of $1200 each to such students or teachers, usually resident in Saskatchewan, as he may designate for the purpose of assisting them to follow post-graduate courses of study in the city of Paris, France. These scholarships are to be granted on such terms and conditions as may be prescribed by the Lieutenant-Governor-in-Council.

The bill is the outcome of a request by the general commissioner for Canada in France that this would be the best war memorial to raise in honor of Canadian soldiers who fell in France and Flanders.

SCHOONER LOST AT SEA.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

New York, Feb. 9. — The British steamer [illegible] Prince, twenty-six days out from Liverpool, arrived at this port today with six members of the crew of the new three-masted schooner Monchy, rescued January 28 from their sinking craft in mid-ocean, where she was abandoned.

EDMOND J. STEPHENSON FILES NOMINATION PAPERS AND STAYS IN RACE

J. Harry Flynn, provisional president of the United Veterans' League, and representatives of other soldier organizations, addressed a large meeting of returned men in Massey Hall yesterday afternoon, called to discuss the gratuity issue. A. W. Roebuck acted as chairman. The band of the Grand Army of Canada attended.

President Flynn and the other speakers reviewed the reasons for the gratuity demand and reiterated the country's ability to pay the amounts asked in the Calgary resolution. The outstanding majority of returned men, he said, wanted the gratuity as out-lined by the resolution. When the deputation of representative returned men goes to Ottawa to press the gratuity issue on Parliament all the organizations will be represented, he said, because individual branches fo the G.W.V.A. will have their representatives in the deputation.

Question of Demand.

"If the Government does not listen to the peaceful prayer of the petition (which will be presented to the House) it will then be a question of demand," he said, and his following remark that a deputation of 50,000 returned men might be started to Ottawa brought thunderous applause from the meeting.

Later Captain Tucker, editor of The Grand Army of Canada Journal, spoke. He said that it would pay Canada in the end to grant the men the gratuity as it would produce a better morale in the country and a better feeling between ex-soldiers and civilians and would do away with most of their service-created troubles.

WANT SIR THOMAS WHITE FOR NEXT PREMIER

ABOUT ONLY MAN IN SIGHT TO SUIT ALL ELEMENTS IN CABINET

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—The historic cry of "Night or Blucher" has been succeeded in Government circles at Ottawa, according to some authorities, by the cry of "Sir Thomas White or a general election." In short, the rumor is current that some of the present Cabinet are now anxious to make Sir Thomas White the next Prime Minister of Canada. It is quite certain that Sir Robert Borden's resignation will be delivered to the Governor-General at an early day and that the Parliamentary caucus of Unionist members will have the naming of his successor.

Sir Robert's resignation was held over at the urgent request of his Cabinet colleagues until the question of his successor and the future of the Unionist coalition could be dealt with by a Parliamentary caucus. The Cabinet at that time was divided, it is said, between the contending claims of Hon. Arthur Meighen and Hon. N. W. Rowell. At any rate, they were unable to agree. Hence the decision to pass on the difficult problem to a Parliamentary caucus.

That caucus, however, will soon have to be held. Sir Robert did not agree to hold over his resignation indefinitely, but the same is to become effective as soon after the opening of the session as a caucus can be held for the purpose of agreeing upon his successor.

TO EXPORT LIQUOR.

POLICE ROUND UP FIVE YOUTHS, ALL CHARGED WITH BURGLARY

Robberies Have Been Common in City for Past Two Months and the Gang Now Believed to be in the Toils, Another Alleged Breach of Temperance Act.

The police have been investigating a series of robberies which have been going on for the past two months and the climax was reached this morning when five youths, barely over the age of sixteen, were remanded until tomorrow on ten different charges of house-breaking and robbery. The robberies started about the third of December, when the shop of Frank White on Water street was entered and a quantity of articles, including flash-lights, etc, valued at about $50 was taken out. Two days later Mr White's store was again entered and goods valued at about $8 taken.

The next case reported was on the 17th of December, when the Peterborough Hardware Company had their store robbed, losing a quantity of knives, rifles and gloves. On this occasion, Earl Robinson, an employee of the Peterborough Hardware Company also lost two pairs of skates. On December 31, they entered the store of A. P. Brown, Simcoe street, and took two rifles and a quantity of cartridges valued at about $30.

In the new year the number of burglaries increased and on many occasions during January and February the premises of the Peterboro Incinerator was entered and articles of small value taken.

The Peterborough Canoe Company were also sufferers and during the month of January their premises were broken into several times and two large toboggans valued at about $50 were taken. On the ninth of January yet another burglary took place and this time the Lundy Candy factory on Rink street lost about $10 worth of confectionery. The last case was on February 3rd, the store of H. Millard Hunter street, was entered and a number of flashlights, batteries, knives and other articles taken.

Detective Cookman and Constable Boyd have been working on the case for some time past but took no action until the entire gang could be cornered.

Alleged Breach of O. T. A.

A charge was also laid against E. Mevett of keeping liquor for sale. Two witnesses were heard in this case and Meyett was remanded until tomorrow morning. Two drunks, who both pleaded guilty were fined the usual $10 and costs.

ST. ANDREWS LEAD ALL PRESBYTERIAN CONGREGATIONS IN THE DOMINION

First Church of That Denomination to Report Officially That it Had Exceeded Objective in Forward Movement Collection.

St. Andrew's Church of this city will have the distinguished honor of being the first Presbyterian church in Canada to officially report to headquarters that it has exceeded its objective in raising the allotment of the fund to be secured in the Forward Movement. St. Andrews was asked to contribute $7,500. At the services yesterday pledge cards were put on the collection plates by members and adherents for a total of $8,347. The subscriptions varied all the way from $5,000 to 25 cents.

The canvass for funds begins today. Rev. James Rollins, pastor of St. Andrews, suggested to members of the session that the work of raising the congregation quota could be facilitated by the use of pledge cards and the result of this method as shown yesterday was most gratifying. It will now be necessary to make a personal canvass only of the members and adherents of the church who were not out at either service yesterday and this work will now be undertaken.

Rev. Dr. Laird, "financial minister" of the Presbyterian Church, who preached in the city yesterday, in the evening in St. Paul's, was agreeably surprised at the showing made by St. Andrew's congregation, and an official report of the result, was telephoned to the Toronto headquarters last night.

The Toronto Globe today says:

"St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church gave the Forward Movement a great sendoff when, at the services Sunday, they oversubscribed their allocation by $847. The objective of the church was $7,500, and the pledges received Sunday totalled $8,347. Rev. James Rollins, B.A., is the minister."

NOTED JURIST VICTIM OF DOUBLE PNUEMONIA

SIR GLENHOLME FALCONBRIDGE PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY

Toronto, Feb. 9.— Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, chief justice off the King's bench, Ontario, succumbed yesterday morning of double pneumonia, following less than a week's illness. The late chief justice was taken ill while in court at the city hall on Monday, Feb. 1, and although the indisposition was at first slight double pneumonia developed, his condition becoming serious on Thursday. On Friday he rallied for a few hours but suffered a relapse on Saturday from which he never recovered. Dr C. A. Temple, the family physician was hopeful of his recovery until shortly before the end came. He stated that the pneumonia crisis was past, and it was a question of whether or not the patient's heart was strong enough to carry him through the preiod of convalescence, which did not prove to be the case.

His friends and associates have paid many glowing tributes to his worth as a chief justice, and his sterling qualities as a friend and sportsman.

IS LABOR FIT TO GOVERN?

MR. J. H. THOMAS, M.P., speaking at Ashton-under-Lyne, in England, returned to the question, "Is Labor fit to govern?" He described it as abusive and as an "implied libel," and proceeded to give his views of Labor's scheme for governing—"an equal opportunity to all sections of the community."

No greater evidence of the growing power of Labor was to be found than the controversy now raging round this question, said Mr. Thomas, and those responsible for it knew too well that in spite of all the abuse and misrepresentation, the evidence of the bye-elections clearly demonstrated that the answer of the great mass of the electors had already been given in the affirmative to many of those whose ancestors raised the query in another form many years ago by doubting whether Labor was fit to vote.

"I accept the challenge which, though cloaked in difficult language, is clearly implied both in the Lord Chancellor's and in Mr. Winston Churchill's articles," he continued, "and if they assume that the purpose of the Labor Party is to come into power with the sole object of exercising power and influence in the interest of any one class, let me hasten to assure them that it is certainly not the conception of the Labor movement. It is perfectly true that your attention will be mainly directed to improving the lot of the class of the community who have been so scandalously neglected by both the other political parties. It is perfectly true that our main consideration will be the social conditions of the working people. But our object will not be to govern in the interests of a class, but rather to give an equal opportunity to all sections of the community.

"After all, the real answer to Mr. Churchill's query 'Is Labor fit to govern?' is that he and his class are afraid that the neglect of those who have governed in the past to give the working classes a fair opportunity of education and knowledge of world affairs may now react to the disadvantage of those in authority."

AMERICA AND EUROPE.

THE LONDON correspondent of a well-known New York daily newspaper turned over the pages of his file. "You see," he said, "how hard it is to make the front page now. They are more concerned back there with the high cost of living than the troubles of Europe. Your London newspapers, in fact, appear to carry more stories from America than we do from London." "Europe is much more interested in America than America in Europe just now," was ventured. "You're right," he assented.

It is indeed to be reckoned among the permanent results of the late war that the Old World has become vitally interested in the New, that Europe, oppressed with her loads of misery and debt, has turned her eyes to the happy and prosperous United States. Statesmen of countries that have again and again survived the caprices and ontrages of elusive fortune and leaders and leaders and guardians of impoverished republics timidly crossing the threshold of national existence have wisely estimated both the power of influence and the power to assist which the United States must wield in Europe as a natural and enduring outcome of her participation in the war. From the day when Washington courted recognition for his infant republic till today, when the infant republics of Europe court recognition and assistance at the White House, there has transpired a momentous and profound transformation. Not only has the face of the United States been changed, not only do great cites and rich grain fields dignify where marshes and prairie once held unchallenged sway, but the development and wealth, the pristine energy and youthful initiative of a remarkable people have brought the United States a prestige and a power which can no longer be confined in an isolation bounded by the waters of the Atlantic on one side and the Pacific on the other. And distrustful though Americans may be of any policy which thrusts upon them the responsibilities inseparable from the existence of a world power, these responsibilities, it is obvious, will have to borne at some time as an integral and vital part of the rise and greatness of the United States. The majority of thinking Americans recognise these facts. It is a question of time and occasion on which they differ.

A DIFFERENCE OF OPINION.

THE HAMILTON HERALD says that a difference of opinion as to policy has developed between the Ontario Referendum Committee and the Ontario branch of the Dominion Alliance, both of them prohibition organizations. The Referendum Committee is in favor of taking prompt advantage of the Federal legislation which provides for the restriction of inter-provincial traffic in liquor, forbidding the importation of liquor into one province from another or from any point outside the Dominion, if a majority of the people of the Province, in a referendum vote, declare in favor of such restriction. The Alliance prohibitionists don't want any referendum on the question; they plead the expense, the worry and the work of another referendum campaign; besides, they claim to have legal advice to the effect that the legality of the applicability of the Federal legislation to Ontario is questionable, and they point out that the legislation would not prevent the delivery of liquor direct from Ontario distilleries and breweries to private residences.

The Alliance prohibitionists have an alternative policy. They would rely wholly upon the Ontario Legislature for prohibitive legislation more drastic than the O. T. A., and not bother about the Federal legislation. What they propose is a provincial law requirng the registration of the amount of liquor which citizens have in their possession at any time, and the taxation of all liquor over a prescribed amount; forbidding the possession by anybody of liquor which has not been obtained in the legally authorized manner, and forbidding the supplying of liquor as a beverage in a private house upon any occasion when there are present more than three persons other than members of the family and domestics (a law which would have proscribed the marriage feast in Cana of Galilee).

The real difference between the two wings of the Prohibition forces appears to be this: that the Referendum Committee trusts the people and is willing to leave them the question whether or no there shall be further and more drastic prohibitory regulation; and that the Alliance people are fearful that the people may have concluded that prohibitory legislation has gone far enough and that further encroachments upon personal liberty would not be favored even by many who supported the O. T. A. in the recent referendum. The Alliance prohibitionists don't want to take any chances. They propose to induce the Legislature (most of the members of which are prohibitionists) to impose its will upon the people without regard to public opinion.

The attitude of the Alliance serves to show how rapidly opinion develops once a popular movement gets fairly started. When Mr. Rowell made his prohibition proposals and committed the Liberal party to them in the general election of 1914, the prohibition slogan in that campaign was "Banish the bar." The abolition of the bar was Mr. Rowell's goal. He did not even propose to abolish the retail sale of liquor in stores. Such a thing as regulation of the consumption of liquor in private residences was not only not thought of, but any intention of attempting such a thing was indignantly repudiated by prohibitionists. They had no desire or intention, they declared, to pry into the habits of citizens in their own homes.

But the moderate prohibition program of 1914 looks ridiculously weak and inadequate to the Alliance prohibitionists of 1920? Give them what they demand now and will they be satisfied? Not likely. In a little while they will be demanding jail or a heavy fine, or both, for anyone convicted of using alcoholic liquor for any purpose whatsoever.

EUROPE IN NO DANGER OF BANKRUPTCY

Guy Morrison Walker, financier and economist, contributes to the Wall Street Journal the stirring discussion of the world's financial position and outlook which follows. Mr. Walker's treatment of the subject is chiefly historical and statistical, but the author, is far from being a scholastic is a very practical man of affairs.

The poorest way to try to get a man to make you a loan is to attempt to convince him that unless he does you will go broke, for you are apt to convince him that you will go broke even if he does make you the loan, and that it is therefore useless to attempt to save you.

The attempt to induce our government, or our people, to advance moneys for the reconstruction of Europe by attempting to prove that Europe is bankrupt, or will certainly become bankrupt, unless we loan them the moneys required, can hardly succeed.

If Europe is bankrupt, why throw good money after bad? And if she is likely to become bankrupt, as so many eminent financiers and so-called "economists" are telling us, why hazzard our capital (which has so many safe opportunities for investment) in a futile attempt to save nations on the verge of financial ruin?

But is Europe bankrupt?

In 1815 at the close of the Napoleonic Wars, Great Britain had a population of about 16,000,000 people and a national wealth of about $12,500,000,000. Her national wealth has increased in a remarkable manner for a country in which it would be supposed the limit of extensive development had been reached long ago. In 45 years, from 1815 to 1860, the wealth of reat BGriatin increased from 312,500,000,000 to $35,000,000,000. By 1895 it was over $60,000,000,000. In 1910, it was over $80,000,000,000, and at the beginning of the war it must have been near $90,000,000,000. At present, after five years of exhausting war, England finds as a result that, in spite of her enormous expenditures, the war necessities have called forth such intensive development, such an increase of production, and such a rise in the wages of labor, that the wealth of the country has increased in a sum equal to or greater than the debt created by the war. The wealth of Great Britain is today certainly not less than $120,000,000,000. And she finds her foreign commerce and her foreign trade assuming proportions that were absolutely undreamed of before the war began.

In the one hundred years from 1815 to 1914, the income of the people of Great Britain increased from $2,000,000,000 in 1815 to $5,000,000,000 in 1860; $8,000,000,000 in 1895; $12,000,000,000 in 1910; $15,000,000,000 in 1914; and at the present time has reached the unprecedented figure of $20,000,000,000. And during this time the British population has grown from 16,000,000 to 40,000,000.

In other words, while British population has only increased two and one-half times, so that both per capita wealth and per capita income is 400 per cent greater today than it was a hundred years ago.

The same thing is true of the other Continental countries, as will be seen

Recovery of France, After Napoleon

In 1815, at the close of the Napoleonic Wars, the French population was 28,000,000. French wealth was $13,000,000,000, and French income $2,000,000,000. By 1866, after the wars with Austria, French wealth had grown to $30,000,000,000 and French income to $4,500,000,000. By 1895 French wealth, in spite of the loss of Alsace-Lorraine, had reached $50,000,000,000 and French income $5,500,000,000. In 1910, French wealth was $65,000,000,000 and French income $9,000,000,000. While in this year of 1920 with the restoration of Alsace-Lorraine and the addition of the Saar Valley, the wealth of France, in spite of the losses of the war, cannot be less than $80,000,000,000, nor French income less than $12,000,000,000.

The states that made the German Empire, though separate in 1840, had a total wealth of approximately $8,500,000,000. By 1870 when the German Empire was established the wealth of Imperial Germany amounted to $20,000,000,000 and the income of the people to approximately $4,000,000,000. By 1900 the wealth of the German Empire had reached $50,000,000,000 and the Imperial income tax returns for 1895 indicated an annual income from the German people in excess of $7,000,000,000. In 1908, official German figures showed the wealth of the Empire to be $88,000,000,000, and the annual income $15,000,000,000. In the eve of the war in 1914, the Imperial Chancellor laid before the Emperor, a statement showing the wealth of the German Empire to be $100,000,000,000 and the income of the people $20,000,000,000.

From 1866, at the end of the war with Austria, when the population of the German Empire was only 33,000,000 it rose to 68,000,000 in 1914. In other words, while the population of Germany barely doubled in fifty years the wealth of the country increased five-fold, and the income of the people also increased five-fold.

Modern Italy dates from 1869. In 1870 the Kingdom of Italy had a wealth of $8,000,000,000. It increased to $15,000,000,000 by 1895, and to approximately $25,000,000,000 in 1910.

Central Europe 25 Years Hence

Twenty-five years from now the annual income of the German people will be greater than their present war debt; the annual income of the inhabitants of Great Britain will be more than her existing national debt and the same thing will be true of France and of Italy, while the other countries whose population has in the past lived on an extremely low wage scale will find their wealth and income increased so rapidly that it will not take over ten or fifteen years for their national income to exceed their total war debt.

Let us have an end of this talk of world bankrptcy.

Instead of declaring that the world is bankrupt or is in danger of becoming bankrupt, our financiers and statesmen should study the records of national growth and realize that not only is the world not bankrupt, but that we are on the eve of making grater profits and greater fortunes by turning to the rest of the world and helping to raise it to that stage of intensive development that we have secured for our own country.

Pessimistic talk in the face of the historical record is foolish. The trouble with our bankers is that they long ago abrogated all independent judgment of values in favor of Stock Exchange quotations, and having for so long refused to exercise it, they have lost their sense of credit.

Europe is not only not bankrupt but in no danger of becoming bankrupt. The proposition of financing Europe is a reorganization proposition, a salvage proposition that will be attended with the enormous profits that always reward salvage and reorganization undertakings.

While the debts left by this war seem to be staggering because the new figures are extraordinary, judging by any previous experience, still it takes but the slightest historical retrospect to prove that they are no heavier in proportion to wealth than have been carried by many nations in the past. This retrospect will also force you to realize that we are on the eve of such intensive development throughout the world as will increase wealth and values to figures absolutely undreamed of before; values which will compare to present values as present debts compare to passed debts. When this intensive development is well under way the increased wealth and income will be so enormous that the debts that now seem so great will in fact become negligible. The world is not bankrupt nor in any danger of becoming bankrupt, and the financing of the future must not be undertaken on that basis.

What is offered is not only the greatest but the safest and most profitable investment in history!

Maj. Gen. Wolfe, the British hero who died in the famous battle of Quebec in September, 1759, with shouts of victory in his ears, was possesed of a presentiment of his death a day before the battle, and recited to his men from Gray's "Elegy in a Country Churchyard," the stanza which concludes:

"The paths of glory lead but to the grave."

He then turned to his officers and said: "I would rather be the author of that poem than the possessor of the glory of beating the French tomorrow."

Born in Westerham, Eng., Jan. 2 1727, James Wolfe, first distinguished himself in the British army when 20 years old. He was placed at the head of the expedition against Quebec, although he was then only 33 years old. As he floated up the St Lawrence with the tide the evening of Sept. 12, 1759, with his army wine in hand, he sang at evening mess the little campaign song:

"Why, soldiers, why
Should we be melancholy, boys?
Why, soldiers, why,
Whose business is to die."

The famous battle in which Quebec fell to the British was fought 160 years ago last September, and Gen Wolfe was one of the slain as was the equally gallant Motcalm, the French commander. Every year, Wolfe's natal day is celebrated at the George and Dragon Hotel in Westerham, the inn where the famous general stayed on the occasion of his last visit to his birthplace the year before he fell mortally wounded on the Plains of Abraham.

Miss Kelly Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Restored Her Health.

Newark, N. J.—"For about three years I suffered from nervous breakdown and got so weak I could hardly stand, and had headaches every day. I tried everything I could think of and was under a physician's care for two years. A girl friend had used Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and she told me about it. From the first day I took it I began to feel better and now I am well and able to do most any kind of work. I have been recommending the Compound ever since and give you my permission to publish this letter."—FLO KELLY, 476 So. 14th St., Newark, N. J.

The reason this famous root and herb remedy, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, was so successful in Miss Kelly's case was because it went to the root of her trouble, restored her to a normal healthy condition and as a result her nervousness disappeared.

In this column, which appears every Monday, Wednesday and Saturday, will appear news and short articles of special interest to merchants, their salespeople and business men and women in general.

MEN WITH 3 WIVES ARE NOT POPULAR WITH THOMAS

Beware the wives of your friend who has two.

It cost Alonzo Thomas, manager of the Santa Fe Watch Co. in Topeka, Kan., $100 to be able to give this advice.

Thomas has an engineer friend living in a small Kansas town, who has been divorced twice and is married again. Not long ago a woman came to the store and wanted to buy a diamond. She told the clerk her name and stated that Mr. Thomas knew her.

It happened that Mr. Thomas was very busy when the clerk asked him if it would be all right to sell Mrs. Blank a diamond on credit. She was the wife of his friend and he put his O.K. on the account. The clerk got the $10 first payment and the woman got the ring.

When the second payment came due and a letter was sent to Mrs. Blank, an answer was received stating that she had not bought a diamond. Thomas took it up with his friend. The friend brought his wife to the store, but sixty days had passed and the clerk could not remember if it was the same woman. The matter was taken up with the divorced wives who were very indignant.

Mr. Thomas has the experience—some one has the diamond. It doesn't pay, he says, to be too busy to investigate installment customers. If he had spent a minute in meeting the woman, he would still have his $100, because he knew her personally.

"Carelessness," says Thomas, "is the cause of virtually every loss. The credit man can watch like a hawk for 364 days in the year and on the 365th day relax and suffer a loss which will spoil his whole year's record. No credit sale is so small that it does not deserve the credit man's full attention. A moment's time may save the firm a considerable loss. If I had not been careless and neglected to go and see my engineer friend's wife, I would now be ahead $100. Carelessness is expensive and if persisted in is fatal in the installment game. Most people are honest, but you can't take it for granted. Very often you have to help them stay honest."

STORE SECURES PRACTICAL ASSISTANCE FOR BLIND

To what extent may a retail store assist local charities and not practice hardships on the trade? Some very unexpected things happen sometimes. Certain society women of New Haven learned that the institutions for the blind in and near the city, stood in dire need of financial encouragement. But these institutions did not ask for money so much as they asked for outlets for their work. They could be independent if given half a chance.

The women gathered together some of the remarkable things made by blind workers and then wondered where they could be placed on view and on sale. Henry M. Shartenberg proprietor of a large local department store, was approached and readily granted permission for a special booth to be put in his building on the first floor. He even assisted in arranging the goods and in decorating the booth. It was deemed unethical to advertise what was taking place in the full-page space used by Shartenberg's, and the women of the town attended to this detail in their own way.

The result was the gathering of immense crowds at the store to see the exhibit. It brought people there who had never visited the building before and proved the finest advertisement Shartenberg's could possibly devise. Incidentally, the homes for the blind sold out their entire stock and received enough orders for mattress-repairing, piano tuning chair work, etc., to keep them busy for a year.

LETTER FROM "MISSING MAN" ATTRACTS OTHERS

One morning, about the first of the month, the good customers of a Fresno, Calif., clothier were tipped off to a special sale put on by the dealer. And the tip appeared to come, not direct from the clothier himself, but from one man in the town who could not come. And the sale was a success.

In the envelopes received by the patrons of the store was a six-page folder. On the cover was the printing:

THE ONE MAN WHO CANNOT ATTEND
WALTER HAMILTON'S
SUMMER SALE

As the man opened up the folder he saw on the first inside page a picture of a man in convict's uniform peering through the bars of a cell. Then opposite this portrait and on the remaining two inside pages was a letter with the following to say:

Dear Wallie—Say, I'm sorry I can't come over to your annual summer sale. I hoped to come, but the warden insists that I stay here as his guest. It's hard to break away from a man who is as hospitable as he is—you know Bill Gerston, I reckon and understand how hard it would be for me to turn down his entertainment.

And I sure wanted to get a pair of those silk shirts you have on the counter at $6.75. I know that they are worth $8. And as my straw hat is gone. I would like to get one of those you're closing out.

Underwear, too. I need a little of that. Wish I could come over to invest in a suit or two to finish the season. How about those suits you marked down from $40 to $32.50—do you suppose you've got anything in nice stripes that would fit me? I'd like to get another suit and the way you got them marked it's better'n the place I usually get them.

Well, Wallie, when you start that annual summer sale next Monday morning this will tell you why I'm not there—and I suppose the early comers will get the cream of the picking. But you know how it is.

Confidentially yours,
AFTER-DARK BILL, Cell 456

EVEN THE RAIN ANSWERED "MIKEHASIT'S" ADS

"Mikehasit" is the name which his customers and himself have hung on to Michael Mullen, a clothier, of Great Falls, Mont. But if you were to ask the entire adult population of Great Falls if they ever heard of Mr Michael Mullen—and did not give them time to ponder—about a score would tell you they did. Of course if you gave them a few minutes to think it over the number out of the 10,000 population might be double that.

In 1910 Mullen, hereinafter known as Mikehasit, started a small store on a side street in a mere crack in the wall. What he lacked in capital he made up in willingness to serve and good nature. In the course of time when an article of men's wear was wawnted folks would suggest going to Mullen's, saying: "Go over here. Mike has it." And this merchant so handled his small stock that he usually did have it. He heard the remark so often that he decided to grab it as a slogan, using it over the counter and at the bottom of his advertisements.

From then on he has told his advertising story in rhyme—always over the signature of Mikehasit.

Of all the interesting experiences that have had a share in making Mikehasit well known over the state was the prayer for rain. For the last three years Montana crops have suffered from the lack of rain. Therefore one day Mikehasit ran a prayer for rain. And the rain came—in generous quantity. People mentioned that thankfully, for the rain had come within twenty-four hours. The news spread to Wolf Point, Mont. An editor up there clipped the poem after reading the comment, and inserted it in his paper. The result was a heavy hailstorm, followed by a rain that was almost a deluge that brought letters to the paper. A pair of farmerettes near Havre Mont., wrote a special letter of thanks direct to Mikehasit.

Dangerous Banks.

As everybody knows, hand grenades during the war proved among the most effective instruments for killing. When peace came millions of grenades were left on the War Department's hands, useless. Somebody suggests that the little bombs be converted into children's savings banks.

Quantities of them were thus transformed by the simple expedient of cutting a slit in each one, and were distributed over the country. A private concern thought the idea so good that it bought 30,000 grenades from a manufacturer and took steps to market them as toy banks.

But in the meantime the American authorities had made up their minds that it was dangerous to distribute bombs, which, to render them destructively efficient, needed only to have the coin slots plugged and loads of explosive put inside. Accordingly, they stopped the treasury's distribution of them and confiscated the 30,000 prepared by the concern above mentioned. Even those which were to have been sold in Canada could not be shipped across the line.

This may have been wise; but, on the other hand, it is argued that the empty grenades are no more available for use as bombs than any tin cans would be; so where the worthwhileness of scrapping material for millions of attractive and excellent toy banks?—the present plan being to smash them up and sell them for old iron.

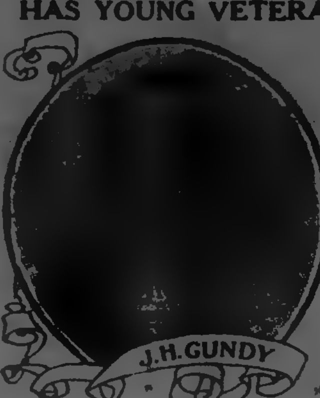
NATIONAL CAMPAIGN HAS YOUNG VETERAN



This boyish-faced man is a leading member of one of the biggest bond houses in the Dominion. In addition, he is the strongest speaker on devotional themes that the Methodist laymen of Ontario boast.

It is not the photographer who has made Mr. Gundy look youthful. In real life he looks younger still.

Although for fourteen strenuous years he has been an active broker in the firm which he founded, he looks thirty years old—and is nine years older. During all that time Mr. Gundy has been a worker in committee and on platform in every big religious movement—from the inauguration of the Laymen's Missionary Movement down to the present Methodist National Campaign.

Emerging from the Victory Loan Campaign, he plunged at once into the work of vice-chairman of the special subscriptions committee in this Methodist section of the Inter-Church Forward Movement.

His career belies three "old fogey" ideas—that ministers' sons don't make good, that laymen cannot exhort or inspire, and that young chaps are not to be given big responsibility.

No Cross Benches.

That picturesque feature of the temporary House of Commons—the cross benchers—will be missed when Parliament assembles in the new buildings. The layout of the chamber makes no provision for seats in the gangway.

The "cross benchers" party which numbers at least a dozen and with prospects of being augmented by a number of waverers, will either sit at the extreme end of the right side or, more probably go to a corner of the Opposition benches. The chamber is now being fixed up and temporary desks are being made for the members.

The latest alignment of the parties, according to the Parliamentary guide, is as follows:

Conservative Unionists	15
Straight Conservatives	81
Liberal Unionists	31
Liberal	82
Cross-benchers	12
Pure Unionists	8
Labor	1

Power of the Tides.

We are accustomed to look upon the tides as representing enormous unutilized power. If we could only put them to work, they would run all the machinery in the world.

But is this true?

Undoubtedly — if we could put them to work on a scale sufficiently great. But that this will ever be practicable, economically, is declared doubtful.

Engineers who have made a study of the subject say that one acre of water rising and falling ten feet would yield only four horsepower. Taking into view cost of plant, that could never pay.

They say that tidal power would be worth developing only in a few localities — perhaps in the Bay of Fundy, where tides rise and fall seventy feet; in Cook's inlet, fifty feet; at Eastport, Me., eighteen feet. But these places are too far away from industrial centres.

Readers in Europe.

In normal times Norway, Sweden, Denmark, Holland, France, Belgium, Switzerland, Italy, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Spain and Portugal all publish more books in proportion to population than the United States publishes, and their books have a wider distribution.

More than half the people in the United States live in the country.

SITTING A HORSE.

Rough-riding Westerner Talks About Royalty.

Pictures of the country's recent guest, the Prince of Wales, engaged in assistant cow punching in the West and riding a Western saddle in the Western fashion, have been generally printed in the newspapers. Perhaps even in this age of automobiles there are horsemen enough still left to share the interest in the exhibition expressed by a Canadian writing in the Daily Mail of London.

"Yesterday," he writes, "I was comparing a photograph of the Prince of Wales taken in Hyde Park and another of him taken during his tour in Canada. In the first he sits an Irish hunter on an English hunting saddle. He has the seat of a born cavalier. In the second he sits a Canadian bronco on a California stock saddle (a stock saddle has a high cantle, a horn, and is ridden with a long stirrup). His heels are up and he is 'all of a hump.'

"Horsemen in Canada smiled indulgently at the prince's father when, as the Duke of Cornwall and York, he made similar tour to the one his son recently made and first put leg across Canadian horseflesh. Englishmen could not sit a horse, they proclaimed. They were all right for hacking about, but when it came to riding—real riding—they were not in it.

"I recall well the day the riding master strode into the Royal Northwest Mounted Police stables at Regina and announced that he was looking for a high-stepper to carry the heir to the throne. No 'mean' tricks, some sense and plenty of style was was he called for.

"I was in the rough-riding squad at the time, and we paraded a few of the 'perfect ladies' that we had in the stables. He chose a bay mare who had brains enough to do almost anything except talk, and told me to school her and get her into shape for royalty.

"Some weeks later the duke—today's King—rode through the lines on that same little bronco and inspected the Northwest Mounted Police. He inspected us casually, I am afraid, for she was giving him a lot to do. He did not understand the stock saddle and the bitting.

"We, on the other hand, inspected his Royal Highness critically. We liked his horse but we did not approve of his seat. Englishmen certainly could not sit a horse.

"Many years later we came to the war. And we saw Englishmen, many of them sitting on horses. At first we were inclined to sneer. There was nothing about the management nor the handling of horses they could teach us.

"But we worked side by side with crack British cavalry regiments, and they kept their horses in as good fettle as we did, and seemed to make longer marches with as little fatigue. we began to wonder if, after all, there might not be something in the English seat and the English saddle.

"Finally our lot got cut up a bit and for reinforcements we got Household Cavalry horses with universal saddles. And our boys looked 'all of a hump' for a week or two; that sitting a 'mean' horse in a universal saddle takes horsemanship. Sitting the same horse in a stock saddle is like sitting in an easy chair.

"So now we agree that Englishmen are something more than park riders, and we do not smile indulgently when we see the young prince 'all of a hump' on a bronco."

A School Costume.

A new school costume for three large schools for girls in Tokio is reported in a Japan society bulletin. The freshmen girls will have jackets fashioned of pink material and skirts of violet. The second-year girls will wear blue jackets and third-year maidens, in virtue of their greater maturity and advancing wisdom, will be privileged to have their coats cut from brown cloth. The Tokio schools making the change are the Girls' Commercial School, the Yamawaki Girls' High School, and Atomi Girls' High School.

Useless to Try.

These were the words in a lecture, which aroused untimely mirth at my expense: "The paths up this mountain are too steep for even a mule to climb; therefore I did not attempt the ascent myself."—Exchange.

Breton Peasants Getting Rich.

All his life the Breton peasant, so familiar to Canadians because of the place he has occupied on the canvases of painters, has been satisfied to struggle along to make a bare living from his few acres, perhaps to save a hundred francs or so to provide the "dot" when his daughter is married. Year after year he has given his energies and his strength to his small, leased farm.

But now, according to an exchange, with the return of peace and the high prices which are charged for foodstuffs throughout France the peasant farmer of Brittany has come into fortune, at least for him. In Brittany there are no middlemen, no brokers to run up prices and keep the greater part; so when the Paris hotel keeper or the tourist purchases the products of the Breton peasant's toil he does it direct. Milk selling at six cents a quart represents a small fortune in Brittany, as fortunes run there; as do eggs at 10 cents a piece and butter at from $1 to $1.50 a pound. Potatoes at five cents a pound also prompt the Breton to raise large crops of tubers, and even the sardine industry shows a neat profit when these small fish sell at one cent each.

Sometimes the peasant will sell, sometimes he won't. Especially is this true in meats, and the owner of cattle must be solicited several times before he will put his veal or mutton on the market at 60 cents a pound or more. Even at this rate the prices are lower than those in Paris.

An idea of the fortunes being made by the peasant in Brittany is shown in the report of one who pays $240 a year rental for the lease of a small farm. He proudly admits that the last year has netted him a profit of more than $10,000, a sum far beyond the wildest aspirations of the Breton farmer of the pre-war days.

SCORES WOMEN FOR WEARING PLUMAGE

MR. HOYES LLOYD EXPOSES SMUGGLING OPERATIONS IN NOVA SCOTIA

Toronto, Feb. 9. — Mr. Hoyes Lloyd, ornithologist of the Parks Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture, came up from Ottawa on Saturday purposely to give an address on the making of Canadian bird sanctuaries, under the auspices of the Canadian Society for the Protection of Birds. The meeting took place in the Central Y.M.C.A. and every moment of the hour was enjoyed by the representative audience, for Mr. Lloyd is a very winning speaker, besides being a convincing advocate for the birds.

He explained the enactment of the Migratory Birds' Convention Act, following the treaty with the United States in 1916, and the pressing need of such a treaty and protection for birds. He lamented the violation of the treaty and act in several quarters. He said the elder duck, a vanishing species, now protected throughout the year, had been wantonly killed in Nova Scotia last year.

Nova Scotia Smuggling.

He showed a lantern slide of a mass of herring gull plumage seized by a Crowe officer at Digby, N.S., in a milliner shop. This bird enjoys full protection. A poacher shot a large number of gulls on the international boundary line and smuggled them to Digby, whence they were being smuggled into the Union to trim women's hats. He gently scored the sex for its continued addiction to birds' plumage in millinery in spite of all treaties and laws. He further deplored that women persisted in wearing the lovely feathers of the snowy egret, a species on the protection of which the Audubon Societies are expending thousands of dollars.

He showed maps with the locations of the gulf sanctuaries, of the new National Park in Point Pelee, where the beautiful wood duck is now nesting in safety, of the chains of proposed bird sanctuaries in Alberta and Saskatchewan and Manitoba, where the natural breeding places of the water fowl of North America, the marshes and small lakes, are drying up as settlement and cultivation of the land proceeds.

An exceptionally interesting series of lantern slides illustrated Mr. Lloyd's points, and showed the results of attracting the birds and protecting them, both in small city gardens and in wide areas, such as Johnston Lake Sanctuary.

MAY REVISE LABOR LAWS AT COMING SESSION

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—So far as at present determined, Labor legislation brought down by the Government at this session will be of a minor character. Proposals were made that there should be a complete revision of the Lemeiux Act. It is probable that any revision before legislation is submitted to Parliament will first be laid before the board on industrial labor law, as unanimously recommended by the National Industrial Conference here last September. The board when constituted will consist of representatives of the Dominion and Provincial Governments and of employers and employed. Rumors that the Government is proposing to introduce legislation to make incorporation of trade unions compulsory are authoritatively stated to be unfounded.

CANADIAN MILITIA.

First Step Taken In Complete Re-organization.

The first step in the re-organization of the Canadian active militia is taken in the publication of an order laying down the general lines which will be followed in bringing the new force into being. The order is not concerned with details and gives no indication of the policy to be pursued in the naming units, but it provides for the disbandment of every militia unit in Canada—a complete cleaning of the slate—and the immediate creation of the new force. "The rank and file being automatically discharged," says the order, "the commanding officer has a clear field for re-engagement in suitable ranks, and vacancies for new men of overseas experience, not former members of the unit."

"For some time past, a committee, of which Maj.-Gen. Sir W. D. Otter was chairman and Maj.-Gen. W. G. Gwatkin, Maj.-Gen. Sir Edward Morrison and Brig.-Gen. A. G. L. MacNaughton were members, have been considering the question of reorganization. They have visited all the military districts of Canada, and it is understood that they have made recommendations with regard to the working-out of the plan outlined in the order which was recently passed in Militia Council.

It provides that a commanding officer, preferably with overseas service, will be selected, after due consultation with the old officers of each regiment, both overseas and militia, to command the new unit. The new commanding officer will prepare a new slate of officers with due regard to war service, previous military service, and qualifications, and will forward to headquarters recommendations for all officers on the strength not included in the new cadre. On receipt and approval of the above a general order will be issued disbanding the regiment as of a certain date for the purpose of reorganization. "This disbandment," says the statement, "will clear the situation, render free action possible in making new appointments and adjusting seniority, and will force decisions in the case of all officers on present strength who are not receiving appointments to the reorganized units by transfer to another unit, appointment to the corps reserve, or to the reserve of officers, Canadian militia, as otherwise they automatically cease to be officers of the active militia."

In spite of the disbanding of the units, however, there need be no fear of loss of continuity of service. This is provided for by immediate reappointment and enlistments, and the order provides that "new service rolls will be opened as of date of reorganization, proper attestation forms being insisted on. A new general order will immediately be issued gazetting all officers in the new unit, and all officers on the old strength not reappointed will be disposed of either by transfer to the corps reserve of the units, transfer to the reserve of officers of Canadian militia, or by retirement.

The question of rank is dealt with in the new order, the ruling being that officers appointed to the active list will be recommended for such rank as they may be appointed to in accordance with the establishment of the unit. Those with C.E.F. service, however, will be recommended for a brevet equal to their rank in the C.E.F. reserve. They will, if recommended, be considered qualified by war service for the next highest rank to any rank held by them in the C.E.F. for a period of six months.

The reorganization will, it is stated at militia headquarters, be proceeded with by arms and an order applicable to the artillery will be issued shortly, to be followed with the cavalry and infantry a little later on. Each arm as ready will be dealt with along the general lines indicated above.

Wanted—An Island.

"Wanted to rent or purchase, a small island in any part of the world," was an advertisement which appeared recently in a Liverpool paper. The advertiser, Mr. E. K. Kelly, was not thinking exclusively of the housing problem when he advertised, he told a correspondent.

He and his wife, both young, decided that the best way of escape from town life was to live upon an island of their own, preferably in the Pacific or in an equally pleasant climate. Mr. Kelly has been seafaring for seven years, and now finds it impossible to settle down in Liverpool.

"I remember reading many years ago a magazine account of a man who bought an island in the South Pacific for somewhere about $500," he said. "It was the hope of a similar bargain that induced me to advertise. I have had five replies. An island in one of the Great Lakes was offered me and another near the southern coast of North America. Others off the west coast of England were mentioned. As, however, nothing quite suitable has been offered we are going out to Canada instead."

The Broad Arrow.

The broad arrow is the mark cut or stamped on all British Government stores to distinguish them as public or crown property, and to obliterate or deface which is a felony. Persons in possession of goods marked with the broad arrow forfeit the goods and are subject to a penalty. The broad arrow was the cognizance of Henry, Viscount of Sydney, Earl of Romney, master-general of ordnance, 1693-1702, and was at first placed only on military stores. It is also the mark used in the British ordnance survey to denote points from which measurements have been made.

UNITED STATES LABOR ACTIVE IN POLITICS

DECLARES CONGRESS HAS FAILED TO DO ITS DUTY—MOVEMENT NON-PARTISAN

Washington, Feb. 9. — Organized labor, 3,000,000 strong, has thrown its hat into the political ring in the United States.

Vigorously denouncing congress, which, it was said, "has failed to do its duty," the American Federation of Labor announced the appointment of a natural non-partisan political campaign committee which will mobilise trade unionists and "all lovers of freedom," in an effort to defeat candidates indifferent or hostile to labor, and to elect "true and tried" friends of the trade union movement.

Not waiting for the general election in November, the campaign will be started immediately and pursued without [illegible] through the primaries, in which it is stated all aspirants for office will have their records "analysed, stated in unmistakable language, and given the widest possible publicity." This program applies to all candidates, from presidential nominees down.

Samuel Gompers, president of the Federation, Frank Morrison, secretary, and James O'Connell, president of the Federation's metal trades department, were appointed an executive committee, empowered to obtain such assistants as are necessary. Four women are included in the national committee.

A National Crisis.

A national crisis, threatening the free institutions of the country by the "reactionary attitude of congress, it was said, impelled organized labor to apply this year the non-partisan policy formulated in 1906 and used in several subsequent campaigns. Announcement of the decision was made in an official circular embodying the conclusions of the Federation's general committee, which has been in session here several days. This circular will be distributed to trade unionists in every state through the local unions, by which it will be called also to the attention of friends of organized labor.

Health Officer in Ingersoll Takes Prompt Action.

Ingersoll, Feb. 9.—Prompt action to combat an outbreak of influenza was taken by Medical Officer of Health Dr. J. D. MacDonald on Saturday afternoon. The pool rooms, skating rink and Mason Theatre were at once closed, and a similar order also applies to the churches, schools and all public gatherings. While there has been a rapid increase in the number of influenza cases, the situation is not considered unnecessarily alarming.

H.A. FIFE RESIGNS AS ELECTRICAL INSPECTOR

WILL BE SUCCEEDED BY MAYOR CLIFTON, A RETURNED SOLDIER FROM TORONTO

Mr. H. A. Fife, who has carried on electrical inspection for the Hydro Commission for some considerable time, has been obliged to give up his work owing to his connection with the Quaker Oats Co., who will now require Mr. Fife's entire time, and it will therefore be necessary to place a new inspector in this district. Mr. Fife is well and favorably known in this district and is held in very high esteem by the Commission, who regret the necessity of his resigning. Mr. H. F. Strickland, chief inspector for the Hydro Commission, visited Peterborough recently and has appointed Major H. J. Clifton, a returned veteran, to fill Mr. Fife's office. Major Clifton has been connected with the Toronto inspection department of the Hydro Commission for some months, and comes to Peterborough well broken into inspection work, and the public is assured by the chief inspector that Major Clifton is a thoroughly competent and desirable inspector in every way, and all hope that the people of the district of Peterborough will extend their co-operation to the new inspector, who, we are assured, will do all in his power to perform the work of his office in a fair and proper manner.

INFLUENZA IN KITCHENER

Kitchener, Feb. 9.—Local physicians report over 1,000 cases of colds and influenza in the city, but only in a few cases are the patients seriously ill. Doctors say that the influenza epidemic is fairly well under control. Up to the present time, there have only been four deaths due to pneumonia.

AVOID DANCES WHILE THE FLU THREATENS

DR. HASTINGS M. O. H. OFFERS FURTHER ADVICE TO THE PEOPLE OF TORONTO

Toronto, Feb. 9.—Dancing, either public or at private functions, parties, theatres, and all forms of amusement which tends to confinement in crowded buildings, should be shunned until the prevalent epidemics have died out. At least this should be done if one wishes to keep healthy and "fluless."

This is the advice tendered by Dr. Hastings, M.O.H., as the best method of combating influenza and pneumonia. "I regret to learn," he said, "that a surprisingly large number of private parties and dances are being held. I would have thought that citizens would appreciate the importance of postponing everything of that nature until the epidemic had been successfully brought under control." When asked as to whether any steps were to be taken to prohibit public dancing, the doctor said, "Not yet."

DARK HOUSE MAY OPPOSE DRURY IN HALTON

NOMINATIONS TODAY IN THAT CONSTITUENCY AND AT EAST KENT

Toronto, Feb. 9.— The results of today's nominations will decide whether or not Premier Drury will have any other opposition than E. J. Stevenson, Independent Soldier candidate in Halton and whether Hon. Manning Doherty will be opposed in East Kent While nothing is reported to have transpired in either constituency over the week end, rumors are abroad that a "dark horse" is preparing to spring into the race against the Premier. It is regarded as unlikely that there will be any oppostion to the Minister of Agriculture in East Kent, where the "flu" epidemic is checking the enthusiasm. A small attendance is expected at the nomination.

LANE QUITS U. S. CABINET.

Canadian Born, He Was Wilson's Only Secretary of Interior.

Washington, Feb. 9.—Secretary Franklin Lane of the Department of the Interior, has placed his resignation in the hands of President Wilson. It became known some time ago that the secretary contemplated leaving the Cabinet when it was convenient for the President to release him.

Mr. Lane is a Canadian by birth, but went to California at an early age.

He has been Secretary of the Interior since the beginning of President's Wilson's administration and has been for over twenty years in the public service.

KOREA FORCES ARE ARMED BY BOLSHEVIK

MOVEMENT AGAINST THE JAPANESE CALLED BEGINNING OF TREMENDOUS AFFAIR

(Canadian Press Despatch)

Washington, Feb. 9.—Official despatches received here today said a force of two thousand Koreans, armed principally with equipment furnished by the Bolsheviki, crossed into Northern Korea from Kirin, Manchuria, and attacked a Japanese post of 750 men at night, killed 300 of them and routed the remainder. According to these despatches, the attack was the initiation of an active rebellion in Korea. It was described as "the beginning of a tremendous affair."

CAN'T FOOL THE BOARD.

Even if Textile Men Can Put It Over the Public.

Ottawa, Feb. 9.—The Board of Commerce granted the textile manufacturers ten more days dating from yesterday in which to fill in questionnaires sent out by the board.

Commissioner James Murdock, in most decided terms, informed the representatives that all the questions which were asked, with the possible exception of three or four, could have been answered in a single afternoon, and that their claim that the questions were involved and ambiguous "might fool the public, but it did not fool the board." He declared that, instead of answering the questionnaire, the textile men had gone before the Cabinet and made false statements with regard to the matter.

There will also be a dance held in Victoria Hall Wednesday night, and on the afternoon of the 23rd Mrs. R. A. Brodie of Newmarket, president of the United Farm Women of Ontario, will deliver an address in the Board of Trade rooms here and endeavor to organise a branch of the United Farm Women in Peterborough. In the evening of that day Mrs. Brodie will also speak at the club banquet, when it is expected Premier Drury, Hon. Manninge Doherty, Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. F. C. Biggs, Minister of Public Works, will be here.

EARLY SPRING PREDICTED BY WEATHER PROPHET

FAMOUS SEER SAYS THE SEASONS ARE AHEAD OF EACH OTHER

Montreal, Feb. 9.—Geo. R. Bowker, of Westerly, R. I., who predicted the worst storm ever encountered in New England in 1888, three months before the storm broke, was seen by the Toronto World's correspondent en route to Winnipeg, where he has farming interests. Mr Bowker is one of the best known farmers in Rhode island, and became famous as a weather prophet years before his greatest prophecy in 1888.

In that year the worst storm on record for the New England States arrived on schedule time, as predicted by Bowker. For three days, sleet hail and snow held the country in its grasp, the combination being sufficient to weigh down all the telegraph and telephone wires, delay steam and electric traffic and cause hundreds of thousands of dollars in damage to advanced fruit and crops.

At the age of 65 years he comes forward with a prophecy for the coming spring and summer which will attract attention. He says:

"We are behind the weather this season, inasmuch as January should be February, gauged by the progress of the winter season. Last month we experienced cold weather. I mean by that that our usual winter is at its severest in the month of February. This was not so in 1920. In the month of December we experienced all the warmth of a January with its thaws and slush, followed usually by freezing weather, an advance notice that February was close at hand. If you are following me you will see that the season is ahead of the months, so to speak, and it naturally follows that we are going to have an early spring and summer with early warm weather that will last through a long period and be consecutive as to days."

REGULATIONS ARE RELAQED

Changes in Rules Re Vaccination at American Border.

Niagara Falls, Ont., Feb. 9. — The ban on the bridges here is being lightened. Commencing yesterday it was not necessary to have vaccination certificates verified by examination of results. It has for some time been necessary to show that vaccination has been successful and certificates have been O K.'d by the nurses on duty. It is said semi-officially that all restrictions will be removed next Sunday Feb. 15. Merchants over the river have complained of the loss of Canadian trade owing to smallpox regulations. During all the time restrictions have been in force not one case of smallpox has occurred in Niagara Falls or the immediate district.

Men Looked at Wealth In the Face for Years Without Recognizing It

THE papers lately have been talking about a rectory through the ceilings and walls of which crude petroleum oozes, and for a time it was thought that the good vicar had been sleeping, if not upon a gold mine, upon something quite as valuable—a prospective oil gush, such as in America and on the Caspian have produced millions of pounds' worth of petroleum.

And this is not so impossible as it may seem. One of the biggest oil fields in America was for two generations occupied by the buildings and fields of an ordinary farm, through which ran a creek which issued from the ground in a remote corner of the estate.

The farmer had always been troubled with what he called the "scum," and had put a plank across the little rivulet to keep it back. An oil prospector, after the farmer's death, found that the scum was petroleum, or mineral oil, and that land became as valuable as if it had been a rich gold field.

Some years ago a French-Canadian rancher was rambling about a distant part of his land, when he noticed a piece of rock which glistened in the sun. Out of curiosity he picked it up and took it home with him. Its weight convinced him that it was mineralized rock, and he took it to a specialist, who found it to be almost pure silver. Since then that ranch has yielded between fifty and sixty million ounces of silver.

The discovery of gold in Putu, Chile, was just such another haphazard affair. A poor man bought an old tumble-down shack, and while strengthening the foundation, he turned up a stone which struck him as being very weighty. He pulled the old house down and began digging, and discovered $125,000 worth of gold. To-day it is one of the richest mines in Chile.

About a quarter of a century ago, two prospectors in the bushland of Western Australia had put up their tent for the night, and determined to trek back to Perth next morning, as their quest had proved fruitless. One of them was aroused from sleep by the restlessness of his horse, picketed just outside the tent, and, going out to see what was the matter, he tripped in the darkness over a boulder, which proved on examination to be almost pure gold. That was the beginning of Coolgardie.

The goose that laid the golden egg has been equalled on a poultry farm at Santa Barbara. Everybody knows how poultry pick up small grains of stone and sand, and in the crops of the chickens killed for the table were found small nuggets, which led to the discovery that the farm was a gold mine.

The discovery of Africa diamonds is a similar romance of sleeping for years on wealth beyond the dreams of avarice. In 1867 John O'Reilly was on his way from the interior, and stopped for the night at the house of a Boer named Van Nickerck. He saw the children playing on the floor with some pretty pebbles they had picked up, and O'Reilly said: "These might be diamonds!" He had one of the pebbles in his hand, and the Boer said it was no diamond, that there were lots on the farm, and he might have it and welcome.

O'Reilly said he would take it to Cape Town, and if it proved of value he would give his host half the profits. On his long journey he stopped at Colesburg at the hotel, and showed the men he met his stone, and scratched glass with it. The fellows laughed and scratched glass with their gun flints, and threw the bright pebble out of the window. But O'Reilly recovered it and got it to an expert, who announced that it was in truth a diamond of 22¼ carats.

O'Reilly, like the honest Irishman he was, fairly divided the $100 he sold his diamond for with Nickerck when he went up-country again, and the Boer remembered that he had seen an immense stone of the same kind in the hands of a Kaffir witch doctor. He found the fetish-man, gave him five hundred sheep, a number of horses, and nearly all he possessed for the stone, and sold it the next day for £11,200. This was the famous Star of South Africa.—Pearson's Weekly.

Higher Railway Rates Necessary, Says E. W. Beatty

Wage Increases on Canadian Roads More Than Interest on Whole War Debt

ADDRESS AT WINNIPEG

Railway Situation in Canada Without Parallel Any Place in the World, He Says.

Winnipeg.—Addressing the Canadian Club at a luncheon at the Royal Alexandra, on the subject, "The New Railway Situation," E. W. Beatty, K.C., president of the Canadian Pacific Railway Company, gave a plain intimation of a coming increase in rates.

Mr. Beatty said:—"Since I had the pleasure of visiting Western Canada in May last, a very important change in the transportation situation has taken place through the sudden consummation of a plan for the acquisition of the Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific Railway Companies with a view to their incorporation into the system of the National Railways. In due course, when the legal and other formalities have been fulfilled, this consolidation will take place and the test of the possibility of successful administration of a vast system of railway under the aegis of the Government will be made. It is probably the most ambitious and comprehensive task which any Government or any people has taken upon themselves, except temporarily and in emergent necessity. It may be a test over a period of years and the results may be expensive, but under honest management with independent and non-political administration, and above all with accurate information supplied to the public as to the result of these operations, the people of this country will be able to determine for themselves whether that system is the best and if not what improvement should be made in it. I make no comment on the wisdom or otherwise of this further extension of Government ownership of railways in Canada. The matter has been settled by the representatives of the people. I am sorry, however, that a little more time and information were not given both to the peope themselves and their Parliamentary representatives, because I would have been better satisfied that the decision then represented the view and desire of the vast majority of the people of this country, especially of the business communities, who have a particular stake in the railway situation and a particular knowledge of what constitutes efficient railway service. The decision has been taken, however, and the consolidated system will be administered by a board selected by the Government, with experienced railway operators and executives in immediate charge of the property, with Parliament, as is inevitable, in full control of the financial support to be given, and the Government of the day with full responsibility for the expenditures of the monies voted for such purposes. The result of this means that the railway situation in Canada is now completely changed, and the country must depend for some time at least for additional railway facilities, where needed upon the National Railways or the Canadian Pacific, because with preponderating mileage under the control of the Government, it is not likely that much capital would be attracted to new railway enterprise for the rewards which such investments might bring. Therefore, I think it may be fairly stated that such additional construction as takes place within the next few years will depend upon the willingness of the National Railways and the Canadian Pacific to appreciate these needs and their financial ability to meet them.

MEANS KEEN COMPETITION.

"This is a situation which is without parallel any place in the world where a government-owned and operated railway and a privately-owned and operated railway not greatly different in the matter of mileage, both with, of course, adequate credit, have in their hands the almost exclusive right to remedy transportation insufficient at most places throughout Canada. It is true, I think, that this will provoke a highly competitive condition. How effective this competition will be will depend upon its honesty and its fairness. If political methods are to be introduced into the competition, and facilities provided in accordance with political expediency or if political rewards follow the extent of the support or otherwise which is granted by shippers to the National Railways, then I should say the competition would be unfair and of doubtful commercial or national value.

"During the course of the year, the railway companies of Canada had to meet a great many problems, due to the emergencies which prevailed which were unusual and of great importance and which required new methods to secure their being dealt with competently. For that purpose the Canadian Railway War Board was constituted and through it the efforts of all railways were co-ordinated to meet the extraordinary demands through the movement of war traffic and soldiers. The work was well and efficiently done; was so well done, in fact, that not one hour's demurrage was caused to Atlantic shipping by delays on Canadian railways. I have recently received a letter from Sir Joseph Maclay, British Minister of Shipping, in which he points to this fact as a conspicuous example of the effective way in which the work of the Canadian railways was performed.

"Since the war, there has been constituted the Railway Association of Canada, whose executive comprises the presidents of the principal railways in Canada, and in the organization of which is contained various committees from the operating, financial and traffic officers of the companies, who are constituted to act jointly, when joint action would be in furtherance of the traffic necessities of the people or of the railways. Mr. Hanna and myself sit on the executive Committee, and I am very hopeful that with the experience he there gains, he will be confirmed in his original decision to be a railway man and not a politician.

"I have known Mr. Hanna for a great many years, and my appreciation of his personal qualities and official ability as disclosed in the numerous exacting and difficult positions he has been called upon to fill is very great. The fact that he was trained in his earlier years in the service of the Canadian Pacific and has always, both personally and officially, retained a very sincere affection for his former company has not detracted from my appreciation of him.

"Mr. Hanna and I have a great many problems in common and others which are individual because peculiar to the different systems of railway operation, in which we are respectively involved. Occasionally it may be necessary in public utterances for us to refer to each other, or the interests which we represent, but I recognize that these references will be few and far between, because I can imagine nothing of much less public interest or public importance than my opinion of the National Railways and Mr. Hanna, unless it is Mr. Hanna's opinion of the Canadian Pacific and myself. Mr. Hanna rather departed from the rule a few weeks ago in Toronto, and with his characteristic Scotch pawky humor, whatever that means, said that the trouble with me was that I did not believe in public ownership, but that I would hope for its success, and that notwithstanding the fact that the Canadian Pacific had occupied a very unique and strong position within the Empire, in a few months' time it would be number two instead of number one, and that was where the shoe was pinching. As I say, Mr. Hanna intended this to be a humorous remark, but Scotch humor is sometimes hard to understand, and his audience, a most intelligent Toronto audience, misunderstood him and applauded his prophecy of the advent of another railway system, bigger and better than the Canadian Pacific.

"I imagine that Mr. Hanna and myself could sit down today and discuss with the utmost candor the general railway situation. Incidentally to that we could, I think, agree without much discussion as to which was number one and which was number two. I say this without any hesitation or reservation, because I know what a wise and experienced man Mr. Hanna is. I can say with equal confidence, I think, that five years from now Mr. Hanna and I could discuss the question with equal frankness and agree between ourselves as to which was then number one and which was number two. Of course, it would be the same railway, but as I have said, Mr. Hanna is a very wise man. Five years hence he may even be wiser than he is now, but that would not be necessary to enable him to reach a correct conclusion.

A CHEERFUL PROPHET.

"Mr. Hanna has recently adopted the role of prophet for the National Railways. He is a cheerful prophet, and he paints a glowing picture of the future of the properties under his charge. This is as it should be, and he is wise in making it as attractive as possible. He has recently taken his pencil in hand and added together the joint mileages of the Canadian Northern, Intercolonial, Transcontinental, Grand Trunk and Grand Trunk Pacific railways in Canada and the United States; he has likewise added the number of engines and cars of all descriptions, tons of freight carried on all systems and has concluded the National Railways are, or will be, the greatest railway system in the world. I do not dispute his figures as to mileage, and I do not imagine it is of much public importance whether the gross earnings of the combined systems are greater or less than the Canadian Pacific. Up to the present, they are less, although the mileage is greater, but I do say that the test of the best or worst railway is not necessarily determined by mileage, and "best" and "biggest" are not necessarily synonymous terms. Companies must stand or fall on the character of the service they render, and if one railway's service is consistently better than another's, if its officers are more efficient, its service more expeditious and its business transactions with the public more satisfactory, it is the railway which will be rightly regarded as the best, whether its mileage be somewhat more or somewhat less than its rivals.

"The National Railways and ourselves are confronted with [illegible] of operation which are almost without precedent, and which, with the largest measure of support [illegible] both [illegible] still render these operations extraordinarily difficult. We both appreciate that the people is a jealous and exacting mistress, but we also know that the public is a generous and persistent friend, once its confidence is secured. We know, too, that no sentiment will control the success of our efforts.

"Heretofore in Canada there has been, I think, a prevailing decency in competition, which has been encouraging. I have no reason to expect that that will change, or that the methods and measures taken by the National Railways to further its interests and extend its business will be any less reputable than those taken by the Canadian Pacific or by the Canadian Northern, the Grand Trunk, or any other system, which is now consolidated or to be consolidated into the National Railways, but there is always the danger of political methods being adapted to the business of railroading and political influence being used where business methods fail to accomplish the desired result. I was very glad to read Mr. Hanna's strong plea for independent administration, which means business administration, because I would dislike to see post offices, docks, and public works and institutions of all sorts made dependent upon whether the community desiring them gave support to the National Railways. If that happened we might have to establish libraries, hospitals, theatres and parks in order to meet that new and peculiar political-railway competition.

"The foundation of competition should be the same. The legislative control of Parliament, the regulatory control of the Dominion Railway Commission should be the same in respect of all railways operating under the federal jurisdiction. This is not the case as yet, the Government having reserved by statute special rights to the National Railways not enjoyed by private companies and withheld it in certain particulars from the jurisdiction of the Board of Railway Commissioners, but I am hopeful that in time this will be remedied. The accounting methods and financial returns of all companies should likewise be absolutely identical. Given these essential premises and the National Railways the independent administration which their officers desire and you will see railways competing in this country under conditions which will stimulate their efforts and redound to the advantage of all those who do business with them. Whether these conditions will prevail, I cannot say, because the almost irresistible inclination of those who supply the money is to demand a voice in its expenditure and in the management of the institutions for the financing of which they are responsible.

MORE REVENUE NEEDED.

"I do not pretend to speak for the National Railways, but no doubt, as in the case of the C.P.R., large sums of money are required to complete work that has been heretofore impossible to undertake and to extend facilities to meet the rapidly increasing needs of the country. Neither of us can stand still; we must progress if we are to receive our fair share of the country's prosperity. In order to do this we must have money, and money can be obtained only in two ways, by stock or bond issues, or by revenue. Operating increases cannot be taken care of by the former. The extraordinary recent costs of maintenance and operation can be met only in one way and that is by increased revenue to the companies, and in this we need the sympathetic support of the people who demand a high standard of railway operation and railway service which can be secured only, in view of the prevailing high prices, by paying a transportation charge at least equal to the increased cost of operating. You are all aware that in 1918 railway wages were increased in Canada by an amount aggregating $77,000,000, an amount greater than the interest on the whole of the war debt of Canada; the rates were at the same time increased and they brought in $43,000,000 additional revenue to the companies; in other words, the increase in rates failed to equal the increase in wages by the enormous sum of $34,000,000. There can be only one end to that condition, unless the revenues are readjusted to meet these increasing costs. While rates will have to be again increased, they cannot be increased indefinitely and our great struggle from now on will be to reduce costs in order that in time rates themselves may be lowered. There are only two ways of reducing railway rates, and one is by large increase in the volume of traffic and the other is by decreased cost in the carrying of traffic. No ordinary increase in business will be sufficient to take care of the extraordinary increases in the cost of labor and material which the railway companies have experienced in recent years.

"I know that you, gentlemen, are very well informed on the subject of railroads. I know that many of you are, or have been, persistent users of the railroads, that you have competent critics and that you have come in contact with their operations in a more intimate way than most citizens of this country. You will I think be the first to appreciate the accuracy of my statement when I say that at no time in the history of this country has there been more need for an appreciation of the problems of the railways and more need for support to the railways than now.

A CITIZEN OF COUNTRY.

"There is little if any, [illegible] old-time aloofness with which the railway companies dealt with the public. The Canadian Pacific is a citizen of Canada, not the first citizen of Canada, but one of the most corpulent. Its problems are the problem of Canada; it has a grave interest in the economic and industrial future of Canada. I can imagine nothing which concerns Canada's progress that does not concern directly, or indirectly, the Canadian Pacific. It is, therefore, proper in its own interests and that of its shareholders, that its officers should take an interest in its commercial and trade problems, and further the solution of them to the best of their ability.

"It is equally proper that Canadians should concern themselves somewhat with the problems and administration of the Canadian Pacific, and there is no occasion, so far as the Canadian Pacific, or any other railway, is concerned for the people to regard them as soulless corporations, when their stake in the country is so great, and their interests and your interests so much in common.

"There is always in the minds of some people a mystery in the existence and operation of any large corporation, whether Government owned or privately owned. It is supposed to conceal within the walls of its offices machinery for many things not directly connected with its enterprise. Nothing could be further from the facts. Being public utilities, they are open to more criticism than other institutions. Their affairs are more public, and their officers better and more widely known. They are easier to understand though they are huge in size, and their ramifications are great. Since 1904 the railways of Canada have been required to justify every rate, act and practice which affected the public or the public interest. Can this be said of any other enterprises?

SANE OPTIMISM NEEDED.

"The problem of increased costs practically brings the railway companies in common position with other citizens of Canada. The cure for it is greater production and trade expansion, hard work and thrift. It sometimes seems to me that we lose sight of the very fundamentals on which the prosperity of this country has been heretofore based. The foundation of our economic stability rests upon perseverance, work and the rewards which come from it. We have no more right to expect to receive high wages and high compensation unless we can give an adequate return in service, than we have a right to expect to appropriate and keep what does not belong to us. The necessity is preached from one end of the country to the other, and it cannot be preached too often, because unless it is practiced this country will not enjoy its share of the world's prosperity and will not be able to meet the very disquieting conditions which have resulted from the economical upheaval of the last five years. Heads of financial interests see it, and advise economy of all kinds. Individuals appreciate it and to some extent are practising it. Governments, federal, provincial and municipal must also see it, and practice it, or else hard times will succeed our present era of prosperity. It has always seemed to me that hard times do succeed any era of great spending or extravagance, and it is a serious commentary on the common sense and sanity of people that it is necessary for the realization of these consequences to be obtained by experience instead of by a careful appreciation of the trend of events and by modification and prudence anticipate and prevent the natural consequences of extravagance and imprudence. I am an optimist; I do not see how anyone could be anything else so far as Canada is concerned, with its natural wealth and the virility of its people, but with great optimism can go equally great discretion; and the fact that a man or a nation, is full of hope and confidence does not mean that he should disregard the warnings of the times, or with his eyes on his own future fail to observe the economical pitfalls immediately in front of them."

In this progress towards full prosperity, Mr. Beatty said he saw the western provinces playing a great part.

"In conclusion I would seriously urge upon you all the paramount necessity of quiet sane consideration of Canada's economic problems as they develop. It is, I think now conceded that most of the errors made in past years have been due to a too ready acquiescence in ill-considered policies and a serious indifference by the people as a whole to the correctness or otherwise of the conclusions reached. I am, I think, quite within the mark in saying that our principal railway and economic mistakes have been due to the lack of keen appreciation in those whose concurrence permitted the adoption of these policies. There is no time in the history of this country when the views of extremists should prevail as little as now. The difficulties which confront us are not insurmountable if the solution of them are given the moderate and sane consideration which is indispensable to a correct conclusion. Appeals to prejudice and traditional hostility are fruitless of permanent good. Given the proper recognition of the diversity of economic necessities which inevitably exists in a country the size of Canada, and a serious and single desire to meet and dispose of them in the interests of the country as a whole, and I would have every confidence that our errors would be reduced to a minimum and the economic strength of the country increased beyond the possibility of serious setback."

French Literature.

A French critic who complained of the hasty composition and lack of fine writing among his compatriots drew from M. Pierre Louys, the author of "La Femme et le Pantin," a pained and precise denial of the charge. M. Louys, who has not published anything in several years, says that he has been diligently occupied on a work which he rewrites and corrects a hundred times to each page. This and other works which he has not yet considered worthy of publication have accumulated until he has on hand more than 200 pounds of manuscript.

She Wanted to Know.

Spring cleaning with all its turmoil and misery, was over, and hubby thought it was time he had a turn. "Look here, my dear," he said firmly one evening; "we must have things arranged in this house so we shall know exactly where everything is kept." Wifey faced him with an icy smile. "I agree," she said. "And let me begin with your late hours, darling. I should like to know where they are kept."

DRAW FOR BONSPEIL AT 9 O'CLOCK TUESDAY

At nine o'clock tomorrow morning the Peterborough Bonspiel opens when the drawing will take place and the first game will be at nine-thirty Elaborate plans, both locally and from outside promise that this event will be as great a success as ever. All that is now required is weather so that the ice may be prepared after to-night's hockey game. There will be eleven rinks in all, four at Brock street and seven at Charlotte street

A special price is being offered this year of four silver tobacco jars to the rink winning the most games in the Morrow and Matthews-Blackwell competition. Then there is the W. G Morrow cup which was won by J. W McDermid, Peterborough, last year. and with this are given four mahogany cabinets of silver, valued at $80 as first prize and four cut glass bowls as second prize.

The Matthews-Blackwell trophy also carries first and second prizes with it, the first being four Jaeger wool auto rugs valued at $75 and the second being four dozen community silver spoons valued at $32. The Peterborough Club Trophy although not as valuable as some of the other prizes is really the historic cup of the lot Together with it are given four cut-glass water sets worth $40 and four umbrellas worth $24.

The Waddell Trophy

The R. M. Waddell trophy will be competed for in the first stage by twelve rinks of the Peterborough Club and to an equal number of rinks from the visiting clubs. If the visitors win in the first stage then the remaining visiting teams will all be eligible to compete for it in the second stage. If, however, the locals win the first stage all the Peterborough teams will be eligible to compete in the second stage. With this are given four silver tea sets valued at $80 and four thermos bottles valued at $24. Last year this prize was captured by J. E. A. Fitzgerald.

All the trophies which are being compete for in the Bonspiel are now in the hands of the club and the indications at present are that a large number of outside districts will be represented at the opening tomorrow

The officers who will be in control of the Bonspiel are: Hon. President J. W. McDermid; President, George H. Giroux; Pice-President, Dr. Wightman; Secretary-Treasurer, F. Brownscombe; Management Committee, J. W. McDermid, George H. Giroux, Dr Wightman. F. Brownscombe, W. J. Oke, Alex. C. Kay and G. A. MacDonald.

Bonspiel Committee. W. G. Morrow (chairman,) H. F. Foote, (secretary;) R. Hicks, J. W. McDermid and W. H. Bradburn. The umpire will be Angus McIntosh.

A Wild Night

By ESTHER WALDORF MESSENGER

(Copyright, 1919, by the Western Newspaper Union.)

If Victor Lind had glanced twice at Miss Arline Drury, he might have discovered interest, and possibly something deeper in the face of the only daughter and heiress of his employer, Robert Drury. The very fact that she was such, however, seemed to place an insurmountable barrier between them. He was therefore contented with a mere casual look at a face rather intellectual than lovely, although the eyes were deep wells of expression likely to attract the seeker after real heart worth and fidelity.

Victor held only a fairly paid position in the establishment of Drury & Co., but he stayed on, making up for the boredom of routine days by spending leisurely evenings as enjoyably as possible.

Miss Arline Drury had visited the plant occasionally. It happened after Victor's first sight of her that she came more frequently. She had passed his desk several times and bestowed upon him the slight nod she awarded all whom she selected as knowing by sight. He was passing down a narrow roadway between two buildings of the plant one day, when dashing into its other end came a team of horses attached to a wagon loaded with iron. At a glance Victor recognized a runaway and fifty feet ahead his vision took in a girlish form shrinking to the brick wall. Victor realized her danger. He swiftly dashed toward her, snatched at her swaying form, backed into a niche where there was a door, burst it in with a powerful lunge of his stout shoulders, and held her shivering and overcome. For just a moment the grateful, expressive eyes of the girl held his own in thrall. Then he recognized her as the daughter of his employer.

"We can pass through the storeroom to the office, if you please," he said. Arline Drury, pale and trembling, bowed an assent and he left her as they entered the office building.

The next day Victor was sent for by Mr. Drury. The latter did not relax from his habitual cold dignity, but in a business-like tone announced to Victor his promotion to a higher position. As Victor went back to his desk young Ernest Drury followed him. He was a mere lad, but there was deep sincerity in his bearing as he grasped Victor's hand.

"My sister told me to convey her deep gratitude to you for saving her life," he said, "and she, she asked me to tell you she will not forget."

There was a thrill in the boy's tones, but the momentary impress of emotion passed from Victor's mind. He and some boon companions had arranged for a meeting and late hours that evening and his thoughts were centered on that. It was a wild night, for some roystering members of the coterie indulged freely in strong drink, an adjournment was made to a place where gambling was going on and Victor found himself in his room the next morning with no recollection of how he had arrived there.

He was mortified, then shamed and repentant, and then, as his memory cleared, startled and appalled. With the vividness of a lightning flash there recurred to him the events of the previous evening. He had fallen into the hands of a group of card sharks and had been induced to risk the money he had, and then he had indorsed a draft given to him for collection and had signed the name of his employer to a check for a large amount. He recalled the man who had lured him into this net of peril and guilt. His name was Jackson, and, realizing that he was in a terrible position, his reputation gone, his future blasted, Victor hurried on his clothes to seek Jackson. There was a knock at the door of his room. Serious faced, Ernest Drury entered.

"Mr. Lind," he said, "here are some papers you had better destroy and forget. I have no explanation to make. I come as emissary of another, whom I am not free to name, and who expresses the hope that you will never again yield to the influence of those who last night nearly led to your ruin."

Then the visitor was gone. Victor stood staring in startled bewilderment at the draft and check he had given Jackson. Then a conception of his narrow escape from ruin, overcame him. He sank to his knees beside his bed and arose a penitent and grateful man, resolved never again to skirt the delusive path of guilty pleasure.

After that, young Drury seemed to put himself out of the way to act friendly and helpful toward Victor, but never would he discuss the matter of the forged documents. As if quite incidentally he invited Victor to the Drury home, and within a half-year Victor was engaged to Arline Drury.

It was just after their first child was born that Victor came across the papers that revealed to him that Arline had loved him from the first time she met him, that to her was due his rapid advancement in business and his rescue from the power of scheming gamblers. He replaced the papers reverently. He never told of their discovery, but the inspiration of the same gave to his life a new devotedness to Arline that became the one impulse of his being.

The chief aim of every alligator's life is to become a satchel.

Englishmen Now Return To Conventional Clothes, Silk Hats and Dress Suits

THE Englishman who did not scruple to appear at the Paris Opera of Sunday evening in a golf jacket and knickers was, in the days before the war and in his own England, notoriously a stickler for dress regulations. These dress regulations, which the rest of the world, the formal part of it, strove to follow, were the Englishman's own invention, and prescribed with a particularity unknown to any other Western nation the proper costume for social appearances at all hours of the day. They gave the gentleman's gentleman a steady job, the tailors a dependable income, and persons of elegant leisure material assistance in killing time. Some of our own city people had got to be pretty good copies of the Englishman in this respect, but it never was a crime in Canada, except in narrow and exotic circles to break the rules. It was in England.

Naturally the war played havoc with dress conventions along with other peace-time specialities, but now that the war is over it appears that the Englishman is resolved to take prompt measures to begin looking like himself again, says a writer in the London Daily Mail.

"The edict has gone forth that Guards' officers off duty in London have got to wear tall hats and morning coats. Many will rejoice at the decision.

"For some time past our young men have undoubtedly been slack about their clothes. We have even been going to dances and dinner parties in dinner jackets and black ties, with never a thought of a by-your-leave or an apology. And the morning coat and the tall hat have almost ceased to make glad our fashionable promenades.

"Before the war to go to a dance in a dinner jacket was considered to be showing ill manners toward one's host, and it was very unusual to go to dine in anything except the conventional tail-coat and white tie.

"With the war strict rules for men's dress lapsed. For one thing many men had packed and stored their belongings, leaving behind them just a suit-case of mufti for use during their leave. Also there sprang into being a large number of public dancing places to which men went with their own parties and had no host to consider. These dancing places are still with us, and the casual ways of their frequenters linger.

"The Guards' edict, to which I have referred above, will give a lead to many London hostesses who have strong views on the subject of this regrettable slackness in dress. They will now no doubt take the necessary action to insure that the custom we acquired during the war of wearing whatever was most comfortable to us, regardless of the occasion, must cease.

"And the lead of the Guardsmen will be widely followed by other young men about town. Some men will grumble at having to get out their tail coats again, at the increase of laundry bills, at the discomfort of tall hats.

"The other day I heard a man inveighing against the tail-coats on the following grounds. A tail-coat, he said, was—considered calmly in the light of its construction—a most useless object. It was a relic of a bygone time when a man rode a-horseback to visit his friends and needed something to keep the seat of his breeches warm. It was a garment which, like top-hats for cricket, should long ago have been abolished.

"So reasoned my friend. I am not prepared to argue with him. All I would say is, that until tail-coats are abolished they may as well be worn on the specified occasions. Never to know when one goes out to a restaurant whether the other men of the party will be wearing black ties or white provides an element of unnecessary uncertainty.

"However, on one point I have strong views. In the days before the war few men of fashion cared to hunt with hounds less they wore pink. A pink coat was de rigueur among officers of the smarter cavalry regiments.

"There is also a movement on foot to revive this custom. I cannot help thinking that a man who turns out clean and neat shows his respect sufficiently for hounds and that, in these times, the revival of pink coats is a hardship on man, young fellows for whom hunting is none too easy in any case. Pink coats cost 25 guineas each."

The Jewish Calendar.

This is the year 5680 of the Jewish calendar. The Jewish era reckons from the creation, 3,760 years and three months before the commencement of the Christian era. The Jewish year consists of either twelve or thirteen months, of twenty-nine or thirty days. The civil year commences with the month Tisri, immediately after the new moon following the autumnal equinox; the ecclesiastical year begins with Nisan. The year 5680 began September 25, 1919.

Topaz.

The topaz is found in Maine, Colorado, Texas and California. The finest stones come from Brazil and from the Ural Mountains, in Siberia. Pure topazes from Brazil, cut like diamonds, closely resemble that stone in lustre and brilliance.

British Lighthouses.

The coast of the British Isles is so well protected with lighthouses that if a ship sailed right around England, Scotland and Ireland by night only on six occasions would it be where it would not see the light of a lighthouse lantern.

Tight Rope Bridge.

A bridge over the Strinagar river, India, is made of only three ropes. One is the footpath, while the other two are rails.

Varied Gifts.

Somewhat Hard to Explain.

The Indians of Venezuela have from time immemorial had a yearly fasting season of forty days and so have the Aztecs of Mexico. So, also, it should be remembered, had the ancient Persians. We cannot attribute their adoption of the number of forty to any relationship with Christianity, and there is no evidence that it had any connection with Judaism. Why, then, forty?—Exchange.

Like Most Mothers.

Dorothy was told she must go to bed and her mother would come up later and kiss her good night. "But," she said, "suppose I am asleep?" She was told that would not make any difference. "But what if I have the covers over my head?" she asked. She was told her mother would kiss her anyway. "Well," said Dorothy, "she is some kisser."

Making Sure.

A hostler was sent to the stable to bring out a traveler's horse. Not knowing which of the two horses in the stable belonged to the traveler, he saddled both animals and brought them to the door. The traveler pointed out his own horse, saying, "That's my nag." "Certainly, your honor, I know that very well, but I didn't know which was the other gentleman's!"

NEWSPAPER ADVERTISING

Do Women Read Newspaper Advertising

¶ Since Women do over 80 per cent of the Retail buying that is done, Advertisers are constantly investigating the Appeal which Advertising mediums exert upon Women. This fact is continually before manufactures in every line, and recently the Bureau of Investigation was asked to conduct an investigation to show how much Underwear for Men was bought by Women, so that the manufacturer who made the request could write his advertisements accordingly.

¶ Many investigations have been made by Women's Clubs, Merchants' Organizations, Statistical Bureaus, and the like, but while these inquiries invariably show that Women are more influenced by Newspaper Advertising that by any other kind, they are inconclusive because of the high percentage of non-commital or unsatisfactory replies.

¶ The question broadly answers itself in that Women do most of the buying, and Newspapers carry far more Advertising than all other mediums combined.

WALTER McRAYE SPOKE TO VETERANS SUNDAY

DELIVERED LECTURE ON REINSTRUCTION BEFORE AN INTERESTED AUDIENCE

Mr. Walter McRaye, of Toronto, delivered a lecture on "Reconstruction" at the G.W.V.A. hall yesterday afternoon, and although the audience might have been larger, everyone who had the pleasure of hearing him, went away delighted. Mr. McRaye, himself a returned soldier, has a message which, if carried out, would, to a great extent, settle a lot of the unrest among the returned men, and that without the $2,000 gratuity.

The president of the local branch of the G.W.V.A., Mr. R. H. Muir, occupied the chair and with him on the platform was the secretary, Mr. S. Whatley.

.:. BOY SCOUT NOTES .:.

If the scout movement is to accomplish a successful piece of work for boys in any community the first essential is a local association. Some, I presume, will ask the question: "What is a local association."

It is a body of men gathered together in a community to act in an advisory capacity to the troops within the area of that community. Its functions are to assist the scoutmaster; to arrange for a board of examiners relative to the respective badges; to see that the proper type of men are selected for scoutmasters and assistant scoutmasters and others who are working on behalf of boy life in the community.

The local association elect its officers as laid down in rules and regulations governing the Boy Scout Association, and may compile bylaws to meet local conditions, providing same conform to the regulations and a copy of such bylaws be forwarded to the Provincial Council for their approval and confirmation.

The members of the local association should be made up of a number of leading business men and clergy. Care should be taken to elect only men who will take an active and keen interest in the boys. It is necessary that an honorary secretary be appointed who will be willing to devote a little time to the Boy Scout Association and through him would pass all communications, etc., with Provincial headquarters.

If you accept membership in the local association you take upon yourself a responsibility to the boys of your community, and no man can live a greater piece of service to the community in which he lives to Canada at large.

To meet once or twice a month and discuss ways and means of helping the boys in your community is another duty of the local association and to help the scoutmaster in bringing about such functions and activities as will employ to advantage the spare time of the boys. If men would only realize that the boys are Canada's greatest asset and would be willing to meet and discuss problems confronting boys.

It would mean that such institutions as juvenile courts, etc., would soon be abolished. Some men will say: "Oh, nonsense! I will take care of my own boy and let other fellows do the same." This does not sound well and is not sound in principle. I fully agree that the duty of each parent is to look to his own boy first, and yet we, as fathers, must remember that some other fellow may be quite a hero in the eyes of our boys. Very often their hero is the scoutmaster, the man who leads them upon their hikes, the man who goes into camp with them perhaps the man who teaches them to swim—in other words who teaches them to do things—and this fact must be realized that while some fathers may take a keen interest in their boys there may be others fathers who do not. Why not then send your aid and co-operate in an endeavor to see that every boy in your community has an opprotunity and is assisted to become the type of citizen Canada is looking for. The challenge of the times is for greater co-operation and greater co-ordination along lines that tend towards a better citizenship. This is the principle that our lads who went overseas fought for. Will you not step in and enter the ranks and fight alongside men who are helping to develop and encourage in every way possible the boys of this generation to play the game and play it fair.

If any reader wishes further information as to activities of the Boy Scout Association it will be forwarded with pleasure by the Provincial office for the Province, corner Sherbourn and Bloor streets, Toronto, or by your local council secretary, E. J. Whiteside, Brownlon P.O.

FOURTH ANNUAL MEETING OF THE PETER ROBINSON CHAPTER I.O.D.E.

This Chapter Has Concluded a Very Successfue Year—Big Round of Activities—Officer Elected for 1920.

At the fourth annual meeting of the Peter Robinson Chapter, I.O.D.E., held Friday, February 6th, in the Public Library, the officers elected for the coming year were as follows:

Regent—Miss Georgie Stevenson.

1st Vice-Regent — Miss Helen Stapleton.

2nd Vice-Regent—Mrs. Gertrude Lemay.

Secretary—Miss Estelle Knox.

Treasurer—Miss Isabel Patterson.

Standard-Bearer—Miss Florence Scott.

Fifty dollars was granted to the Armenian Fund.

Secretary's Report.

It is my privilege as secretary to submit the following as the fourth annual report of the activities of the Peter Robinson Chapter I. O. D. E. for the year ending February 1st, 1920.

The officers for the year were as follows:

Regent—Mrs. J. G. Campazzie.

1st Vice-Regent—Miss Helen Stapleton.

2nd Vice-Regent—Miss Georgie Stevenson.

Secretary—Miss Estelle Knox.

Echoes Secretary — Mrs. Joseph Wearing

Treasurer — Miss Maizie Armstrong.

Standard-Bearer—Miss Seabourne Hamilton.

Ten Councillors.

Eight regular meeetings and two special meetings were held during the year. Membership at the end of the year just closed was 88, an increase of 23 members over the preceeding year.

The revenues derived from the Chapter's work have been donated to worthy causes as follows:

Muskoka Free Hospital	$250 00
Babies' Clinic	100 00
57th Regimental Band	50 00
Playgrounds Association	50 00
Mary R. Gooderham Fund	25 00
War Memorial Fund	500 00
War Veterans' Christmas treat	25 00
Children's Shelter	15 00

A 1919 Victory Loan Bond of $500.00 was purchased and is now in the Chapter's treasury. In March a cot was endowed in the Muskoka Free Hospital. This cot is now occupied by a former employee of the De Laval Company, Ltd., of Peterborough, who are now maintaining the patient at the company's expense.

At the request of the Peterborough Health Association the Chapter assumed charge of a cafe chantant and dances at the local annual Motor Show in April. A very substantial sum was realized from these undertakings and the proceeds were devoted to the work of the Health Association.

A motor boat, donated to the Chapter by Mr. Goyette, was sold at a fair price for its value. An Easter dance held at the Empress Hotel was, through the generous support of the Peterborough people, a considerable success in every way.

It was a pleasure for our executive to serve at the War Veterans' banquet in May.

Our then regent, Mrs. J. G. Campazzie, and second vice, Miss Georgie Stevenson, represented the Chapter at the annual meeting of the I.O.D.E. and the National Chapter of Canada held in Montreal May 26131.

On June 3rd, through the kindness of Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Hatton, their home and grounds were made available for a garden party which proved successful in every way. The 57th Regimental Band furnished music which helped greatly in the splendid results.

During the summer regular weekly dances were held at the Chemong pavillion. The proceeds of a dance held there in May 24th were donated to the G.W.V.A. These dances had the hearty support of Peterborough people, young and old.

Our regent resigned in September and since that time Miss Helen Stapleton has most capably filled the office. It was with profound and universal regret that the Chapter was obliged to give reluctant acceptance to the resignation of our regent, Mrs. J. G. Campazzie, whose loyalty, indefatigable work and enthusiasm inspired every member in carrying out the work of the Chapter, and the influence of her unselfish example will leave indellible impression upon the Chapter members.

A dance held at the G.W.V.A. hall in September also added to the list of undertakings that met with success.

Ushering at the Grand Theatre was discontinued June 1st at the request of the manager, It was voted to resume this work in October. The ushering is very popular with the members and is a substantial source of revenue.

During the months of October, November and December weekly dances were held at the Conservatory of Music hall.

The annual Chapter dance was held January 23rd at the Empress Hotel and a most enjoyable evening was spent despite the bad weather.

The support of every member made possible the carrying out of the Chapter's work during the year just closed and the retiring executive avail themselves of this opportunity to express their appreciation to each individual member for this support. For the incoming executive we bespeak your help—the call of service in these days is so insistent and so varied that though we every one of us, members of the Peter Robinson Chapter, give her utmost we can but to a very small degree to the work that comes within the objects of our order.

Most respectfully submitted.

ESTELLE I. KNOX,
Secretary.

MODERN SCHOOL BUILDING

The St. Petersburg (Fla.) Times describes by illustration and otherwise the new High school building to be dedicated there on February 10: Overlooking beautiful Mirror Lake, and situated in the heart of the city, this institution of learning ranks with the foremost in the South and is a source of pride to the citizenry of this municipality and the local and county school officials who aided in its construction.

The building is three storyes high, stuccoed and trimmed in red brick and tile. Spacious walks lead to the three main entrances and on to the first floor. Large corridors, light and airy rooms, equipped with the best that money can buy, are only a few of the many features of the $300,000 educational plant.

A cafeteria at which the students can procure wholesome lunches at a very low cost is housed on the first floor. Nearly 150 partake of their noon-day lunch in the cafeteria.

Half of the large auditorium is contained on the first floor and the other half on the second. The auditorium, including the stage, has a seating capacity of 1,400. The stage is exceptionally large and is used for gymnasium purposes also.

An open air study hall which has a seating capacity of 200 is located on the roof.

Y.W.C.A. WHATS DOING THIS WEEK

Girls who want fun and comradeship, a chance to learn of interesting things and to develop physically, mentally and spiritually, and the opportunity to serve, should come to the Young Women's Christian Association. There are gymnasium classes for all, interesting lectures and courses, Bible study, clubs which mean new friends, and general good times.

The following are the activities for the week:

Monday, 4.30—Senior school girls' gymnasium.

Monday, 8.00—Advanced gymnasium class.

Tuesday, 4.30—Junior school girls' gymnasium.

KING IN SPEECH FROM THE THRONE OUTLINES NEW LABOR LEGISLATION

Bills Will be Introduced Dealing With Insurance Against Unemployment; Regulation of Working Hours and Minimum Wages.

(Canadian Press Despatch)

London, Feb. 10.—For the first time since 1914 the ceremony of the state opening of Parliament was witnessed by London citizens. King George and Queen Mary were accompanied by the Prince of Wales to the House of Parliament, the first time the heir to the throne attended such a function.

In the speech from the throne the King urged a serious consideration of economic conditions throughout the country and counselled patience in the passage of far reaching reforms, which, he said, were necessary to meet abnormal conditions. Better educational facilities, the settlement of the Irish question, the adjustment of the coal mining controversies on an enduring basis and the regulation of the liquor traffic were asked for by King George, who also advocated the passage of measures stimulating the growth of more foodstuffs at home. He said bills would be introduced in Parliament dealing with insurance against unemployment, the regulation of working hours, minimum wages and anti-dumping.
